Steve Carton again displayed the form that has made him one of the best divers in the East last year. Showing no ill effects of lack of practice due to a bad knee, Steve took five points and first place for Villanova in the one meter dive.

Don Baemcke springs into water for anchor leg of the 500 yard freestyle relay against Rutgers which 'Cats won in record time of 3:48.6

George Robertson, who with a little more time could push Carton, finished third. At this point the 'Cats had a wide lead, 28-15, and seemed to be in command. However, in the 200 yard butterfly, the next event, Rutgers swept first and second as Bob Dow and Ted Mouaty, who have the unenviable job of filling the shoes of Larry Palacio and Jim Gregory who were the best "butterflies" Villanova has yet produced. They were in the race almost all the way, dropped behind in the last two laps to finish third and fourth.

In the next event however, Baemcke added his second win finishing the hundred freestyle by leading Dunn and Millstein of Rutgers to the wall.

Rud almost pulled the upset of the day as he and Plattes of Rutgers, one of the best in the East last year, waged a stroke for stroke duel for 200 yards but Plattes finished a scant two strokes in front. Keefe, still off his pace of last year, which saw him win 90% of his races, finished third about four lengths behind.

McCready Shows Promise

Bruce McCready, at least ten seconds faster than his best time last year showed great improvement as he stayed close to Fenstermacher of Rutgers all the way to lose by four yards. Co-captain Joe Harney, who like his counterpart Keefe is off his stride finished third in the 440 freestyle.

In the 200 yard breaststroke Rutgers took first place and second.

This set the stage for the final event as the mermen of Villanova had only a two-point margin. The meet was decided on the relay as the 'Cats led all the way to win their first meet of the season 52-43.

Freshmen Thump Explorers Showing Team Effort, 88-67

by John Duffy

Villanova's freshmen basketball team did away with another of their more formidable opponents Thursday Nite when they belted La Salle 88-67. The Wildcats had just too much artillery for the shell shocked Explorers.

Tommy Galia led the bombardment with 29 points, but the classy Galia received able assistance from the other team members. Chief among his assistants was Tom Hoover.

Hoover completely dominated the backboards and practically all of his 21 points came on taps and follow-ups. Tom, 6-9, blocked many shots and picked several others out of the air. He was also called for goal tending four times.

Versatile Bernie Chavis again played his usual stand out game and contributed 19 points. Bernie proved himself quite a pivot man in the absence of Hoover when big Tom was troubled with personals. Richie Richman flashed some nice playmaking ability and dropped in 13 points on only 10 shots. Jim O'Brien and Joe Quinn added three points apiece in the V.U. victory.

Big Guns for La Salle

La Salle also had a few cannons in their fort which sounded loudly. Bob Raferty, a 6-4 deadeye, tossed in 25 points to pace the La Salle effort.

Curt Fromal, a little bit of a guy, at 5-8, turned in a man size performance. Trailing 45-25 at halftime, little Curt picked his team off the floor for a brief spurt. Fromal threw in 23 points on a deadly jumper and quick drives.

The one disappointing factor about the 'Cats victorious performance was their deplorable foul shooting. Blessed with 41 chances by the desperate Explorers the 'Cats made only 20 for a poor .487 foul line percentage.

Mural Cagers Enter Third Week In Full Competition

by Hank Schultz

All interest in football has disappeared from the Villanova scene and everyone has hastened indoors for the basketball season. All that is, except the few sturdy and daring souls who make up the five teams in Villanova's newly organized soccer league.

In the two games played, Frank Murtha's "UN All-Stars" beat "The Rioters" of F. Galatas, 3-0; and the "Strokers", captained by J. Holas, defeated Jose Oliver's "Mambo Kids". (Or is it "Mambo Keeds?"). The Ghosts, a group of day hops led by Joe Homtero, have yet to play. However, by Jan. 5, each team will have met every other team once. A team gets 2 points for a victory, one for a tie game, and nothing for a loss. Ed Geisz, intramural director, says that the games played so far have proved very interesting, and recommends watching these matches whenever possible.

Among those that chose to move indoors, there are some first rate ball players. In all, over 50 teams are in competition, with over 400 men listed as eligible. The courts of Alumni Hall and the Field House are being used almost constantly, and should continue to be far into February. Although a few teams have forfeited, most of the games scheduled have been played. Over 50 score sheets have been returned to 112 Alumni. Thus far, there has been at least one winner every game.

Pixies Prance Away

Several weeks ago we mentioned a team called "The Pixies". They decided to withdraw from active competition after losing a practice game, 61-6. They considered it a moral victory, as they were without the aid of their tall man, 5-7 Jim Ross.

A few of the teams that are in the various leagues pulled through with close games. Monday at 4:30, "The Dukes" beat off Charlie Co's second half rally to win 28-27. Hopgekuda A.C. squeezed by the M&M's to win 49-46. In a fast moving game, Simpson's Nats edged out Allen All-Stars, 43-42.

One team that has shown marked improvement is White's Wonders. They lost their first game to the Crazy Herbs, 45-16. In their second game, they concentrated on their defense, and, though they only scored 14, they held their opponents, the Gung Ho Monks, to a mere 30 points. In another interesting battle, the Exquisite Forms held well, but just couldn't adjust to the offense of Darryl's Dandies, and gave out in the stretch, losing 43-26.

All in all, this year's basketball season at Villanova has started off in a favorable fashion, both in Intra and Inter Murals. In the Intramurals, however, there is still a slight problem. Ed Geisz has pointed out the need for officials for the games. He asks all interested parties to contact him or leave a note in room 112 Alumni Hall.

Can Spirit Win A Ball Game?

Yes . . . By Tony Macklin

Can spirit win a ball game?

The answer is yes. In this writer's mind, spirit will be the decisive factor in how the 'Cats fare in the basketball wars this season.

This writer contacted Coach Al Severance to find out his feelings on the spirit question.

"Give me fifteen minutes," the coach declared, "and I'll explode the theory that spirit isn't important."

He got his fifteen minutes and the theory went up in smoke.

Marines Epitome

"Against indomitable odds, spirit is the panacea of victory," the coach began. "Why, look at the Marines. They get a boy, take him to Parris Island and tear him down to nothing and then they build him up again. And when they are through that boy has the greatest spirit in the world."

He stabbed the air, "You give me the team with spirit and I'll beat you nine out of ten times."

"Why it's as simple as a father and his son. If the father gives his son a pat on the back it does something for that boy. If you're normal you react to that," he explained.

Severance pointed to the Drizin trophy that was awarded to George Emma prior to the Scranton game. "The value of that trophy is the spirit behind it.

Spiritual Value

"Chuck Drizin gave his life for what he believed in. The spiritual value of the Drizin trophy is far in excess of this one." He held up a trophy that was for performance alone.

He began pacing up and down his office. He recited lines from "Sheridan's Ride," a poem by Thomas Buchanan Read. Then he declared, "The troops were beaten. The sight of Sheridan coming rallied them, spirit rallied them. A defeated army came back."

He puffed on his cigar and continued, "Go down through the annals of history. Napoleon, Horatio at the bridge. Why did Napoleon review his troops? To instill Spirit!"

Severance turned to the subject of spirit at Villanova. "In the locker room before the Princeton game the team got together and said "we cannot lose this ball game, if for nothing more than we owe it to the students who have come up here at their own effort and expense to support us.

Greatest Spirit

"After the Scranton game people along the Main Line came and told me that it was the first demonstration of the spirit of ten years ago."

The coach shook his head and said, "Spirit is 40% of the battle. Without spirit you have a dry trust." The coach shook his head and said, "If spirit doesn't have its effect does the student just go to a game to be entertained? Why, he can be entertained just by sitting in his room listening to the radio."

He was disturbed, "Why is there a military unit band, why do they furl the banners? Why is the Rainbow Division so proud of its heritage? Spirit.

Loyal Students

"Without the loyalty of the student body it would be a sad day. Spirit vitalizes the university. Otherwise it would be just stone, wood, and glass."

He concluded his incendiary talk, "Spirit is a healthy enthusiasm to bolster the player when things appear dark. It is the intangible spark.

"The power of St. Joe's cheering is inestimable.

"It is not spirit to mimic your sister school or hold it up to scorn.

"Anyone who says that spirit doesn't have an impact on a ball club and stimulates it to greater efforts has no psychological knowledge of men."

24 Yrs. Experience

The above opinions are those of a man who is in his twenty-fourth year of coaching a college team.

It appears to this writer that spirit is all the coach said and more. It is a force in the stands and a force in the ball player that when they meet and ignite can burn another team right off the court.

Basketball is not a bloodless game, spirit puts the blood in to it.

Spirit is a sixth man on the court. You know when he is there or when he is missing. He unifies and inspires. He rattles the opponent and increases his team's confidence.

He can explode a chink in the opposition into a gaping hole. He can burst that team's attack and leave them floundering.

This fellow spirit has the value of an All-American.

But spirit must be channeled in the right directions. Yelling "Beat St. Joe's" last Saturday was a mistake. This thoughtless cheer can do a lot of damage. Is St. Joe's the first game that has any importance?

What about Temple, West Virginia, N.Y.U., don't they count? Why wasn't there any "N.I.T." cheering?

If spirit has no effect why is there so much emphasis given by coaches, and ball players on the difficulties encountered in playing away from home? It would seem to be more than just the unfamiliar court which causes their distress.

Wild yapping, flapping, and carousing do not necessarily constitute solid or gentlemanly spirit. Solid spirit is loyalty handled with taste.

There is a feeling in many circles that when the team loses a couple of games the new found "spirit" will crumble. It will be interesting to see what kind of support the 'Cats receive when they are down.

Young Spirit

Before I left the coach, he showed me a letter that a boy in Washington had sent to Hubie White. It asked simply for Hubie to please send a personally autographed picture.

The boy included a slip of paper for Hubie to sign for his scrapbook and wrote that if Hubie didn't answer he would understand. The boy let one sentence of appeal escape: "Please don't let me down." Hubie won't.

If the 'Cats are supported with spirit the caliber of this young fan's, it must have a positive effect.

Spirit can win a ball game.

No . . . By Tom Troy

When I read the VILLANOVAN last week I noted two rather disturbing articles. Both had basketball as their topic. Both were ultimately concerned with that much discussed (and maligned) subject of school spirit.

In one article, Tony Macklin stated that George Raveling, captain of the basketball team, was "somewhat disappointed at the luke-warm reception after the Princeton game but was elated by Friday night's throng."

George is quoted: "After the Princeton game we came back and heard people complaining. It hurt."

In the other article, Tom Hoffman, president of the Student Council, talks of the lack of spirit during the football season, and then says, "we of the Student Council wish to show the city of Philadelphia the true Villanova spirit."

Objection, Please

He continues by saying that the Spirit Committee "will be doing their best to stir the entire student body to action."

Finally, Tom reports that the Student Council dance will be "the night before the infamous St. Joseph's-Villanova game."

I take objection to both George Raveling's statements and to the implications contained in Tom Hoffman's column. I'll tell you why.

It seems to me that George Raveling (and every other athlete at Villanova) should readjust himself and adopt what, in my opinion, is a more realistic and, actually, a more fair attitude.

For although it must be wonderful for an athlete to hear thousands of people applauding and cheering when he does something well, this acclamation must not, cannot, enter into his consideration. It must not affect his play.

Praise Quickly Changed

Because if mere acclamation affects his play, then vociferous opposition its also going to affect his performance. And people will say that "this guy choked."

An athlete must play in a self-made vacuum. He must concentrate on himself, his teammates, and his opponents. The minutes he listens to the stands, he's in trouble.

And George must realize that praise heaped on him one minute turns to criticism and condemnation the next. Only men praise or condemn, and men are fickle.

The greatest spirit I've ever seen on the college level was that displayed by the great majority of La Salle College students when Tom Gola was at La Salle. Gola was Superman, Santa Claus, Robin Hood, Tom Mix, and Jack Armstrong.

To criticize Gola was like blaspheming, but there were some even then who blasted Tom and his coach Ken Loeffler and La Salle. Nobody's ever satisfied.

Should Be Sufficient

A second point I would like to make is that George Raveling and every other athlete doesn't have the right to expect praise any more than an honor student or a member of the Student Council or a newspaper columnist or editor has.

The only praise any of them has a right to hear is self-praise. This should be their object: to play basketball, to study, to write, to do whatever Student Council members do, as well as they can. If they perform to their utmost, they deserve self-praise.

But they musn't expect or demand that others praise them. That George Raveling plays as well as he possibly can is very evident, but George should get ample reward from self-realization of this.

It seems to me that professional athletes have adopted just this attitude. They play their best, and shrug off all honors and criticisms with equal facility.

Spirit never scored one point, grabbed one rebound, won one game. Only spirited performers have. And they are those who play their best whether this fact is played up or ignored.

What I object to most vehemently in Tom Hoffman's column is the implication in the phrase "the infamous St. Joseph's-Villanova game" carries: this is the only game that matters.

I shuddered when I saw those words. I quaked, I cowered. I am so tired of hearing people at Villanova say, "I don't care if we lose every game so long as we beat St. Joe's," that I become flustered, aroused, tongue-tied when I hear it.

These characters are getting more childish, more annoying than the children at the glorified high school are.

These "men", led by some fanatical, gushing-with-joy, slobbering-with-enthusiasm idiot, parade at the drop of a hat, sing the same song over and over, don't recognize defeat when it hits them between the eyes, simply reject reality.

Lunatic Fringe at V.U.

They associate themselves so much with their basketball team (a very fine one) that they consider a victory on the court as a personal victory for them. They imply that because St. Joseph's basketball team defeats Villanova's, they are better than a student at Villanova.

Ask them about track or baseball sometime!

Well, it seems to me that there is a desire on the part of some around here to form the same kind of lunatic fringe.

John Oberlies and Jack Valva wanted us to buy pith helmets and put a big V on them. Why not something more original—something like a straw skimmer?

Last year they wanted someone to write lyrics to some old melody so we could sing them at games. How 'bout "When the 'Cats Go Marching In?"

They want to "stir" us to action. Let's have a big parade down Lancaster Avenue. Or better yet: let's all convene at 30th Street Station, march to the Palestra carrying banners and shouting Huzzahs!, lock all the fanatics in the Palestra, and then burn it down.

Wildcats Rip State In Dixie 68-56

Greensboro, N. C.—The Villanova Wildcats opened the new War Memorial Coliseum, to basketball with a 68-56 thumping of the North Carolina State Wolfpack.

Before about 9,000 fans, the Wildcats, who were the home-team set up a very tight 1-2-2 defense. The zone held the Wolfpack to 19 shots and nine field goals in the first half. Villanova had 40 shots but were able to hit on only 13 to hold a 31-22 halftime bulge.

N. C. State broke through the zone in the third quarter and narowed Villanova's lead to three points. But alert ball-stealing and great hustle broke the game open in favor of the 'Cats.

Case Unsettled

At the start of the game Everett Case set his team in a 2-3 defense. After two tap-ins by Captain George Raveling, who had 14 points, and a jump-shot by Jim Huggard the 'Cats had a 6-0 lead. Big soph Bruce Hodly hooked in the first goal for State.

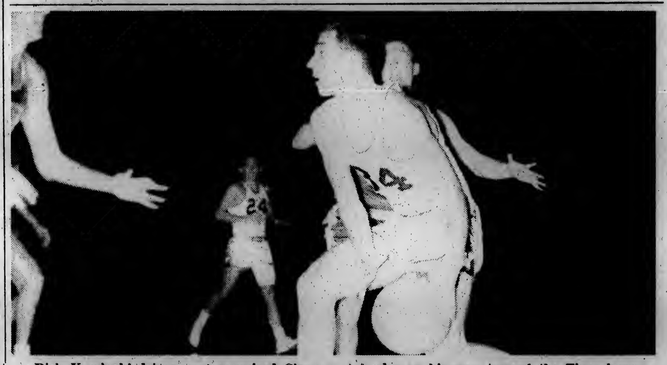
The half was free of much fouling with State trying to solve the tight Wildcat zone. With about 9:40 remaining State switched to a man for man defense to off-set the phenomeal shooting Dick Kaminsky.

Hubbie White who was the coldest 'Cat in Dixie with a 2 for 11 percentage in the first half.

The 'Cats outscored the Wolfpack 21 to 14 with Raveling and John Driscoll controlling the boards.

The Big Key

In the second half the men from State solved the 'Cats zone in the person of Bob (Moose) DiStephano. With big John Key getting some good rebounds Di Stephano was getting the jump on the Wildcat defense and got half of his 16 points in the third quarter spurt.



The Wolfpack moved into a 2-1-2 zone and had the 'Cats stymed for most of the third quarter.

But Raveling and Driscoll once again controlled the boards and the Wildcats opened things up offensively and closed the door defensively with the zone once again being tight.

One Southern gentleman was overheard in leaving "Ah means its the Civil War all over again with those Yankees beating us on Southern soil."

Streamlined Hubie White shows his vaunted leaping prowess as he arches a shot goalward in the Clemson game.

Dick Kaminski drives past surprised Clemson defender on his way toward the Tiger hoop.

Wildcats 'Hold That Tiger;' Team Balance Whips Clemson

3,656 disregarded the rainy weather and sat in the sweltering Palestra to see for themselves if it was true what they said 'bout Hubie, as Villanova debuted on the Penn court last Saturday night against the Clemson Tigers.

Many expected—and perhaps wanted—to see a one man show. Instead, they saw a well balanced Villanova five, superbly led by Jim Huggard, handily defeat the tall and talented Atlantic Conference team, 77-64.

The Clemson strategy was rather obvious—stop the fabulous White from scoring. Playing a zone defense with their tallest players bunched in the corner where Hubie was stationed, they did just that in the first half. White had only three field goals, two on taps.

Zone Works Very Well

But in the meantime, Dick Kaminski was popping from the other, weakened, side of the zone, and George Raveling was scoring underneath as Huggard threaded the needle with some great passes.

Clemson, unable to penetrate the smoothly functioning 1-2-2 done defense of Villanova, was forced to shoot mainly from the deep corners or far beyond the foul circle. Only the fine gunning of George Krajack and Don Carver kept the Tigers in the game.

Jim Huggard

White, although not scoring, demonstrated his tremendous value to Villanova as he sparkled on defense. He, Huggard, and Kaminski blitzed Clemson several times after the Hug had stolen the ball.

Driscoll Clicks Inside

In the second half, Clemson changed their zone somewhat in order to check both cornermen. John Driscoll, who played his best game of the young season, then personally wrecked this bit of tactics.

John moved inside the big men and scored seven straight points that pushed the 'Cats into a 15 point lead.

But Clemson, sparked by the long set shots of Dutch Shample, creeped to within eight points, then used a semi-press with only five minutes left in the game.

Huggard and White responded to this by completely dominating the remainder of the game. Hug very coolly directed a modified "freeze," and scored four clutch fouls in the last two minutes as he dribbled circles around the pressing Tigers.

White moved into a high post position and hit four field goals in a row, including a spectacular dunk shot off a fast-break. Hubie finished the game with 19 points, 12 in the second half, eight of these in the last five minutes.

Team Play

Dick Kaminski continued his torrid shooting (7-11) as he hit for 15 points; Raveling notched 18 points (5-7) and grabbed 17 rebounds, again being the leading rebounder on both teams.

Driscoll was the second leading rebounder and contributed 11 points (4-8). Huggard had 13 points (3-7) and eight assists. As a team, the 'Cats shot 51% from the floor.

All of which proves, once more, that a full house beats one ace every time.

Seahawks, Eagles, Dukes And Mules Ready For 'Cats

by John Duffy

Saturday the Cats travel up to Staten Island, N. Y., to play Wagner University. This, according to all reports, is going to be Wagner's year. The Staten Island boys had a fairly good record last year and this season they have everyone back.

Coach Herb Sutter will start five experienced seniors, none of whom would get lost on any basketball court. 6-4 Fred Blackwell and 6-6 Hal Junta will be in the corners. In the backcourt Milfred Pierce and Harry Ordando, both 5-10, and Pete Wirth, 5-11, will see about equal action. The center post will be manned by 6-7 junior Bob Larsen. A speedy sophomore, Ron George, could cause a lot of trouble on a fast break if he gets to play for any length of time.

Boston Beware:

Cats on the Way

The first game that the Cats play in the New Year will be at Boston against the Boston College Eagles on January 2. The Eagles had a very good 17-9 record last year but this season the pickings seem very slim. The Boston Boys have lost all of their starters one way or another and things don't seem to be too rosy up Bean Town way.

Frank Quinn, a 6-6 center, and Ray Falvery, a guard, are the only lettermen and the load is likely to come their way. Jack Schappmeyer, the captain, a 6-0 forward and Jim Hoaley, a 6-5 forward, who was a frosh scoring flash, are also slated for starting duty. Rudy Van Burg, at 6-6 is the only other experienced man on the squad, but coach Don Martin is confident that no one will run his Eagles off the court.

The Wildcats will play at the Bob Slobodnik

Palestra on January 6, against Duquesne. The Dukes, if nothing else, will be big. With 6-9 Bob Slobodnick, a junior, at center and seniors Frank Grebowski, 6-7, and George Brown, 6-4, in the corners few teams will be bigger than the Iron Dukes. Coach Red Manning's main problem will be finding a backcourt replacement for Bernie Mathews. The problem may be solved in the person of 6-5 Paul Benec. Although very big, at 6-5, Benec is exceedingly mobile and is expected to be of great assistance in the backcourt. Benec's running mate will be either Bill Strom, 6-2, or Bill Stromple, 5-8. Like Benec both are sophomores.

Stromple is the smallest player ever to wear the Red and Blue of Duquesne. But with Slobodnick throwing his 240 pounds around, the men from Pittsburgh are a certainty to improve on their 13-11 record of last year.

Mules: Not Mighty But Big

The Mules from Muhlenberg are the guests of Villanova on the same Palestra floor January 9. The Mules were third in the very tough MAC last year, behind St. Joe's and LaSalle, and don't appear to be able to better their conference standing this year. However, they should have a good team.

Dick Sekunda, 6-5, and Dan Robbins, 6-4, will be up front. 6-4 Ron Druckenmiller, a good center will be in the pivot. Joe Berghold, 6-1, and George Gilfillan will be in the backcourt. The best reserve will be 6-8 Herb Loeffler. Three sophomores, Chris Hiotis, 6-2, Jack Superka, 6-2, and Dick Hunt, 6-6, will add strong support to a good bench.

King To Succeed Wiele As Council Vice-President

Jack King, senior M.E., has been appointed as Vice President of Student Government to succeed Fred Wiele who has resigned.

King has served the first semester as chairman of the Fraternities and Societies Committee. His last act as chairman was to bring his own fraternity, Phi Kappa Pi, up for disciplinary action for failure to submit its report.

Delinquent Groups

He also recommended disciplinary action for other delinquent organizations: the Physics Club and DPE fraternity. The representatives of these groups pleaded their cases before a meeting of the senate last Monday evening. They received a temporary suspension of voting powers.

In his new position, King supervises operations of the Fraternities and Societies Committee; the Ways and Means Committee; the Social Affairs Committee; and the Elections Committee.

Juggle Personnel

He has stated an intention to juggle the personnel of the committees in a reorganization move. Already Steve Carton has been appointed chairman of the Fraternities and Societies Committee.

King expects to run an orderly system of elections this semester, even more effectively than before.

Loan Provisions Receive Criticism Of Administration

Rev. Harry J. Erdlen, O.S.A., Villanova's Administrator of Government Loans, reiterated this school's stand on government loans as one of non-opposition in regards to the loyalty oaths that must be signed by applicants.

But he stressed that he opposes the loans on two other counts: a) discrimination, and b) administration.

Great Concern

It is Father's feeling that the great concern about the signing of the affidavit is one of the minor disadvantages of the program. "It seems to me that other aspects of the loan program could be improved", he explains.

The administrater pointed out the "incontestable" discrimination shown to Catholic and private schools. "If a graduate enters a public secondary school for teaching, his loan is reduced by 10% a year for up to five years," Father asserted. This means the loan could be cut in half.

Father contended that the whole administrative apparatus of the loan program is complicated and burdensome for colleges to operate and that most institutions are in no position to handle the red tape involved. Interest computing also falls on the individual institutions.

Benefit Student

"Villanova has undertaken the student loan program to benefit the student," Father commented, "we have always been only too glad to assist the student in his education. But it seems to me that there should be a better plan.

"Let the better equipped banks administer the funds."

Father Erdlen explained why various colleges have refused to accept government loans, such as Haverford and Swarthemore Colleges.

"Some schools refused the loans because of religious beliefs," Father said, "and others because of the danger of the legal terminology involved. Some of the recipients may have good reasons for not having government interfering in their affairs.

Seniors Planning Prom Date With Buddy Morrow's Band

St. Joseph-Villanova basketball game tickets went on sale at 9 a.m. Monday, but the line was "well-formed" at 7:30, when this picture was taken. The tickets were sold out by noon.

"You won't recognize the Field House," insisted Senior Prom co-chairman Tom McCoy when asked about the decorations for the big night February 19.

"I know it sounds like an old wornout cry, but things are going to be different this year," McCoy promised "glamour for '60."

Senior class president Ray Rafferty chimed in with the observation that the Field House always seems to carry the aura of a just finished basketball game even during dances. But this year instead of "just music replacing cheers, there will also be a different mood created," Rafferty stated.

Novel and Distinctive

Rafferty also guaranteed something "novel and distinctive" in favors. He was also proud of the refreshments that the refreshment committee has acquired for the evening.

"We will have something entirely new for Villanova in refreshments. It should be quite a surprise," he commented.

"There are two things that we particularly want to stress," continued Rafferty. "First of all we want it to be known that everyone who comes to the dance will really get something out of it."

"Also we want to emphasize that every student at Villanova is invited to the prom. We want everyone, from freshmen to seniors, to come."

Buddy Morrow

As announced on the publicity release handed out on campus Buddy Morrow and his band, featuring vocalist Jane Taylor, will supply the music for the prom. Morrow can play anything from rocking rhythm-crammed numbers to smooth romantic ballads. His recording of "Night Train" is a rhythm classic and his rendering of "Tara's Theme" was a ballad bestseller.

Jim Foley dance co-chairman told the Villanovan that prom tickets are selling well. They may be obtained in the Pie Shoppe.

'Cats Accept Bid To NIT To Prove 'Selves In N.Y.

Athletic Director Frank Reagan announced that Villanova had accepted a bid to the National Invitational Tournament last Thursday afternoon at the Philadelphia Sports writer's luncheon.

Villanova was the first school to accept a bid to the New York tourney to be played March 10-19.

Coach Al Severance told the Villanovan the reason for going to the NIT rather than to the NCAA. "We received a firm bid from the NIT while we only got a feeler from the NCAA. Also when we took a vote of the boys they voted unanimously for the NIT.

"I don't want to dictate for the team," the coach continued. "They have played great ball. They have fought all the way this season. This is a team that gets along together very well, they have great team spirit. They want to go to New York. They deserve a say."

Starved for Success

"We aren't going up there for the exercise!' Severance blasted when asked point blank if the 'Cats can win the tourney. "We're a hungry ball club."

Captain George Raveling spoke for the players. "We want to make a good showing in New York," he said seriously. "The game is near to Philly and the students and our friends and parents will be able to see us play. They wouldn't if we were in the NCAA which is played in Charlotte and California."

As of Monday, Dayton, Detroit, Providence, and Memphis State had accepted bids to join VU in the NIT.

Other possible entries are St. Louis, defending champion St. John's, New York University, St. Bonaventure, Toledo, and Bradley or Cincinnati, Utah or Utah State, St. Joseph's or LaSalle.

Garden Jinx

The NIT will be held in Madison Square Garden. Since 1950 the 'Cats have won three games in the Garden while losing eight. Two of the victories came in NCAA tourney games.

In 1950 the Arizin led the 'Cats loss to Kentucky and then beat Yale in the consolation game. In 1955 they defeated Duke. Last Thursday they knocked off Manhattan for their first Garden victory since that time.

Dinner Dance Tickets

The sale of Senior Dinner Dance tickets will continue through Monday, February 15, according to Bill Henry, Dance co-chairman.

"The tickets have gone fast and most of the floor tables have already been taken," said Henry. Seniors have rushed to the sales desk, which opened this past Monday.

The ultra-modern Sheraton Hotel will be the site of this year's dance. Co-chairman Henry and Jack Heffernan have signed the Eddie Bigham Orchestra. Tickets are being sold at $12 per couple.

COUNCIL TONIGHT

Debate Over Free Day Expected

The Student Council tomorrow evening will again try to make its annual selection of the free day given to it by the Administration.

Two of the dates center around the basketball team's invitation to the N.I.T. tourney. A third would lengthen the Ascension Thursday vacation two weeks before final exams.

March 18 Expected

The date which is widely expected to be chosen is March 18, a Friday, which falls the day after a semi-final game in New York, and the day before the finals, Saturday, March 19.

Another date would be Friday, March 11, the day between two tournament games.

Chairman Tom Hoffman is confident that the Council will choose March 18.

The variety of potential dates recalls the heated dispute last year which was generated by a similar situation.

According to VILLANOVAN reports, the chosen day was selected after extreme pressure from non-Council members in the back room, most of them attending a meeting for their first and last times.

Not the Best

It was generally felt that the chosen day last year was not the best, and many voices were heard deploring the Council's readiness to be pressured.

Hoffman would like to see a large student attendance at tomorrow's meeting.

While the hats haven't been selling as fast as desired, some students have purchased them, and sport them proudly.

Campus Shop Disappointed By Sales of Quaker Hats

Reports that the University Shop was besieged with requests for the new Quaker hats were greatly exaggerated, according to John Bauman, who is in charge of the shop.

"Actually we still have a goodly number of hats left. I can't say exactly how many we've actually sold so far, but I'd hardly say the sales were booming."

At Palestra Games

The hats went on sale early in January and the first purchase was made by Hank Gotard, a member of the football team. The few that have been sold have been seen at Palestra games, blending with such headgear as the Spirit Committee pith helmets.

The sparse sale of the broad-brimmed black hats drew a variety of responses from the student body. Most were amused, but at least one skeptical Villanovan saw an ulterior motive in the Quaker "skies."

"If you ask me," said a junior arts man, "I think the Student Council's behind the whole thing. They probably have the movie 'Friendly Pursuasion' slated for the near future and they're just trying to get in a plug.

Gregarious Geese

"I suppose their next step is to install some gregarious geese in the Mendel Pond," he wryly remarked.

A source on the Student Council denied that the Council plans any showing of the film.

Bauman is doubtful as to whether or not he will order any more of the hats.

Job Opportunties Many And Varied, Says Moritz

The results of the recent interviews of seniors by various corporations indicate that the demands of industry are extremely varied, said Mr. John Moritz, Placement Director.

"Companies are still looking for the well-rounded man," Moritz declared, "but that is not the whole story."

Two Cases

As an instance of the varied demands, he cited two cases which occurred during the senior interview period. The United States Steel Corporation, the nation's largest company with an employment of half a million, held 72 interviews conducted by a total of 12 recruiters.

As a result of these interviews, only three offers were made, on the basis of the applicants' high grades.

On the other hand, Sears, Roebuck, with a quarter of a million employees, does not emphasize high marks as much as average marks plus a good record of extra-curricular activities.

General Rules

Moritz stated that there are certain general rules which are followed by interviewers, despite their varied requirements. Applicants must have a definite desire to work for a particular company, and not just any company.

High grades are always helpful, especially in such fields as engineering and accounting, but are not always essential.

Another concrete fact that interviewers look for is the goal of the applicant. Men who know what they want and are willing to sacrifice for it, and who are willing to assume the burden of added responsibility for higher pay, are always preferred.

Reading Improvement

The first offering of the University's Reading Improvement Program for the spring semester begins today in the Reading Clinic in Mendel Hall. Classes are held three times a week for a period of six weeks.

Dr. Stanley J. Weissman who directs the course revealed that some of the students who took the course last semester were able to double their reading speed while holding the same comprehension score or even increasing it.

Dr. Weissman stressed that both speed and compresension are emphasized in the program.

A second group will begin the Reading Program on March 23. Those who are interested in enrolling should contact the Guidance Office in Room 51, Mendel.

Student Tutor Program Called Moderate Success

The Student Tutor program conducted by the Student Council last semester is considered a moderate success by Neil Drislane, whose committee set the project in motion.

The one factor which puzzles Drislane, however, is the unusual disparity between the number of tutors and number of students needing help.

Excess of Tutors

"There seem to be more tutors for must subjects than students," he said. "It seems that some students lost interest after signing for the program, and after all that's involved in arranging a time and place to meet with the tutor."

Drislane was also dismayed to see that there are not enough tutors in certain fields. Response was greater in subjects such as math or engineering than in courses which involved excessive memorization.

He was pleased with the results, but admitted that the true results would be more readily apparent upon receipt of the grades.

Two Weeks Off

Most students agreed that they had profited from the program, he said, and they would have profited even more had the program been extended up until exam time. It was discontinued two weeks prior to the finals.

To Start Earlier

The program got off to a late start last semester, and Drislane plans to begin this semester's work possibly as early as the end of February.

The qualifications which must be met by a candidate tutor are: he must have taken the course in question and have earned at least a B in it. Drislane expects to give greater publicity to the program this semester.

Two Points of View

Fr. Erdlen

The plan itself provides that the university 9% and all administrative costs, while the government pays the rest. In the first semester 135 students applied for loans and 75 were granted. The university doled out a total of $45,000 as their committed 9% last year.

"It's not too bad now," Father warned, "but when those government loans are due, we'll really have big headaches handling the student's funds."

Scott Opposes Affidavit for Student Loan

Philadelphia — U. S. Senator Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) said today he will support the move to repeal the non-Communist affidavit now required of students receiving certain Federal loans because "it casts suspicion on students."

Speaking at the Founder's Day Convocation of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, Senator Scott said:

Bad Provision

"The National Defense Education Act, which I support in 1958 because it provides important aid to education, contains one unfortunate provision.

"It requires that a student who receives a Federal loan sign an affidavit that he does not believe in or belong to any organization that teaches the illegal overthrow of the Government.

"There is nothing wrong with the affidavit, as such. I have signed it myself several times in connection with my Navy duty and other Government assignments.

"But this disclaimer is not required of other persons receiving Federal aid Farmers who get subsidy payments do not have to sign it. Neither do businessmen who get small business loans.

"So why do we single out students? Many educators in our Commonwealth and elsewhere have objected strenuously to this disclaimer as discriminatory, since it is not applied equally to all persons. I support President Eisenhower's proposal to repeal this part of the law."

Loan Application Procedure

- Make application to the Villanova Admissions Office. Rev. Harry Erdlen administers the loan on campus.
- Be prepared to state financial resources. The loan is partly awarded on financial need.
- The student signs the loan's loyalty oath and also the affidavit. Affidavit is signed before notary public.
- Student signs promissory note (what amounts to an IOU), promising to repay the government through the University.
- The loan falls due one year after the student is no longer enrolled as a student in any institution. Payments are made in ten equal annual installments at three percent interest. Other provisions may be provided.
- Special consideration is given to math and science students who manifest a desire to teach.

C&F Donor's Plaque Awarded

Rev. Joseph H. Bartley, O.S.A., Dean of C. and F., V. Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., president, and John A. Murphy, 1957 Chairman of Villanova's Fund Drive unveil plaque dedicated to donors of $1,000 or more to Villanova's new C. & F. Building.

Beth Alexander To Speak At Lit Club

Miss Beth Sewell Alexander of Bryn Mawr College will deliver a lecture before the Literary Club in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall next Tuesday evening, 7 p.m.

Miss Alexander, a senior English major, will discuss folk music, particularly Afro American type. A resident of Louisville, Kentucky she makes the study of folk music a hobby.

Joined By O-C

The Literary Club is being joined by Opera-Classica in sponsoring a program of Afro-American music.

Opera-Classica yearbook pictures will be taken at the O-C meeting on February 16.

Accreditation Board To Survey School This Week

Villanova has recently been under observation by a number of organizations in order to determine its academic position for the next decade. The primary agency is the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

It was, however, accompanied by several other independent agencies: The Engineers Council for Professional Developement, American Bar Association, Association of American Law Schools, National League for Nursing, and American Chemical Society.

The evaluation committee, itself, is composed of twenty persons and is chaired by Albert E. Meder, Jr., Vice Provost and Dean of Rutgers University.

The Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools is a product of the colleges and secondary schools themselves, and operates mainly for the purpose of maintaining and advancing the qualifications of the schools involved.

This evaluation extended from February 7 through yesterday, and will result in a report to be issued sometime in the late Spring, probably in May..

Fr. Gildea Goes To Deans Confab

Rev. Joseph Gildea, OSA, Vice President of Academic Affairs, will represent Villanova at the third annual Institute for Academic Deans.

The Institute, held at the Harvard University Graduate School of Business February 14 and 19, is sponsored by the Institute for College and University Administrators.

Father Gildea is one of 38 deans from four-year colleges and universities who will participate in the Institute.

The Institute will consist of group discussions on topics from the broad fields of educational leadership; faculty organization; curriculum; recruitment, evaluation, and promotion of faculty; tenure; salary administration; budget control; student discipline and academic advising and academic freedom.

Major Rooney Announces Varsity Rifle Tryouts

Major J. J. Rooney USMC has announced that tryouts for the varsity rifle and pistol teams will be held Feb. 15 and 17 respectively. All students are eligible and encouraged to try out for these teams.

Students need not be accomplished marksmen before the selections because they will receive refresher and technique instructions before they enter competition.

The Villanova teams will compete against St. Johns, the Coast Guard Academy, Kings Point, the Naval Academy, and West Point.

The pistol team will meet the Cadets of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point on March 6. Both the rifle and pistol teams will engage the teams from the Coast Guard Academy here at Villanova on March 12.

Dan O'Mara Manages Villanova Radio

"Station WVIL now begins another evening of live broadcasting."

With these words, WVIL Station Manager Dan O'Mara launched another year of broadcasting last September. In the five months since then, he has guided the campus radio station to the greatest heights it has yet reached.

O'Mara lists four events as "outstanding" in the history of WVIL: its inception in 1946, its move to the present studios in Dougherty Hall in 1956, the acquisition of a professional console last year, and the addition of a $1,500 tape recorder a few weeks ago.

Major Roles

In two of these events, the acquisition of the console and the tape recorder, O'Mara played a major role. Last year, as a freshman, Dan was Chief Engineer, and assisted in the installation of the console. This year, as Station Manager, he directed the installation of the tape recorder and, with his staff, is developing a new system of programming shows in order to make full use of the new equipment.

O'Mara, an Accounting Major, hails from West Brighton, Staten Island, N. Y. He attended the Augustinian Academy on Staten Island. Upon coming to Villanova, he "discovered" WVIL and devoted so much time and effort to the station that he was named Chief Engineer by former Manager Bill Washington.

At the end of last year he was elected Station Manager by a combined conclave of old and new staff heads of WVIL.

Dan O'Mara

Dan feels that the 14 to 20 hours a week he must devote to the station are well worth the effort. He is certain that they will be an invaluable aid in the future, when he plans to attend law school and then enter the business end of the broadcasting industry.

As for the future of WVIL, Dan and his staff prefer to keep their plans under wraps until the plans can be put into effect. It is no secret, however, that the ultimate goal of the Voice of Villanova is to broadcast around the clock on an FM band.

Alumni Center Opens Here On Campus

By Bill Speers

An ever-expanding Villanova University took a big step last month when it purchased new quarters for the Alumni Department on the other side of Lancaster Avenue. The house and property, which actually belonged to the University many years ago, are located directly across from Simpson Hall.

"The house is the realization of a dream which many thought was at least ten years away," said Alumni executive secretary George J. Pequinot who is elated over the acquisition. "Our new location enables us to undertake many activities which were either impossible or impractical in our old location," continued Pequinot. (The Alumni Department formerly worked out of a one room office in Mendel Hall.)

Pequnot explained that when located on the campus proper, attempts to hold meetings proved fruitless because of the last minute scurrying for classroom space. "But our new housings enable us more then ample room for meetings," he added.

Undergoes Face Lifting

The Alumni House itself, is a white, three-story stone structure located at 832 Lancaster Avenue. Although the outside is in pretty much the same condition as it was when it was procured, the interior has undergone a complete face-lifting.

The old plaster was torn out and new wiring was put in. Also the plumbing was bad and it was completely replaced. Recessed lighting was installed into all the ceilings in the offices and the ceilings throughout the house were redone with acoustical plaster which is blown on. "It gives a first-class appearance in addition to serving as a sound softener,' Pequignot interjected. Also the walls on the second floor were panelled instead of replastered.

George J. Pequinot, Alumni executive secretary, discusses "pride and joy" with assistant.

According to the executive secretary the biggest boon in the space quarters is the wealth of Space now at their disposal. "In Mendel Hall we had been working under very bad conditions," he explaine. Everything had been squeezed into one office plus an extremely small area for our addressing machine. We did not have enough space to use properly the equipment that we had. When we mailed a magazine. We had to work in the halls.

It was decided to house all offices a working area on the second floor while reserving the first floor for social activities, since it seemed to be the best suite for this purpose. The second floor contained four bedrooms; two of which were converted into offices and the other two combined to form one large workroom.

Pequinot refers to this big room as his "pride and joy". This room provides a home for newly acquired addressing equipment which enables the department to maintain two sets of addressing plates—one by class and one geographically. "The Bryn Mawr Post Office gave us their old sorting cases, Pequignot reported, "and with them we are now able to handle bulk mailings. They are a badly needed addition to our operation."

Pequinot offered several projected uses of the house. Among them were: local Villanova club meetings, Board of Governors meetings, various committee meetings, class reunion meetings, and various undergraduate-alumni meetings. "Also there is a plot of ground which approaches a half an acre in size," Pequignot stated, "there is a distinct possibility that this will be used for some type of outdoor affairs.

Dedication of the new Villanova addition will take place next spring.

Frosh To Vote

Elections for freshmen representatives to the Student Council will be held on Thursday, February 18.

Herb Lettau, Elections Board co-chairman, announced that the following freshmen have passed the Administration's screening: Residents Robert Kusek, (Engr.); William Noto (Engr.); Michael Romano (A & S); and Day-Hops Charles Butler (A & S); John Duffy (A & S); Donald Pistilli (C & F); Joseph Tate (A & S); and Martin Whalen (C & F).

All freshmen will be eligible to vote in this election. The presentation of a matriculation card will allow the voter to cast a ballot for both the resident and the day-hop post.

The two elected representatives will serve a term of office that will carry through their sophomore year. After this, they will be eligible for re-election.

Cherry Cheri, Cheree

Howard Johnson has nothing on Villanova for exotic flavors. The Pie Shoppe had added another flavor to the ice cream roster: Cherry Cheri (French pronunciation.)

Graduate Theater Expects Great Response to Synge

The Theatre Department's production of John Millington Synge's "Playboy of the Western World" will be presented from Thursday, Feb. 18 through Sunday, Feb. 21 in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

This will be the Department's second major production since its inception last year.

Tickets Available

Tickets for the production can be obtained in the Pie Shoppe and from cast members. They may be reserved by telephoning extension 391. Price is $1.80 for general admission and $1.25 for students.

The play's cast includes both graduate and undergraduate students. Owen Klein, a 1959 graduate of Villanova, is featured in the role of Christopher Mahon.

Klein, currently studying for his Master's degree in Theatre Arts, was president of Belle Masque and starred in many of its shows as an undergraduate.

Tom Sines, a LaSalle graduate, who has been with the Hedgerow Theatre for some time, has been cast in the role of Old Mahon. The role of Michael James will be played by Richard Harshberger.

Mr. Harshberger has recently directed "The Diary of Anne Frank" for the Theatre group of Holy Family College.

Jean Miclot

Jean Miclot of Davenport, Iowa will play Pegeen Mike. Miss Miclot has appeared in numerous productions at Clark College in Dubuque.

The role of Widow Quin will be played by Gilda Spurio a recent graduate of Immaculata where she was president of Cue and Curtain, their dramatic society.

Michael Tanney, formerly of LaSalle, who now teaches at Father Judge High School, will play the role of Shawn Keogh. The cast will be completed by students associated with the Theatre Department.

Irish Peasants

Mr. Richard A. Duprey, Chairman of the Theatre Department and director of the play has said that this play by Synge is a satirical comedy about Irish peasants.

He also pointed out that the play is down to earth and of lyrical form.

The same producing body which produced "Our Town" under the direction of Bernard Coyne in December is producing this play by Synge.

No Office Hours

Once more the inaction of the Student Council is papered over by the rhetoric of good intentions.

Only a few weeks ago, the Council passed a motion to compel all class representatives to post office hours in an effort to make them just a little bit more accessible to the folk which they represent. But that seems long ago and far away. To date, the few who did carry out the motion which they voted for are rather negligible, and of that group, the number who publicized their hours, did so with suspicious reserve.

Our ears are dulled by the tired refrain of the average Council member: that the Average Student is alarmingly apathetic when he's asked to cooperate in Council-sponsored enterprises. Shame on the Average Student for not attending Council meetings!

But it seems that the Council should get its own house in order before it criticizes the untidiness of someone else's.

The Villanova version of student government is supposed to be representative, but any resemblance to honest representation at Villanova is just a highly-advertised myth. With some notable exceptions, any intimacy between representative and constituent this year is a joke.

We're not suggesting that the representative make a weekly canvas of every constituent to feel out sentiment. That wouldn't be practical. But the least he should do, is to manage to make himself available to students who might have something to offer. The Office Hours program is their big chance and they're muffing it.

How many students even know the identity of their representative? (And how many care?).

Of course, it's sport for the representative to attend Council meetings and polish his debating technique. And the projects he undertakes do manifest merit at times. But the Council's complacent state of isolation serves neither itself nor the students.

It's distressing to watch the representatives abandon so recklessly a potential channel of communication such as Office Hours. The program should be encouraged, and the proper authority on the Council should enforce the edict by instituting some sort of reprisals for delinquency.

The annual voting for the free day takes place tonight, and we would be curious to discover how many students registered a choice with their representative. That is, after they've found out who their representative is.

"Why, there's no one here!"

Try Again, Sen.

On page three this week, Senator Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) once again strikes a liberal pose in the quest for student support. He declares that he's far from surrender in the fight to repeal the controversial disclaimer affidavit from the student loan provisions of the NDEA, and he gives his reasons why.

The affidavit is the one which requires a student's signature in blood that he doesn't believe in, and doesn't belong to, any Communist-like organization. Scott's big argument is that the student is being discriminated against, that the government gives scads of money to farmers without any such stipulations.

The affidavit IS a legislative monstrosity and IS a horrible display of ultra-conservatism. It should be replaced for many reasons (all keyed on the word "belief" contained therein), but Sen. Scott has certainly seized upon the weakest of all arguments for his battle cry. Even Sen. Mundt can shoot it down.

The rightists will simply argue that farmers and students can't be justifiably compared. In the farmers' case, the government is supporting agriculture, and there's little risk of a Communist-tainted bin of barley.

On the other hand, under the Education Act, the treasury is subsidizing the formation of minds, and the prime concern of the senators is to avoid subsidizing Communistic thought. This is a case of admirable intentions, but misdirected energy.

Likewise, Sen. Scott is a case of admirable intentions, but misdirected energy.

Counterpoint

Villanova Senior: Security - Hungry

By TOM WOLF

To listen to Mr. John Moritz, Director of Placement here, you get the impression that the graduating senior of today is infatuated with visions of crashing the big time.

According to Moritz, there has recently developed among the seniors a tendency to sign for interviews, chiefly with the big name companies. On the surface this might indicate that the student of today is imbued with the compulsion to accept nothing but the biggest.

After all that's the so-called American way—for anyone with a grain of ambition, it's cowardly to meddle in the small, the petty, the provincial, the remotely independent.

Little Response

This is borne out by Moritz, who adds: "Many smaller corporations visiting the campus have little or no response."

But there's another side of the coin, and it rates attention. The manifesto of this point of view was William H. Whyte's stirring book, The Organization Man.

Alas, says White, the modern business candidate has surrendered his individuality. And the tragedy of it all, has done so gleefully. The book starkly describes how big business has provided a cozy and secure life for the college graduate of today.

It's called "the good life", and it suggests a gentle environment, stability, a secure income, compensation, hospital plans, a decent house in Levittown with well-kept lawns, a place where the unsettling spectre of competition among business associates isn't nearly as important as harmonious group relations.

Consistently, placement officers find that of the men who intend to go into business—roughly one half of the class—less than five percent express any desire to be an entrepreneur. About 15 to 20 percent plan to go into their fathers' business. Of the rest, most have one simple goal: the big corporation.

Trace Survives

As for the antiquated yearning for the "risk" in business, only a trace has survived. The interviewees at Villanova, as elsewhere, still accept the risks but they're looking for the best place to take them in.

That place appears to be the big corporation, where it's no longer the survival of the fittest, but the survival of all and the promotion of the fittest.

One Villanovan frankly stated that he intends to sign up with a large corporation which has offered him $7,000 after a period of two years. In taking this company, he turned down an offer from a smaller firm which offered him $12,000 after the same period of time.

"With the big company I get all sorts of benefits," he said in justification. "I get pension, insurance and a whole raft of fringe helps."

Benevolent

It seldom occurs to this genre of people that the extra $5,000 with the small company could purchase the same benefits. But there's only one catch: he'd have to purchase them by his very own self.

It's infinitely better to rely

Strictly Opinion

Face The Facts

By TONY MACKLIN

This is an attempt to help solve a problem at Villanova that is fast becoming malignant. What happened at Madison Square Garden must not happen again.

This is to alert the Villanovans who do have some feeling for their university, who want it to deserve and receive respect, who want their degree to have stature.

Also, a demonstration at the Palestra such as occured in New York could end the Big Five.

After the "Garden incident" the New York Journal American had this to say of the Villanovans: "It was the worst acting group of college kids seen in a long time." The writer continued that it was a case of "school boys mixed with alcohol." That "many were not engaged in the fighting only because they were thirsty."

We are not condemning taking a few drinks but the sloppiness, vulgarity, and belligerency that came from it.

It is the same "leaders" who have occasioned distaste time after time. These punks (this label after cool and careful consideration) do an irreparable amount of damage. And they manage to hook quite a following.

There is a perverted attitude among these "boys" that a reputation for hooliganism is glorious. They don't care about basketball, they use the game as an excuse to get sloppy.

We should be worried by the lack of realization on the part of the student body as to the effects of such an "incident." It was not "fabulous," "a ball," or "just fun." Anyone who was there and viewed what happened and has any pride in Villanova can not be anything but distressed.

It is true that parts of the evening were comical but as a whole the scene was taken as anything but comical by onlookers. Certainly a fight is exciting, however the stigma of a brawl is great.

We agree that the seating arrangement and insults from the other school contributed but this is no excuse for throwing beer cans on the court (this happened during the St. John's-Syracuse game) or for wandering on the court with brew in hand. This is no excuse for pushing, shoving, braying, vomiting. This is about as far from school spirit as one can get.

The attitude to avoid the issue, that nothing can be done is wrong. There are two solutions.

First, the administration must act.

Second, the student body should step on the smudge heads whenever they start their animal act. This is if they're still around—and they shouldn't be.

Fragments . . .

The Spirit Committee has emphasized that Villanova is seeking the Sportmanship Award presented each year by the Collegiate Council of Greater Philadelphia. The award goes to the school displaying the greatest sportsmanship during City Series basketball games at the Palestra.

The C.C.G.P., an organization composed of representatives of the student bodies of LaSalle College, University of Pennsylvania, St. Joseph's College, Temple University, and Villanova, organized the Sportsmanship Award in 1958 under the co-chairmanship of Jay Frank of Penn and Pat Nicholoson of Villanova.

Last year St. Joe's won the award with a rating of 9.38 out of a possible 10. Temple was the runner up with a 8.75 rating. LaSalle had 8.41; Villanova, 7.92; and Penn, 7.91.

Judging the contest again this year are the press representatives of the Philadelphia Bulletin, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Philadelphia Daily News as well as members of the Penn campus police force and the City Police Force at the Palestra.

Does Villanova Share In America's Disgrace?

Faculty and administration admit cheating problem exists, but suggest it can be solved by positive, realistic action on part of student body

By Lou Flanagan

Recently, the Saturday Evening Post carried an article on cheating in American Universities called "America's Disgrace." Most Villanovans are aware that cheating is done here. The problem funnels down to this: is cheating a real problem here? just how widespread is it? and, what can be done to stop it?

It's safe to say that no one here honestly believes that cheating is moral, yet very few openly condemn it. This seems to be true among the student body, the faculty and the administration. The students will say of a person who cheats, "He hurts us by lowering the curve"—not "He is doing something bad, dishonest, or immoral."

Often during a test, someone is seen cheating, but few of the other students brand him a cheater. By the same token, a person who has been seen intoxicated at one time would hardly be called a drunkard.

Many Reasons Given

The reasons given for cheating are numerous. They go deeper than the usual reason that a person cheats because he is stupid or lazy. That reason itself is not valid if you think about it.

But there are numerous other reasons given: some do cheat, of course, because they are lazy, too lazy to work for their mark; others cheat, not because of laziness, but because they feel that the teacher cheats them by examining the student on material that has been covered very sketchily or on material that has not been covered in the course.

Some students are said to cheat because they are required to know a voluminous amount of facts or figures for an exam which they consider useless to memorize. There is a rebellion on the part of the student to spend so much time memorizing details which seem to have no real bearing on the course.

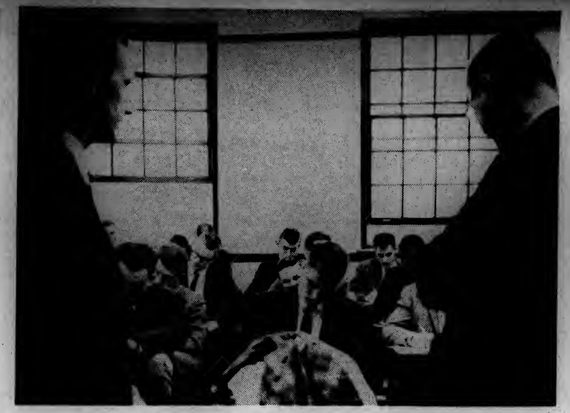
Consider it this way. How would memorizing a logarithm table deepen a student's knowledge of mathematics? Yet often the student is confronted on a test with dates, statistics, formulae, etc. The student, righly or not, often considers such data as trivia, not nearly indicative of whether or not the student has a firm grasp of the subject matter.

In such circumstances, he sometimes sees nothing wrong, morally or intellectually, with using a pony, or with getting the facts from another student who has been blessed with an encyclopedic memory. He realizes, however, that this is only a good reason, not an excuse for cheating, and there is a distinction there—if a fine distinction. He always has that feeling of guilt when he's exposed, no matter how good his reason for cheating.

Marks Not Wholly Indicative

There is another reason given for cheating. There exists a cult of grades in this university and most others which some feel put undue pressure on the student. He is led to equate an "A" or "B" with true knowledge of the subject. The grade often becomes the real objective, and is to be achieved at any costs, cheating included. This pressure is applied from various sources: parents, faculty and Administration.

Rev. John A. Klekotka, President, says. "We should not aim for grades as such." He adds that grades don't prove what a student knows as such, but a student must maintain at least a C average as some indication of subject comprehension.



He goes on to point out that an honor system as used in several other institutions, such as the military academies, is not strictly an honor system. It is based on the fact that the students watch EACH OTHER, and report in conscience any signs of cheating.

Students here might wonder why they are not on the honor system, in the common sense of the term, but it's hard to realize that this honor system is still based on a fear of being reported. The students replace the teacher as proctors.

We are told of the "chronic cheater." This is described as the type of student with no faith in himself and his capacity to learn. Outright laziness is a factor which breeds this loss of confidence. The vicious thing about cheating, however, is that it leads to more cheating if a student finds he can get away with it. This is the type usually classfied as a "cheater."

Diploma Over-emphasized

Even if he's not found out in his four years, his fellow students are aware of it and if they ever think of him in later life it's usually as "The Cheater."

An example of honor system at Villanova.

A member of the faculty regrets that few cheaters consider cheating basically immoral, no matter how much or how little it's practiced. But then again, perhaps the moral guilt is overemphasized at the expense of intellectual guilt.

One Villanovan openly admitted that he would cheat rather than risk failing a test and perhaps failing to graduate. Perhaps there is too much emphasis attached to the importance of the college diploma—if he doesn't get one, he'll be digging ditches for life. How many people in all walks of life have said that the sheepskin is everything?

Too many people, students and otherwise, consider failing out of school the most shameful disaster that can occur to them. So again the means, and cheating is once more justified by them. The possible shame of cheating is slight compared to the shame of losing the all-powerful diploma.

The blame for this situation doesn't rest entirely with the student, it would seem. Something must be faulty with the system. The student puts forth an honest effort, and, perhaps because of the ambivalence of an arbitrary marking system, he fails. Then all sorts of societal abuse is heaped on him. So cheating might be the lesser of two evils.

"Cheater not basically immoral"

"The cheater is not basically immoral," says Dr. Robert O'Shea of the Philosophy department, "And I daresay every student here has cheated at one time or another, unless, of course, he possess some pristine moral fiber."

One senior, who admitted freely that he cheated, contended that he was a fine, upstanding Catholic gentleman (and sincerely believed it) said, "Why should I jeopardize my career?" On this premise he cribbed answers in an exam with a clear conscience.

Another senior said: "If the difference between getting an "A" or a "C" depended on knowing who Henry VIII's third concubine from the left was, I'm certainly going to crib. If a thing's worth having, it's worth cheating for." He felt no guilt whatsoever in making the statement.

Educators and moralists see no single formula which will put an end to cheating. The motives are as varied as the number of individual cheaters.

Proctors for exams have been accused of looking the other way when they observe cheating at Villanova. One faculty member justified this somewhat by saying that "most competent professors don't consider themselves policemen or the guardians of student morals; and this is a moral as well as an intellectual problem. As Dr. O'Shea says, "External cheating springs from internal cheating."

Just Not Done

Mr. Girard DeWit of the Phychology department was asked for an opinion on cheating. Two years ago, DeWit came to the United States from his native Holland. He was greatly shocked to find that cheating is done in American universities. Students in Holland, he said, cheat in junior high school up to the ages of 16 or 17, but after that age cheating is just not done. This is due to the mature attitude which most students acquire wih regard to their studies; the attitude that "academic people do not cheat." DeWit added that when he uncovers a cheater, his first reaction is to ask the student his age.

DeWit said that the disciplining of cheaters should be turned over to the students. He suggested something along the lines of a student court to judge offenses by individual students. Such a court would make the students realize that cheating is not regarded lightly by their classmates. He commented: "The first effort for self-regulation must come from the students themselves through their council."

Father Klekotka pointed out that the Administration trusts most of the students. The only reason for proctoring examinations and tests is that the cheater can so easily injure another person's chances, say of getting into medical or graduate school. He compared proctoring to the system now used in the parking lot. If students were allowed to park as they please, a certain few would spoil things for everyone else.

It appears that the regulation of cheating can be accomplished by "positive thinking" on the part of the students. Through their integrity, the students should be able to discipline themselves. If we must rely on discipline being applied by the administration, then the title which is often given to us as college students, that is, intellectual gentlemen, appears to be rather dubious.

Williams Movie A Shocker

by tony macklin

One of the most off-beat films that Hollywood has ever produced is presently inciting a controversial uproar across the country. The film, now at the Stanley, is Tennessee Williams' shocker "Suddenly, Last Summer."

"Suddenly, Last Summer" is adapted from one of two one act plays taken from Williams' "Garden District" which was performed off Broadway not too long ago.

Williams has taken the symbolic scene of the devouring of young turtles and has presented it in human terms. These turtles hatch from eggs that have been laid in the steaming sand of the beach. As they make their mad rush for the ocean, great flesh-eating birds swoop down, flip them over, tear out their soft underbellies and devour them.

Williams attempts to show that man is faced with the same fate. The universe is brutally cruel.

Truth Hidden

What was it that happened last summer? Only Catherine (Elizabeth Taylor) knows and she is unable to remember. She has said that "horrible things" happened but she can not say what.

Her aunt Violet Venable (Katherine Hepburn) wants to silence the "mad" Catherine's "vile accusing hallucinations."

She enlists a young doctor (Montgomery Clift) to perform a lobotomy, an operation on the brain, to blot out the "lies," whatever they are, and bring peace to her niece.

The central figure that the strange story winds around is Sebastian Venable, the poet who died last summer. We slowly began to realize what a mysterious, fantastic character he was.

Every summer Sebastian and his mother Violet went on a trip during which Sebastian would write his annual poem.

Fresh Bait Needed

But last summer Violet was no longer useful for his grotesque purposes. Catherine unwittingly took her place. There was no poem written last summer, instead Sebastian died.

What traumatic experience was it that accompanied Sebastian's death and clutched and tilted Catherine's memory? Suspense and horror build as the doctor gets closer and closer to the hideous truth. The ending equals any of Williams' starkest.

The jarring climax gets a novel and effective handling with Catherine's writhing face on one side of the screen and the flashback scene on the other half. We never see Sebastian's face in these flashbacks, only his white silk suited frame. Also in one of these scenes Catherine wears a bathing suit that is really a bathing suit! Williams should have been a fashion designer.

Williams' milieu is perversion. Violence, hatred, fear, horror, greed, homosexuality, rape, cannibalism: they are all in "Suddenly, Last Summer."

Plot Almost Absurd

In retrospect the film, the plot, seems very nearly ludicrous. In any other hands it would be. In fact, William Inge tried to invade the land of Williams in his last play, and failed.

But Williams is sincere, he is often poetic, and although what happened suddenly last summer is not probable, it is possible. There are Sebastians and there are Violets.

Elizabeth Taylor gives a convincing performance as the tortured girl. She almost certainly will receive an Academy Award nomination and she has an excellent chance of walking away with the award.

Katherine Hepburn is equally effective as the sick Violet. Montgomery Clift, looking fully recovered from his serious accident that banged him up for "Raintree County," provides a strong, subdued performance as the doctor who unravels the amazing puzzle.

Mercedes McCambridge and Gary Raymond add to the film's effectiveness with their portrayals of the selfish, stupid inlaws that Williams draws with such venom.

Excellent Adaptation

Gore Vidal has aided Williams in adapting and lengthening the one act play into a two hour film. Joseph L. Mankiewicz has directed the black and white film impressively and as tastefully as it seems possible.

Two particularly frightening scenes that should remain in memory for quite some time are the scenes in the state hospital when Catherine disrupts the mens' and womens' wards, leaving them shrieking and gigling bedlams.

Biting Drama

"Suddenly, Last Summer" is very much different from the often-empty froth we see on television and in the run of the mill Hollywood film. Whether one is willing to accept it or not is up to the individual.

One thing is certain, it will give him something to struggle with if he wants.

"Suddenly, Last Summer" is the work of a man who may be America's greatest playwright. It is not a work you can like. But we think you will watch and listen.

"Suddenly, Last Summer" has received a special classification from the Legion of Decency.

"The Cave" Lacks Depth

by jim mcateer

Using a hillbilly trapped underground as a focal point for the actions of the southern townspeople affected by the tragedy, Robert Penn Warren, in "The Cave," produces the splendid illusion of a major novel.

From his narrative ability, poetic instinct, familiarity with the milieu of which he writes, and previous success as a novelist, some finer product—a work of beauty and depth—could have resulted.

Instead, he has taken a potentially significant situation and rendered it gross and distorted in a largely fruitless attempt at a strange admixture of profundity and satire.

Excellent Story Teller

There can be no question that Warren is an excellent story teller. His plot is interesting and exciting. He creates an attractive literary counterpoint of action, humor, pathos, and solemnity. His style is smooth and quite pleasant.

His characters, however—those upon whom the success or failure of any novel must depend—are, in "the Cave," one-dimentional, painfully obvious in their motivation, and generally unchallenging to the reader.

Unfortunately, Warren has chosen to reveal his characters primarily in terms of sex. Besides producing a flat and incomplete portrait, this quickly becomes boring (and might well be considered offensive by many).

Universal Search

In addition, he has described a universal search for identity in such a manner that little or no metaphysical implication of any importance is involved. His characters sound as if they would be content with almost any answer to their questioning, so long as it sounds reasonably definitive.

The cave itself, introduced almost as an afterthought, assumes massive proportions as the symbol of Jasper Harrick's physical entrapment, of the other characters' enslavement in the general deterioration of their lives and surroundings, and ultimately, of the captivity of the entire human race in a net of circumstances over which there can be no control.

The symbolism, however, is so apparent and so carefully delineated that it, too, is devoid of much interest and challenge. Ikey Sumpter, for instance, readily admits that glory is what he seeks from the cave. Mac Sumpter and Jack Harrick see the cave as one chance for their son's salvation, and this is also admitted without subtlety. Nick Pappy, the two-time loser in the restaurant business, is interested in making a fast buck.

Biting Satire

The television broadcasters and the thrill-seeking crowds whose self-interest in the cave is especially callous, are submitted to particularly biting and frequently amusing condemnation in the form of excellent satire. Unfortunately, the obvious pleasure which Warren takes in satirical distortion of these ghoulish groups clashes sharply with the groupings of the major characters toward self-knowledge.

"The Cave" is a good enough novel, but it is not a great novel, because the characters inspire little wonderment, and allow for little analysis. Warren does not imply and suggest, he propounds and declares. The reader cannot question; he can only accept.

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

THREE WHO PASSED IN THE NIGHT

Last year, as everyone knows, 1,210,614 undergraduates dropped out of college. 256,080 flunked; 309,656 got married; 375,621 ran out of money; and 309,254 found jobs. As you have, of course, observed, this accounts for only 1,210,611 out of 1,210,614. What happened to the other three?

Well sir, to find the answer, I recently completed a tour of American campuses where I interviewed 40 million students and sold several subscriptions to The Open Road for Boys, and it pleases me to report that I can now account for those three elusive undergraduates.

The first was an LSU junior named Fred Gaugin. He was extremely popular, always ready with a smile, fond of folk dancing and pralines, and last semester his Chi Psi brothers unanimously elected him treasurer of the fraternity. This proved an error. Gaugin, alas, promptly absconded with the money and went to Tahiti to paint. The fraternity is bending every effort to extradite Gaugin, but Tahiti, alas, is currently observing the feast of Dipthong, the Sun-God, a five-year ceremony during which all the islanders wear masks, so nobody, alas, can say for certain which one is Gaugin.

Nobody can say for certain which one is Gaugin.

The second missing undergraduate is William Cullen Sigafoos, Oregon State freshman, who went one day last fall to a disreputable vendor named A. M. Sashweight to buy a pack of Marlboros. Mr. Sashweight did not have any Marlboros because Marlboros are only sold by reputable vendors. However, he told Sigafoos that he had another brand which was just as good, and Sigafoos, being but an innocent freshman, believed him.

Well sir, you and I know there is no other brand as good as Marlboros. That fine filter, that flavorful flavor, that pleasure, that joy, that fulfillment—are Marlboro's and Marlboro's alone. All of this was quickly apparent to young Sigafoos and he flew into a terrible rage. "As good as Marlboros indeed!" he shrieked, kicking his roommate furiously. "I am going right back to that mendacious Mr. Sashweight and give him a thrashing he won't soon forget!" With that he seized his lacrosse bat and rushed out.

Mr. Sashweight heard him coming and started running. Now Mr. Sashweight, before he became a disreputable vendor, had taken numerous prizes as a cross-country runner, and he thought he would soon outdistance young Sigafoos. But he reckoned without Sigafoos's stick-to-itiveness. At last report the two of them had passed Cleveland. When they reach the Atlantic Seaboard, bad Mr. Sashweight will get his lumps from Sigafoos, you may be sure, and I, for one, am glad.

The third missing undergraduate, also named Sigafoos, is a Bennington sophomore named Celeste Sigafoos and, ironically, she never intended to leave college at all. She was merely going home for Christmas on the Natchez, Mobile, and Boise Railroad, and during the night, alas, her upper berth slammed shut on her. Being a Bennington girl, she naturally did not wish to make an unseemly outcry, so she just kept silent. The next morning, alas, the railroad went bankrupt, and Miss Sigafoos today is lying forgotten on a siding near Valparaiso, Indiana. Fortunately she has plenty of Marlboros with her.

And how about the rest of you? Do you have plenty of Marlboros? Or if you like mildness but you don't like filters, plenty of Philip Morrises? Hmm? Do you?

Things Augustinian

St. Thomas: Mystic, Patron

by Tom Casey, O.S.A.

Statue Outside Monastery Commemorating Patron

To a world that is attracted by the unusual and spectacular, a man whose greatest fame is found in his humility and charity offers little appeal, and for this reason the patron saint of our university is not as well-known as he should be.

Although he was born at Fuenlana, Spain, in 1488, St. Thomas received his surname from Villanova de los Infantes, the town of his early schooling. His parents, Alphonsus Garcias and Lucy Martinez, while not extremely well-to-do, were enabled to assist the poor with regularity.

THIS CHARITABLE disposition was the most valuable part of their son's inheritance, and it was to express itself heroilally throughout his entire life.

His home was the scene of his earliest training, but the school of Villanova soon replaced it, and there Thomas learned fast.

By the age of 15, he was ready to go to the University of Alcala, and in 1514, he became Master of Arts in Philosophy. Because of his success in studies, the university engaged him as a professor, and two years later he joined the faculty of the famed University of Salamanca.

It was while he was at the university that Thomas gave serious thought to a religious vocation, and after prayerful deliberation, he entered the Order of St. Augustine, commencing his Novitiate year on September 24, 1516. He was ordained a priest in 1518.

FROM NOW UNTIL the time of his death, St. Thomas was destined to hold offices of responsibility, a fact personally repugnant to him, but which he accepted in virtue of his vow of obedience.

In spirit and practice however, he always remained a humble subject, and his fidelity to the Rule he followed never wavered, so much so, that his poverty and mortifications often embarassed his protocol-conscious attendants.

In a short time, St. Thomas was to fill most of the major positions in the Order, and he was elected Provincial of his Order in Spain, not once, but three times. Even more reluctantly did he accept his appointment as Archbishop of Valencia, a post he held for 11 years.

By firmness and tact, and the unrefutable example of a holy life, the Archbishop rekindled the fervor of his people. Not only for their spiritual welfare was he solicitous, but for their material well-being also.

His charity was limitless, and his simple principle of action: "Pray, trust, and give" found its expression in the 500 people he fed daily at his gates, and in the hospitals, orphanages, and old age homes he established, and in the proud but improverished noblemen he aided.

THE MIRACLES wrought to insure the continuance of such aid are indeed impressive, but the true picture of this man is captured in the offering of his cloak to a beggar, or his going hungry to feed the poor of his city.

Saint Thomas was a great scholar, a famous preacher, administrator, and mystic, but his fame lies elsewhere. In his faithfulness to the Rule of St. Augustine, which begins: "Before all else, most dearly beloved brethern, love God, then your fellow-men . . . ". St. Thomas is truly great. This is the man. This is the Saint!

Appreciation Answer To Specialization?

by bill speers

George Macaulay Trevelyan stated some years ago: "Education has produced a vast population able to read but unable to distinguish what is worth reading." In reference to modern education we would like to paraphrase this excerpt to read: "Education is producing a vast population able to do but unable to distinguish why it is doing it."

As far as specialized training goes, in the university of today, we've seemed to reach the point of no return. The chemist is taught how to analyze the chemical compounds of human body but he is not especially interested in why man seeks to destroy that body; the marketing major is prepared to negotiate million-dollar deals with DuPont but knows little of the Communist threat to his way of life; the arts man graduates from college assured that he is educated only to realize later on that he is at a loss in a Wall Street atmosphere or attempting to comprehend the technological advances of his own country. In other words, we're taught how to make a living; but not how to live.

In his "Idea of a University," Newman stated, "(An) Educations shows (man) how to accommodate himself to others, how to throw himself into their state of mind, how to bring before them his own, how to influence them, how to come to an understanding with them, how to bear with them." Modern education thumbs its nose at such a definition.

It is our contention that this situation has society as its instigator, colleges as its administraters, and the students as its victims. We believe that the student has a sincere quashed desire to be more rounded; but he is helpless. Society refuses to change its mode so if a change takes place it must begin with the school. An initial and most effective step for her could be "appreciation."

At the University of California recently Dr. Edward Teller, the famous H-bomb scientist, initiated a non-creditted, early morning class (8 o'clock) entitled simply, "Physics 10. Descriptive introduction to physics." More than 900 students signed up for course.

The expansion of this idea of appreciation courses may not be a clear-cut answer to our modern system of limited education, but it would at least give the student a definite awareness o fworlds other than his own.

For instance here at Villanova, we do not see why a feasible plan can not be worked out whereby pre-school hour classes can not be worked out for the three major divisions.

Courses in philosophy and science could be conducted for the C and F students; business and literature courses for the engineers; and science and business courses for the arts school. We feel the response to such a movement would be accepted gladly by both the students themselves and other schools throughout the country.

Perhaps such a scheme will make us like Newman said an education should make us, "at home in any society, (on) common ground with every class." And gives us what Newman said an education should give us, "the repose of a mind which lives in itself, while it lives in the world, and which has resources for its happiness at home when it cannot go abroad."

We keep wondering about the current swastika fad. A couple of goons in Germany paint the twisted cross on a temple and the whole world goes crazy. So what if their painting craze spread throughout the world; people have been painting mustaches on public posters for generations —it's still nothing but a gag. Why can't we learn to accept such things as this swastika sham in the same vein.

We all agree that while it ruled, nazism was an animal and a horrid way of life. But this disgrace to humanity was crushed years ago, must we forever raise our backs in fear everytime a simpleton, for the lack of something else to do, smears a building with Hitler's handiwork.

The world must learn to accept such incidents with the same emotion with which they react when the life of the party smooths his hair down, puts a black comb under his nose, clicks his heels and gives out with a "sieg Heil". There's too much in today's world, to worry about digging up a perilous relic of the past.

If you get a chance, be sure to read the article on Oscar Robertson in the March issue of Sport Magazine. It does a lot to show that the glamor of being the best college basketball player in history isn't all what it appears to be. A real slap in the face to sports fans that kiss the feet of a player when he is player and spit at him when he is a human being.

Roadmaps to Register?

SMOOTH REGISTRATION

Registration was handled very efficiently this year. After walking into the Field House we were immediately directed to the basement of Mendel Hall; then we were directed to the third floor of Alumni Hall where I was asked for my birth certificate and received a complete dental check up.

Tired and weary we were then marshalled down to the Grotto to fill out the religious preference card. With the end finally in view we climbed the cyclone fence surrounding the Field House and hurdled to the second floor window and were greeted by our faculty adviser, who referred us to the Dean of the night school of Women's Medical College where we registered for an extra course in Heat Power.

Registered, I gleefully galloped up to my room to find that I had been given a new set of roommates. This bothered me because there are only two beds, two closets, two desks and the three of us.

Never again????????

PLACEMENT OFFICE

This cloudy illusion of college life is slowly being pushed into the memory division of my college career, and I try frantically to interview seven companies in the Student Activities period.

Arts students will be delighted to know that Schwinn Bicycle Co. will be here June 5, 1960 to interview prospective applicants for positions as Quality Control engineers. Peddlers.

YEARBOOK STAFF

The editor of the Belle Aire was buried in his office over the mid-semester break when his deadline fell on him. The Yearbook Office has now become the local meeting place for the Nurses and their dates on campus.

SENIOR PROM

Tickets for the Prom went on sale yesterday. They are currently being sold for $3 per person.

Buddy Morrow, rated by RCA as the best college Prom band in the country, will swing in with "Night Train," and the refreshments will be served by the smiling pledges of Phi Kappa Pi fraternity.

The favors are new. In fact, this will be the first time that they have been used anywhere. Seriously, the favors are terrific, and we understand that there have been many inquiries about them.

PICNICS

For anyone who is interested, there was a picnic on Sat., Jan. 30. This to our knowledge is the first picnic of the current semester season.

Library Science

Library Beckons; Use It

by russell dodge

Is the Villanova Library a Museum? A strange question to ask, but let's look into it.

Without getting into a debate involving "closed stacks versus open stacks" we'd like to point out how tremendous a waste that the non-use of Library facilities can be.

First of all, no one knows everything about everything, and it is certain that text books don't give us all the answers.

How often would the outside reading of a few extra books during a course, or the gathering of information from a sound reference material, mean the passing or failing of a course, or the difference between getting an "A" or a "B".

But so many students, seniors as well as juniors, have used the Library so few times, or perhaps never.

PROBABLY THE reason is that most students don't know how to use the facilities available to them, or don't realize the existence of these facilities.

An inquiry by the students is all that is needed. The Library staff is only too willing in rendering every assistance in aiding the students' studies.

Most students do have a knowledge of the circulation desk. It's here that the books are checked out and returned after use. Here we find Miss Ruberg, who, with the aid of her assistants, keeps things running smoothly despite the tendency of the average Villanovan to bring his books back late.

Directly across from the circulation desk we find the periodical room, wherein Mrs. Quam keeps tabs on the many periodicals that come pouring in daily, and she always stands ready to help the students in any way possible. The use of this abundantly available material is often neglected in study and research work.

THE REFERENCE and reserve rooms are well known for having tables for student home work.

However, these rooms have other functions, and they are important functions. The reference room is the place to find factual and abstract information on almost any subject. Here can be found almanacs, encyclopediae, dictionaries, catalogues, and the like.

In charge of the reference room is Miss Dorrian, who is an expert and experienced reference librarian.

The reserve room under the direction of diminutive Miss Fleisher is the scene of most studying.

It is here that the various professors have put the books that are required reading on their reserve shelves. This practice of reserving books insures fairness so that all the students that are required to read certain books have a chance to do so.

The microfilm room is the baby of the library, being only a few years old. Although it is in its infancy, there is already a substantial amount of material on microfilm. The microfilm department is in the care of Mrs. Walsh.

These are the silver wings of a U. S. Air Force Navigator. As a flying officer on the Aerospace team, he has chosen a career of leadership, a career that has meaning, rewards and executive opportunity.

The Aviation Cadet Program is the gateway to this career. To qualify for this rigorous and professional training, a high school diploma is required; however, two or more years of college are highly desirable. Upon completion of the program the Air Force encourages the new officer to earn his degree so he can better handle the responsibilities of his position. This includes full pay and allowances while taking off-duty courses under the Bootstrap education program. The Air Force will pay a substantial part of all tuition costs. After having attained enough credits so that he can complete course work and residence requirements for a college degree in 6 months or less, he is eligible to apply for temporary duty at the school of his choice.

If you think you have what it takes to earn the silver wings of an Air Force Navigator, see your local Air Force Recruiter. Ask him about Aviation Cadet Navigator training and the benefits which are available to a flying officer in the Air Force. Or fill in and mail this coupon.

Fine Arts - Here At Last?

by jim bising

This past December, there was a small stir among the seniors in the liberal arts section of this school, when it was mentioned that a course in fine arts might be offered during this semester.

It is quite surprising that Villanova, which claims to be following in the Augustinian tradition, could not find it within its power to offer some means of aiding those who wish to give thanks for the gift of life (not for the gift of a formal education or for the gift of a loving mother, or for the gift of being an American, or for the gift of not being an American) by creating a little beauty for Reality to behold.

WELL ANYWAY the mountain went through some mild labor pains, and somewhere along the line there was a miscarriage. Most women who lose a child are able to have other children; however, there is no second chance for the lost child.

Some people are going to graduate in June of this year; perhaps they can read about the successful establishment of a fine arts course when they receive a copy of the alumni bulletin. Perhaps a course in music appreciation will some day appear too.

Well anyway again, a person can't have everything. Most of our great-grandparents didn't have running water . . . that is a good cliche, and cliches help stupid people think that they have won an argument (usually against an egghead type . . . this type is responsible for most of the evils which are ruining the world for the old folks who pay the bills).

However, the Renaissance was aided by the fact that there was aid and instruction for those interested in the arts. Perhaps there are not sufficient resources for this here.

Perhaps the students should realize that they are responsible for the lack of creativity (though we are very adept at occupying space in the field house).

THE CAVEMEN did not let the lack of aisles and oils hinder them in their efforts to express the tender thoughts which were lodged in their noble hearts. Such scenes as hunts, saber-tooth tiger hunts, and more mammoth hunts on the cave walls tell us what thoughts dominated the conscious moments of our pre-historic ancestors.

However, since we no longer have any four-footed wild animals in the area, it would seem that the walls of the campus caves . . . woops, I meant to say rooms, will be covered with scenes of the Palestra, a certain gin mill in Rosemont, little streams and people in bermuda shorts, and other such serious motifs.

MAYBE WHEN someone starts rigging up the scaffolding to paint his ceiling, a rich alumnus will become his patron, and future generations of Villanovans will be able to state their identity with their alma mater with the same degree of pride that a Florentine admits being from that small city on the Arno. For the class of 1960, this will not be possible.

Ex-Junior Class President

Villanovan Grad In Aviation; Ludmerer Makes First Solo

Marine Corps 2nd Lt. Vic Ludmerer, has just taken the first giant stride toward winning his Navy "Wings of Gold".

Ludmerer recently flew his first solo flight, in the T-34 Mentor, while undergoing Primary Flight Training at the Naval Auxiliary Air Station, Saufley Field, Pensacola, Florida.

Ludmerer served as junior class president two years ago, and entered the Corps through the Villanova NROTC.

Trained at Pensacola

He reported to Saufley on November 2, 1959 after completing six weeks Pre-Flight training at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Florida.

During his eight weeks of Primary Flight Training, he is receiving training in Communications, Navigation, Engineering, Athletics, Aerology and Civil Air Regulations.

Upon completion of this instruction, he will advance to the formation stage of aviation training at another field in the Pensacola area.

Troy, Cardone Take Positions On Villanovan

Senior Arts men Denis Cardone and Tom Troy have been added to the VILLANOVAN editorial staff in a recent reorganization move by Editor Tom Wolf.

Cardone, an English major, becomes Associate Editor in an effort to broaden the news coverage of the paper, according to Wolf.

New Feature Editor

Troy, a History major, who's been writing a sports column, replaces Bill Speers as Feature Editor, enabling Speers to move over to the News Editor post, again to strengthen the news coverage. Troy will continue his column, however.

Other staffers involved in the shuffle are Jim McAteer, elevated to Managing Editor; Mike Donahue, to Associate Editor; and Jim Driscoll, to Campus News Editor.

In a policy statement, Wolf said that more emphasis will be placed on features of political nature in this year of national political activity, in the conventions of elections.

Skidmore Changes Exams

Saratoga Springs, N.Y. — (I. P.)—A recent change in the exam period at Skidmore College, initiated by the Student Curriculum Committee, eliminated the "days of review" and arranged exams so that no student had two tests in one day.

This change was first discussed in the Student Curriculum Committee, then with the Faculty Curriculum Committee, and was finally approved.

Examinations Slated for Law Candidates

Villanova University has been designated as a testing center for the nationwide administration of the Law School Admission Test on Saturday, February 20th, Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein announced.

The test will be administered in Garey Hall, the Law School Building at Villanova University.

Consult School

The test is required by the School of Law of Villanova University, and by most other law schools; prospective applicants should consult the law school of their choice to be advised whether they must take the test.

The next test will be administered in April, 1960. Candidates must file their completed applications with the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least ten days before the date of the examination.

Candidates may procure application forms and information bulletins at the office of the Registrar of the School of Law.

Ex-Villanovan Becomes Brother

Brother J. Gratian (James Barry, Commerce and Finance, '59) is the third Villanovan to enter the Beltsville novitiate since 1957, when Brothers David John (John J. McGarvey) and Dennis Luke (David B. Maher) received the Brothers' Habit.

Ride Service Is Instituted By Council Project Group

A ride service, consisting of the synchronization of drivers and riders for all traveling occasions, will be organized by the Union Projects Committee of the Student Council.

Beginning Wednesday, Feb. 17, all students who either want a ride, or want riders will be able to register their name at the Student Council Office.

To Register

Dick Wilder, Chairman, says the service will work like this: Students will register at the Council Office before the Wednesday immediately proceding the event which occasions the trip.

This is done by filling out a form, which will then be processed by the committee, who will post the organized results Thursday morning.

It is then up to the individuals to contact one another. New forms must be again submitted the next Wednesday.

This is a student committee directly under the Student Union and Special Problems Committee. The members are Dick Corsini, Chuck Kelley, Dick Delaney, and Dick Donahue, all of whom will share the Wednesday office hours.

For Traveling

Wilder also stresses the point that the service is designed to operate for every traveling occasion. That is from day-hop rides through game trips, clear down to rides home for the summer.

With The Maharajah

Go Tiger-Hunting This Month

The fashionable scene in travel this February, according to GENTLEMEN'S QUARTERly, will be a $5,600 tiger hunt in India complete with room and board at the Palace of the Maharajah of Cooch Behar in Assam.

The sartorial sportsman leaves for the jungle, after a brief visit with the Maharajah, atop one of Cooch Behar's elephants, and accompanied by 100 native servants.

After the shoot, the party is then guests of an in-law of the Assam ruler, the Maharajah of Jaipur at Rambagh Palace. The servants camp near by in Arabian Night tents, carpeted, and with portable bathrooms.

The best time for tiger, according to New York safari-organizer Mary Hurn appearing a recent GQ article, is in February when the climate is just right.

Miss Hurn, originally from Chicago, met the Maharajah of Assam a few years ago on a hunting trip, and for a price, has been bringing Americans into tiger country ever since.

Doyle And Felch NFCCS Delegates

David Doyle and J. Eugene Felch were elected to the posts of Senior Delegate and Junior Delegate to N.F.C.C.S. respectively at a recent Student Council meeting. Under the direction of Doyle and Felch, N.F.C.C.S. activities will be extended on the campus.

At present, plans are in progress for the establisment of an N.F.C.C.S. Campus Council. A committee to evaluate N. F. C.C.S. and propose a plan for revamping to the organization in the region has been established by the Student Council.

The revamping of the general N.F.C.C.S. includes the addition of projects and activities which will be of direct benefit to the individual student.

On February 21 the N.F.C.C.S. Variety Show will be staged at Villanova. The Fourth Annual State N.F.C.C.S. Congress will be held in Philadelphia on March 4, 5, and 6.

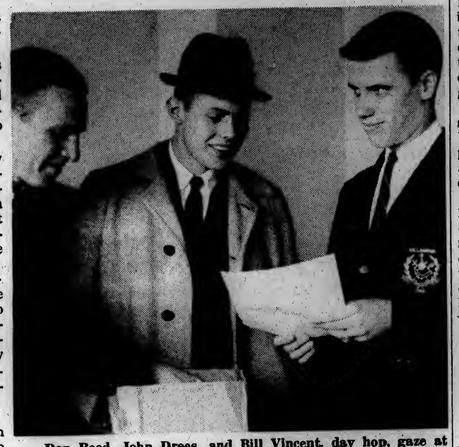
The delegates have emphasized the need for more student activity in N.F.C.C.S. There is need for students with interests in journalistic and creative writing, organization and parliamentary procedure, art, and several other fields.

Any student interested in working on N.F.C.C.S. should contact the delegates by leaving a note in the N.F.C.C.S. box in the Student Council office. Students particularly interested in working on the Congress or on the evaluation committee should contact Felch.

President Joins Board

Mr. John W. Bodine, President and Executive Director of PENJERDEL Metropolitan Projects, has announced the appointment of the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, OSA, president, to the Board of Directors of that corporation.

WHY NOT SMOKE SIGNALS?



Telegram Arrives — But Too Late

The local dailies declared that "only a handful of hearty Villanovans made the game."

What they did not say was that approximately 1,000 equally hearty Villanovans who had remained on campus were burning up Western Union wires to attend the game by proxy.

On the morning of January 16, as the Wildcats were preparing for the Battle of Morgantown, John Drees, co-chairman of Special Effects for the Spirit Committee, suggested a telegram of good wishes from the student body to the team.

It was decided that the telegram would include the name of any student who cared to contribute ten cents to help defray expenses. The plan was announced over the Dougherty Hall P.A. at lunchtime on Saturday, and things began to mushroom.

Don Reed, John Drees, and Bill Vincent, day hop, gaze at proceeds coming in for the telegram that never quite got there.

Population Migration

Virtually the entire population of the dining room migrated to the Student Council office, signed their names, and deposited their dimes.

A committee consisting of Drees, his co-chairman Don Reed, Bill Vincent, day-hop, Tom McNamar was hastily organized to exploit the idea and canvass the dorms for additional subscribers.

Eventually, the subscriber list approached 1,000 names, and the Committee invaded the Ardmore telegraph office. When the harassed clerk recovered from the initial shock, he informed the Committee that the Morgantown telegram office was closing.

After a hasty consultation among themselves, the Committee decided to split the wire into several parts and send each part to a different telegraph office in the Morgantown area. The various offices would then converge on West Virgina U., piece the telegram together and present it to the team.

Unfortunately, all local offices in the Morgantown area were closing at the same time as the Morgantown office itself.

Another consultation, and it was decided that the telegram should be sent to Wheeling, W. Va., where some students at Wheeling College would receive it and deliver it to Morgantown, 75 miles away.

But Wheeling College was playing its own game at home that evening, and no volunteers could be found for the trip to West Virginia U.

Pay A Bus Driver

Again a meeting of the minds, and another idea: send the wire to the bus terminal in Pittsburgh, pay a bus driver who would be passing through Morgantown, and have him drop off the telegram. A quick call to Pittsburgh, however, revealed that no buses would be traveling to Morgantown that evening.

As a last resort, the Committee phoned both Bill Campbell, WCAU sportscaster, and Bill Murphy, manager of the Wildcats. Both Campbell and Murphy gave assurances that they would inform Al Severance and his boys of the student body's gesture.

Twelve hours, three hundred miles, and seventy-five dollars later, the telegram finally reached the coach and his boys—at the hotel in Pittsburgh, where the team stopped overnight after the not-too-memorable Battle of Morgantown.

E.E. Faculty to Study Curriculum Changes in Coming Seminar

The Department of Electrical Engineering has inaugurated a faculty seminar program, which is primarily designed to keep the department in step with its dynamic field, and secondarily to investigate the possibilities of introducing an Electrical Engineering Graduate Course.

The first speaker before the seminar (Feb. 16) will be Lewis Unneweher, who will examine proposed curriculum changes and offer some A.S.E.E. recommendations.

Two weeks later, on March 1, Dr. James Horgan, Chairman of the Dept. of Electrical Engineering at Marquette, will speak on the establishment of a graduate division. Horgan has recently helped administer such an addition at Marquette.

Program Of The Week

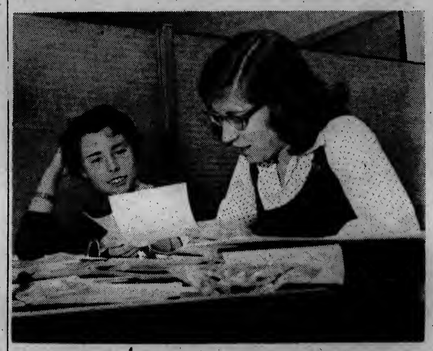
"Magical Moods of Mathis"

by Dan O'Mara

"Magical Moods of Mathis", the newest half hour on WVIL will now be heard weekly on Wednesday at 9 p.m. Phil Bosche, host of the show, plays Johnny's old hits as well as his new releases as they are received at the Station.

This is the second show of this type on WVIL's program schedule. A year ago, John Drees, presently a junior in the C&F School at Villanova, introduced the Frank Sinatra Show, sponsored by the Manly Store of Bryn Mawr.

This show, heard Monday evenings at 9 p.m., has been well received by the Station's listening audience.



Singers like Mathis and Sinatra have been chosen for these half hour spots because of their general appeal among the majority of college students.

They provide "easy listening" so conducive to the study listening pleasure of the student . . . a policy maintained by the programming department of the Station headed by John Oberlies.

Although a newcomer to radio, Bosche looks promising and should be very instrumental in the success of the show.

Co-Eds Bolster Yearbook Staff

BelleAir Uses Nurses' Aid

Villanova co-eds populate the staff of the BELLE AIR yearbook in unprecedented numbers, reports Tom Peretti, editor.

"The girls have spent many spare hours in the office," said Peretti, rather appreciative of the fact. "They are a great help typing all the pages of copy required for a large publication."

A general staff meeting of the staff was held last Thursday and Peretti was gratified with the progress reports. They promised that the book may still be here in time for graduation, despite failure to meet the first deadline.

The editor dealt harsh words to several staffers who have not been producing. He issued an ultimation that all preliminary work must be submitted within a week. "This is no joke," he said.

Peretti promised several innovations for the 1960 book. "It will be a comprehensive book, with interesting new features," he said. "We'll make liberal use of color."

Advertising

Under the management of senior Dan Spada, a new advertising program has been adopted. He says he is ahead of last year's solicitations, and he intends to continue accepting ads up until the final deadline.

IBM WILL INTERVIEW FEB. 18

Doctor Buford Participates In Library Panel

Dr. Albert H. Buford, associate professor of English, will be a member of the College and University panel at the Catholic Library Association's Thirteenth Annual Library Conference.

This panel and others covering different library aspects will be held in the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel on Febru... 20th, 10 a.m.

Fr. Falvey, Moderator

The Moderator of the College panel is the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, Villanova's Librarian. The topic to be discussed is the "The Role of Faculty Library Committee and the University Program."

The panel will consider various library needs, public service and the library, and possible developments to improve the library.

Buford will personally propose annual projects for the Library Affairs Committees such as the one he envisions for Villanova.

Stimulate Interest

The projects would be designed to stimulate interest among the students and members of the community toward the Library.

The professor proposes that Villanova sponsor an annual "Book Fair". He plans a series of faculty lectures about books, lectures on the tecniques of the library, and a special library exhibit.

Buford feels that such a project should be very successful and counts on full student support.

Buford wil also present a weekly series in the Villanovan dealing with the different facets of the library. There will be profile and feature articles which will be designed to orientate the student with the library.

Midshipmen Take Trip To Pensacola Over Semesters

During the semester break, 38 N.R.O.T.C. students under the command of Midn. 1/c Richard Wines, were guests of the Naval Air Basic Training Command in Pensacola, Florida.

They were flown to Florida from the Navy Air Station at Willow Grove, Pennsylvania, for a four day visit to the "Cradle of Naval Aviation."

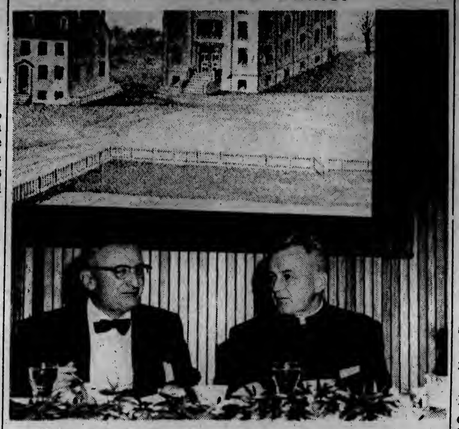
Air Training

The visit was to acquaint the midshipmen with the Naval Aviation program and Naval Air Training.

Arriving Sunday afternoon, the middies were met by Commander Netherland, USN, who conducted the tour. Liberty was set for Sunday evening, and the formal tour began Monday morning.

Included in the tour were visits to the Naval School of Pre-Flight, School of Aviation Medicine, and the Survival School. The highlight of the visit came when each middie made individual flights in the T-34, the basic prop trainer used in the Command.

After an extensive checkout, which included bailing out from a trainer, the students made their "hop." Remaining in the air for an hour, the student was allowed to "take the stick" and control the airoraft himself.



Faculty Along

Lt. Martin Gillan, III, an instructor in the Unit, and also a Naval Aviator, and Professor Joseph Greyson of the University faculty, were participants in the visit.

The visiting Villanovans were quartered in barracks on the station.

The visit ended Wednesday morning as the R5D transport took off from Sherman Field in Pensacola in clear sunny skies. The plane landed at Willow Grove late Wednesday, and a waiting Navy bus transported the group back to the campus.

At Trustee Dinner

Mr. L. G. L. Thomas, member of the Executive Committee of the Board of Lay Trustees and Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., Director of Villanova Development Fund attend Lay Trustee Banquet last Thursday.

C.C.D. Planning For Discussions

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine has announced plans for the expansion of its operations in the second semester.

Last semester's programs which included the instruction of high school students and about 200 mentally retarded children at the state institution at Pennhurst will be continued. In addition, at least three new teaching centers will probably be added to the program.

A series of panels and discussions, initiated last semester will be expanded and increased in frequency.

On March 6, a regional C.C.D. Night will be held at the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul in Philadelphia. The program will include Mass, a buffet supper, and social. Students from nine schools in the Philadelphia area will attend.

Driscoll, Benson Named Chairmen Of Council Dance

The Chairmen for the annual Student Council Dance have been announced by Tom Hoffman, Student Council Chairman.

John Driscoll, senior C&F, and Bob Benson, sophomore C&F, will be general co-chairmen of the dance, which will be held on Friday evening, February 26.

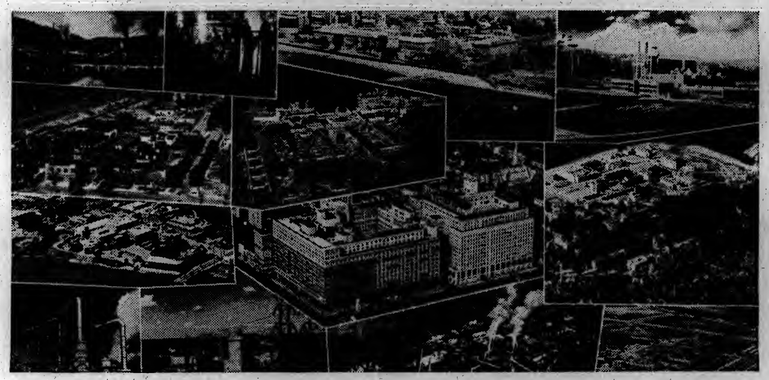
This year, the different classes are handling the various committees involved in planning the dance. Seniors John Driscoll and Bill Vincent will head the Band Comittee.

Publicity wil be handled by Tom Raymond, a junior, and Joe Remy and John Volpe, also juniors, will be in charge of tickets.

Sophomores Tom Wall and Bob Benson will head the Decorations Committee, and Refreshments will be handled by freshmen yet to be announced. Within the next week, the committees will have met and formulated definite plans.

Hoffman emphasized that all profits from the dance will be matched by funds from the Administration and will be deposited in the Council Treasury.

Faculty Wives Meet



The Villanova Faculty Wives Club will hold its monthly meeting, tomorrow evening at 8:15 p.m. in the Naval Science Building on the Campus.

Professor Richard Duprey, Director of the Drama Department, Villanova University, will be the guest speaker, and his subject will be "The Theatre Today." Mrs. James McKenna, Jr., of Wayne, and Mrs. Cyrus Sharer of Villanova, will be in charge of refreshments.

The Club will have its first Annual Valentine Dance in the cafeteria of the Commerce and Finance Building Saturday, at 8:30 p.m.

Mrs. John McClain of Havertown and Mrs. Vito DiVincenzo of Drexel Hill will be in charge of refreshments. Dress is informal.

Summer jobs often lead to rewarding careers at Du Pont

THIS SUMMER...

ON-THE-JOB TECHNICAL TRAINING AT DU PONT

Pictured are a few of the many Du Pont plants and laboratories across the country where selected technical students roll up their sleeves during summer vacation and put their college training to practical use.

Most of the assignments are similar to work the employees are likely to do after graduation. Next summer, for example, a chemical engineering student may go to work on a catalyst recovery project. A mechanical engineering trainee may become engrossed in a challenging hydraulic study. A promising young chemist may tackle a problem in organic chemistry.

In short, each man is given a regular plant or laboratory assignment commensurate with his education to date. And, as with permanent employees, the student's training is personalized and tailored to fit his background and interests... even to the location he prefers, as far as practical.

This program has proved of benefit both to students and to Du Pont. It gives students an opportunity to increase technical knowledge and to learn how to put college training to use in industry. It gives Du Pont a chance to observe men who will soon be graduating in science and engineering. Many of these summer associations are stepping stones to rewarding careers with this company.

Juniors, seniors and graduate students will be given technical assignments. Opportunities are in chemical, mechanical, electrical and metallurgical engineering; also in physics and mathematics. Candidates should write at once to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), 2420 Nemours Building, Wilmington 98, Delaware. Openings are, of course, limited.

There are opportunities also for men who have completed their freshman and sophomore years, as laboratory assistants or vacation relief operators. They should apply direct to the Du Pont plant or laboratory location of their choice.

Security Means Everything

on the benevolent, paternalistic big corporation.

With the burden thus removed by the ever-loving corporation, he expects to derive more liesure time, read more books, and become more of a person. But maybe, in a sense, he also becomes less of a person. A paradox?

We might compare it with Big Government. History has a way of suggesting that the more services the federal government performs, the more tenuous does its grasp on the individual become.

Citizens bless unlimited spending on highways, schools, milk for school kids, but they seldom relate it to the odious upsurge of taxes and federal intrusion.

Financial Emergency

Reports from Sweden, which has been largely socialized, sorrowfully indicate a growing epidemic of suicides. And the party in power is privately wondering if what the sociologists say is true: that the people are so completely provided for, they can't cope with a real financial emergency that might abruptly come from left field.

The analogy isn't far-fetched. In modern times, security carries more weight with the job-searching senior than salary. And he naturally gravitates towards the big corporation.

Whyte explains the attitude of the student: "On almost every campus I heard one recurring theme: adventure was all very well, but it was smarter to make a compromise in order to get a depression-proof sanctuary. They don't think A T & T is very exciting, but that's the company they'd like to join. If a depression comes there will always be an A T & T."

More and more, Villanova seniors head for the big-corporation cubicles at the placement office, passing up the small, so-called growth companies with rapidly mounting sales and prestige.

This is usually the type of company where competition and merit are still the key to success. Unlike the big corporation, they're usually content to pay for the job performed, and don't require the junior executive to lay his love before the altar of the corporation.

They're usually so busy completing the job and utilizing the genius of the independent mind, that they have little time or stomach for the group-happy, team-conscious, togetherness-minded schemes of modern big business.

Personality Test

They just can't find the time to issue batteries of tests which reportedly have the human personality down to a science—tests which jeopardize your entire future if they reveal that you'd rather sit home and read a book than go out bowling with the gang.

The small company is more apt to let the junior executive retain possession of his own psyche, as long as he does his job.

But then, the big corporation offers security. And everybody craves security. From the womb to the grave (paid for out of company insurance)—to cover the course with a minimal amount of worry is the goal of everybody. Well, maybe not everybody.

Seniors Nominated To Honor Society

Nine seniors have qualified for nomination to Delta Epsilon Sigma, the National Catholic Honor Society, it has been announced by Rev. Robert M. Sullivan, OSA, Dean of Arts and Sciences.

Thomas J. Behan, Joseph P. Chapley, Thomas A. Hoffman, Kenneth R. Kraemer, Michael Mastrangelo, Vincent Minkiewicz, Nicholas Tenaglia, Thomas M. Troy, and Thomas M. Wolf have achieved the 3.35 cumulative average required for nomination to the Society.

These students will be enrolled upon petition to the office of the Dean of Arts and Sciences. In addition, a ten dollar enrollment fee must be left at Father Sullivan's office by February 12.

Delta Epsilon Sigma is nationally organized to honor outstanding students in liberal arts and science courses, said Father Sullivan. He extended his personal congratulations and the congratulations of the University to the nine seniors who have qualified this year.

N.F.C.C.S. to Hold Fourth Annual State Congress

The National Federation of Catholic College Students will hold its Fourth Annual State Congress on March 4, 5, & 6 at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia.

Students from Catholic Colleges in the Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Wilkes Barre—Scranton, and Detroit—Cleveland regions will attend as well as students from Newman clubs in the Philadelphia Region. Over forty colleges will be represented.

The theme for the Congress will be: The Catholic Student: Complacent Conformist of Motivated Individual.

Other highlights of the Congress include a banquet and social on Saturday night and Mass at the Cathedral of Saints Peter and Paul on Saturday morning.

Cassiciacum Circle Meets Next Week

The Cassiciacum Circle, Villanova University's newly formed Philosophy Club, will hold its first meeting of the new semester next Wednesday evening.

At the suggestion of Rev. Robert P. Russel, OSA, chairman of the Philosophy Department, the club voted to accept as its formal name the "Cassiciacum Circle."

Father Russel explained the significance of Cassiciacum, saying that it was the name of a retreat used by St. Augustine and his friends for philosophical discussions during the period of his conversion.

In light of the connection of a Villanova Philosophy Club with St. Augustine and philosophical discussion, Father Russel thought it was a particularly appropriate name, and it was unanimously accepted by the club members.

Dear Dr. Frood: A lot of the guys complain because their mothers don't pack their laundry boxes properly. Is there a certain way they should be packed?
Spokesman

Dear Spokesman: Indeed there is. Clip out the instructions below and mail them to your mother.

Dear Dr. Frood: Do you believe in the old adage, "Choose a girl by ear rather than by eye"?
Shopping

Dear Shopping: This maxim is indeed a fine guide for any young man who is looking for a girl. But while choosing by "ear rather than by eye," he should also make sure she has two of each.

Dear Dr. Frood: Every night I come home tired and I find the house in a mess. There are dirty dishes and pans in the sink, and clothes are thrown all around. I'm fed up. What should I do?
Married Student

Dear Married Student: You should notify the police. Someone has obviously been there.

Dear Dr. Frood: How far ahead should I call for a date?
Straight Arrow

Dear Straight Arrow: It depends. Some girls must be called at least a week in advance. With others, you just holler as you enter the dorm.

Dear Dr. Frood: My husband is an absent-minded college professor. He went out 7 years ago to buy a pack of Luckies and hasn't returned yet. I don't know what to do.
Patience

Dear Patience: Better buy another pack. He's probably smoked them all by now.

COLLEGE STUDENTS SMOKE MORE LUCKIES THAN ANY OTHER REGULAR!

When it comes to choosing their regular smoke, college students head right for fine tobacco. Result: Lucky Strike tops every other regular sold. Lucky's taste beats all the rest because L.S./M.F.T.—Lucky Strike means fine tobacco.

Kornbluch talks on Climate and Disease

The Villanova Society for Psychological Investigation has recently presented Dr. Igho Hart Kornblueh, who spoke on "Climate and Disease."

Dr. Kornblueh is an Associate in Medicine, and is Director of the Department of Physical Medicine, University Graduate Hospital School of Medicine, University of Pennsylvania.

The lecture was presented as an introduction to the effects of climatic conditions on the human organism, and the influence of our physical surroundings on our total well-being.

Dr. Kornblueh, who has just recently returned from a tour of climatological and space laboratories in Russia, also expressed much displeasure about our lag behind the Soviet Union in the field of Physical Medicine.

Villanova nurses have completely blended into the academic life here. Some are shown above in the classroom phase of their education.

How Does The Villanova Nurse Spend Time Here?

Why go to college for nursing?

Why spend four years in training when most hospitals throughout the country offer three year courses?

Why pay university tuition rates when the amount necessary to pay for one semester at college would satisfy in full the fee required for the entire three years in the hospital school of nursing?

THE GRADUATE OF the three year program and the graduate of the four-year program are both eligible to become "Registered Nurses" upon successful completion of the State Board Examinations.

In this aspect, the two girls are identical.

However, the graduate of the four-year collegiate school has a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing in addition to her R. N.

This degree enables her to do supervisory work, to teach nursing courses, and to enter the field of Public Health, positions which are more difficult, and in some cases, impossible for the graduate of the three-year school to attain. A B. S. degree is as valuable to the nurse therefore, as it is to the business man, to the engineer, or to the chemist.

The four-year collegiate program at Villanova can be outlined as follows: freshman year is dedicated entirely to academic work with no actual hospital experience. Courses are continued through the summer following freshman year.

SOPHOMORE YEAR begins to combine the academic and the practical aspects of the program by scheduling two days a week working on the hospital wards and the other three for classes on campus.

In junior year, the student's practical experience increases and, she works in the hospital three days out of every week. In her senior year, she spends three months at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York, and another three in Glenn-Dale, Maryland, during which time she has no classes at Villanova.

Last semester senior year is dedicated to her experience in Public Health and to the completion of her college courses.

THE STUDENT IN the Baccalaureate program is required to make several adjustments during her four years due to the fact that she affiliates with eleven different hospitals and health agencies throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, and New York.

At times it seems as though she is hardly settled in one hospital when she must move again to another. Adjusting to such varying conditions is often difficult to do.

It is expected however, that the person who learns to do so, will be a better, more mature individual for the experience. These frequent changes are also beneficial to the student because they do not allow for one single hospital to become the center of her universe, as is often the case when a girl must spend her entire training period at the same place.

EFFECTIVE NURSING CARE requires a thorough knowledge of, and the ability to perform, several technical skills. Of greater importance however, is that the nurse understand the principles which govern such procedures.

For example, the nurse must carefully observe the temperature, pulse, respiration, and blood pressure of her patient, but unless she is able to recognize abnormalities in these vital signs, and can attribute these variations to certain physiological causes, her observation is of no value.

To prepare the student for this therefore, her most important science courses are taken early in her training, during her freshman and sophomore years. Included among these courses are: Chemistry, Zoology, Bacteriology, Anatomy, Physiology, and Psychology.

Opera Classica To Meet

The first Opera Classica meeting of the new semester will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 p.m., East Lounge, Dougherty Hall. The program will consist of Mozart's opera Don Giovanni.

"No matter how hard the members try, they cannot break down the strong feeling of inferiority which seems to paralyze many Villanovans at the mention of Opera-Classica," said Dr. Robert O'Shea, moderator.

"Perhaps it is the name—but who cares about names? Perhaps the members give the impression of being snobs; if this be the case, won't somebody who isn't a snob please join and put the society on the right road."

Photographers Use Closet, Awaiting New Dark Room

by Mike Tighe

If the second floor residents of Good Council Hall are finding it easier to catch sleep at night, their good fortune can be attributed to the removal of the photo staff's dark room facilities to a new location.

Old One Closed

Joe Perozziello, head of the staff, announced this week that the old dark room was officially closed at the end of exam week.

The familiar smell of acetic acid, which indicates operations are in full swing, will soon be issuing from the new dark room which will be located in the northeast corner of Sullivan Hall basement.

Perozziello, a Senior Finance Major, hopes to have the move completed by Monday.

The welcome change, however, has not been without a few customary drawbacks. The move has left the staff without dark room facilities for more than a week, and the seasonal swamp of BELLE AIRE pictures is now being handled at a temporary dark room set up in the Chemistry lab of the Chemical Engineering building.

New Move

The big move is the final step in a project which has been in the planning stages for the past two years.

In addition to the new location the photographers have been provided with much-needed new equipment which will enable them to increase both the output and quality of their work.

Highlighting the additions are three professional type cameras, a Speed Graphic, and two twin lens models to be used for portraits and still life shots.

Also in the picture-taking line, the staff is now in possession of a new strobe flash unit to be used for larger group pictures. It's capable of lighting entire rooms. Perozziello hopes to put this unit to full use in the coverage of dances and other important social affairs.

Air-Conditioned

To aid in the processing of the pictures, the air-conditioned dark room will be equipped with a new and more versatile enlarger, a new negative dryer, and a new print dryer.

According to Perozziello, "The only thing holding us up now is the arrival of two sinks, and they're somewhere between here and Chicago."

The addition of all this new equipment has kept the staff, which this year is the largest yet at Villanova, busier than they have ever been.

Perozziello has two assistants returning from last year, Mike Pastore, a Sohpomore Physics major, and Frank Matunis, Sophomore C & F. New to the staff this year are Tom Yodzis, Jr. Arts, and Gordon Kittle and Jeff Herbik, both Freshmen.

The amount of work done by the photographers for the Belle Aire and Villanovan has shown an increase of over four times that done in 1950. This year has also been the first year that any large scale work has been done by the camera crew for the other campus publications.

In commenting on the increased work load Perozziello said, "I hope the new equipment and extra space will be an attraction to those students interested in photography. I'd like to increase the staff by at least ten new members."

Contact Perozziello

Interested students should contact Perozziello who can usually be found in either the BELLE AIRE or VILLANOVAN office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. Perozziello thoughtfully added, "No experience is necessary."

In line with the program of expansion, Perozziello hopes to inaugurate a new set of standards which will make a photographer available for campus activities at all times.

This will include the manning of a professionally lighted podtrait studio which adjoins the new dark room. This studio will provide the facilities for another phase of the project, the taking of freshmen mug-shots for matriculation cards.

Perozziello and his entire staff of photographers are quite pleased with the results of the program thus far, and hope to have a good turnout in their appeal for new photographers.

Bless Rooms

The final step of the program will be the long awaited official opening of the new dark room and studio. This event will take place Monday and will be presided over by Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, who will conclude the ceremonies with the blessing of the rooms.

Ex-D.A. Slated For Council Forum

The fourth Student Council Forum of the year has been announced for the evening of February 18.

Theodore Smith, noted Philadelphia lawyer and former assistant District Attorney, will be the Forum speaker. He will speak on the general field of civil government and its relationship to the District Attorney's office and to criminal law.

Well Known

Neil Drislane, Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Council, declared that "Mr. Smith is well known to the Philadelphia area.

"As both a distinguished public servant and a noted lecturer, he has drawn the attention of a considerable audience to the various problems of civil government and crime prevention."

Eileen Greyson, nursing representative who heads the Forum Planning Committee, added that "Mr. Smith, besides lecturing on law and criminology, is an interesting and excellent speaker on almost any topic.

"We hope that he may digress somewhat from the announced subject and comment on various related subjects."

Basketeers Ranked 6th and 8th In Polls

By Denis Cardone

In between vacations and newspapers, Villanova has continually climbed in the ratings until the Wildcats have reached the seventh niche in the nation. Here are some of the highlights that have contributed to this remarkable ascent . . .

Wagner proved to be no major problem in the first rung of the climb. The Staten Islanders succumbed 88-62, with Hubie White scoring 24.

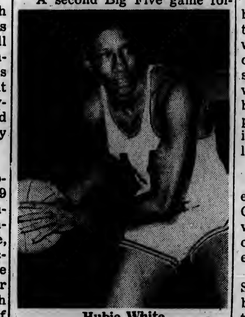
Boston College, arch-rival in another sport, fell before the Wildcats, 81-67; Hubie White matched his seasonal high with 32 points.

The team actually sparkled in the Duquesne triumph. Against the subpar Dukes, the team performed in such fashion that it drew the highest expletives from the Cincinnati Royals Jack Twymann. Hubie had 25 and Twymann's brother, Ned led the Dukes with 18 in a 87-65 contest.

After a slow start, splendid ball-hawking and the usual cohesive team play, the Wildcats pulled away from Muhlenberg, 74-46. The 24 points that White scored were only one part of the magnificent team play of Huggard, Driscoll, Raveling, Kaminski, etc.

The first Big Five game with Temple saw John Driscoll at his best as he contributed to still another truimph, to run the winning skein to 10. Temple was overrun, 81-69, but not without a struggle. Bill Kennedy, throwing in 25 foot jumpers, looked like the best player in the city as he tallied 29 points.

Morgantown . . .



By now, Villanova had climbed to an undefeated number 9 spot. This set the stage for another road trip to the most imposing town on the schedule, Morgantown. No alibis are necessary as the Wildcats were impolitely pushed from their pinnacle by West Virginia with West, 89-81. Several carloads of students made the trip as coach Severance had to take emergency steps to get some of them in the jam-packed field house.

Morgantown gets the vote as the most rabid basketball town as even the old newspaper ladies were inquiring, "How's Huggard's back?" Ma'am it was 27 points all right, but not enough.

The Wildcats returned undaunted to the more welcome Palestra floor and thoroughly ran over Seton Hall, 94-65. Exam week proved to be no problem here.

Off and Running

A second Big Five game followed with a fired up Penn squad causing some early difficulties. By overloading the Wildcat zone and some pin-point shooting; the Quakers moved to a narrow half time lead. George Raveling asserted himself under the boards in the second half, scoring 17 in the ultimate 71-58 win. Dave Kwait was the Quaker thorn-in-the-side as he threw in 17 also.

Hubie White

Army coach George Hunter had Villanova confused for first half moments as his high post offense led to an unexpected albeit narrow half-time lead.

All around balance proved to be too much for the Cadets in the second half. The Wildcats won comfortably 66-53, as Army obviously played to keep the score from mounting. The team wit department suffered a setback with a ten year-old's repartee, "Hey, I hear Jerry West is the patron saint down at Villanova."

Sixth in Nation

Undaunted again, the team entrained to Buffalo and the Canisius five. Starting like they were going to run the Griffins off the floor, the Wildcats slackened off to a 75-66 victory.

Wins over Manhattan and Siena brought the before-Pittsburgh record to 16-1 and a settled sixth national rating, so far.

Freshmen Cagers Outclass Army and Penn Opponents

by John Duffy

The Villanova University freshman basketball team smashed a game but outclassed band of Army Plebes last Wednesday afternoon 88-57. The Wildcats played the "iron man" role using just 5 players.

The 'Cats were led by Tom Galia with 31 points. Able assistance was lent to the cause by Richie Richman (27) and Bernie Chavis (19). Tom Hoover played a masterful game on defense, blocking 15 shots and pulling down 27 rebounds.

The Black Knights from the Hudson were led by Tom Foley. Cadet Foley threw in 14 field goals and a foul for 28 points. The 'Cats were cold from the foul line hitting only 6 to 15 but overcame this with a hot hand from the field, 41 field goals. This triumph squared the Wildcats record at 4 and 4.

Villanova 66, Saint Josephs' 74.

The Wildcats were swept from the ranks of the unbeaten by a fired-up St. Joe's Team. Determination and hustle were the key words as the Hawks built up a quick 10-0 lead and then held on. A great defensive job by Jimmy Lyman on Tom Galia, and steady popping by Bill Hoy and Jim Boyle, were enough to beat the 'Cats.

Bill Hoy led the winners with 19 points, while Tom Wynne and Lynam had 17 and Boyle 16. Tom Galia led the 'Cats with 19. Hoover had 17 and Chavis and Richman 12 each.

Villanova 64, LaSalle 74

The Wildcats journeyed up to LaSalle on January 14, to play a LaSalle Team that they had run over at will earlier in the year. This time, however, the smaller Explorers out hustled the sluggish 'Cats, fast breaking them to death.

Bob Rafferty and Curt Fromal pumped in 24 points apiece to pace the Explorers to a 74-64 victory. Tom Galia led the Wildcats' scoring with 21 points. Chavis and Hoover had 13 apiece.

Villanova 69, Pennsylvania 80

The Wildcats made their first appearance at Penn's Palestra on Saturday Afternoon Jan. 23rd and were beaten 80-69.

The game was even until about ten minutes to play when the whole starting team was either fouled out or in foul trouble.

Bob Purdy led the Penn attack with 22 points and John Wideman and Dick Kauffman had 12 and 10 respectfully. Galia led the Villanova shooters with 24, game high. Bernie Chavis had 21 while Richman got 18.

Villanova 58, Archbishop Carroll 62

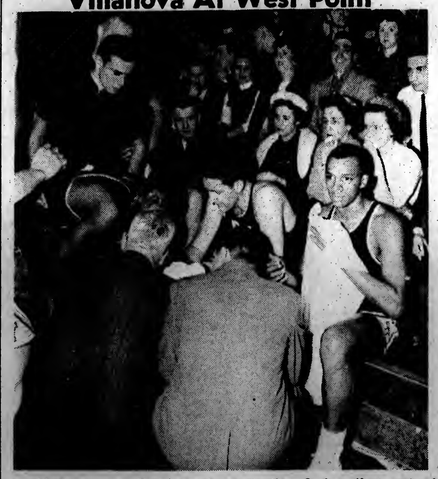
On January 9th, the Freshmen played Archbishop John Carroll High School of Washington before a large audience in the Villanova Field House. Carroll, the defending National Catholic Champion, is probably the best high school team in the country.

Led by their 6-11 Captain John Thompson, Carroll squeaked by the Wildcats 62-58. Due to a head injury and four personal fouls incurred in the first half, Tom Hoover spent a great deal of time on the bench. To Tom's credit however, Thompson collected very few of his 27 points while Hoover was in the ball game. Hoover is an alumnus of Carroll High.

Tom Galia, once again, led the Villanova scoring with 20 points. The most outstanding play of the game was a 55 foot set shot sunk by 6'4" forward George Skinner, at the halftime buzzer.

Villanova 77, Pennsylvania 75

In the Villanova Field House on Monday Night Jan. 11, the Wildcats entertained an outstanding Penn freshman squad. The 'Cats won a real thriller when Tom Galia stole the ball away from Lee Amica with ten seconds to play and went the length of the court for a layup to give his team a 77-75 victory.



Fred Smith a 5'9" guard got off the bench and kept the 'Cats within striking distance with his hustle and determination. Smitty thrilled the Palestra audience with a 35 foot shot that swished the cords.

Jimmy O'Brien also played a fine game and took up the slack caused by Galia's (7 points) absence with 10 points.

Richie Richman was the big gun for the 'Cats with 21 points.

The Quakers had four men in double figures, led by Bob Purdy's 23 points.

Villanova At West Point

1960 Track Team Has Depth

There's an element of paradox pervading the Villanova track scene this winter and it threatens to persist far into the Spring.

Villanova is potentially a great track team. There is depth in virtually every event exclusive of the mile and longer distances and this depth has displayed itself in the form of some outstanding, if underpublicized victories on the banked board circuit.

But herein lies the paradox: Villanova track teams, consistently among the best in the country for nigh on to a decade are not traditionally deep. When Jumbo Jim Elliott's team won the national collegiate championship in 1957 it did it with seven men.

Yet most of these seven, (Bragg, Delany, Reavis,) were virtually super-stars and hence through the vast network of communications media, newspapers, radio, television their acnievements were well publicized.

Team Unpublicized

Not so with the current crop of Wildcats. There are no superstars, hence the reams of publicity copy described, and rightly so, the prodigious feats of high jumper John Thomas and pole vaulter Don Bragg (a former Villanova super-star, by the way).

Nevertheless, the depth that is Villanova's has accounted for and will continue to account for outstanding if unexpected and not individually brilliant victories.

The Wildcats' depth and versatility is not merely a theoretical one which looks good on paper. The most graphic illustration is the mile relay team of Paul Drayton, Bob Coffill, Bob Raemore and Joe Manion.

Drayton as a high school junior tied Jesse Owens inter-scholastic mark of 20.9 for the 220. At the close of his freshman year he defeated two time IC4A sprint champion Ed Collymore in the 100. A month later he ran a century in 9.4 with a tailwind.

He also was a member of the Villanova freshman mile relay team which set a Penn Relay record. Bob Coffill, then a freshman in the same meet in which Drayton defeated Collymore, finished a scant .9 of a second behind U. S.-Russian games winner Josh Culbreath in the 440 yard hurdles.

Coffill's time, 53.5, was a Villanova record. It was only the third time he had run the event.

Raemore's Double

Bob Raemore while at Williamsport High School was Pennsylvania Interscholastic Class A champion in both the 100 and the 220 in 1958. As a freshman here he anchored the frosh mile relay team at the Penn Relays. His time was a natty 47.6 for the concluding quarter mile.

Joe Manion also excels in all three events. In dual meets last year he chalked up a 9.7 century and a 21.0 furlong. He is the only remaining member of last season's excellent foursome of Ed Collymore, Charley Stead, Manion and Nick DeAngelis.

Anchoring Team

DeAngelis, who can run the 440 in less than 48 seconds is currently anchoring Jumbo's two mile relay team. His time in the victory over Yale in the Millrose games was 1:54.2.

The versatility of these performers indicate that the paradox of depth will fast become a trend. Whereas Elliott had only Collymore and Manion to depend on for a sub 10:0 centuries and sub 22:0 furlongs, this year he can call on Raemore, Frank Budd, Drayton, Manion, among others to better these times.

Paradox to Trend?

Last year he had four sub 49:0 quartermilers. This year he has at least six, with two of them Manion and DeAngelis returnees from last year's widely renowned mile relay team.

It's in the 880, though, that the greatest difference in depth lies. The 1959 Cats had at best two sub 1:57 half milers. The 1960 team on the showing in its Millrose meet alone have at least four men can run the 880 in less than 1:55.

That's indoors, too, where the times on the boards invariably two to four seconds slower than the cinder clockings.

The paradox will probably remain a trend for sometime to come, too, since Manion and DeAngelis are only juniors. All others are sophomores.

Mermen Meet LaSalle Here Today

LaSalle's Explorers will furnish the opposition for Ed Geisz's swimmers in the Field House pool at 3 p.m.

In a series of five dual meets, extending before Christmas to the end of the semester, the mermen of Villanova were beaten by Navy, West Chester, N.Y.U. and Penn with only a win over Lafayette on the plus side of the ledger.

The schedule this year is the toughest that the charges of Ed Geisz have faced in seven seasons. Swimming both Navy and Yale, the latter in the final meet of the season, the 'Cats face the two toughest teams in the country.

Navy has been touted as the team, if any, to end Yale's fantastic win streak of 184 to date. Navy almost swept the 'Cats right out of the pool as they displayed the finest array of talent, depth and speed that ever swam for the Academy. With four men able to swim in every event and win, they took ten of eleven events, smashing several records.

Steve Carton garnered the only win for the 'Cats as he dove to a win off the one meter board. Don Reed almost pulled a surprise upset as he came from behind in the final fifty yards of the 200 yard individual medley only to be just touched out. Don Boemcke after missing a turn finished second in the 100 yard free style for the 'Cats' only other second place.

'Cats Splashed by West Chester

The first meet after Christmas vacation the Villanova natadors lost to West Chester 62-33. Reed took the only individual first for Villanova University in the 200 yard backstroke. Boemcke swam to second place in the distance events the 220 and 440 freestyle respectively. Then Jensen and Donahue collaborated with Bill Cassin and Frank Dunn to win the final event, the 400 yard freestyle relay.

The 'Cats next spent a very enjoyable afternoon at Lafayette as they splashed the Leopards to defeat 58-35. With Captain Frank Keefe leading off the 400 yard medley relay of Ted Moriarity, Reed and Roemcke the 'Cats won and kept it up all afternoon.

Jensen and Dunn took first and second in the 50 yard freestyle by two lengths. Gerry Peccarro took third in the 200 yard freestyle. George Robertson picked up his first win of the season in the one meter dive as he far outperformed his opposition.

In the 200 yard individual medley tiny John Foley and Keefe took first and third, Jensen and Cassin finished behind Lafayette's double winner Westkott in the 100 yard freestyle.

Reed took first in the 220 yard backstroke as he led all the way from start to finish. Bruce McCreedy and Peccarro swept first and second in the 440 with McCreedy winning by a length.

The final sweep of the day for the 'Cats was in the 200 yard orthodox as Brian Reilly and Matt Mone battled each other all the way, the Reilly just touching out Mone.

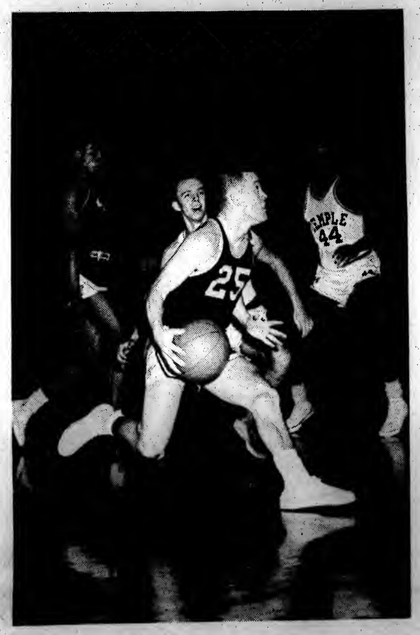
'Cats Taken To Task

The Violet of N.Y.U. took the 'Cats to task in the next meet 60-34. The 'Cats won two first places, Bob Dow in the 200 yard butterfly and George Robertson repeating his Lafayette success in the one meter dive.

by Gene Hewitt

Reed was touched out in both the 200 yard individual medley and 200 yard backstroke and had to settle for second place. Boemcke took second in the 220 freestyle and third in the 100 yard freestyle.

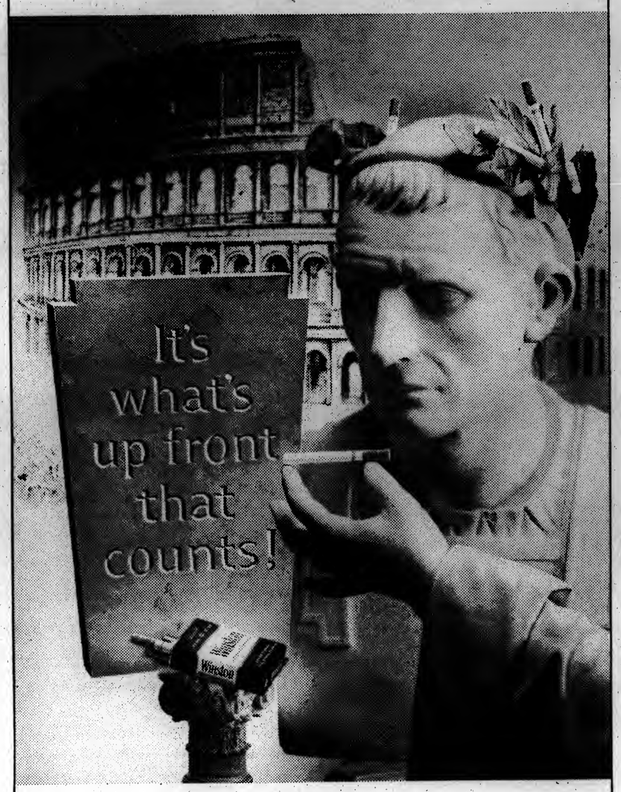
John Foley added a second place in the dive and McCreedy in the 440 freestyle. Mone and Reilly were beaten in the 200 yard orthodox by John Lima, a transfer student from Villanova at N.Y.U.



In the final meet of the semester Penn handed the 'Cats a 55-40 defeat. The meet stayed close until the 440 freestyle when Slater of Penn, Canadian Olympic Star chopped 25.7 seconds off the pool record and sent Penn ahead to victory.

Slater was a thorn in the 'Cats paw all day as he became a triple winner, he took the 220 freestyle and 200 yard individual medley in addition to the 440 .

Villanova took three firsts as a team with Foley, Ted Moreaty, O'Brien and Cassin winning the 450 yard medley and Boemcke taking the 100 yard freestyle and anchoring the 400 yard freestyle relay of Donahue, Cassin and Dunn.



Reed took second place in the 220 yard individual and 200 backstroke as he faltered in the last 25 yards in both events to be beaten by a stroke. Captain Keefe, Dow, Reilly, and McCreedy picked up the other points for the 'Cats.

All-American All The Way

Jimmy Huggard dribbles past Temple defenders in City Series contest which 'Cats won.

All filter cigarettes are divided into two parts, and...

"Weni, widi, Winston!" Thus did Caesar (a notoriously poor speller) hail the discovery of Filter-Blend—light, mild tobaccos specially selected and specially processed for filter smoking.

He knew that a pure white filter alone is not enough. To be a complete filter cigarette, it must have Filter-Blend up front. And only Winston's got it!

That's why Caesar would never accept another brand even when it was offered gratis. In fact, history tells us he'd glower at the extended pack and sneer, "Et tu, Brute?"

In a stirring peroration to his legions, Caesar put it this way: "For the Numeral I filter cigarette—for the best-tasting filter cigarette—for the noblest filter cigarette of all—smoke Winston!"

"Winston tastes good like a cigarette should!"

P.S. to bachelors. If you're lucky enough to find a gal who'll keep you in Winstons, Caesar!

George Raveling Winner On and Off The Court

by Jim Murray

The captain of this year's Wildcat basketball squad is truly a player, "who has made it the hard way."

George Raveling, has been plagued with family misfortune, reared in private schools, and in general has not had the 'taken for granted' attribute of a regular home life.

George speaks of his youth, not as someone feeling sorry for himself, but rather as a man mature in the realization that he hasn't had all the breaks but has profitted by the ones he's had.

"I've always wanted to play for a championship team and this team is sure championship caliber."

George stretched his 6-6, 210 pound frame across two Greyhound seats and continued, "there are two singularly important factors in helping me to arrive at this ambition.

"Father Nardine, my Godfather and coach Al Severence have helped fill the gap for my dad who passed away when I was nine years old." George's eyes gleamed as he spoke of the two men who have helped him mature as a basketball player and especially as a man.

"Father Nardine was a senior when I was playing grade school ball—he was my first coach. He taught me to play under the boards and all the fundamentals of basketball.

George pointed out that rather than accept college basketball offers of which there were many his godfather choose a religious vocation. "This was a tremendous sacrifice because many of the basketball powers were after him." This made a tremendous impression on George and he strove for perfection in the sport his Godfather had taught him.

When George was ready to graduate as an All-Catholic center in Scranton, he had over sixty offers to consider. He was skeptical at first on his ability to play big time basketball. He choose Villanova over Niagara and Elizabethtown in his final selection.

Climb to Fame

Villanova was the transition ground for George's climb to national fame. Last year he collected 405 rebounds for an average of 16.2 which rated him 19th in the country. He also hit over 50% of his field goal tries.

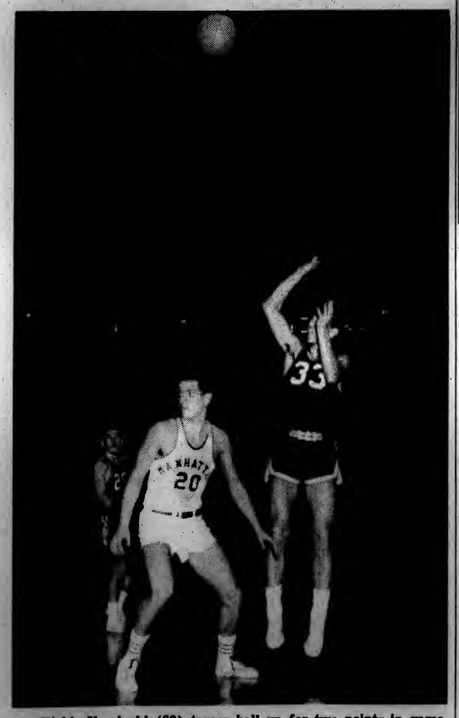
This tremendous show of ability just didn't happen. George came to Villanova and was faced with a new way of life.

George takes his job as team captain very seriously. It is hard to get him to say anything without hearing the phrases—"Hug really sparks us—" "Hubie's a sophomore. Can you imagine him as a junior?" — "Richie sure helps our team move" — "Tweety has been taking those boards this year and that bench, it's really great."

Anyone who thinks George Raveling is false in any way needs only 5 minutes of conversation to prove that he is a sincere person. The only way to get George to say anything about George is by direct question and even then he brings in his team.

George Raveling

"I had to adjust to college and my old problem of temper really hampered me. The coach took a special interest in me and helped me along. My sophomore year I was labled 'Danger: Highly Explosive'."



The change from sophomore to junior year saw the great change in George's playing and attitude. The coach treated me like a father insofar as he took me aside and talked to me and told me what I must do to be good.

"My shows of emotion during a game are not showboat but a part of me. I raise my hand and try to fire up the team."

George is so dedicated to Villanova, he has blossomed into their biggest scout. (What other scout is 6-6.) He reads about 100 to 200 out of town newspapers a week in quest of future Villanovans.

George Raveling says he can never pay Villanova for all it has done for him. George pays Villanova not with a rebound or a tap in but every time he is George Raveling.

Here is a letter received from basketball coach Al Severance:

Students of Villanova,

One of the most encouraging and helpful contributions this year has been the support and spirit of the student body of Villanova.

The Villanovan and W.V.I.L. have won the admiration of the coaches and the team in general. However, and unfortunately, there are few who can disapate all this by behavior unbecoming a sport fan.

Enthusiasim and spirit is great and appreciated but it should be kept in its proper place.

The coaches and the team hope your support shown in the pep rallies so far and the team will do its share so that together we may best represent Villanova.

Sincerely,
Alex Severance

A sturdy band of Villanovans motored the long treak to Mongantown to see the 'Cats suffer their lone defeat to West Virginia. They formed their own cheering section (large drum) and despite the odds (about 25 to 6775) they made themselves heard. There was also a large group at the Army game—a few at the Siena game—a lot at Wagner. Oh yes, and a couple at the Manhatten game.

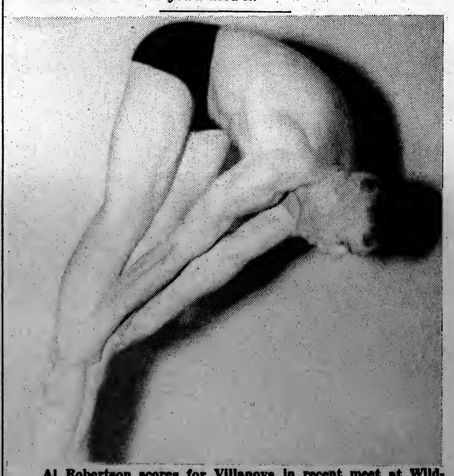
After meeting with Alex Bell, it was even more evident that he had a most difficult job. Along with his assistants Ed Micheol and Gene Felipski he must prepare the remnants of the years one victory club to at least a respectable position on collegiate football.



Mr. Bell is a soft spoken man with a winning smile and pleasant personality. He however, can change into the machine gun voiced from teacher of the "big boys".

His family is still in New England and between speaking engagements, recruiting for players as well as assistants, reaquainting himself with Villanova and getting ready for spring practice he doesn't have much time on his hands.

In fact he was going off for two days into the "All American Country" (Upstate Pennsylvania) looking for football talent for his seventeen scholarships.

With the schedule set up with like of Army, Navy, Boston College, Detroit, ect. he is going to have to find gold in those coal mines.

Good luck Mr. Bell you'll need it.

Mermen Meet LaSalle Here Today

LaSalle's Explorers will furnish the opposition for Ed Geisz's swimmers in the Field House pool at 3 p.m.

In a series of five dual meets, extending before Christmas to the end of the semester, the mermen of Villanova were beaten by Navy, West Chester, N.Y.U. and Penn with only a win over Lafayette on the plus side of the ledger.

The schedule this year is the toughest that the charges of Ed Geisz have faced in seven seasons. Swimming both Navy and Yale, the latter in the final meet of the season, the 'Cats face the two toughest teams in the country.

Navy has been touted as the team, if any, to end Yale's fantastic win streak of 184 to date. Navy almost swept the 'Cats right out of the pool as they displayed the finest array of talent, depth and speed that ever swam for the Academy. With four men able to swim in every event and win, they took ten of eleven events, smashing several records.

Steve Carton garnered the only win for the 'Cats as he dove to a win off the one meter board. Don Reed almost pulled a surprise upset as he came from behind in the final fifty yards of the 200 yard individual medley only to be just touched out. Don Boemcke after missing a turn finished second in the 100 yard free style for the 'Cats' only other second place.

'Cats Splashed by West Chester

The first meet after Christmas vacation the Villanova natadors lost to West Chester 62-33. Reed took the only individual first for Villanova University in the 200 yard backstroke. Boemcke swam to second place in the distance events the 220 and 440 freestyle respectively. Then Jensen and Donahue collaborated with Bill Cassin and Frank Dunn to win the final event, the 400 yard freestyle relay.

The 'Cats next spent a very enjoyable afternoon at Lafayette as they splashed the Leopards to defeat 58-35. With Captain Frank Keefe leading off the 400 yard medley relay of Ted Moriarity, Reed and Roemcke the 'Cats won and kept it up all afternoon.

Jensen and Dunn took first and second in the 50 yard freestyle by two lengths. Gerry Peccarro took third in the 200 yard freestyle. George Robertson picked up his first win of the season in the one meter dive as he far outperformed his opposition.

In the 200 yard individual medley tiny John Foley and Keefe took first and third, Jensen and Cassin finished behind Lafayette's double winner Westkott in the 100 yard freestyle.

Reed took first in the 220 yard backstroke as he led all the way from start to finish. Bruce McCreedy and Peccarro swept first and second in the 440 with McCreedy winning by a length.

The final sweep of the day for the 'Cats was in the 200 yard orthodox as Brian Reilly and Matt Mone battled each other all the way, the Reilly just touching out Mone.

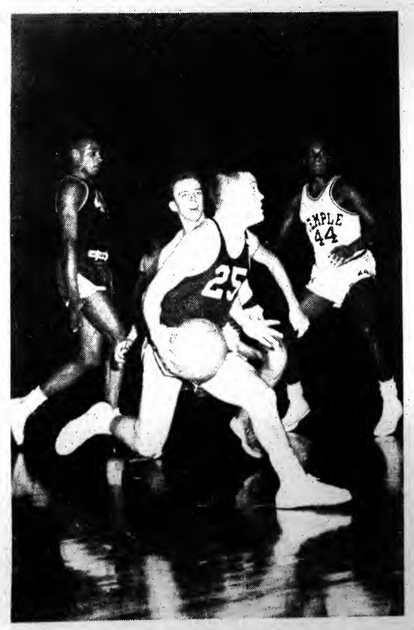
'Cats Taken To Task

The Violet of N.Y.U. took the 'Cats to task in the next meet 60-34. The 'Cats won two first places, Bob Dow in the 200 yard butterfly and George Robertson repeating his Lafayette success in the one meter dive.

by Gene Hewitt

Reed was touched out in both the 200 yard individual medley and 200 yard backstroke and had to settle for second place. Boemcke took second in the 220 freestyle and third in the 100 yard freestyle.

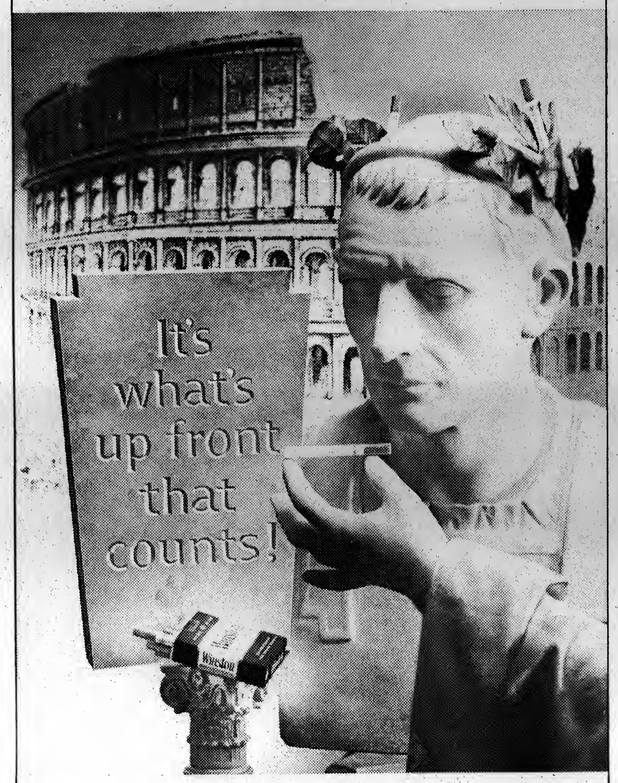
John Foley added a second place in the dive and McCreedy in the 440 freestyle. Mone and Reilly were beaten in the 200 yard orthodox by John Lima, a transfer student from Villanova at N.Y.U.



In the final meet of the semester Penn handed the 'Cats a 55-40 defeat. The meet stayed close until the 440 freestyle when Slater of Penn, Canadian Olympic Star chopped 25.7 seconds off the pool record and sent Penn ahead to victory.

Slater was a thorn in the 'Cats paw all day as he became a triple winner, he took the 220 freestyle and 200 yard individual medley in addition to the 440 .

Villanova took three firsts as a team with Foley, Ted Moreaty, O'Brien and Cassin winning the 450 yard medley and Boemcke taking the 100 yard freestyle and anchoring the 400 yard freestyle relay of Donahue, Cassin and Dunn.



Reed took second place in the 220 yard individual and 200 backstroke as he faltered in the last 25 yards in both events to be beaten by a stroke. Captain Keefe, Dow, Reilly, and McCreedy picked up the other points for the 'Cats.

All-American All The Way

Jimmy Huggard dribbles past Temple defenders in City Series contest which 'Cats won.

All filter cigarettes are divided into two parts, and...

"Weni, widi, Winston!" Thus did Caesar (a notoriously poor speller) hail the discovery of Filter-Blend—light, mild tobaccos specially selected and specially processed for filter smoking.

He knew that a pure white filter alone is not enough. To be a complete filter cigarette, it must have Filter-Blend up front. And only Winston's got it!

That's why Caesar would never accept another brand even when it was offered gratis. In fact, history tells us he'd glower at the extended pack and sneer, "Et tu, Brute?"

In a stirring peroration to his legions, Caesar put it this way: "For the Numeral I filter cigarette—for the best-tasting filter cigarette—for the noblest filter cigarette of all—smoke Winston!"

"Winston tastes good like a cigarette should!"

P.S. to bachelors. If you're lucky enough to find a gal who'll keep you in Winstons, Caesar!

George Raveling Winner On and Off The Court

by Jim Murray

The captain of this year's Wildcat basketball squad is truly a player, "who has made it the hard way."

George Raveling, has been plagued with family misfortune, reared in private schools, and in general has not had the 'taken for granted' attribute of a regular home life.

George speaks of his youth, not as someone feeling sorry for himself, but rather as a man mature in the realization that he hasn't had all the breaks but has profitted by the ones he's had.

"I've always wanted to play for a championship team and this team is sure championship caliber."

George stretched his 6-6, 210 pound frame across two Greyhound seats and continued, "there are two singularly important factors in helping me to arrive at this ambition.

"Father Nardine, my Godfather and coach Al Severence have helped fill the gap for my dad who passed away when I was nine years old." George's eyes gleamed as he spoke of the two men who have helped him mature as a basketball player and especially as a man.

"Father Nardine was a senior when I was playing grade school ball—he was my first coach. He taught me to play under the boards and all the fundamentals of basketball.

George pointed out that rather than accept college basketball offers of which there were many his godfather choose a religious vocation. "This was a tremendous sacrifice because many of the basketball powers were after him." This made a tremendous impression on George and he strove for perfection in the sport his Godfather had taught him.

When George was ready to graduate as an All-Catholic center in Scranton, he had over sixty offers to consider. He was skeptical at first on his ability to play big time basketball. He choose Villanova over Niagara and Elizabethtown in his final selection.

Climb to Fame

Villanova was the transition ground for George's climb to national fame. Last year he collected 405 rebounds for an average of 16.2 which rated him 19th in the country. He also hit over 50% of his field goal tries.

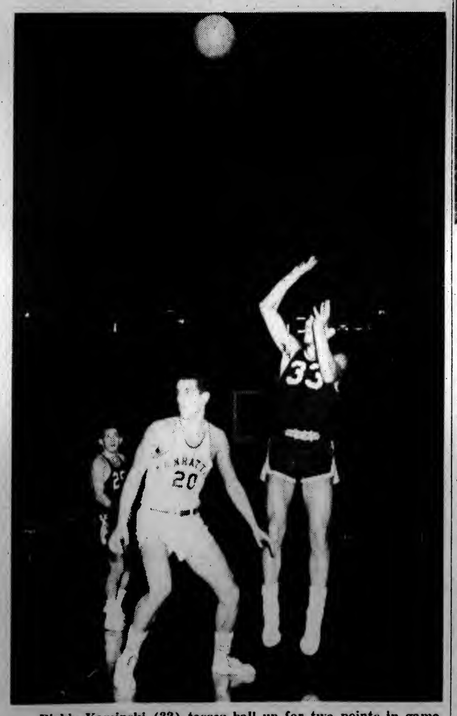
This tremendous show of ability just didn't happen. George came to Villanova and was faced with a new way of life.

George takes his job as team captain very seriously. It is hard to get him to say anything without hearing the phrases—"Hug really sparks us—" "Hubie's a sophomore. Can you imagine him as a junior?" — "Richie sure helps our team move" — "Tweety has been taking those boards this year and that bench, it's really great."

Anyone who thinks George Raveling is false in any way needs only 5 minutes of conversation to prove that he is a sincere person. The only way to get George to say anything about George is by direct question and even then he brings in his team.

George Raveling

"I had to adjust to college and my old problem of temper really hampered me. The coach took a special interest in me and helped me along. My sophomore year I was labled 'Danger: Highly Explosive'."



The change from sophomore to junior year saw the great change in George's playing and attitude. The coach treated me like a father insofar as he took me aside and talked to me and told me what I must do to be good.

"My shows of emotion during a game are not showboat but a part of me. I raise my hand and try to fire up the team."

George is so dedicated to Villanova, he has blossomed into their biggest scout. (What other scout is 6-6.) He reads about 100 to 200 out of town newspapers a week in quest of future Villanovans.

George Raveling says he can never pay Villanova for all it has done for him. George pays Villanova not with a rebound or a tap in but every time he is George Raveling.

Wildcats In A.A.U. Meet Tonight

Inquirer Games Scheduled For Friday Night

by Mike Donahue

Villanova's sophomore-studded track team embarks on the most grueling phase of its schedule tonight at Convention Hall when the 'Cats take to the boards in the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. meet.

In addition to tonight's indoor action the weekend will see Jumbo Jim Elliot's minions compete in the colorful Inquirer Games on Friday and in the New York Athletic Club's annual track fracas on Saturday night.

To date Villanova has made four stops on the winter indoor circuit, thus far highlighted by lanky John Thomas' weekly seven foot leaps. The latest was Saturday night's participation in the Boston A.A. games where Paul Drayton, Nick DeAngelis, Joe Manion, and Bob Raemore comprised the 'Cat quartet which sped to a meet record of 3:16.9 for the mile. DeAngelis, normally the anchor man on the two mile relay team, replaced Bob Coffill whose weakend metarsal arch forced him to the sidelines.

Since the two mile relay was not part of the program Saturday, Elliott inserted DeAngelis in the 1000 yard run. The versatile junior responded with a fourth place finish, beating Morgan State's Nickellis. George Kerr of Illinois won the event in 1:11.8.

The 50 yard hurdles event saw steadily improving soph Leon Pras finish one yard in arrears of olympic aspirant Lee Calhoun. Calhoun won the half century barrier event in the comparatively poor time of 5.8 seconds.

In the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden on January 30, Thomas' record jump of seven feet one and one half inches almost, but not completely, obscured the unexpectedly sensational showings of the two mile relay team and sophomore sprinter, Frank Budd.

A somber Otis Drayton finishes ahead of amused John Buckley and Frank Readd in a mock sprint on the broad track set up in Goodreau stadium.

Upset Yale

The four 'Cat half milers, sophs Frank Hegarty, Jon Dante, Pat Nicastro, and junior Nick DeAngelis upset the highly favored Yale team paced by ace 1000 yarder Tom Carroll. They did it in record time, too, covering the distance in 7:40. The splits were as follows: Hegarty, 1:57.5; Dante, 1:53.8; Nicastro, 1:54.5 and DeAngelis, 1:54.2. Dante's surprising time, was especially pleasing to Elliott.

So was Budd's upset victory in the 60. The soph bested Penn State's Bob Brown, Paul Winder of Morgan State and ex-Villanovan Ed Collymore in 06.2 The win was marred somewhat, though, when Budd pulled a muscle at the tape as he pulled up too soon after breaking the string.

At Boston

The only unpleasant note in the Millrose meet was the failure of the mile relay team to maintain their winning ways. In the two meets prior to the Millrose games the 'Cats had made impressive showings. At Boston in the Knights of Columbus festival on January 16 the foursome of sophomores Paul (Otie) Drayton, Bobby Coffill, Bob Raemore, and junior Joe Manion had whizzed to a meet record of 3:18.1, only :02.1 seconds off the school record.

At Washington on January 23 the same foursome, on a track without banked turns, won the mile relay in the commendable time of 3:25.1. However poor baton passing and Coffill's weakened metatarsal arch allowed Manhattan to edge Elliott's men by two strides in the Millrose games.

The Millrose festival also saw soph hurdler Leon Pras fail for the first time to place among the winners. It was Pras' unfortunate circumstance to be pitted against eventual winner and world-record equaler Hayes Jones in the qualifying heats. Jones eventually took the 60 yard highs in :07.0.

A.A.U. & Inquirer

Unlike the previous four meets when Elliott's charges competed only in the relays, the sprints, and hurdles, tonight he will enter men in virtually every event at the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. meet. "The fellows who haven't seen much except on our own track will get a chance tonight," he promised.

Friday night the Wildcats will be represented in both relays, the two mile run, the 60 yard high hurdles, the 60 yard dash, the shotput, the high jump, the pole vault, and even in the hop, step, and jump, according to assistant coach Jim Tuppeny. "In all probability it will be the same foursome in both the mile and two mile relays (Drayton, Coffill, Raemore, and Manion and Hegarty, Dante, Nicastro, and D'Angelis). The freshman two mile relay team of Bob Olive, Owen McGuire, Pat Traynor, and Al Jackman will also run Friday."

Tuppeny further disclosed that Pras and Budd will enter the hurdles and the dash, respectively, "with the possibility that Jumbo might also run Drayton in the 60."

Sophomore Jerry Donini and freshman Billy Joe, both capable of putting the shot over fifty feet, will hurl the sixteen pound ball. Freshman Jim Sullivan will face Thomas and Co. in the high jump. Elliott's pole vaulters will be freshmen Jimmy Hodge and Joe Healy. Sophomore Angelo Sivieri will compete in the two mile run and senior John Buckley, two time IC4A broad jump champion, will try his luck in the hop, step, and jump.

Joe Manion is the only remaining member of last season's crack mile relay quartet which beated Texas out on the West Coast last May. Ed Collymore and Charley Stead departed via graduation and Nick DeAngelis is presently anchoring Elliott's surprising two mile relay team ..... The frosh two mile relay quartet of Olive, McGuire, Traynor, and Jackman entered in the Inquirer Games Friday, placed second in the Washington Star Games on January 23rd ..... Leon Pras, sophomore hurdler works hardest at practice at perfecting his spring off the starting blocks. Self-admittedly "Starting is my weakest point," Pras confesses . . . Conspicuous by his absence from the sprints thus far has been speed merchant Otie Drayton. As a freshman the Cleveland flash defeated since-graduated Ed Collymore in the 100 here in May in an A.A.U. meet. He also blazed a 9.4 century (with a stiff tailwind) a month later. Except for the Washington meet in which he failed to qualify, Elliott has limited Drayton's activities to the mile relay team. There is an outside chance, however, according to Tuppeny that Drayton might be entered in the 60 on Friday . . . When queried as to what he thinks of the Wildcat thinclads' chances for the IC4A indoor title, Elliott replied: "only an outside chance." He cited Yale featuring Tom Carroll and Jim Stack, as one of the leading contenders for the indoor, diadem.

Sack of Troy — By Tom Troy

Gola Snub Irks Fan; Robertson Versus West

Before Wilt Chamberlain quits professional basketball so that he may spend his time pursuing the world's decathlon mark (no sense in not starting high, is there?), I suggest he learn how to make a foul shot.

I can't understand why anybody would ever waste his time participating in intercollegiate athletics. What benefits do they obtain? Look at Ron Delany. What advantages did he gain from running for four years?

Don Bragg, ex-Villanovan, was selected as the man of the year in track and field by Sport Magazine in its January issue.

RON DELANY

Incidentally, I'm willing to bet Bragg vaults 16 feet before this year is over. When he soared 15' 9½" at the Inquirer games last February, he cleared the bar by at least four inches.

So how come the Philadelphia sportswriters never even mentioned Tom Gola, one of the best all-around pro ball players, until he was snubbed for the All Star game?

Both Gola and Paul Arizin, another truly great pro, are practically ignored by Philadelphia writers.

Powerful Olympic Team

With Oscar Robertson and Jerry West leading the United States Olympic basketball team, how safe is it to predict that the U.S. will repeat as Olympic champions in this field?

A name to remember: Bob Cubbin. A sophomore at Roman Catholic High in Philadelphia, he recently set a record in the 880 in a special invitational meet in New York City. His excellent time was 2:04.5.

Hubie White's performance in the Penn game proved that the Hub doesn't have to score in order to be valuable to coach Al Severance's squad. He notched only eight points, but his rebounding and defensive work more than compensated for his below-average point total. (After 17 games, Hubie's average was 18.8.)

Speaking of being valuable, how come St. Joseph's hasn't missed Joe Spratt? When he graduated, the Hawks lost the greatest clutch player the Big Five has seen to this date.

Hockey at Villanova

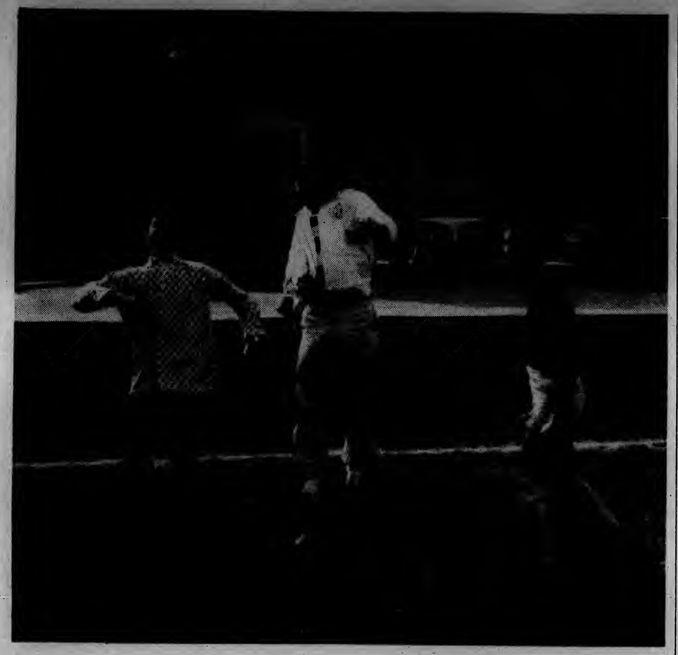
A small, intrepid group of Villanova students has slowly been overcoming all kinds of disadvantages in order to form a viable small sports organization on this campus—a hockey team.

Starting from scratch three years ago, the "Wildcats," official name of this group, have developed into a well-organized team, replete with uniforms, co-captains, and a coach.

The "Wildcats," unfortunately, have had to "go it alone." They bought the uniforms themselves; their coach is the father of one of the players, George McNeill.

(Mr. McNeill, Sr., is a former member of the United States Olympic hockey team, and also played in a professional hockey league in Scotland. The team has been allowed to borrow jerseys which were used by members of the old 150 pound football team—an obsolete small sports organization at Villanova.)

The team has been fortunate in obtaining a convenient site for their games—the Main Line Hockey Club—a short jaunt up Lancaster Pike.



Thus far the "Wildcats" have defeated Penn's hockey team, and have lost to Lehigh. Future opponents include Lehigh, Haddonfield Hockey Club a semi-pro outfit, and Penn.

Oscar vs Jerry

Mike Donahue, well-known sports authority, who saw both Oscar Robertson and Jerry West in action this year, compared the two the other day: "Oscar has more potential, but West is the better all-around ball player. Oscar is no defensive ace, he has quicker reflexes than West, so he probably could be as good a defensive player as West, if he worked at it.

"Their rebounding ability is about equal," he reflected, "But West is the better man because he positions himself better. The big difference, however, is in attitude. Oscar has his ups and downs, depending on his own mood, but West doesn't play like that. He's always up. He hustles every minute. He appears to be a better competitor than Robertson.

"If given the choice of picking either Oscar or West for my team, I'd take Jerry any day. He's great all the time," Mike concluded.

By jove, if this is Rugby it sure isn't cricket.

"Rough and Tumble" Rugby Introduced To Villanova

by Hank Schultz

Some Wednesday or Saturday afternoon, take a walk over to the lot between the Lancaster Pike and the P & W tracks, across from the Stadium.

What you will see seems to resemble a riot of some kind, but with careful study, you will notice some order (?) to the whole operation. This supervised Donnybrook is called rugby.

It may be hard to believe it if you have never seen a match, but it is less dangerous than its American counterpart, football.

History Prof's Idea

Rugby has come to Villanova through the influence of Mr. Francis Coghlan of the History Department, the only member of the Villanova faculty from Great Britain.

An alumnus of England's London University and America's University of Notre Dame, Coghlan was a member of his hometown Rugby Club in Cardiff, Wales. The Cardiff team is said to be the best rugby team in the world.

In explaining his reason for starting a team at Villanova, Coghlan points out that all the Ivy League and several other eastern schools have rugby squads, and he is sure that the game will soon find a firm place here at Villanova.

With offers from several nearby schools already in, there is every chance of a full schedule. Although no matches will be held this year, the team will be practicing in anticipation of next season.

In rugby, there are two seasons. The informal season, in October and November, is more of a practice session. The formal season, in which all the major tournaments are played, lasts from March to May.

Resembles Football

As we said before, rugby's counterpart is football. The ball used is very much like a football, but is somewhat larger.

Since the game is more dependent on kicking and there is less actual contact than football, shorts are worn to allow freer movement of the legs. Although some individuals wear knee or elbow pads for extra protection, the necessary uniform calls for no pads.

The official playing field has maximum measurements of 110 yards by 75 yards. There is also an additional 25 yards "in-goal" area behind each goal line. The goal posts have the same measurements and position as those in professional football.

Continuous Play

The game is divided into two halves of not more than 40 minutes. Since there is continuous play, even after tackles, this sport is definitely not for short-winded people.

Each area or league has certain rules governing substitution, but for the most part, very few substitutions are allowed.

The fifteen players comprising the team are eight forwards, one scrum back, one standoff back, four three-quarter backs, and one full-back. Some English leagues use only thirteen men, eliminating two forwards, but the rules followed by Villanova call for fifteen men.

There is no blocking, and any player on the offensive team who runs in front of the ball carrier is off-sides. The only physical contact is between the ball carrier and the defensive team.

Touching the Ball

If a player from one team touches the ball to the ground in his opponents "in-goal" he scores a "try", worth three points. If a member of his team then kicks a goal, the "try" becomes a "goal", worth five points.

A goal drop kicked on the run is worth three points, as long as it is not touched in flight by the opposing side.

After certain offenses—among them, offsides, illegal contact, and illegally playing the ball—the offended team is allowed a penalty kick. If he place kicks or drop kicks the goal, it is worth three points.

A player who makes a fair catch may earn a chance for a goal by digging his heel into the ground and crying, "Mark". If his kick from behind this mark is good, it is worth three points.

When the ball-carrier is tackled, he must get rid of the ball at once. Anyone can then play the ball, providing he kicks it before he picks it up.

Falls On Ball

A player who falls on the ball must either roll off, or get up and play the ball.

The rules may be dry and boring, but a real rugby catch is very exciting. Anyone who is interested in joining the team is invited to join. Just go to practice any Wednesday or Saturday afternoon at 2:30 or contact Coghlan at the History office.

And now for a friendly word of advice for all applicants, we said it was not as rough as football, but you can't believe everything you read in the papers.

H-Bombs Explode

by Tony Macklin

In this age of high-powered weapons, Villanova shapes up as the Cape Canaveral of the East, the Moscow of the Mainline. This is due to a super-charged arsenal. This column is devoted to the tale of two-fifths of that arsenal, the Villanova H-bombs.

These H-bombs are the Huggard bomb and the Hubert bomb. One has come of age, the other is about to. They have much in common and yet are direct opposites.

The Huggard bomb is hard and brassy. He is a scoffer and a scrapper, callous and caustic. He is metal cold. But beneath that cool exterior is a smouldering heart which responds best when the challenge is the greatest.

In the NIT last year he was the standout Villanovan, against West Virginia he was sensational as he tried to win the game all by himself, and last Thursday in the Garden bloodbath he was one of two Villanovans to make any kind of a showing (Raveling being the other one.)

Pow!!!

The Huggard bomb has come a long way. Like Rudolph, the ugly ducking, et al, he was ignored because of supposed physical lacks when he was cut from the basketball squad at Philadelphia's West Catholic High School.

Today he has gained respect, taken over the job of keeping the missiles flying, made most of the adjustments to team play, and become a leader. It was not easy, the jump from the individualistic AAU wars to the team play of successful collegiate ball is no cakewalk.

Without him Villanova wouldn't move, he always leads the spurt. As Coach Severance (minus Latin dictionary) states, "When Huggard is playing the kind of ball he is able to, Villanova looks good." The Huggard bomb's fiery play has canceled Severance's doubts. As the coach concludes, "Huggard is a firebrand; he never gives up." He never gives up because of his tremendous confidence in himself.

Bam!!!

His 27 points against West Virginia, his two consecutive steals against Wagner that set off a chain reaction of explosions, his single-handed blowing up of the Temple press (an effort that almost reached kamikaze porportions in the last two seconds) are indicative of his all-out drive.

He is a cocky individual, a fighter, a mischievous rumbler, a tough, accomplished ballplayer.

It's a plane, it's an elephant, it's—the Huggard bomb. A guts bomb.

The Hubert bomb is a different type of H-bomb, though he can be equally destructive. Like his counterpart he loves to play ball. He has unlimited potential.

He is burnished and liquid smooth. He is quiet, sincere, and reserved. While cool on the surface, he has a lot of nervous energy that he burns up before a game, and he is left tight inside. There has been a great deal of pressure on him.

Whomp!!!

Severance says of White, "He has a wonderful disposition. He has tremendous natural ability, terrific reflexes, balance and moves." He also has a reputation. Severance admits that "he'll never be guarded by just one man again. From now on two and three men will fall off on him."

The Hubert bomb has gotten off to a promising start this season with his two greatest nights being 32 point performances against Scranton and Boston College, but he has had his wires somewhat dampened in recent conflicts.

White wants very much to be known as a team player. As the garrulous commander says, "He doesn't want to be known as a one man team, a gunner or a hog. Therefore, sometimes he doesn't take the shots he's entitled to."

It's ironic that in the days of Schafer there was a lot of howling about how he shot too much.

Blooey!!!

The Hubert bomb is extremely popular. As one Villanovan has said, "Of course I want to see VU win, but I come to see Hubie, to see him put on a good show."

The two H-bombs have helped level Princeton, Boston, Staten Island, West Point. At Morgantown four squirrel rifles and a cannon (Jerry West) repulsed the H-bomb led assault.

But the Hubert bomb was sabotaged. As he moaned uncharacteristically, "They hit me on the elbow every time I went up for a shot. I had to change my whole style of play. I was afraid to dribble."

Severance says the films show that two goals were invalidly taken away from White for traveling. Although White was done in the 'Cats got some surprising calls in their favor. They experienced the big game blues but believe that they would take the Mountaineers on a neutral court. We'll never know.

Voom!!!

When they are on, the H-bombs are great to watch. With Captain Raveling flinging his elbows like the "mad bomber" as he sets them in motion, the H-bombs go breaking.

At West Virginia the Huggard bomb stole the ball, ripped down court, zipped the ball behind his back to the Hubert bomb who blasted in a dunk. Beautiful.

With the crucial games coming up the H-bombs will have to keep exploding. A holocaust tomorrow night. And Saturday night, bombs in the Violet patch.

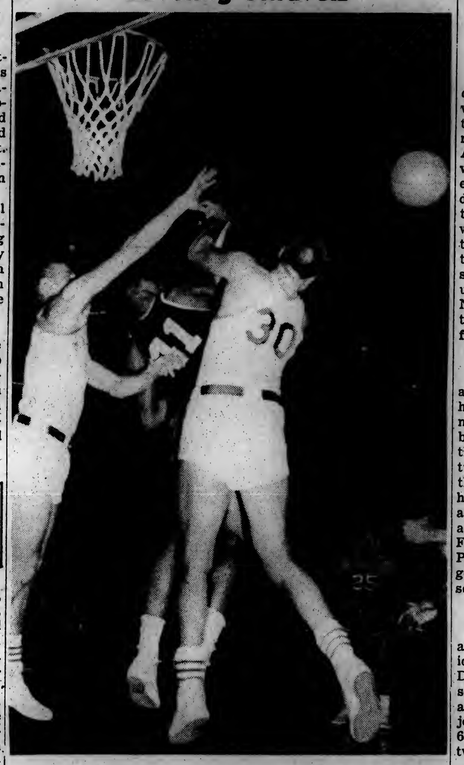
Wildcats Host Pitt Here Tomorrow

Frosh Meet Hawks Thurs. Afternoon

Villanova's freshmen basketball squad will meet St. Joseph's Hawklets preceeding the Villanova-Pittsburgh game on February 1. It will be the second meeting of the Wildkittens and Hawk freshmen this season. St. Joseph's took the first encounter, at St. Joe's fieldhouse in December.

St. Joseph's features several Philadelphia All-Catholic selections from last season, including the league's leading scorer, Billy Hoy. Other Hawk stars are Jim Lynham and Jim Boyle from West Catholic and Tom Wynne from St. James.

Contained Galia



In the first game between the frosh teams, Lynham, a superb defensive player, held high scoring Tom Galia to eighteen points. But is was the clutch scoring of Boyle and the rebounding of Wynne that turned the tide.

In their last game, played at West Point, the frosh, coached by one David Severance, looked very good. They played as a unit for the first time all season, and they also showed a big improvement in their defensive plays.

Freshmen Game Tomorrow . . . Starting Time 3:00

The improved 'Kittens should have a good chance to avenge the earlier loss, if Richie Richman continues scoring and Tom Hoover repeats his great defensive performance at West Point.

Raveling Unravels

Captain George Raveling unrestles rebound from Manhattan big men.

'Cats Return To Palestra Saturday To Meet N.Y.U.

By Dan Grove

Villanova's travel weary Wildcats return to the local hardwood Thursday after four hectic road games. While on the road the 'Cats presented coach Al Severance with his 400th win, between rounds of the main event at Madison Square Garden. Severance's charges will try to continue their six game winning streak when they tackle the hot and cold Pittsburg Panthers in the final game of the season at the Field House. Saturday night the darlings of the New York press take on the tough N.Y.U. Violets, in the last feature of a Palestra double bill.

Inconsistent

Pittsburgh thus far has had an inconsistent season. They have beaten teams like Dartmouth and St. John's, then have been beaten by teams not of this calibre. The Panthers captured the Steel Bowl Tourney this Christmas, and at times have given brilliant performances. Coach Bob Timmons lads are lead in scoring by 6'5" John Fridley, and 6'5" John Mills. Paul Lazzar a 6'6" forward is a good rebounder and consistent scorer.

Without Hennon

In the backcourt the Panthers are noticeably without the services of last year's All-American, Dan Hennon. Bob Sankey a 6'4" sophomore, and Dick Falenski a 6'1" senior do a competent job, however. Darwin Smith a 6'3" guard alternates with the two regulars.

A packed house is expected to welcome the Wildcats home from their sucessful road trip.

N.Y.U. should prove to be one of the toughest opponents the N.I.T.-bound, Severance men face this season. The Violets are ranked second in the East and are owners of an 11-2 record. They face West Va. earlier this week at Morgantown. The 'Cats are seeking revenge for an eighteen point drubeleing that the Violets handed them in Madison Square Garden last year.

N.Y.U. is lead by 6'6" "Satch Sanders (an A.A.A. candidate). Sanders is a quadruple threat; he averages close to twenty points per game; 'Cats have seen season; he plays defense so well that Jersey West called him the best that he has seen; and he was the Violets' leader in assists last season. At the last report he was trying to get the beer concession at Madison Square Garden. Also in the Violet front line is 6'5" Al Barden, the team's second leading rebounder and a double figure scorer last year, he plays the side. At the other forward slot coach Lou Rossini will start either 6'5" sophomore Al Filardi, or 6'1" Jim Reiss a transfer from West Virginia.

Cunningham

In the backcourt the Violets will go with diminutive Russ Cunningham, a 5'8" ball handling wizard and 6'1" sophomore Ray Rapracky who tossed in 23 points in the Violets' last encounter with Pitt. On the bench coach Rossini can pick from a host of good men including 6'9" Leo Murphy, 6'3" Mike DiNapoli, and 6' Bernie Mlodiniff. Rassini calls this season's Violets, a club with good balance.

The Violets employ a fast break offense, with Cunningham feeding Sanders underneath. This will be a major test for the Blue & Whites' zone defense. A good showing in this game would boost both the 'Cats' ratings, and their confidence. It also would help their prospects of getting seeded in the N.I.T.

Inquirer Games Friday Night

N.Y.U. Game At Palestra Saturday Night

400th FOR SEVERANCE

'Cats Flatten Manhattan, 401st No Trouble At All

by Jim Murray

One little-two little-three little Indians—Siena Indians proved much too little for the Villanova Wildcats last Saturday night.

The game was played in the Albany Armory before about 3,000 fans. The final score was 63-38. But that was only half the story.

The other half was—the deep freeze—the Siena team held the ball looking for the good shot. They stirred the crowd when they pulled within four points at 16-12 with 10:02 remaining in the first half. Pat Martone hit on two straight jumpers from the circle to close the gap.

Floor-length Steal

Then Jimmy Huggard made a steal down the length of the court and scored. For the next three minutes Siena made their mistakes—they tried to run with the 'Cats. Between George Raveling and John Driscoll's follow ups and tap-ins, Richie Kaminski's sharp outside stabs the team roared to a 36-18 bulge at halftime.

At the start of the second half it was obvious that the Indians weren't looking for the good shot but rather the good pass. They passed and passed and passed—by this time George Raveling had -6, Richie Kaminski, 14, John Driscoll, 12, Jim Huggard, 9. Hubie White took only three shots in the first half and made one. In the second half he missed five but played excellent defense. The Indians decided to double team Hubie, coach Severance countered with Hubie in a high post position where he passed off to Kaminski and Raveling who where deadly from outside.

It was his four hundredth win and Al Severance was a little bit tried. "My ball team is tired and I'm glad this game is over."

Victory Fete

There was a victory celebration in the locker room after Villanova had beat Manhatten 62-55. The coach was presented with the game ball and a trophy from the players. The coach also received the congratulations of many coaches and friends following the game.

The game itself was nothing to cheer about. The Wildcats were in charge most of the way in a rought hard tought ball game.

Jimmy Huggard turned in a brilliant 22 point performance and directed the team skillfully especially when the games get close.

Dick Mealey of Manhatten poured in 26 points mostly on jump shots from the circle. He was the games leading scorer.

Raveling Deadly

Veteran coach, Ken Norton tried different offensive manuvers to penetrate the 'Cats vaunted zone defense. Only Mealey's outside shooting proved effective as the 'Cats "closed the door" each time the Jaspers moved within striking distance.

George Raveling ripped the Green and White defense with brilliant 20 foot jump shots from the corners. Hubie White contributed a 13 point performance in his Madison Square Garden debut.

The Wildcats come back to the Garden in one month for the N.I.T. Tournament.

John Mills

The Graduate Theatre Department will present J. M. Synge's "Playboy of the Western World" Thursday thru Sunday in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

March 18th Voted Free Day; Agrees With Student Poll

March 18 will be the annual "free day," as voted last Wednesday by the Student Congress.

The vote was in harmony with a poll taken by the VILLANOVAN which indicated the following results: 342 in favor of March 18; 19 in favor of March 11; and 14 in favor of the Friday after Ascension Thursday.

Unanimous

In declaring itself almost unanimously (one week "nay" was heard in the rear of the chamber) in favor of Chairman Tom Hoffman's motion, the council chose a date which will coincide with the final two rounds of the National Invitational Basketball tournament in New York.

Villanova has already been selected to appear in the N.I.T., which will run from March 10 through March 19. The playing dates are March 10, 12, 15, 17, and 19.

If the Wildcats are selected as one of the four seeded teams (and at this writing there is a strong possibility that they will be) they will draw a bye which will not have them play until the night of March 12 at the earliest.

Hence support for the March 11 date was not very strong. Only Tom Natal argued for the earlier date citing the outside possibility that Villanova will play on the first night, March 10.

Quarter-Finals

The 18th was selected on the assumption that Al Severance's twice-defeated team will win its quarter final game on Tuesday the 15th and hence advance to the semi-finals on the night of Thursday the 17th.

A special student sale of tickets for the forthcoming Augustinian Seminary Guild Pops Concert will be held in Dougherty Hall on Tuesday, February 23rd and Wednesday, February 24th. The tickets are priced at $.75 for those two days. The concert will be held on Sunday February 28th in the Field House and will feature Ralph and Buddy Bonds at the twin organs.

Frosh To Cast Votes Tomorrow For Council Reps

Elections for freshmen representatives to the Student Council will be held tomorrow.

Ballots will be cast from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in Alumni Gym. Elections Board co-chairman Herb Lettau emphasized that formal elections procedures will be followed. Blatent violations will result in the candidates disqualification.

The candidates listed on the official ballots are: Residents Robert Kusek (Engr.); William Noto (Engr.); Michael Romeno (A&S); and Day-hops Charles Butler (A&S); John Duffy (A & S); Donald Pistilli (C&F); Joseph Tate (A&S); and Martin Whalen (C&F).

Candidates pictures and brief resumes of their qualifications can be found on page 8.

All freshmen will be eligible to vote in this election. The presentation of a matriculation card will allow the voter to cast a ballot for both the resident and the day-hop post.

The two elected representatives will serve a term of office that will carry through their sophomore year. After this, they will be eligible for re-election.

Tries to Change Retreats

Sheldon Pollock recommends to Congress last week that Spring retreat run from Friday to Sunday instead of Sunday night to Wednesday, as present. It was passed and will be presented to Chaplain for consideration.

School May Conduct Mock Political Convention April

Villanova may conduct its own mock political convention on campus shortly after the Easter vacation.

The project is being masterminded by the school's chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, whose president is Larry Ruth, senior Political Science major.

Favorable Interest

Success of the idea rests on displays of favorable interest by the student body between now and convention time, according to Ruth.

The convention as envisioned by Ruth will be of non-partisan nature, resolving on a single nominee selected from candidates from both parties. It will, in effect, "nominate" a president, rather than a party candidate.

Ruth promised a faithful facsimile of the rough-and-tumble party conventions in Chicago and Los Angeles later this year.

The plan is pending Administration approval.

Demonstrations

Other essentials designed to attract student support are "spontaneous" demonstrations for nominating speeches, keynote address, election of Speaker to act as chairman, and banner-waving.

"We could even simulate the rousing band music of the conventions," said Ruth. "For example, if Lyndon Johnson wins, we can pipe 'The Yellow Rose of Texas' over a loudspeaker system."

Ruth calls it an attractive mixture of education and fun.

Ruth also has tentative Administration approval to allow Villanova to serve as host for the mock convention of the regional chapters of I.C.G., to be held in Vasey Auditorium March 12.

Restricted to Members

Participation in this convention would be restricted to I.C.G. members of Villanova, Drexel, Haverford, Immaculata, Penn, Rosemont, West Chester State, and P.M.C. Villanova nonmembers, however, will be invited to attend and observe.

At this point, Ruth states a slight element of doubt as to whether Villanova will be awarded the Convention. Drexel and West Chester are also entering bids for it.

"I'm sure we'll get it," declared Ruth. "Drexel is our only serious contender, but they want it for the weekend of the Washington birthday holiday."

Bids Tonight

The bids will be made tonight at the regional meeting. Ruth assured that the Villanova chapter is unanimously supporting the Villanova bid.

The project is being assisted by Mr. John Logue, of the Political Science department, who has had experience in mock conventions at Fordham University.

Salary Hikes Announced For 350 Faculty Members

Over 350 lay faculty members will receive salary increases beginning in September of 1960, it was announced by Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, president.

Salaries are computed on a ten month basis, and increases are based on rank, length of service, degree, publications, and other accomplishments. Maximum salaries may be exceeded by virtue of merit increases, Father Klekotka said.

Instructors' Salaries

Instructors will receive a minimum of $4500 with $300 annual increment, and a maximum of $6000. Assistant professors will receive a minimum of $5200 with $400 annual increment, and a maximum of $7600.

A minimum salary of $6400, with an annual increment of $500, and a maximum of $8900, will be received by associate professors; while professors will receive a minimum of $7200 with an annual increment of $600, and a maximum of $10,800.

Father Klekotka also disclosed that the Board of Trustees has authorized a study to examine possible improvements of faculty fringe benefits, notably provisions for improving the present retirement plan.

Turkey Meal Planned For Dinner Dance

The top social events of senior year will occur on Friday and Saturday nights for the Class of 1960.

On Friday night the Senior Prom will be held in the renovated Field House. Music will be supplied by Buddy Morrow and his big band featuring vocalist Jane Taylor.

Theme of Ball

The theme of the prom is to be "The Coronation Ball." Tom McCoy and Jim Foley, co-chairmen of the prom, explained the decorations.

"The foyer of the Field House will be the outside of a castle, while the inside will be the castle itself," McCoy said.

"The center piece will be a crown which we hope to hang from above. A handcut railing will surround the inside of the entire Field House."

Indirect Lighting

"There will be a chandelier in each corner and the two big speakers will be covered by gold and red orbs," McCoy continued. "There will be four lit shields on each side that will alleviate turning the top lights on."

Foley announced that the refreshments will include sandwiches. "This is something entirely new for Villanova," he declared. "We also have favors that will be used for the first time in the country."

In concluding the description of the Field House setup Foley stated that curtains will make a low ceiling, and that the side walls will be draped.

Both dance chairmen singled out the work of Ted Glinka as key to the success of the decorations.

Tickets for the prom may be obtained in the Pie Shoppe.

Dinner Dance

Saturday Night the seniors will journey to the Sheraton Hotel for their dinner dance. According to dance co-chairman Bill Henry there will be a reception in the Pennsylvania room between 5:30 and 6:30. Music will be supplied by Muzak.

A turkey dinner will be served at 6:30. Music for the dancing will be played by the Society band of Eddie Bigham.

"The theme for the dance is "Golden Memories," Henry said. "We believe that it will be as well received as the Junior dinner dance which was so successful."

Senior Class president Ray Rafferty promised the seniors "an unforgettable weekend."

Ex-D.A. Here For Council Forum Tomorrow Nite

The fourth Student Council Forum of the year has been announced for tomorrow evening.

Theodore Smith, noted Philadelphia lawyer and former assistant District Attorney, will be the Forum speaker. He will speak on the general field of civil government and its relationship to the District Attorney's office and to criminal law.

Well Known

Neil Drislane, Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee of the Student Council, declared that "Mr. Smith is well known to the Philadelphia area.

"As both a distinguished public servant and a noted lecturer, he has drawn the attention of a considerable audience to the various problems of civil government and crime prevention."

Eileen Greyson, nursing representative who heads the Forum Planning Committee, added that "Mr. Smith, besides lecturing on law and criminology, is an interesting and excellent speaker on almost any topic".

Board of Lay Trustees Holds 1st Annual Meeting

Villanova University Feb. 2, served as host to nearly two hundred Philadelphia area business, industrial and professional leaders.

The occasion was the first annual Lay Trustees Day.

P. &W. To Rebuild Station

New Station Answers Villanova Expansion

The Pennsylvania and Western Railroad (P & W) has revealed plans for the rebuilding of the Ithan Avenue station.

The announcement was made in response to an inquiry from the Day-Hops relations Committee, under the direction of Jim Hooker, secretary of the Student

The station was abandoned several years ago because of insuffficient use and its proximity to the main station located opposite the chapel.

Pennsylvania and Western is acting on statistics indicating a large enough increase in day-hop enrollment to warrant the re-opening of the station.

The expansion of the campus in the Ithan Avenue area was another factor influencing the company.

Reuschlein Aids In Evaluating N. D. Law School

Dr. Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, will serve as an evaluator for the American Bar Association to the School of Law at Notre Dame University.

The evaluation assists in determining the position of Notre Dame Law School in relation to the other Law Schools affiliated with the Association.

St. Joe's Visit

In announcing his participation in the evaluation committee, Dean Reuschlein also revealed that the Sullivan Pre-Law Society of St. Joseph's College will visit Villanova's Law School on February 19.

The members of the Society will be given a tour of the building and an explanation of academic requirements of the Law School.

The Sullivan Pre-Law Society is named in honor of John J. Sullivan, prominent lawyer and former Consultant to the Villanova Law School.

K. of C. Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the Father Ludwig OSA Council of the Knights of Columbus will be held on February 22nd at 7:45 p.m. in the Ardmore Council, Ardmore.

The meeting is being held at there this month in the hopes that the spirit of fraternity will be promoted to a greater degree

Hooker Answers Editorial About Council Office Hours

Jim Hooker, Student Council Secretary, has spoken out harshly against an editorial which appeared in last week's VILLANOVAN.

The editorial, entitled "No Office Hours," cited Council members' apparent neglect of a recent motion requiring that all representatives hold regular office hours, during which they would be available to their constituents to discuss Council matters.

Trial Period

Hooker contends that the motion as passed by the Council states that office hours shall be established for a trial period of one semester.

"How could we start holding office hours for one semester when the motion wasn't even passed until three quarters of the first semester had elapsed?" Hooker asked.

"The office hours provision was my motion, and I intend to expedite its function this semester," he continued.

"Although five representatives have already been holding office hours successfully the program has not yet been officially established because second semester schedules were not finally settled until last week.

Schedules Settled

"Now that the schedules have been settled, I expect that office hours will commence being held, possibly this week. Some representatives have been inclined to disregard the seriousness of this motion, because they consider it unrealistic. However, the motion was passed, and representatives will be obliged to adhere to scheduled office hours.

"After all, the prestige and success of the entire Council depends on how closely its members carry out its decision and follow the wishes of their constituents."

Maps, Display Case Given To Library

The Villanova Library has recently received several new additions to its collections.

A number of old maps by the renowned Dutch cartographers, William Janszoon Blaeu (1571-1638) and Jan Jansson (1596-1664); and several by the famous German geographers Johan Baptist Homann, Matthias Seutter and Johannes Mellinger, were donated by Mr. Walter J. Fox, class 1942.

The maps range in content from a detail of Thurginia, a defunct politicial division of Germany, to the American Colonies in 1664.

A hand carved display cabinet was donated by Elizabeth De Feo. The cabinet, a work of Mrs. DeFeo herself, is of Irish design and presents a cross on both sides, in honor of Pope John XXIII.

Mrs. De Feo is the daughter of Joseph McGarrity, who bequeathed his collection of Irish literature to the library in 1940.

Wiele Wants to Extend Xmas Holidays

Fred Wiele recently cited several reasons why future Christmas vacations should begin at least three days earlier than they have in the past.

Wiele, senior resident engineering representative, will formally announce his plans in a motion soon to be presented to the Student Council

"Financially," Wiele declared, "Christmas is a very poor season. Students have just about run out of cash and are usually anxious to pick up some extra money by working in the Post Office and other places.

"Another consideration," he continued, " is the fact that many students must travel long distances to their homes. By starting earlier, they would have more time to spend with their families."

Wiele favors beginning the first semester three days earlier, to compensate for time lost at Christmas.

"After all," he said, "very few students work during the last two weeks of the summer vacation. It would be very simple for everyone to return to campus three days earlier."

Wiele was formerly Executive Vice President of Student Government. He resigned at the end of last semester because of outside pressure, and his position was filled by Jack King, formerly head of the Fraternities and Societies Committee.

This Program is designed to develop young, inexperienced men for careers in life insurance sales and sales management. It provides an initial training period of 8½ months (including one month at a Home Office School) before the men move into full sales work.

Those trainees who are interested in and who are found qualified for management responsibility are assured of ample opportunity to move on to such work in either our field offices or in the Home Office after an initial period in sales.

A limited number of attractive opportunities are also available at the Home Office for Actuarial Trainees and Administrative Trainees.

The Connecticut Mutual is a 114-year-old company with 500,000 policyholder-members and over four billion dollars of life insurance in force. Aggressive expansion plans provide unusual opportunities for the limited number of men accepted each year.

IRS Holds European Unity Panel

The International Relations Society of Villanova is planning a faculty discussion on the topic, "Prospects for European Unity —1960."

The program is planned for the evening of February 25th, in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Joe Pultorak, president of the society, said, "We are undertaking what we believe to be a first in this type of production sponsored by a Villanova student organization."

Over WVIL

The discussion, which will be broadcast over WVIL, will be opened with an introductory commentary by Dr. Fritz Nova, faculty moderator of IRS.

The panel, consisting of Dr. Alexander Rudhart, Dr. Henry Rofinot, and Mr. Francis Coghlan, will be moderated by Mr. Thomas J. Mentzer. All are members of the University's Department of History and Political Science.

The topic will be covered from the viewpoints of economics, defense, and U. S. interest, each speaker covering one of these phases.

After the initial speeches, there will be a brief panel discussion followed by a question and answer period open to the audience.

Other Plans

Other IRS plans for the near future include a two hour film to be shown March 3rd entitled, "Report from Africa," narrated by Edward R. Murrow. This function will be open to the entire student body.

In early April, members of the IRS will represent Villanova at the National Conferecne of International Relations Clubs at Harvard University.

Rounding out the April affairs, will be an address to the society by a member of the State Department, and a group trip to Washington, D. C.

"Playboy of Western World" By Theatre Dept. Tomorrow

"The Playboy of the Western World," produced by the Theatre Department and directed by Mr. Richard Duprey, opens tomorrow night in Vasey Hall Auditorium.

This fast-moving satire on Irish country life is the second of the Theatre Department's three productions scheduled for this year.

The play takes place in the county of Mayo, in a small village which has taken under its communal wing as a hero, Christy Mahon, who has "slayed his Da (father) with a loy (spade)."

Christy is played by Owen Klein, a first-year graduate student who spent his undergraduate days at Villanova. Klein was last seen by Villanova audiences as Howie Newsome, the milkman, in "Our Town."

Jeanne Miclot, one of two girls from Clarke College in Iowa who are enrolled in the Theatre Department, has been cast as Pegeen Mike, a lass who has a rather affectionate wing for the lionized Christy.

Dick McIntyre and Bob Germer fill the roles of the two drinking buddies of Michael James.

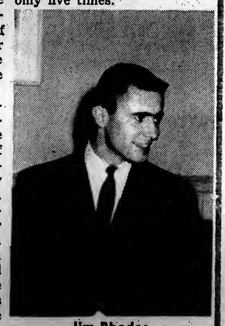
Jim Rhodes—Debator Stars In Many Fields

One student who is not only making a name for himself as a Villanovan but helping to make a name for Villanova, is debator—Jim Rhodes.



A junior mechanical engineer, Jim was an all-around student at Redbank Catholic School; his outstanding achievements were in the fields of debating and oratoricals. He was a member of the varsity debating team for two years. Both of these years Redbank won the state championship.

His exploits in the oratorical circles were just as successful. After becoming state champion in the Voice of Democracy Oratorical Contest, he represented New Jersey in the national finals.

In the line of student government, Jim was a member of the New Jersey Student Congress. While serving in this capacity he was elected president of the Senate. Here at Villanova, Rhodes has maintained his pre-college pace.

In his sophomore year he was elected secretary of his class and at present is serving on the Junior Class Steering Committee, the Spirit Committee, the Pre-Law Society, the Sanctuary Society, A.I.E.E., I.R.E., and the Beta Gamma Debating Society.

Jim's forte is debating. In his freshman year he joined Beta Gamma, and since has become one of V.U.'s finest debators. As a novice he was undefeated and has done almost as well since he stepped up to the varsity. Recently, at the Harvard Tournament, Jim was chosen as the best speaker in a series of eight debates. In approximately nineteen matches, Jim lost only five times.

Jim Rhodes

Since Jim is on a five-year naval program his services will be available for two more years. Along with some of the other top-notch debators in the debating society the future of the debating team looks quite promising.

Upon graduation Jim plans to go to Pensacola, Florida and do his debating in jets. Circumstances permitting, Jim's ultimate goal is to become a patent lawyer.

NFCCS Meets; State Confab Held In Philly

The Fourth Annual State Congress of the National Federation of Catholic College Students to be held in Philadelphia on March 4, 5, and 6, at the Sheraton Hotel will find Catholic Students from over forty colleges congregated to exchange views on matters of common interest.

All Catholic students from Catholic Colleges in Pennsylvania and the Detroit-Cleveland region of N.F.C.C.S., and Newman Club members from colleges in Philadelphia are invited to attend.

Opens Friday

The Congress will open on Friday night, March 4. Registration will be from 1 p.m. until 7 p.m. and the general session will be held at 8:00 p.m. Special sessions for NFCCS delegates and the resolutions committee will be held at 10:30 Friday night.

A Mass will be held at 8:00 a.m. Saturday mornings at the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul, followed by a second general session at 10 a.m.

On Saturday afternoon the congress will break up into small groups arranged so that each student may attend two sessions. Topics at these sessions, which will be in the form of panel, discussions, and seminars, will include "Morality and Greatness", "Conformity in the American Society", "Christian Brotherhood", and "Collegiate Social Problems".

Martin Speaks

Among speakers at the congress will be Bernard Martin of Manhattan College, National President of NFCCS. Dennis Clark, member of the Philadelphia Interracial Council and author of the book "Crisis of the City," and Randolph Wise, Welfare Director of Philadelphia.

Saturday night there will be a banquet at the Sheraton followed by a Social from about 10 p.m. until 12.

The congress will close with a final general session on Sunday morning. Registration fees and banquet, $8; for sessions are as follows: For all sessions only, $3; for banquet only, $5; and for one session only, $1:50.

Accomodations at the Sheraton at special rates are available for those who wish to spend the weekend. More information may be obtained from NFCCS delegates Dave Doyle and Gene Felch, Publicity Representative, Jim Seiler, Tom Hoffman, and the president of each class.

NFS Grants Biology Prof $10,000 For Leaf Research

Dr. Roman Maksymowych, instructor in the Biology Department, has received a $10,000 grant from the National Science Foundation.

The allotment will be used over the next two year period for the study of Cell Division and Tissue Differentiation During Leaf Development.

Leaf Study

A native of Kaminka, West Ukraine, Maksymowych said that he will employ the quantitative analysis technique in his leaf study; an approach he believes has never been tried before.

"In previous studies of the leaf, scholars have concentrated on but one stage of development", he explained, "however I will trace the development of the leaf from its earliest beginnings to its final maturity.

"'As far as I know this is the first time such a complete study has ever been made of the leaf."

The 36 year-old instructor owns a Matura Degree from the St. Andrew's Gymnasium in Innsbruck, Austria; a Master of Science degree from the University of Pennsylvania's Botany Department and last year attained his Ph.D from the latter university.

Taught at Penn

At Pennsylvania he served as a Research Assistant in Botany, Laboratory Instructor in General Biology, and an Assistant Instructor in Biology.

Maksymowych elaborated somewhat on his plans for his project.

"Of course most of the funds will be used for photographic microphotographic equipment, calculating materials and incubators.

The professor expressed his anticipation of finally moving into the new science building next year where he said his work will be greatly facilitated.

"We are quite cramped in our present quarters," he commented. 'In the new science building we will have a greenhouse to conduct our experiments and for the students' use."

Extends Thesis

The project of Leaf Development is a continuation of Maksymowych's doctorate thesis "Quantitive Analysis of Leaf Development in anthium italicum Moretti", for which he has received 25 requests for reprints from Europe and America.

He also has written an article for the American Journal of Botany last year and will have another one published by the "Journal" this year.

Lunch, Anyone?

Mock Convention

The story on page one about the prospect of a mock political convention to be held after Easter is pregnant with implications. Thus far, it's only a vague vision in the heads of the student organization behind the idea. It could evolve into an authentic educational spectacular.

Every four years, at election time, many of the larger schools (even some small ones) leap bodily into newspaper headlines by conducting such affairs. Second only to a number six basketball team, this could very well be the top public relations opportunity of the semester.

If the project ever does materialize, the publicity potential would be secondary, of course. But it shouldn't be minimized. Here would be a chance for the Villanova masses to direct their unbridled energy toward something besides Madison Square Garden incidents.

Of p r i m a r y consideration, however, would be the educational value of it all. For a great number of students, this marks the first presidential election in which they can cast their ballots.

Practical experience in a simulated political convention as envisioned by the Villanova I.C.G., the sponsoring group, could provide solid background for an initial suffrage attempt.

As Larry Ruth, president of I.C.G. says: "Success of the idea rests on displays of favorable interest by the student body between now and convention time."

Student respose will loom as a significant factor, but it doesn't end there. Chances for the convention's success will also depend largely on faculty assistance. It's hoped that the political science faculty will endorse the project as far as it is able.

A positive program of support, if adopted by the department, might even awaken the general student to the fact that this is a rather important year in the national political scene. The Student Council could lend invaluable support to the project if it so resolved.

So the advantages seem to be two-fold: great educational value; and splendid public relations for the University.

Ex-DA Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening the Student Council presents its fourth forum of the year. Its last one, with Rev. John A. Klekotka, president, drew one of the largest audiences ever to attend an undergraduate project of this nature.

The Council was raised a great deal in the estimation of faculty member and student alike by the popularity and effectiveness of that venture.

Tomorrow's forum promises to be equally impressive, since the Academic Affairs Committee under Neil Drislane has contacted the noted Philadelphia lawyer and former assistant District Attorney, Theodore Smith. The speaker will discuss the general field of civil government and its relationship to the District Attorney's office and to criminal law.

Besides an uncanny ability to lecture on law and criminology, Smith is equally at home with a variety of unrelated but pertinant topics.

The forum program has been a bright spot in the Council's itinerary this semester, and it has yet to score a miss on the quality of speakers it has secured.

Theodore Smith should be no exception.

Impressions of Council Meeting

By TOM TROY

During the "Fabulous Fifties," a recent television program, Henry Fonda, co-narrator of the show, produced some facts and figures which demonstrated beyond a doubt that in the past decade more Americans than ever before PARTICIPATED.

It didn't make too much difference what they participated IN, so long as they acted, and weren't more spectators. A fantastic numbers of Americans played tennis, golf; built hi-fi sets; bowled; constructed their own sports cars; skied; engaged in underwater fishing; painted; made furniture. You name it — they did it.

For several years now I've been urged, directly and indirectly, to participate in student council affairs; attend a council meeting and see what goes on.

Well, last Wednesday, I decided to end my passivety. and I did attend a meeting. The following remarks are taken from notes I made at the meeting. They convey the impressions I received.

Council Too Big

The first thing I noted was that the Council seems to be far too large. It's nice to be democratic, I know, but the Council's so democratic it's almost unwieldy.

It's hyperbolic to say so, but I was immediately reminded of a speech Hitler made once when he sardonically criticized the Weimar Republic: "The workers have a party, so the employers have to have a party; the landlords have a party, so the renters need a party; etc." To a lesser extent, this situation exists in our Council. I think it should be remedied.

Something else I noted was the lack of manners of many Council members. Often when a chairman of a committee was making a report other members engaged themselves in very l o u d private conversations. This was particularly noticable when Ken Kraemer made his report on academic affairs.

Time Wasted

An observation that one can't fail to make is that the C o u n c i l spends (perhaps wastes is a better word) too much time on what is actually trivia.

Some of the members seem to realiaze this: Tom Hoffman reprimanded the Council for spending half an hour debating whether or not one motion should be split into two; when Jim Hooker proudly announced that the P&W officials are going to make a fieldhouse station a regular stop, there was a hollow mocking cheer.

A fourth thing that struck me was the rather pompous attitude many members assume. Andy Griffith would call them high falutin! Somebody (Bob DeLisa, I think) referred to the little setto in the Garden as the "Manhattan Incident" Thereafer, this phrase was repeated several times, each time in a more euphuistic manner.

By the end of the evening, the Council was speaking of the "Manhattan Incident" as an Indian agent would speak of the Chivington River "incident" or a diplomat, the Munich "incident."

The Student Council is a necessary body. Some of its achievements have been noteworthy. But last week this body accomplished very little, mainly, I think, because too many members went to the meeting solely to hear themselves talk.

This is an unfortunate situation, but it does provide one thing—entertainment.

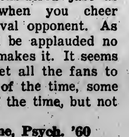
Question: What do you think of the "loyalty" displayed by the Big Five basketball fans in cheering for out-of-town teams instead of the local team?

I do not believe that I have any obligation of lovalty, as such, to any team other than Villanova. A Big Five team is just as much an opponent as any visiting team; in fact, an even greater one. The courtesy that might be expected is overshadowed by the tremendous traditional rivalry among the clubs. How can it be expected that any Villanova student would cheer for St. Joe's or any of the others under this condition of rivalry?

Dave Breen, Elect. Engr. '61



At first I thought this attitude of cheering out-of-town teams at the expense of the local Big Five schools was a good idea. But after hearing Bill Campbell, the local sportscaster, I realize that such an attitude is immature and unsportsmanlike. I can honestly say that I was embarrassed after hearing the criticism that Mr. Campbell made of our display of conduct. I don't think we should cheer vehemently for a team like St. Joe's or LaSalle, but if there must be a choice, then our cheering should be directed towards the local team.

John Isselmann, Soc. Studies '60

I don't think it would ever be so easy to cheer for rival teams. But with regard to the opponents of our city teams, it is surely not good sportsmanship to cheer for them, and against the home town team. But, then again, if you call this unsportsmanlike, then it would be considered just as much so when you cheer against a rival opponent. As I see it, a good play should be applauded no matter what player or team makes it. It seems to hold true that you can get all the fans to follow the golden rule some of the time, some of the fans to follow it all of the time, but not all of them all of the time.

Fred Stabene, Psych. '60

Apparently this question was prompted by Bill Campbell's blast at the Villanova fans' cheering against LaSalle and St. Joe's at recent games. I might say that this cheering stems from the fact that it was first started by LaSalle against Villanova when Duquesne played Villanova and Temple played Villanova. Also, it was noticable that the St. Joe's fans had anti-Villanova banners at Saturday night's game, and yet they were not even playing us. So, let's not be too hasty in placing all the blame on Villanova.

Russ Dodge, History '60

A student has a duty to be loyal to his school, not the locality. A good percentage of Villanovans are not from the Philadelphia area, nor even from Pennsylvania. Therefore, what loyalty is involved need not be directed to the other area schools, but only to the one which you are attending; which in our case is Villanova. Besides, the other four city schools are considered as being traditional rivals—and why cheer for rivals?

"The Connection" Connects

by tony macklin

"This doesn't sound like much bait for your readers, but then I am not a fish," cracked hipster playwright Jack Gelber as he closed out our interview.

Though Gelber is not a "fish" his audience is left fishlike (gulping for air, like fish out of water) at the end of his play "The Connection." This after two hours of wriggling at the end of needle-stab effects.

In an off-Broadway theatre in Grenwich Village, New York, this 27 year old writer, with the aid of a brilliant directress, a superb jazz quartet, and a group of uncanny actors, has created theatre devastation.

Gelber, a refugee from the journalism school of the University of Illinois, has written a unique and paralyzing jazz play about drug addiction.

He destroys the imaginary fourth wall about as much as it can possibly be destroyed. And what takes place on the stage of the Living Theatre has the effect of a furnace, with wave after wave of heat striking the audience.

Tiny Theatre

As one enters the tiny theatre he is faced by an uncurtained stage upon which a motley group of men are milling aimlessly and stretching dumbly.

The stage is set as a "pad" and these men are waiting for their connection, someone named Cowboy, who is bringing them each a fix of heroin. The lethargic addicts are to cooperate with the playwright who will give them money to obtain the "snow." A producer and two camera men are going to take avant-garde films.

Each of the characters talks, improvising in his turn. The jazz musicians also break into the play with improvisations.

Finally the Cowboy arrives and each man in turn goes off stage into the bathroom to get his fix. One of them (Leach) can't feel it and demands another shot.

Almost Fatal

This time it almost kills him. The playwright also is struck down brutally by the heroin as he tries it for the first time.

Leach's fix is on stage. This scene diminishes the audience for it is a jolter; with the addicts reacting to the dope; weaving, slobbering, rolling, moaning. In fact, the night we went the play lost a quarter of its audience before it was over.

"The Connection" is a gruelling, fearsome, splitting evening. It ping pongs the emotions and senses of the audience. It stamps on them.

The real value of "The Connection" is as an experience. The atmosphere and mood are over powering. Every throb, and groan, and curse, of the gloom of the junkies has been captured.

From "The Connection"

The live jazz on stage of Jackie McLean's quartet also adds immeasurably to the effect of the play. It keeps it stewing.

The acting is uniformly great.

Gelber uses the language of jazz, of the hipster.

He shatters the fourth wall by having his characters address the audience directly, and by having the playwright, producer, and camera men travel down the aisle.

A voice in the audience keeps remarking, "that's the way it really is." At intermission one of the actors, Sam, a huge Negro, approaches members of the audience in the lobby looking for a handout, just as he said he would during the first act.

Favorable Reaction

Another reason for the play's generally favorable critical reception is that it is not just a pretentious diatribe.

A prime example of Gelber's thought is in the lines of Cowboy: "What's wrong with day jobs. Or being square. Man, I haven't anything against them. There are lousy hipsters and lousy squares. Personally I couldn't make the daily work scene. I like my hours as they are. But it doesn't make me any better."

But then again, if the "cats" are hooked on heroin, the "squares" are hooked on commerciality—aspirin, chlorophyll, etc.

About his writing, Gelber told us "I write what I must and if something comes of it . . . then that's all very warming. So far I have failed miserably with everything else (other than "The Connection")."

Difficult Task

It seems that it will be very difficult for Gelber to equal "The Connection" in the future. Perhaps he will try to change his mood. It seems a repeat will not be successful. It will be interesting to see what does happen to him, to see how strong his writing is.

One thing is certain, "The Connection' will not be easily forgotten by anyone who has seen it.

Like all the other critics who stated their opinions in terms of physical reaction we were struck too. Probably to a greater degree.

It hit us like a punch in the mouth. We went back to the hotel and just sat, without thinking. That came later.

As of now "The Connection" is the freshest, most honest, hardest hitting play of 1950-60.

Senior Prom Deserves Student Support

by natalie attired

The students will suffer (and rightly so, if there are any more uncalled-for fistcuffs) by the erection of a mile-high cyclone fence around the quadrangle.

For those boys who were late in registering, there is still one course open: History of Nursing II.

Underclassmen are amazed by the seriousness of the seniors. The s t i f f, determined walk; the eyes straight ahead; sitting erect in class. Never fear, these men are not out to increase a n y o n e ' s academic standings; they are busily preparing for the senior weekend. Since this is the last, there is no room for mistakes.

Choice Positions Open

Seniors should take special notice at the Placement Office. There are several choice positions now open, and interviews are being scheduled:

1.) Referee for the Madison Square Garden (N.I.T.).

2.) An M.C. for a night time television show (high principles desired).

With the appearance of the excessive amount of foliage on campus, it is our guess that the Administration is planning an all-out blast for Arbor Day.

Ten Month's Work

"I don't know if I can make the meeting that night; I have to study for a final." Well, Tom McCoy came to the meeting and with Jim Foley and myself began to plan for the Senior Prom.

That was ten months ago. Now the fruits of that first meeting and some 12 other meetings with some 17 other seniors are being seen and, we certainly hope, appreciated.

"They took the job," That's the reply we receive from students when we asked if they realized the amount of work that goes into the organizing of a dance of that calibre.

That is perfectly right: they did take the job willingly—but why they did is very important. They agreed to organize a class dance for the CLASS of which they are members.

Everyone has r e m a r k e d about the terrific job done on publicity for this event, the novel patrons, and the selection of the Buddy Morrow orchestra.

An anlysis of these preparations would clearly indicate that much time, effort and taste have been incorporated into the affair. In view of this, we feel that, like it or not, the members of the class have an obligation to support the finished product.

In Politics, It's The Man Not The Party That Counts

by mike donahue

In the congressional election of 1958, forty-eight million Americans expressed extreme disfavor with Republican Party rule as they elected enough Democratic senators and representatives to give the Democratic party a large majority in both houses. But not only one year later, results from the Gallup Poll and the Institute for Public Research poll indicated that the popularity of President Dwight D. Eisenhower nominally the greatest Republican, was greater than ever.

This political paradox—that the Party suffered a marked decline in prominence and influence while the head of the Party was unaffected—is perhaps explained by carefully examining the public concept of the President.

The public see Mr. Eisenhower, not as the representative of a party or of a policy, but rather as in individual, as a "personality". Some of the characteristics of this personality embody what amount to supra-political qualities. He is a symbol of what the American public considers virtue; virtue which they completely dissociate from the realm of politics.

President no Politician

To them the world of politics is, at best a world of disharmony, inconsistency, and expediency; at worst, a world of greed, corruption, and scandal. His unassailable qualities of simplicity and idealism could not exist in such a world. Thus, they consider him to be above politics—a consideration which apparently is appreciated by the President. On more than one occasion he has stated characteristically, "I'm no politican".

This straight-forward approach, along with his warmth, earnestness, and his friendliness, leaves little doubt of his sincerity in the minds of American citizens. For they judge a man's sincerity by the visible earnestness he exhibits in presenting his opinions and ideas. Mr. Eisenhower exhibits just such a fervor when he makes explicit whatever is in his mind.

Public Accepts Ideas

The President's individualism is manifested in many ways: It can be seen in his concern for the welfare of individuals rather than the welfare of social groups. It is evident in his expression of much worn laissezfaire theories by which an individual, be he a member of a social, an economic, or political group, should be left alone to handle his own affairs without any interference.

In political affairs, though, he shows another type of individualism, a more subtle type perhaps, but a type that goes to the heart of the American attitude toward politics.

He has stated time and again that the most important quality of any man running for public office is not his political affiliation but rather his motives and his individual characteristics.

He has also expressed dislike for the political forms themselves. Here he has manifested his classic American individualism by maintaining an attitude of detachment from practical politics. His theory has come to be accepted by so many Americans that it has been said thatMr. Eisenhower's "aboveness" might well be the reason for the wide popularity gulf between Mr. Eisenhower and his party.

Theories Very Conservative

His dynamically conservative political theories, though intrinsically sound, are contradictory in practice. He advances the theory tha policies and ideas should not be relied upon, but rather that implicit trust should be placed in the Chief Executive as a man, not as a politican.

He says that the complexity of the American political system prevents development of political philosophies. This complexity must be simplified. But his theory is unsound and impracticable. He does not seem to recognize the fact that only through the very complexity of politics, which he shuns, can his ideas be promulgated. Because he fails to recognize this salient fact, he maintains an unfortunately consistent "aboveness", This is, he not only dissociated himself from unpopular Republicans and disliked subordinates, but he also detaches himself from his closest political allies, who unreservedly back his every word and action.

Because of his oversight in this matter, what he is actually doing is broadening the image of supra-politician in the eyes of the people. At the same time, however, he is widening the gulf between himself and his party.

Mock Convention

The story on page one about the prospect of a mock political convention to be held after Easter is pregnant with implications. Thus far, it's only a vague vision in the heads of the student organization behind the idea. It could evolve into an authentic educational spectacular.

In Politics, It's The Man Not The Party That Counts

by mike donahue

In the congressional election of 1958, forty-eight million Americans expressed extreme disfavor with Republican Party rule as they elected enough Democratic senators and representatives to give the Democratic party a large majority in both houses. But not only one year later, results from the Gallup Poll and the Institute for Public Research poll indicated that the popularity of President Dwight D. Eisenhower nominally the greatest Republican, was greater than ever.

This political paradox—that the Party suffered a marked decline in prominence and influence while the head of the Party was unaffected—is perhaps explained by carefully examining the public concept of the President.

The public see Mr. Eisenhower, not as the representative of a party or of a policy, but rather as in individual, as a "personality". Some of the characteristics of this personality embody what amount to supraplitical qualities. He is a symbol of what the American public considers virtue; virtue which they completely dissociate from the realm of politics.

President no Politician

To them the world of politics is, at best a world of disharmony, inconsistency, and expediency; at worst, a world of greed, corruption, and scandal. His unassailable qualities of simplicity and idealism could not exist in such a world. Thus, they consider him to be above politics—a consideration which apparently is appreciated by the President. On more than one occasion he has stated characteristically, "I'm no politican".

This straight-forward approach, along with his warmth, earnestness, and his friendliness, leaves little doubt of his sincerity in the minds of American citizens. For they judge a man's sincerity by the visible earnestness he exhibits in presenting his opinions and ideas. Mr. Eisenhower exhibits just such a fervor when he makes explicit whatever is in his mind.

Public Accepts Ideas

The President's individualism is manifested in many ways: It can be seen in his concern for the welfare of individuals rather than the welfare of social groups. It is evident in his expression of much worn laissezfaire theories by which an individual, be he a member of a social, an economic, or political group, should be left alone to handle his own affairs without any interference.

In political affairs, though, he shows another type of individualism, a more subtle type perhaps, but a type that goes to the heart of the American attitude toward politics.

He has stated time and again that the most important quality of any man running for public office is not his political affiliation but rather his motives and his individual characteristics.

He has also expressed dislike for the political forms themselves. Here he has manifested his classic American individualism by maintaining an attitude of detachment from practical politics. His theory has come to be accepted by so many Americans that it has been said thatMr. Eisenhower's "aboveness" might well be the reason for the wide popularity gulf between Mr. Eisenhower and his party.

Theories Very Conservative

His dynamically conservative political theories, though intrinsically sound, are contradictory in practice. He advances the theory tha policies and ideas should not be relied upon, but rather that implicit trust should be placed in the Chief Executive as a man, not as a politican.

He says that the complexity of the American political system prevents development of political philosophies. This complexity must be simplified. But his theory is unsound and impracticable. He does not seem to recognize the fact that only through the very complexity of politics, which he shuns, can his ideas be promulgated. Because he fails to recognize this salient fact, he maintains an unfortunately consistent "aboveness". This is, he not only dissociated himself from unpopular Republicans and disliked subordinates, but he also detaches himself from his closest political allies, who unreservedly back his every word and action.

Because of his oversight in this matter, what he is actually doing is broadening the image of supraplitician in the eyes of the people. At the same time, however, he is widening the gulf between himself and his party.

Senior Prom Deserves Student Support

by natalic attired

The students will suffer (and rightly so, if there are any more uncalled-for fistcuffs) by the erection of a mile-high cyclone fence around the quadrangle.

For those boys who were late in registering, there is still one course open: History of Nursing II.

Underclassmen are amazed by the seriousness of the seniors. The stiff, determined walk; the eyes straight ahead; sitting erect in class. Never fear, these men are not out to increase anyone's academic standings; they are busily preparing for the senior weekend. Since this is the last, there is no room for mistakes.

Choice Positions Open

Seniors should take special notice at the Placement Office. There are several choice positions now open, and interviews are being scheduled:

1.) Referee for the Madison Square Garden (N.I.T.).

2.) An M.C. for a night time television show (high principles desired).

With the appearance of the excessive amount of foliage on campus, it is our guess that the Administration is planning an all-out blast for Arbor Day.

Ten Month's Work

"I don't know if I can make the meeting that night; I have to study for a final." Well, Tom McCoy came to the meeting and with Jim Foley and myself began to plan for the Senior Prom.

That was ten months ago. Now the fruits of that first meeting and some 12 other meetings with some 17 other seniors are being seen and, we certainly hope, appreciated.

"They took the job," That's the reply we receive from students when we asked if they realized the amount of work that goes into the organizing of a dance of that calibre.

That is perfectly right: they did take the job willingly—but why they did is very important. They agreed to organize a class dance for the CLASS of which they are members.

Everyone has remarked about the terrific job done on publicity for this event, the novel patrons, and the selection of the Buddy Morrow orchestra.

An anlysis of these preparations would clearly indicate that much time, effort and taste have been incorporated into the affair. In view of this, we feel that, like it or not, the members of the class have an obligation to support the finished product.

THE THUNDERING MARCH OF PROGRESS

Today, as everyone knows, is the forty-sixth anniversary of the founding of Gransmire College for Women, which, as everyone knows, was the first Progressive Education college in the United States.

Well do I recollect the tizzy in the academic world when Gransmire opened its portals! What a buzz there was, what a brouhaha in faculty common rooms, what a rattling of teacups, when Dr. Agnes Thudd Sigafoos, first president of Gransmire, lifted her learned old head and announced defiantly, "We will teach the student, not the course. There will be no marks, no exams, no requirements. This, by George, is Progressive Education!"

Well sir, forward-looking maidens all over the country cast off their fetters and came rushing to New Hampshire to enroll at Gransmire. Here they found freedom. They broadened their vistas. They lengthened their horizons. They unstopped their bottled personalities. They roamed the campus in togas, leading ocelots on leashes.

And, of course, they smoked Marlboro cigarettes. (I say, "Of course." Why do I say, "Of course"? I say, "Of course" because it is a matter of course that anyone in search of freedom should naturally turn to Marlboro, for Marlboro is the smoke that sets the spirit soaring, that unyokes the captive soul, that fills the air with the murmur of wings. If you think flavor went out when filters came in—try Marlboro. They are sold in soft pack or flip-top box wherever freedom rings.)

But all was not Marlboro and ocelets for the girls of Gransmire. There was work and study too—not in the ordinary sense, to be sure, for there were no formal classes. Instead there was a broad approach to enlarging each girl's potentials, both mental and physical.

Take, for example, the course called B.M.S. (Basic Motor Skills). B.M.S. was divided into L.D. (Lying Down), S.U. (Standing Up) and W. (Walking). Once the student had mastered L.D. and S.U., she was taught to W.—but not just to W. any old way! No, sir! She was taught to W. with poise, dignity, bearing! To inculcate a sense of balance in the girl, she began her exercises by walking with a suitcase in each hand. (One girl, Mary Ellen Dorgenicht, got so good at it that today she is bell captain at the Deshler-Hilton Hotel in Columbus, Ohio.)

It was quite an impressive sight---

When the girls had walking under their belts, they were allowed to dance. Again no formality was imposed. They were simply told to fling themselves about in any way their impulses dictated, and, believe you me, it was quite an impressive sight to see them go bounding into the woods with their togas flying. (Several later joined the U.S. Forestry Service.)

There was also a lot of finger painting and sculpture with coat hangers and like that, and soon the fresh wind of Progressivism came whistling out of Gransmire to blow the ancient dust of pedantry off curricula everywhere, and today, thanks to the pioneers at Gransmire, we are all free.

If you are ever in New Hampshire, be sure to visit the Gransmire campus. It is now a tannery.

"Greenwillow" Reviewed

Loesser Musical Seen A Hit

by stan gogol

It would be unfair to compare "Greenwillow" with "Plain or Fancy" or "Brigadoon" as some of the local critics have done, for, although it contains some elements in common with these two shows, it is far above them. It proves to be a treat to the eyes, to the ears and to the heart.

The story is based on a novel of the same name written by B. J. Chute which lends itself delightfully to musical adaption. Its main plot deals with the supposedly inherited curse of the Briggs family of Greenwillow which causes the eldest son to the family to succomb to wanderlust. As a result, the next victim of the curse refuses to marry his sweetheart for fear to having to leave her.

Minor plots involving the grandmother's attempts to secure a cow from the village miser (one of her former beaus) and the conflict of two ministers (one who preaches hell and damnation, the other sweetness and light) form the comedy elements of the plot.

Story and Music Good

The show has a number of good things running in its favor besides its good story. One of these is the beautiful and at times haunting musical score of Frank Loesser. A number of the songs look like all time standard material even at this early stage of the shows run. Chief among these are a beautiful ballad called "Summertime Love" and an inspirational item entitled "The Music of Home". These are but two of some twenty numbers in the show.

Another is what can be best described as instant scenery. Against a background of swishing greenwillows, sets wisk in and out in a matter of seconds. This helps in keeping the story moving and meaningful without any outside distractions sometimes required to cover scene changes.

The choreography is confined mostly to a few country dances at first but a delightful twist is done on the Halloween ballet idea as the youngest Briggs goes to see the Devil. But perhaps the biggest asset to the show is its perfect casting. It seems as if the parts were written expressly for their players.

Tony Perkins . . . stars in first musical.

Perkins Stars

Tony Perkins has the starring honors in his first attempt at a musical role. He brings just the proper touch of mystical detachment to the character of the eldest Briggs boy and a surprisingly good voice to man of his songs. The role calls for some dramatic ability and Perkins is of course primarily a dramatic actor of high standing for someone so young.

Most of the comedy burden is handled more than adequately by Pert Kelton as the Grandma. William Chapman brings just the proper touch to the difficult role of Preacher Lapp with a brilliant voice as well.

Musical Apparent Success

Pretty, 18 year old Zeme North makes a sparkling debut as a featured player in the role of Perkins girlfriend. She also had quite an impact on the younger, male members of the audience.

Perhaps the biggest surprise is veteran actor Cecil Kellaway. His portrayal of a kindly minister who keeps kittens in his pulpit and is glad that there's a devil so he can blame somebody else for his mistakes is purely delightful. So what if if his singing voice is a little weak, he makes up for that little fault with all the fun he looks like he's having.

In short, "Greenwillow" is one of the best musicals to hit Philly for a long time. In its tryout run in the next three months it should clear up its minor defects to find satisfactiontion with the New York critics.

Belle Masque Will Present "Crucible" By Arthur Miller

Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" will be Belle Masque's Annual spring production, according to Link Hallowell, president of the dramatic society.

Miller's play has a 17th century Puritan New England background. It treats of witch trials and was occasioned by the late Senator Joseph McCarthy's widely publicized "witch hunts" of 1954.

Duprey Directs

As in the past Richard Duprey, head of the graduate theatre department, will direct the Belle Masque production, which will be presented March 23, 24, 25, 26, and 27 in the Field House.

"However," Hallowell pointed out, "Mr. Duprey will not be able to devote full time to the Belle Masque show until after the conclusion of the graduate students production of "Playboy of the Western World". John Millington Synge's comedy starts tomorrow night and runs through Sunday night. Hence formal rehearsal for Belle Masque will start next week.

The cast, according to Duprey, has "more potential" than any he has ever directed before.

The leading roles will be played by Tony Provenzano, senior C&F, John Milton, Mary Shaffer, junior English major at Immaculata, and Cathy Crane of Rosemont.

Captain Role

Provenzano, who played the cowardly captain role in "The Bonds of Interest", will portray John Proctor. Milton, who also appeared in "Bonds of Interest" will portray Mr. Hale.

Miss Shaeffer, will take the part of Elizabeth Proctor in Miller's melodrama. She has appeared in past Belle Masque productions, the most recent being "Inspector General" last spring.

"Exciting Production"

Miss Crane, a history major will be seen in the role of Abigail.

In Hallowell's words the upcoming production is "an exciting, serious melodrama which deals with modern problems".

Philosophy Prof On Lecture Tour

Dr. Andrew J. O'Conner of the Philosophy Department has recently returned from delivering a series of lectures in the St. Thomas More Institute and in the Department of Comparative Religions at the University of Montreal.

The first series of lecures were addressed to a class in Seventeenth Century Thought.

Lecture Points

Dr. O'Conner emphasized two points in these lectures: the philosophic significance of the new Physics of that age, and the reaction of Descartes, Hobbes, Locke, and Spinoza to these theories which refuted the Aristotleian notion of Mechanics.

The second group of lectures were delivered in French to the Department of Comparative Religions at Montreal. O'Conner discussed the dogmas and rituals of Islam. He also analyzed the conflicts between faith and reason in Islam.

Villanova Debators Split At Harvard

Jim Rhodes, (Junior Engineer) and Frank Murtha (Senior English) represented Villanova in the Harvard Invitational Tournament on Feb. 4,5,6.

The Harvard tournament is the largest contest of this type in the country and, this year, played host to ninety-two teams from seventy-seven colleges in thirty states.

Top Teams

Some of the best teams in the country competed. Instead of the teams debating either all positive or negative positions, they were required to debate both sides alternately.

Villanova, debating the proposition: "Resolved: that Congress should be given the power to reverse decisions of the Supreme Court", managed to achieve a 4-4 record, not qualifying for the quarter finals.

The teams beaten at this level were Hofstra, Lehigh, Randolph, Macon, and Suffolk. The teams defeating Villanova were Chicago, St. John's Loyola, and the University of Texas.

One judge stated that the competition between Villanova and the University of Texas was the best he had seen all year, and Frank Murtha expressed considerable surprise at the "Chicago" decision.

He says "the Chicago rebuttal of the Villanova Affirmative appeared obviously insufficient." This was the only affirmative debate the team lost.

Rhodes High

As invidual contestants, Jim Rhodes won 295 points, missing being one of the ten best speakers by 10 points, and Frank Murtha won 266. All told, the team finished 20th of the 82 teams.

Meanwhile, Joseph Liggera, sophomore arts, and Tom Pfeiffer, senior chemistry, were debating on the Johns Hopkins Tourney.

They compiled a 3-3 record, and finished 18th out of 46 teams. They defeated such teams as Brown U., Boston U., and Monmouth College. Defeats were dealt by George Washington, Duquesne and Hamilton. Duquesne and Hamilton finished third and fourth respectively.

Swimmers Win Over Seton Hall

by Gene Hewitt

With Co-Captain Frank Keefe leading the way with a double win in the 200 yard individual medley and 100 yard freestyle, the varsity swimmers toyed with hapless Seton Hall last Saturday afternoon to notch their fourth win.

Win 10 of 11

The Villanova Mermen produced 10 winners in eleven events with only Tom Clark of Seton Hall able to eke out a first place over Danny O'Brien in the 200 yard Butterfly.

New Records

Besides giving the 'Cats a wild workout the meet produced two other achievements. The 400 yard freestyle relay of Ed Jensen, Frank Dunn, Bob Donahue and Don Boemcke chopped 4.4 seconds off the record set by them a month ago against N.Y.U. as they finished in 3:44.3. The other achievement was performed by Joe Bruno the senior manager as he propelled his rotund figure through the waves in his first and last swimming appearance, in the 100 yard freestyle. He negotiated the distance in 1:23.6 setting a new record for swimming team managers. However, after keeping up with the leaders for a while he faded in the last 90 yards to finish last.

Don Boemcke continued his fine swimming as he sped to an early lead and led teammate Mike Gleason to the finish line in the 220 yard freestyle. Ed Jensen and Bob Donahue swept the 50 yard freestyle in easy fashion. From the one meter board George Robertson dove to a first place quite handily. The 440 yard freestyle saw Gerry Piccaro and Bruce McCready sweep first and second by almost 75 yards.

Upset

Matt Mone sprinted in the last lap to edge teammate Brian Reilly for the first time this season in the 200 yard breastroke. Don (Swifty) Reed took first place in the 200 yard backstroke.

LaSalle

The Explorers of LaSalle led by double winner in Bob Machusik who took the 50 and 100 yard freestyle gave the charges of Ed Geisz their fifth loss of the season on February 17th.

The Wildcats swam their best times of the season but LaSalle always seemed to just pull ahead in the final five yards to touch out a win. Don Boemcke almost broke a record of 20 years standing as he led all the way in the 220 yard freestyle with the time of 2:21.0 only .9 of a second off the varsity record. The natadors only garnered one other first place and that in the 400 yard freestyle relay. Ed Jensen who took second in the 50 yard freestyle. Bill Cassin, Frank Dunn, a third place finisher in the 220 yard freestyle and Boemcke composed the freestyle relay. Don Reed took second in the 200 yard individual medley and third in the 200 yard backstroke, George Robertson took second in the dive and Jerry Piccarro second in the 440 yard freestyle.

The Bullets of Gettysburg proved to be blanks as the varsity submerged them to the tune of 66-29 on February 6th at the Field House pool. The denizens of the Villanova chlorine pit took 9 of 11 events to amass their 66 points. The medley relay team of John Foley, Brian Reilly, Dan O'Brien and Bill Cassin led their Gettysburg counter parts all the way to win by 25 yards.

Sweeping first and second in the 220 yard freestyle, Don Boemcke led Frank Dunn all the way. Boemcke also added another win in the 100 yard freestyle with Jensen finishing second.

Don Reed became a double winner as he took both the 200 yard individual medley and 200 yard backstroke, Ed Jensen and Bob Donahue gathered the laurels in the 50 yard freestyle as they finished first and second respectively.

Captain Frank Keefe took two second places the first in the 200 yard butterfly as he finished behind Bob Dow. George Robertson added still another win to the list as he again won the one meter dive. Jerry Piccarro, a fine swimmer, who suddenly blossomed into a good distance man in the middle of the year won quite easily in the 400 yard freestyle to round out the scoring for the mermen.

This Saturday, February 20th, once again Villanova will play host to the National Catholic Interscholastic Swim Meet. Under the direction of Ed Geisz and Jack Lumsden the meet this year will list the largest field ever assembled for this meet. This all trophy meet attracts the finest high school swimmers in the country and always provides fine watching. The trial heats are in the afternoon with the finals at 8 o'clock that night.

Kittens Split With St. Joe, Temple

by John Duffy

The Villanova freshmen split even in two games last week, whipping Temple 94-87 and losing to St. Joseph's in the Field House, 64-61.

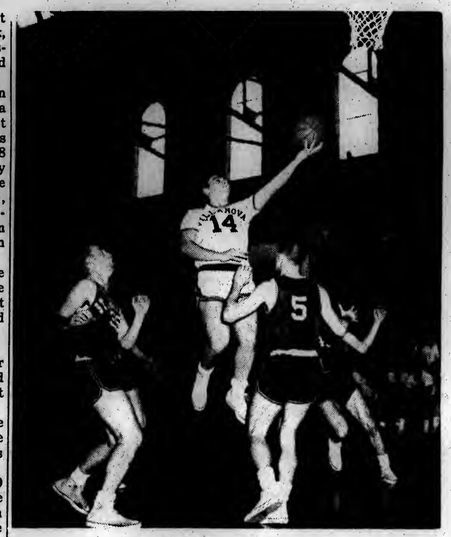
The Temple game played on the Owls' court was Villanova all the way. All five Wildcat starters were in double figures led by Tommy Galia with 28 points. Only a late spurt by Temple kept the score as close as it was. Barnie Chavis (21), Tom Hoover (15), Richie Richman (14), and Jimmy O'Brien (11) were all instrumental in the team's victory.

The reserve strength of Joe Quinn, Walt Stoats, Freddie Smith, and Tom Cassidy kept the pressure on the outclassed Owls the whole way.

Rose and Kasmer Pace Owls

Billy Rose and Dick Kasmer kept the Owls close with 23 and 22 points apiece, but it was not nearly sufficient.

On Thursday afternoon the Wildcats were beaten for the second time by St. Joseph's Hawklets.



The Cats hopped off to a 5-0 lead but couldn't hold it. The lead seesawed back and forth during the first half with the Cats going to the dressing room with a 32-31 lead.

The second half was all St. Joe's though as 6-5 Tom Wynne asserted himself if under both boards in addition to flipping in many pivot shots. His all-around antics powered the Hawklets to a 64-61 win.

Wynne a Winners for Hawklets

The most impressive Wildkitten was the not so docile Hoover. The largest Wildcat of them all posed a constant threat to St. Joe's deadeyes, Jim Lynam and Billy Hoy. Hoover awed the partisan crowd with his defensive powers, a la Bill Russell.

The Cats scoring was again paced by Galia who fired in 23 markers. Galia received offensive assistance from Chavis and O'Brien.

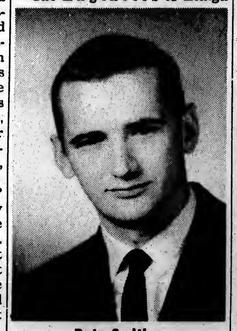
Hockey Club Has A Goal: To Be Recognized By School

by Hank Schultz

Although carrying the name "Wildcats", the Villanova Hockey Club is not a school function. This organization, made up entirely of Villanova students, has, after three years of existence, still failed to win the recognition of the Villanova administration.

The main reason for this is one word—cost. Uniforms, renting a rink for practice and games, insurance, transportation, and a salary for the coach adds up to a lot of money. Thus far, the club members have reached into their own pockets for expenses. Their coach, George McNeill, Sr. the father of George McNeill, a junior Physics major from Bridgeport, works gratis.

Is Hockey A Spectator Sport?



A second question raised by the administration is the value of hockey as a spectator sport. Many students have turned out for the four games played at the Main Line rink, and there were few, if any, dissatisfied customers. Hockey is a fast moving and exciting sport, and, in spite of the discomfort of sitting in an ice cold arena, it draws large crowds in many parts of the country.

The administration also wonders whether the student body as a whole really would want a hockey team at Villanova.

The club of twenty, mainly frosh, is captained by Pete Smith, senior Industrial Administration Major from Erskine Lakes, New Jersey, and Mike Clement, a Junior EE from Waterford, N.Y. and member of the NROTC. They have been quite successful this year, with a 3-1 record to date. On December 12, they met and defeated the Main Line Skating Club, 6-4. The next game was January 6, when they triumphed over Penn, 5-2.

Lehigh Ices Cats

The Engineers of Lehigh

handed them their first defeat, 3-2 on January 14. The Wildcats drew first blood by virtue of a goal in the first period. Lehigh scored once in the second period, and twice in the third and final period before the Wildcats scored just before the final buzzer.

After the semester break, the Wildcats sought and got revenge, turning back the Engineers, 5-2. Both lines figured in the scoring, as McNeill, center of the first line, scored twice, as did George DelMonte, center of the second line. Joe Denahey, a frosh Engineer from Peabody, Mass., and right wing on the first line scored the final point.

The club has one more game; Haddonfield, N.J. Amateur Hockey Club at the Haddonfield rink.

Goalie Only 'Iron Man'

The team is divided into two lines or platoons, each playing equal time. The only man who usually plays the whole game is the goalie. The first line is sparked by Co-capt. Smith at left wing, Denahey at right wing, and McNeill at center. Bill Miller, soph E.E., plays left wing for the second line, which also has Pete Doge, soph C & Fer, at right wing, and Del Monte, a Junior history major, at center.

The team, is trying to prove themselves, have earned a write-up in the United States Amateur Hockey Magazine, and have drawn praise from their opponents. In their victory over Penn, they showed that they are good enough to meet and beat first rate college teams. Penn and Lehigh both have hockey as a regular varsity sport. If the Wildcats do become an official Villanova Organization, they can enjoy the privileges of a varsity sport. If, however, recognition is not given, Pete Smith claims that the group will continue as before; a group of Hockey loving Villanova students playing when they can get games and practicing when they cannot.

Sr. Section Reserved

A Senior Section has been reserved for the Toledo game, February 24th. Tickets for this game go on sale Thursday, Feb. 18th. On this day and only for this day, the Section NC has been reserved for Seniors and their dates, since it is a date night also.

As it was, the two mile quartet had a pretty disappointing go of it. Lead man Gerry Hackett (a non-scholarship athlete) got things off to a respectable start by holding his own against Manhattan's John Carry. When he passed the baton to Frank Hegarty he was only a yard behind the Manhattan man.

Nicastro: "A Pint-Sized Bragg"

Hegarty started off his stint well. In fact he probably started off too well as the blond soph appeared to burn himself out in the first half of his leg. By the time he handed the stick to Pat Nicastro he was 30 yards behind the Manhattan leader.

Nicastro ("a speedy pint-sized 10 on Bragg" sports editor Jim Murray dubbed him) pluckily did his best to overtake Manhattan's Kye Courtney and actually chopped about 15 yards off Courtney's lead.

However, long Jan Dante, 'Cat anchor man, could not overtake Jasper ace Art Evans and Villanova had to settle for second behind Manhattan's 7:44.8.

The only other Wildcats to display their board talents Friday were the four members of the freshman mile relay team (Al Jackman, Bob Olive, Owen Maguire, and Charlie Hammock).

King Catches Hammock

This quartet, after leading Morgan State throughout the first three and a half legs saw the Baltimore school's anchor man, Robert King, stage a whirlwind finish to defeat Hammock.

The former Roman Catholic hurdler also ran well enough in the afternoon qualifying heats to merit a spot in the finals of the 50 yard hurdles (not the invitation won by Hayes, Jones). He finished fourth.

In other afternoon activity, soph Angelo Sivieni wound up third in the two mile run and the freshman distance medley relay team of Owen Maguire, Al Jackman, Bob Fittin, and Pat Traynor. finished second to Manhattan.

Some Enchanted Evening

by Tony Macklin

When Rodgers and Hammerstein wrote the score to "South Pacific" little did they know that they would be giving hope to Villanova's basketball team. But "some enchanted evening," one of these nights when the chips are down, the 'Cats are going to woo a stranger. This stranger is—the "big game" victory.

It didn't happen last Saturday night, in fact it hasn't happened in the last four years. But the juicy conquest is coming. It will be tangy and delicious because it has taken such a length of time to come of age.

In the last four years the 'Cats have played many real "big" games against high-ranking West Virginia, N. C. State, Temple, St. Joe's and St. John's but they have not been able to come out on the winning side. The last sensational victory came against West Virginia, 54-53 in January 1956.

There have been a lot of fine, exciting victories in the last four years, but no great upsets. The 'Cats have come close time after time.

Eastern Supremacy

Although the 'Cats were favored Saturday against NYU, the game was truly a "big one" for them. It was to settle the question of Eastern supremacy. It proved to be a very unsettling settlement for the 'Cats.

In many ways, the game was a replay of last year's roasting, when Tom Sanders scored 28 points to lead the Violets to a 78-60 victory. This time Sanders scored 25 to more than double the scoring output of any of the 'Cats (White was high for VU with twelve points).

The game also bore a resemblance to the West Virginia battle. Raveling, Kaminski, and Driscoll were not up to their usual effectiveness an enemy sub, Al Falardi, came off the bench to score eleven points and lead the Violets in rebounding (13).

Also, like Jerry West, Sanders looked like he was going to have foul trouble. Sanders had four fouls with 19:06 left. He didn't get his fifth until there was only 3:35 remaining. He played effective ball for over fifteen minutes without committing a foul.

When Sanders left, the 'Cats rallied with a burst that had the fans hysterical. The 'Cats have hungry, hungry fans. They finally even came up with some original cheering with a "Dragnet"—applause bit.

Subs on Fire

Sparking the comeback were fire eaters Tom Samulewicz and Dave Severance. Sammy hit eight points and came up with thirteen rebounds, and Dave dropped in six quick points.

A two minute sizzle cut the lead to seven with time fleeting. Then Sammy missed a couple of fouls and Hubie missed a couple of jumpers.

The play that slammed the door, came when tiny Russ Cunningham with the speed of a Schmeagle, broke between Huggard and Kaminski to grab a free ball and turn it in to a field goal. Cunningham, a nifty swifty, kept the 'Cats away with some flashly ball handling as time ran out.

The 'Cats shots flew about like the snow flakes outside. They hopped off the rim like hoops away from pegs in a carnival game. The 'Cats were frozen by ice cold shooting. They hit only a dismal 21 per cent (18 out of 85). If they had hit forty per cent they would have scored 82 points.

Emotionally Hurt

It seems that if a team is openly emotional in success, when things go wrong, this emotionality can go against them. The 'Cats were pressing. At times they were unsure of themselves.

They failed to move the ball (Huggard was crying "move" without results). They missed layups they have never blown before, they committed unnecessary fouls, and at times resorted to playground tactics.

This is not to say that the 'Cats didn't hustle. They did, particularly Huggard, White, and the subs Dave and Sammy. The 'Cats hustled and rebounded and got the shots, but their shooting was horrendous. They were firing blanks. Time after time they would miss four and five at a siege. It was incredible.

The Violets turned out to be a carnivorous pitcher plant in disguise. They swallowed up the 'Cats hopes. The whole season can not be based on one night's performance. But losing at home by twelve is a blot. It seems almost impossible for the 'Cats to regain what they lost by this game. They don't get another shot at the Violets. The New Yorkers are in the NCAA while the 'Cats are in the NIT.

Big Game

One of these night, the 'Cats are going to come up with the big game, in the big game. The way Huggard and White hustled is indicative that it should not be too long in coming. Hubie played his best floor game of the season: flying about the court, following shots, vaulting over Sanders (he made a remarkable block on one of big "Satch's" shots).

But as shooters, the H-bombs sputtered. They had unbelievably inept shooting nights. Huggard was four for 27 (15 per cent) and White was three for 24 (13 per cent).

They just couldn't hit. Still, it was good to see White working for the shots, and taking them.

There are a lot of "big games" coming up that offer the 'Cats a stiff challenge.

If the team jells, and the lid melts, there will be enchantment all over the place.

Jekyll-Hyde In Sneakers; Dick Kaminski Is Hot Shot

By Tony Macklin

The quiet man is not so quiet.

Dick Kaminski, stellar junior guard, is one of the more silent of the Wildcats on the court; he does his job with a minimum of histrionics. But off the court he is a different individual.

We caught Dick watching the St. Joe's-St. Peter's game at the Palestra last Wednesday. He was sporting a bedraggled brown chapeau that looked like a relic from the West Virginia hills. He yelped and clowned and mugged as the game went on.

After the game he turned serious to talk about basketball.

"I began to play ball in the seventh grade," he said "I couldn't make the seventh grade team, but I played some Biddy ball. I barely made the eighth grade team."

Richie credited his high school coach with engineering the change that made a real ballplayer out of him. "He kept drilling me in fundamentals all the time."

Set Record

Kaminski started as a soph at St. Aloysius High (Jersey City). "I had my best year as a junior," he commented. When he graduated he had established a lower Hudson County career record of 1290 points. This record was broken by Vinnie Ernst, also of St. Aloysius, last year. Ernst is a freshman at Providence.

"I didn't do well as a freshman here. Then last year I played some. I didn't think I'd start this year," he admitted. "But I had those games at the beginning of he season and things worked out."

One of Richie's big breaks occured late last season at St. Francis (Pa.). With Jim Kenny out with an injury, Kaminski subbed and notched 16 points that knocked the Frankies out of a possible NIT bid, which the 'Cats had already attained.

When Kenny was unable to return to school in September, Richie was the natural one to replace him. He and Huggard have proved to be tougher on the opposition than the Katzenjammer Kids.

Perfect Night

At Princeton, Richie knocked in the 'Cats first two of the season with a sharp drive. In the following game he had his "biggest thrill" as he hit 7 of 7 from the floor and 4 of 4 from the line in an exhibition of perfect shooting as the 'Cats trampled Scranton 110 to 68 in the Field House.

The dry-voiced junior spoke wih care as he explained the pressures of being a marksman. (He has led the club in percentage all season.) "I think about it too much. I pressed and got down and then stop shooting. The coach gets on me and tells me to shoot."

His fifteen point performance in the Siena game was medicinal. "I really needed that game," he sighed.

As for the future and the St. Joe's game Dick spoke with definite conviction. "We're going to beat 'em. Darn straight we're going to beat 'em!"

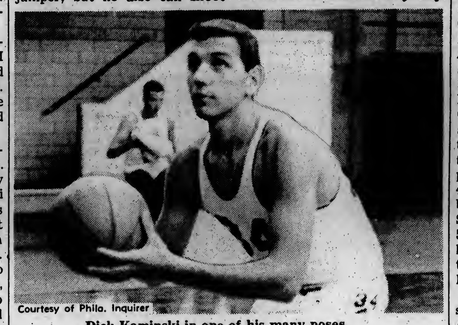
Has To Relay

Coach Severance says of Kaminski, "He is a strong, solid ballplayer. We have definitely needed him, and he has come along tremendously. At times he overplays and gets tight. He has to learn to relax out there."

Kaminski's best shot is his jumper, but he also can shoot a potent stab and is as good a driver as there is on the team. He possesses near perfect body control. Against Penn he whipped toward the basket, Huggard shot him an eye-level pass which he flicked in with incredible ease and coordination.

Richie has to stop worrying about percentage (his teammates could help). He is working on his defense. He agrees that he "wasn't getting back" against West Virginia.

Captain George Raveling emphasizes that Kaminski is "definitely the best shooter on the team."



Richie is also the greatest cutup. He is a fast man with the quip. When some unsuspecting foil says "what" or "why" he is quick to attack. ("Hot, open the window") (Fly, take a plane")

On the last trip a waitress told him that they had, "scrambled eggs." "Nice talk, he snapped. This set off a team barb barrage that had the poor soul shaken and wondering what she had done.

Many Talents

He is "best shooter," "team jester," "champion cutter," and the scourge of all waitresses.

On Villanova's team of split personality boys and paradoxical characters Kaminski is on one hand—a quiet man of the court, and on the other hand—the kookie kid from Jersey City.

Intramural Teams Get Set For Final Weeks of Play

by Hank Schultz

Intra - Murals at Villanova, under the supervision of Ed Geisz, have continued on their merry way, pausing briefly for the Christmas and Semester vacations.

As the basketball teams resumed play, they were notified of new schedules. Although a few leagues are still inactive, most teams are back in action. One team showing no rustiness from inaction was the "Horse's Aces" (correct spelling—ACES), soundly beating the 7-11's, 96-37 in the 4:30 Alumni league. In the same league, Alcatraz A. C. defeated Charlie Co., 40-28, and the Canucks forfeited to the Dukes. Monday's action in the 6:30 Alumni league saw Simpson's Nats best Lola's 79ers, 48-39. The next night, the Malibu Five took on the Allen All-Stars, and came out ahead, 63-53. Further action in the same league saw the Islanders take the Junior C. E.'s, 74-50.

Missiles—Shoot Down Bravo Co.

In the 7:30 league, the Missiles outscored Bravo Co., 82-75, A.H.A.C. defeated the Narragansetts, 60-53, and Able Co. bowed to the Belly Dancers, 50-24. Action is scheduled to continue up to March 3, when the league leaders will be announced, and play-offs will start.

Turning our attention to soccer and another revised schedule, we find an almost completed season. Ed Geisz has hopes of announcing the winners within a week. At the present time leadership is being fought for by Frank Murtha's U. N. Allstars and Jose Oliver's Mambo Kids.

Another activity nearing completion is the Bridge tournament. The leaders are playing for the top spot, and Geisz intends to announce the winners in the very near future.

For the past two months, the Rosemont lanes have been the scene of much action as the teams comprising the three bowling leagues competed for lead. Now action in this sport is almost over, and once again comes the promise of announcement of the winners within a short time.

Sack of Troy — By Tom Troy

Villanova Cagers Most Loyal and Ardent Fan

Strano—on Basketball

A few weeks ago, Chris Connor was scheduled to make it on the vocal over at the Red Hill, so I decided to cross the stream and see what was happening. Chris didn't swing, but the evening wasn't too bad, for I ran into Victor Strano, and he swung—on basketball.

You know Victor—he's the little guy with the short black hair, wears glasses, always looks a little worried, hops from one table to another in the pie shop.

I first saw Vic Strano on the P&W coming to school one morning. I was a freshman, in school only a few weeks, but I immediately discerned that he was an unusual person.

Because, you see, Victor was in the Engineering School at that time, and while all the other engineers discussed last night's homework problems or buried their heads in a textbook, Victor talked sports. Victor talked sports from 69th street to Villanova.

Yes, Victor is unusual, but a

person who is Number One in any field is necessarily unusual. And Vic is Number One—The Number One basketball fan at Villanova.

Vic has been at Villanova for five years. (He lost time when he transferred from the Engineering to the Arts School). During that time he has seen every Villanova basketball game played at the Palestra or in the Field House. He has travelled often, witnessing many games in New York. (This year he's journeyed to Princeton and New York).

He follows the summer leagues in which Villanova participates, he watches practices, he reads every paper or magazine that mentions Villanova. But more than all of this, Vic talks Villanova basketball.

He readily admits, "I could talk basketball all day. I've taken dates to games, and talked of nothing of basketball going to, during, and coming from the game."

As you may imagine, Mr. Strano has by now become thoroughly versed in the game. He doesn't keep statistics, but he does know many of the finer points of basketball.

Victor rates Jim Huggard as the finest player he's seen at Villanova (while he's been in school here) because "he has more confidence in himself than any other player I've ever seen."

When asked about spirit, the most spirited of them all gives a succint, articulate answer that goes to the heart of the matter: "The spirit at Villanova has always been in proportion to the way we played. This year the spirit's great for two reasons: the football season was so bad, and the team's winning."

Vic violently condemns the "Manhattan Incident": "The only people that get hurt are the good fans. Whenever I see anything like that, I exit in a hurry. I don't dig that jazz."

Victor doesn't limit himself to just basketball; he is also a great football fan. He has seen every home game and has gone to Boston twice and West Point twice.

As a matter of fact, football may be a big reason Victor came to Villanova—not to play, but to watch his favorite, Jim Grazione. Like Grazione, Victor graduated from Southeast Catholic High (Now Bishop Newman) in Philadelphia, then came to the Main Line.

But old b-ball is really Victor's meat. He loves the game and the Villanova team. This is probably the reason he disagreed with much that this writer said about spirit some time ago. He feels the spirit of the fans is very important.

If all fans had the same spirit as Victor's, I would agree. But few can match him for undying loalty to and love of Villanova. When the Palestra is burned, I hope Victor escapes.

Sneak N.I.T. Preview At Palestra

H-Bomb Blitz Against Pitt Satch + Cold Spell = Doom

by Dan Grove and Jim Murray

It was 21° outside the Palestra last Saturday night while inside the Villanova Wildcats shot just 21%. The games high was 62 scored by New York University while Villanova rose only to 50.

Weatherman . . . coach Al Severance pointed out that "In all my years coaching I have never had five men with this much potential (all five starters are averaging on double figures) get cold on the same night." The coach continued, "Therein lies the story—it was just one of those nights when you watch not one but five and six shots go up and come down every place but through the hoop".

Violent Violets

The Violent Violets, from New York, were paced by their captain, easy Tom Sanders. He scored twenty-five points, snared twelve rebounds. He was 8-17 from the floor and 9-13 from the foul line.

Rather than say that Villanova took 85 shots to N.Y.U.'s 50 or the Wildcats outbounded them 61 to 50 we'll just leave the statistics alone.

N.Y.U. started off slowly waiting for the good shot, built up a ten point lead at halftime and held on. Villanova came out of their zone for the first time this year and looked good in a press but just couldn't sink the shot once they stole the ball.

Bench Beautiful

George Raveling and John Driscoll fouled out, but Tom Samulewicz and Dave Severance did more than fill the gap. Smooth Sam was most effective on the boards where he grabbed 13 rebounds. Dapper Dave hit 2-3 from the floor and 2-3 from the foul line for clutch points when Villanova made a final bid to catch the Violets in the closing seconds. Bob Liberatone had a pulled muscle from the Pitt game and saw limited action.

Jimmy Huggard, Hubie White and Richie Kaminski were all over the court stealing passes and setting up plays but were back to the final incident the ball didn't go in.

The 'Cats never stopped hustling, but the boys from New York scored when it counted and held off the 'Cats when the going got close. I think it's safe to predict that it is the coldest Saturday we're going to have this winter—and I'm probably right, because I'm not a weatherman.

Villanova-Pitt

Villanova's well-traveled Roadcats returned to the friendly confines of the Field House Thursday night to find it bedecked with the names of their 16 victims to date, then went on to chalk up number 17 for the widly partisan and publicized V.U. crowd.

Their victims were the Pitt Panthers, a big, but sometimes bewildered, bunch of cagers. They were bewildered by Hubie White's tremendous spring and reflexes, Jimmy Huggard's fantastic driving shots and dogged defensive play, and George Raveling's perfect timing on tap-ins.

Coach Al Severance's charges jumped out to an early 6-0 lead, and were never threatened after the Panthers closed the gap to 10-7.

Tweedy Scores Early

"Tweedy" Driscoll got the 'Cats rolling with two early baskets, and from there on in it was number 17 hanging from the balcony. The half ended with the 'Cats up by 16 points: 38-22.

The Blue and White started the second half with a cold streak, but Pitt didn't capitalize on it. When the N.I.T.-bound 'Cats finally got hot it was only a question of how much the final margin would be.

The H-Bombs (Hub and Hug) ignited the spark that singed the Panther's tail and set off the rest of the potent Main Line arsenal.

H-Bombs Explode

Hug stole the ball twice and got two quick field goals. Hubie hit on a jump and a follow shot, and then it was Katy bar the door. With about eight minutes remaining, Severance started clearing the bench. He put in everyone but Bill Penney, who has an injured ankle. When he took the H-Bombs out, first Hug and then Hub, the fans gave each a standing ovation.

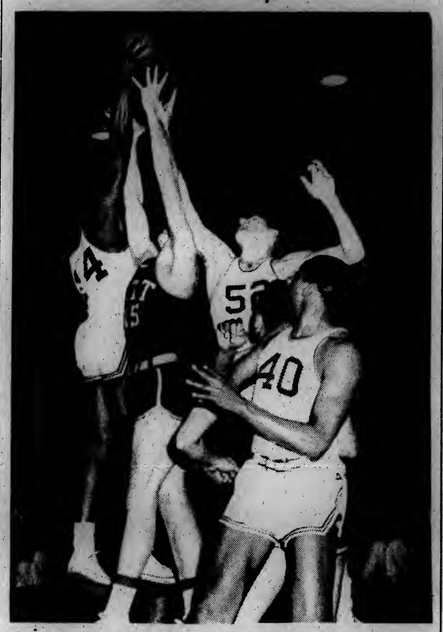
The substitutes gave a good account of themselves; particularly Dave Severance, who had two field goals and five rebounds, and Joe Walsh, with 2 field goals and 2 rebounds.

Statistically, the 'Cats hit 44% of their shots (32-73), and they collected 54 rebounds. Hubie White led in both departments with 23 points (9 for 24 from the field) and 13 rebounds.

Pitt Coach Lauds 'Cats

In an interview after the game, Pitt Coach Bob Timmons said "Villanova has a darn good club. With the possible exception of Ohio State and West Virginia (no perspiration here, they are in that other tournament), they are the best we have faced. Huggard and White are tremendous.

Besides them, you have three other guys who are real threats. Your ball club should beat St. John's off the boards. I sure would like to see Hubie White and Tony Jackson play each other.



"No, I have no excuse for my boys, they just met with a much better team. We were playing 'Button, button, who's got the button' with the ball, and Huggard and White sure got a lot of buttons."

One Pitt player had this to say, "That Hubie White is going to break loose sometime and when he does, the scorekeepers are going to have a hard time keeping up."

In all, it should have been a good warmup for things to come, namely, St. Bonaventure tonight, Wake Forest, Toledo, St. Joe's, LaSalle, and the N.I.T. No breathers from here on out. In the next few weeks, the 'Cats get a chance to add some name teams to their already impressive list.

The heck with Cape Canaveral. Let's just make sure those H-Bombs keep firing right.

Hubie's Up

Hubie White (14) easily outjumps and outreaches taller Pitt opponents in a rebound effort. Villanova easily thumped Panthers 76-49.

'Cats Tangle With Wake Forest Next Monday In Dixie

St. Bonaventure's high-ranking "Brown Indians" roar into the Palestra tonight to take on the twice-beaten Villanova "Wildcats."

This game will be an important factor in deciding the furious race for Eastern supremacy.

The game is a particularly glamorous one in that besides having telling effect on the ratings, it will also match two teams that have been accepted to the National Invitational tournament. Villanova was the first team to accept a bid, and Monday afternoon the Bonnies followed suit.

Bonnies Tough

The Bonnies have a 13-3 record and have won ten games in a row. They are led by 6-5 junior Tom Stith and his brother Sam (6-2). Between them they have averaged fifty points a game. Tom, an All-American prospect, has hit for an average 37.1 points a game to place him second in National scoring behind Oscar Robertson.

St. Bonaventures greatest victory of the season came when they tumbled Providence (another NIT entry) in three over times. They have lost to Cincinnati, Santa Clara, and Xavier.

This is a "must" game for the 'Cats, and a terrific chance for the Bonnies.

Track Team — Inquirer Games

Mile Relay Team Sparkles Clicks Off 3:17 In New York

by Mike Donahue

Villanova's once beaten mile relay team was the only winner for Jumbo Jim Elliott's thinclads in indoor track activity last weekend.

The fleet foursome of Otie Drayton, Nick DeAngelis, Joe Manion, and Bob Raemore smashed the New York A. C. meet record of 3:17.9 by almost a full second as they raced to a 3:17.0 victory over Morgan State on Saturday night in Madison Square Garden.

This was the 'Cats only 'point showing' of the night as soph. swifty Frank Budd scratched himself from the 60 yard dash because of a muscle pull.

Two Milers Fourth

Another usually reliable pointgetter for Elliott, his young (all sophs) two mile relay team, was relegated to a fourth place behind Holy Cross, Georgetown and Duke.

Holy Cross winning time was 7:42.8 At the Minrose Games in January the 'Cat half milers in upending Yale covered the two miles in 7:40.0.

Leon Pras, sophomore hurdler, also failed to score Saturday night. He failed to qualify for the finals of the 60 yard hurdles won by stockily-swift Hayes Jones who also won the 60 yard dash, to achieve his second (double) in two nights.

Jones Nips Budd

Jones first sprint-hurdles wins were achieved last Friday night in the annual Inquirer Games meet held in Convention Hall at the direct expense of two of Elliott's men.

The Eastern Michigan 'mitey but miguty swifty bested 'Cat comet Frank Budd in the finals of the 50 yard dash in 5.4 seconds after Budd had qualified for the finals by handily defeating indoor IC4A champ Paul Winder in the identical time of 0:05.4.

Jones' victory in this heat of the hurdles event knocked 'Cat obstacles Pras out of the finals.

The sprint event also had Drayton as an entry for only the second time this indoor season. Drayton failed to qualify, however, as he placed a dubious fourth in the heat won by Jones. From a distance it appeared as though Drayton had captured second handily.

The placing of Drayton irked Elliott into leaving his seat and questioning the official decision. (Unlike their New York counterparts the Inquirer officials used no photo-timer to spot the places in the closely bunched dash and hurdles finishes.)

Other varsity competitors in Friday night's meet were Raemore in the Sage 600 (fourth); the victorious mile relay team (3:20.3, a meet record) and the two mile relay quartet (second to Manhattan).

The Sage was Raemore's first go at the 600 this season. The bespectacled soph managed to stay with the leaders, Frank Bowens and Josh Culbreath, for the first half of the race despite a bump on the second turn of the first lap.

Raemore Tires At End

However, he seemed to be straining over the last 150 yards. This is not unusual since Raemore is more used to running 440 yards and under.

Later in the evening he had "enough left" to come back and anchor the mile relay quartet, winning by a full 30 yards in the meet record time of 3:20.3.

The time might have even been better if the fleet four had had more than one team pushing them. Unfortunately Morgan State was unable to finish the race as leadoff man Lawson Smart took a nasty spill on the second turn of the first leg. Their defection left only Manhattan to challenge the Wildcats.

'Cats Easy Victors In Mile

Drayton jumped off to a slight first quarter lead. DeAngelis then opened up the lead, Manion added a few more yards to it and Raemore came on to waltz home far ahead of Manhattan's anchor man.

DeAngelis for the second week in a row, abandoned his usual anchor man role on the two mile relay quartet to replace the injured Bobby Coffill who is nursing a metatarsal injury.

Three Profs To Conduct Foreign Affairs Open Panel

"Prospects for European Unity—1960" will be the topic for discussion tomorrow night in a panel program sponsored by the International Relations Society of Villanova.

The discussion. open to all students, interested in current world problems, will be held in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Fritz Nova, IRS moderator, will open the program with an introductory address. Dr. Nova's introduction will be followed by speeches dealing with different phases of the topic.

Dr. Alexander Rudhart will speak on "NATO—Its Meaning Today." Mr. Francis Coghlan will treat the economic issues in a speech entitled, "The European Common Market and the European Free Trade Association."

The third panel member is Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, who will speak on "The U. S. Stake in European Unity."

Panel Discussions

Following the formal speeches, Mr. Thomas Mentzer will moderate a brief panel discussion focusing attention on key questions concerning European unity. The final highlight of the program will be a question and answer period during whch the audience will be able to direct questions at the various panel members.

All of the participants of the program are members of Villanova's Department of History and Political Science.

Objectives of Talks

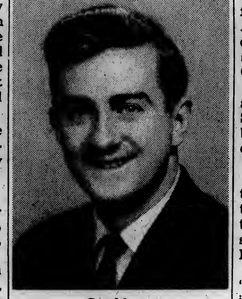
In commenting on the objectives of the discussion, Pultorac, a senior Political Science Major, mentioned two.

"The first," he said, "is an overall objective of IRS, namely, to stimulate an interest in the student body in the problems of international affairs and to provide for the discussion of possible solutions to these problems."

"The second objective is to dispel a feeling among some students that faculty members generally make themselves unavailable for student functions. Pultorac said "I believe this program will demonstrate that our professors are more than willing to cooperate in the success of student affairs."

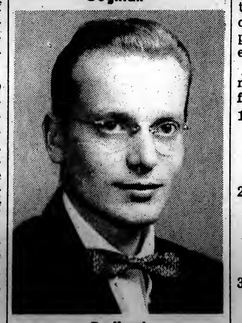
Josept J. Pultorak, president of IRS, has been busy for the past few weeks with overall preparations for the production which, as far as he knows, is a Villanova first.

Lending assistance on more specific points are Bill Celentano and Bruce Sturm, co-chairmen of the publicity committee. Both are seniors in the Arts division, and Sturm is also vice-president of IRS.



In charge of the reception committee are Judith Ann Buschetti and Marlene Kovacs, both Freshman Nurses. This committee will provide an assortment of brochures, periodicals, and current news bulletins relative to international affairs.

Joseph Perozziello, Sr. Finance major, is handling all the photographic work for the project. Also of invaluable help in the overall formulating of plans and ideas, are Frank Brennan, Secretary-Treasurer of the society, and Larry Ruth, both senior Political Science majors.



The program will be broadcast over radio station WVIL, and invitations have been sent to international relations clubs of some of the local colleges and universities.

Student Council Schedules First Annual Student Body Dance Fri.

"The Hawk Fry" has been announced as the theme for this year's Student Body Dance, sponsored by the Student Council.

The dance will be held in the Field House this Friday evening. Dancing is from 9 to 1, and music will be provided by "The Finger Lake Five."

Selling Tickets

Joe Remy and John Volpe, ticket chairmen, have been selling tickets in the Pie Shoppe all week. Price is $3.00 per couple.

All proceeds received from the dance will be matched by the administration and put into the Student Council treasury.

General co-chairmen John Driscoll, Bob Benson, and Len Carneghi have declared that, in keeping with its name, the theme of the dance will revolve around the St. Joe's basketball game scheduled for next Saturday.

Heads Publicity

Tom Raymond, Student Council publicist, will head the publicity committee for the dance, while appropriate decorations are being provided by Carneghi.

This dance is another innovation which the Student Council is using to increase its newly organized treasury. Earlier this year the Council stated a program of film presentations for the same purpose.

Seminary Guild Plans Pops Organ Concert

The Augustinian Seminary Guild presents a pops organ concert featuring Ralph and Buddy Bonds, Epic Records stars, on Sunday evening, February 28th at 8:00 p.m. in the Villanova Field House.

The Bonds brothers, who are currently appearing at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City, reside at 1513 County Line Road in Rosemont.

Host Committee Plan Passed By Student Council

A plan for a Student Host Committee, which would be formed as a student aid to the Administration, faculty, students, and alumni, has been passed unanimously by the Student Council.

"The committee would act as a good-will agency from the Student Council and student body to visitors to the Villanova campus," said John Drees.

Improved Handling

"We've done some research on the matter and have discovered that the steady flow of visitors to the campus cannot be handled solely by the Administration," Drees continued.

"However," Drees pointed out, "this group's functions are not intended to coincide with the treatment of the guest program of any specific societies on campus unless specifically requested.

According to Dress the committee will have at least three functions:

1) To be at the disposal of the administration, faculty, and alumni to assist in the welcoming and touring of visitors,
2) In situations where the administration feels that students alone could entertain a group, the committee would handle the visit from start to finish, and
3) To assist various groups in planning conferences on campus.

"A great deal of the success of this program will depend wholely on cooperation of faculty and alumni," Dress stressed.

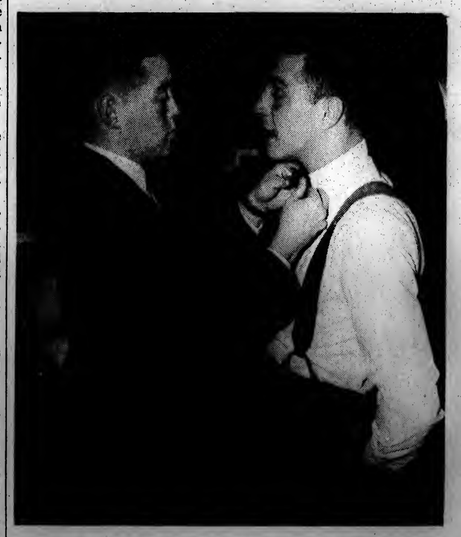
The host committee is comprised of the following members: Mike Moran, Tim McNamar, Chuck Kelly, Scott Harrison, Dick Corsini, Chris Kelly, Anne McCrea, Mary O'Leary, and Harry Mitchell.

"I feel the Host Committee will be a great asset to the Council and the Administration as a good will agency for the University.

Varsity Debators Finish Seventh At King's College

The Villanova varsity debating team of Terry Stratman, Frank McCormick, Joe Remy, and Gene D'Aquilla, traveled February 12 to Wilkes-Barre to participate in the annual King's College Debating Tournament.

The debaters finished seventh out of some thirty teams from all over the eastern United States, registering an overall record of six wins and four defeats.



National Topic

The tournament, which considered the national debate topic, "That Congress should be given the power to reverse the decisions of the Supreme Court," was a strength vs. strength setup in which the winning teams in the early rounds wer matched against each other in the latter debates.

The Villanova affirmative team of Stratman and McCormick won four of their five debates, suffering their only loss at the hands of St. Joe's.

Stratman also placed high on the list of the top speakers of the tournament, and he narrowly missed picking up a trophy for his efforts.

Letter To Library Cites Humble Contrition

January 5, 1960

Library Staff
Villanova University
Villanova, Pennsylvania

Dear Friends (I hope):

Recently, when I was looking over some items that I have not met in years, I found this book that is now at least 12 or 13 years overdue.

I do shudder when I think of what the fine could possibly be. Perhaps if I tell you that we now have five children, you will let me off with three Hail Marys.

Nevertheless, I wanted to prove to you and myself the courage I have in returning the book. I wish I were courageous enough to return it in person.

Sincerely yours,

Remedies Offered For Arts Crisis

Granville, O. — (I.P.) — Dr. Blair Stewart, president of the Associated Colleges of the Midwest, recently told an annual Faculty Conference at Denison University that there is a real crisis in education as far as the liberal arts college is concerned.

Three proposals Dr. Blair Stewart considers essential to improve higher education are: (1) that students be given more responsibility in the learning process; (2) that colleges must critically and rationally study different methods of both teaching and learning to determine if the large lecture situations or small discussion classes or a combination is most effective; and (3) that faculty time should be used to its fullest advantage and unnecessary work should be eliminated.

Utopian College

Although Dr. Stewart felt that the Utopian College proposed in the Ruml Report is not completely feasible at present, he nevertheless advocated some of the basic principles and declared that the report is valuable because it is provoking thought and exploration of the crisis in education.

Dr. Howell Speaks On Prospecting Work

Dr. B. F. Howell Jr., head of the Department of Geophysics of the University of Pennsylvania, has recently spoken before the Geological Society and the National Science Foundation class in Physical Geology.

Ride Service Shows Signs of Success

The student ride service, an innovation sponsored by the Student Council, has gone into effect. According to preliminary reports, the service has been a partial success.

The list, which is posted on the main bulletin board in Dougherty Hall, has over 30 names on it. As suggested by the Council, those who participate in the service either sign up for riders or seek rides to a particular point.

One drawback that has developed already is that there are far more seeking rides than those who want riders.

New York, and the surrounding Long Island and North Jersey area, seem to be the popular destination point. Connecticut, Ohio, and Washington, D. C., are some of the other destinations on the list.

Villanova To Get Mock Convention

Larry Ruth, president of this school's chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, has announced that Villanova has been chosen as the site for a mock political convention of the regional chapters of I.C.G.

The convention will be held in Vasey Auditorium on Saturday, March 12.

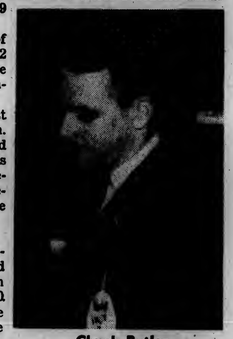
Delegates to this convention will be I.C.G. members of Villanova, Drexel, Haverford, Immaculata, Penn, Rosemont, West Chester State, and P. M. C. Villanova non-members. however, are invited to attend and observe.

Ruth added that the 150 delegates, who will participate, will represent well over 20,000 students of the regional schools. The delegates will have a two-fold responsibility: that of nominating a presidential candidate and also the adopting of a bi-party platform.

Sports Meeting

Jim Murray, spots editor of the VILLANOVAN, requests all sportswriters of the VILLANOVAN (and any from any other school) to attend a very important meeting on Saturday morning at 8:30 in the VILLANOVAN office.

Butler and Romano Elected To Freshmen Council Posts



Charles Butler and Michael Romano were elected to freshmen posts on the Student Council last Thursday.

In one of the quietest elections in recent years, the "Voice of Unity" party of Butler and Romano won out by a fairly comfortable margin.

Runners-Up

Day-hop winner Butler, pre-med, had 238 votes to runner-up Donald Pistilli's 195. The other candidates Joseph Tate and John Duffy had 131 and 26.

Resident Romano, also pre-med, polled 253 ballots, winning out over Robert Kusek's 215. The other resident candidate, William Noto had 119 votes.

Chuck Butler

Despite the relative calm of the campaigning, a total of 592 votes were cast, a little more than half of the freshmen enrollment.

Results were posted almost immediately after the 4:00 p.m. closing time. Elections Board co-chairman Ron Magray and his committee kept an-up-to-the-minute count which was released almost immediately to the candidates.

Bands Parade

One unusual feature on election day was the four-piece band of Butler's and Romano's which paraded briefly at about 10:30.

Another oddity noted was the absence of campaigning outside Alumni gym, the site of the polls. The flow of voters was somewhat scattered throughout the day although there was a brief rush about 10:30.

The perennial write-in candidate made an appearance in the form of one William Armstrong who finished in last place with a tally of 1.

Both Butler and Romano will officially take their places on the Council tonight. Chairman Tom Hoffman has already assigned them duties for the Council dance this Friday.

World Record

Something to think about: the world's record for producing children is held by the wife of Fedor Vassilef, a Russian. Mrs. Vassilef, had 69 children, including 16 sets of twins, 7 sets of triplets, and 4 sets of quadruplets.

Ex-D.A. Tells Counsel Forum

Good Lawyer Must Know The Rules of Evidence

by Matt McCue

What makes the perfect District Attorney?

Mr. Theodore Smith, former Assistant D.A. of Philadelphia answered this and many other questions at the fourth Student Council forum last Thursday evening.

Learned In Law

"A perfect D.A.," he stated, "must be a man learned in the law and possessed of a good working knowledge of the rules of evidence.

"He must be a dedicated man of high moral courage, but most of all he must possess a good sense of balance."

This latter condition is important, he said, because the D.A. not possessing it will overload the courts with unnecessary jury trials. He will press for the strongest indictment or the highest penalty and waste precious time of his own and of the courts.

Smith was speaking to more than fifty students who braved the vile weather to attend their forum.

Speaking with the ease and clarity which his ten years in the Philadelphia courts must have given him, Smith gave one of the most interesting of the forum series.

He stated in broad outline the functions and duties of a District Attorney and revealed some of his practical activities in our legal system.

Five Major Duties

The five major duties, as he stated them are:

1. Prepare and issue Bills of Indictment setting forth the charges against a man.
2. Present witnesses to the grand jury.
3. Prosecute for the state at all trials.
4. Act in cases involving Habeas Corpus.
5. Conduct Grand jury investigation in cases of blatant corruption involving city or local officials.

Favorite Case

Smith was eager to delineate his favorite case. During his term of office he became involved with the Lulubelle Rossman murder case.

Lulubelle was found strangled in room 1312 of a local hotel, taped up and lying on a bed. Police investigated and unearthed no clues.

Riding home one day on the PTC, a friend began discussing a news item about two men caught by police in Las Vegas with $97,000. Following a hunch, he recalled that Lulubelle was very wealthy and often carried her money on her person.

He traced the serial numbers of bills found in her safety deposit box, and in conjunction with Las Vagas police, learned the money on the two men had a strange relationship with the lady's bills.

A suspicious number of their bills were in numerical succession to the bills of Lulubelle. "There was a fantastic tie-in with the serial numbers." It was a long, long shot which paid off.

"This case was exhilirating to work on," beamed Smith.

In order to emphasize that a D.A. must have a good knowledge of the rules of evidence, Smith told this story:

A farmer, while walking along a country road with his cow, was injured by a passing automobile. The car had hit the farmer's cow, and the animal, while falling down, had lashed out and broken the farmer's leg.

Put the Cow to Death

The owner of the car had asked the farmer if he should put the cow out of his misery, and the farmer said yes. Then the man pulled out a pistol and killed the animal.

The farmer sued the car owner for damage.

"Did you claim injury on the spot?" the farmer's counsel questioned.

"Well," said the farmer, "I was walking down the road—"

"Objection," said the car owner's counsel, and the objection was sustained. The court directed the farmer to answer the question directly and not go into the story as he was trying to do.

But the farmer insisted on telling the story. Twelve objections of the car owner's counsel were sustained, but the farmer repeatedly tried to tell the story in his own way.

Finally the farmer's counsel, realizing that he was getting nowhere, received the court's permission to allow the farmer's story to be told.

"When the guy shot the cow," the farmer stated, "he pressed the gun to its head and killed it. Then shifting his gaze in my direction (and pointing the gun at me), he asked ME if I were hurt."

The farmer was awarded damages.

Might Have Lost Case

The point of the story was, the farmer's lawyer, in his ineptness, could have lost his client's case for him through his improper knowledge of the rules of evidence. Smith implied that a respectable lawyer would have so phrased his questions so that his client's answers would not have provoked objections from the opposing counsel.

In closing, Smith stated that more than twenty billion dollars are lost because of crime, and that if crime goes unchecked, it can destroy the entire fabric of society.

"Good law enforcement is not enough," he said, "good citizenship is also vital in the war against crime."

Senior Queen: Sally Campbell

"Oh yes, it is the most exciting thing that ever happened to me." said Sally Campbell, newly-crowned Queen of the Senior Prom.

Sally, along with four other finalists, had been selected by a modeling agency from over twenty-five contestants.

Graduated from Manor Junior College in 1957, 21 year old Sally, who majored in elementary, education is presently teaching second grade at St. John of the Cross School, Roslyn, Pa.

This is not the first time Sally has been crowned queen. She was also queen of St. Joe's Prep Senior Prom and runner-up in the Atlantic City Beach Patrol Contest.

Sally has been pinned to Jim Osborne, Sr. Marketing major for two years.

Versatile DeAngelis A 'Double Winner'

What seemed to be an unlucky break for Nick DeAngelis at Bonner High School turned out to be a break for Villanova in the long run.

Fate led Nick to be one of Villanova's top track men. While at high school, Nick was an All-Catholic half-back. While practicing one day, Nick broke his ankle. After it healed, he decided to strengthen his ankle by running. With constant practice Nick developed into a state champ in the quarter and half-mile run.

Hard work pays many dividends. Being a physics major and running is no easy task. However, it can be done, as shown by Nick's 3.55 cumulative. He has a semester high of 3.75.

Nick was offered both a football and track scholarship to come here. He selected the latter. Since then Villanova has greatly profited.

Last year, he was a member of the mile relay team that took first place honors all over the country. At the Colosseum Relays in California, the team set a new record while defeating such teams at Texas, Southern California, and S. M. U.

This year's mile relay team is keeping pace with last year's. The team has run 6 times so far and has set records 43 times. Two of these records were set on successive nights—one at the Inquirer Games and the other at the N.Y.C.A. Meet.

Besides being an important member of the mile relay team, Nick has done just as well in other track events. Last year, he ran fifth in the 600 yard run at the A.A.U. in New York. In this he ran against such greats as Charlie Jenkins.

This year Nick has also run anchor man on the two-mile relay team. At the Melrose Games the team turned in the best collegiate effort in the two-mile relay yet.

Nick has high hopes for the Villanova track team. "Potentially, we have the greatest track team we've ever had. For example, the mile relay team has broken a record four out of 6 times they've run. It appears that although we have some individuals, it'll be a team effort in the future."

DeAngelis

He also expressed his indebtedness to Villanova. "I feel that Villanova University has as much, or more, to offer than any other college. The college offers the opportunity for the student to develop himself. It's up to the student to carry on from there. For this, I'm greatly indebted to Villanova."

Upon graduation, Nick hopes to go into electronics or some related field.

Agenda For Junior Week Revealed by Bob Scalia

Announcement of a $500 gift to St. John's Orphanage by president Bob Scalia was the highlight of the junior class steering committee held February 16.

Scalia also outlined to the 32-member group the tentative agenda for Junior Week which will run from May 2 through May 9.

"Monday of Junior Week (the 2nd) as in the past is the day set aside for Mother's Day," Scalia said. Chairman for the first junior week outing will be Jim Strazzela and Bob Casson.

Covers Everything

Strazzela said that the price for the day "covering everything" will be, as in the past, $8.50.

Tuesday night, May 3, the Augustinian Seminary Guild will present a variety show. "No entertainers have been signed yet," Scalia remarked, "but the list of possible acts includes some very well-known personalities."

He added that the final selection of the performers is up to the Guild "but that Father Kelly (head of the Guild) will probably go along with our choice."

At present nothing is slated for Wednesday night. In the past Wednesday was an open date on the Junior Week calendar.

Local Trip

"However," Scalia said "I think something might be worked out on the line of a trip to Philadelphia. Possibly the Phillies are in town that night. If not we'll also investigate the possibilities of attending a play.

Tentative Chairmen

Scalia also has not decided whether to make the Wednesday excursion a date affair or restrict it to a stag outing.

His chairmen for the tentative midweek event are Kevin Flynn and Jim Caroon.

The annual junior-senior Muff Day will be staged on Thursday. A tentative list of athletic activities range from softball and basketball to pie-eating and a three-legged race.

Muff Day Chairmen

Dan Kelly and Tom Samuelwicz will be co-chairmen for Muff Day. Commenting on the choice of Samulewicz, Scalia said, "We thought it would be a good idea to have a well-known, popular athlete to help run Muff Day. We think Sammy will fill the bill."

Bob Scalia

Friday night the Prom will be held in the Field House. "We're pretty sure of the band but the announcement, which will be made through the VILLANOVAN, will be released later in the semester.

John Livezey, co-chairman of the dance along with Bob Redmond, said that the theme has been decided but will be announced at a later date.

The dinner dance, will be held Saturday night May 7 in the Broodwood Hotel, Tim McNamar, chairman of the affair, stated.

"Ticket prices, band, and selection of a theme, if there be one, have not been decided as yet," McNamar remarked.

'Clique Control' of Council Deplored by Merikangas

Jim Merikangas, Physics Club representative to the Student Council, fired a barrage last week against the lack of true representation in the Council.

"The real power in this Council is not in the hands of the people, but in the small clique that decides when the free day will be (with the help of the VILLANOVAN); which motions will be passed and turned down," he said.

"After saying that the Student Council dance will be reasonably priced in order to put the motion through, the clique caused the price to be double the price of the Shamokinaki dance price.

Control Funds

"The power to control the funds of the new treasury is in the hands of the senate. This would be fine if the student's were represented on the senate, but they're not.

"The committee system is fine, but if the committee is to be the deciding voice, why do we waste our time having a senate and a congress?"

He also expressed dissatisfaction with the operation of the Council's treatment of delinquent reports.

The Physics club and two other organizations have lost their voting powers for a month because of failure to submit monthly reports.

Deprived of Vote

"Several hundred people have been deprived of their representation because of this," said Merikangas. "The question is: what purpose does this serve?"

"The members of the Fraternities and Societies committee (which collects the reports) were not called upon once to look at one of the many reports received, and not once were they informed of any action to be taken prior to its accomplishment.

"What is the justification for having this committee at all? The only constructive thing that this committee did was to sponsor a meeting to discuss the fraternity pledging system.

"Yet one man, the chairman, has the power to remove organizations from the Council.

Follows Blindly

"It's true that this committee merely recommends to the senate, but so certain is it that the senate will blindly follow its recommendations that the results of the last senate meeting were announced prior to the meeting."

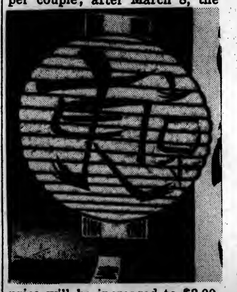
Prof. Miller Writes On President's Salary

"Who Should Pay the Presidents' Salary?" is the title of an article to be published next month in the Journal of Accountancy by Prof. Robert E. Miller of the Industrial Administration Department.

In the article, Miller presents an approach to the problem of allocating overhead costs in large firms. Businessmen, accountants and economists engage in considerable debate over what constitutes a basis for distributing general executive administrative expenses in an organization.

This basis must be equitable and acceptable to the operating divisions of the organization. Miller has developed a method of combining the "success" (assets, investment and personnel) of a firm to determine overhead distribution.

Bruce Sturm Is Named Chairman Of Shamokinaki



The Eighth Annual Shamokinaki Dance will be held in the Field House on Friday evening, March 11. Since its inception in 1952, the dance has been one of the social highlights of the University.

Shamokinaki is the only social event of the Lenten season at Villanova. Its proceeds will go toward the support of the Augustinian missions in the Far East.

Sturm Chairman

Acting as moderator for the affair, Rev. Joseph Burke, OSA, has appointed Bruce Sturm, senior Arts, as general chairman. Sturm will supervise the committees which handle the various aspects of the dance.

Tickets will go on sale tomorrow in the Pie Shoppe at $1.50 per couple; after March 8, the price will be increased to $2.00. Sturm urged all students to purchase tickets whether they intend to attend the dance or not. "This is an extremely worthy cause," he said, "and everyone should support it."

Villanovans Play

Music for dancing, which is from 9 to 1, will be provided by the Villanovans, and refreshments will be served. Following tradition, an oriental theme will be employed.

"In keeping with the recent trend toward interest in the Far East," Father Burk declared, "this year's decor will be much more elaborate than in previous years."

Theatre Looks Up

The state of theatre at Villanova is in a crucial period of flux. The situation is still far from ideal, but it is improving. And it must improve because theatre is an important cultural outlet on campus.

In the past the responsibility for Villanova drama was spread too thin. It all fell on the shoulders of one man. It was impossible for this one individual to do a competent job in each of his many endeavors. Therefore something had to suffer.

While the responsibility still falls heavily on one man, it is no longer solely on him. A graduate assistant program has helped to alleviate some of the strain. An increased graduate theatre faculty has also helped.

From the depths of inactivity last year (the grads did not produce a single show in their initial season) the grad department has rebounded to make two favorable showings with "Our Town" and last week's "Playboy of the Western World."

The Graduate Theatre students should make solid showings since what they are doing may very well be their life's work. There is little excuse for failure. So far, they have not needed an excuse.

The undergraduates are also on the spot, particularly since their last work proved to be such a failure. They are under the same authority and guidance as the graduates, and it is hoped that they will meet with some of the good fortune that the grads have. There has been a greater use of discretion in choosing their next play than was employed in selecting the overly ambitious musical. They have selected Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," which seems within their means.

By taking solid steps, one at a time, Villanova theatre will move up.

Senior Weekend Magnificent

The Senior Class, under the jurisdiction of president Ray Rafferty registered an impressive social triumph last weekend.

The Senior Weekend in years past, especially last year, had been approached with attitudes of relative indifference. Even their planners often considered the affair a "dying effort," since seniors are allegedly supposed to be accentuate the academic at the expense of the social. And, according to reports, the results of their labors looked every bit like "dying efforts."

Not so this year.

Every effort was utilized by the Rafferty crew to make this a memorable prom and dinner dance. The dinner dance especially was felt by many to have been the foremost social affair in four years: far from a dying effort. Rafferty is quick to lavish praise on prom co-chairmen Tom McCoy and Jim Foley; and on dinner dance co-chairmen Jack Heffernan and Bill Henry.

There was one dismaying note, however. Whereas the post-prom plaudits ran into superlatives, a large number of seniors decided beforehand not to even give the prom a try. These seniors had pre-judged the dance as something of an anti-climax to Junior Week, not worth patronizing.

This was a gross understimation of senior class ability and initiative. Publicity and planning were excellent, and such an attitude was an injustice.

This attitude, however, might have been caused by one of the sales pitches of the senior hierarchy: "A lot of time and effort have gone into the affair," they said "and in view of this, like the prom or not, the class has an OBLIGATION to support it."

Nearly everyone rebels against attending an affair as a matter of conscience. On the same token, no one has an obligation to see "Solomon and Sheba" just because it might have taken four years and $13 billion to produce.

This approach, even though it was faint, wasn't necessary, because the prom (and dinner dance) was highly qualified to stand on its own merits.

Last year's Junior Week was a magnificent affair, widely touted as a classic of frolic. This year, the class of 1960 outdid itself.

Hoffman Hits VILLANOVAN Specialists

by Tom Hoffman

We, of the Student Council, were extremely fortunate in having the presence of the new Feature Editor of the VILLANOVAN visit our last meeting.

If you have a copy of last week's paper, I refer you to the feature page and an article on a "novice's" impressions of our student government.

It was very well written, showing the unusual talent of the writer, but I question his intent, or has the VILLANOVAN taken it upon themselves to "clean up the abuses of our student democratic process", single-handedly?

Right to Criticize

Certainly, I do not begrudge the VILLANOVAN the right, nor do I think that the Student Council is above criticism, but I question the validity of the new Feature Editor's impressions.

It is interesting to note that this writer clothed himself as a specialist in student government, after attending one meeting, so that he could make four more superfluous and insipid complaints.

Any student can speak at any Student Congress meeting, and this editor was so moved by the occasion and the issue upon attending his first meeting of the Council, that he rose to speak and was ruled out of order because he did not speak on the topic in question.

Is this the quality of the VILLANOVAN'S specialists? It is unfortunate that the student body can be so misguided by the words of one so unversed!

But, have you ever spent 30 hours trying to put out a paper? Wouldn't you want the students to read your finished product?

The VILLANOVAN staff has accused some of the Council members of assuming a pompous attitude. I would like to question the attitude of a few that make up the staff of our campus paper.

To the best of my knowledge there are less than ten who almost single-handedly put out the paper. They get together one night a week to decide what can be printed to catch the reader's eye and make him read it.

So they devote approximately ¼ of a page to a picture of the dilapidated stadium P & W station and an article informing the students of the "earth-shaking news" that it will soon be renovated.

Forum Speaker

On the same page in one small column they meekly informed the students that Forum was to have one of the best lawyers in Philadelphia on the next day.

The staff of the VILLANOVAN is so limited in number that they have completely stopped from "going out after a story" and have concentrated upon letting others come to them with their news articles.

Then judging upon the readability of the material they make their decision to publish it or reject it. They spend two hours — for amusement, evi-

Letter To The Editor

Cheaters Skulk From Hedge To Hedge

The muddy thinking on the subject of cheating, as expressed in the recent article in the Villanovan, is utterly incomprehensible to anyone who has the vaguest concept of honor. A cheater is a sneak and a liar, who sacrifices his most secret and sacred possession for a reward which is, at its most valuable, paltry.

In Hamlet, Polonius, advising his son, says: "This above all, to thine own self be true, and it will follow as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." Every man who lies, who cheats, is, first of all, untrue to himself.

Abandoning the inner stature by whom men of courage look every man in the face, he takes the inner aspects of a snivelling coward. But worst of all, he alone knows it. In his own eyes alone, he abandons the posture of a man and assumes that of the spineless cur which skulks from hedge to hedge, timorous of its own shadow.

Honesty Expected

The cheater lies. The work on an examination or an assigned paper is represented as one's own work. There is no avoidance of this. The student is asked, under admittedly trying conditions, to show how well he can answer certain questions or resolve certain problems.

The submitted paper, whether signed under the honor system or not, is represented as the students response to the questions asked or his solution to the problem proposed. No equivocation can avoid the conclusion that such a representation, when cheating is involved, is a lie. And a lie, small or great, despite the niggling distinctions of self-styled moralists, is a detestable thing.

If we have lied, those of us who value honor are more ashamed of our cowardice in such lies than of almost any other sin. A lie is a coward's way; a lie is sheer funk.

Honor is a secret treasure. So it is, when a man forsakes, even once, his own honor, he has lost something; though no single other person knows, he knows, and is a sorry thing.

The Marks of Man

Honor, courage, truth: these are the marks of a man. If a man possesses these, what does it matter if he be dull or slow or unlearned? What does it matter if his skills be few? He is a man whom men will respect and trust. His word is better than a contract, and his friendship, stronger than a wall. A university of such men will have wisdom. An army of such men will show strength. A nation of such men will know victory.

Cheats do not even know what I mean. They will not agree with me. Fine! I want more such dissidents. Do not trouble me with your trifling distinctions and trivial excuses.

I shall ignore you and stand in the company of Caleb, who alone of a band of spies returned true word of his mission; of Hector, noble and slain; of Regulus, who was unconquerable as a general and kept his word even to his enemies; of Brutus, the noblest Roman of them all; of Arthur Pendragon and Galahad; of Roland and Richard; of Quixote and de Bergerac; of Ahab and—yes—John Oakhurst, the gambler of Poker Flats.

Scorn of Threats

Kings and peasants, wise men and fools, nobles and occasionally scoundrels, but men all with a terrible scorn of cheats. Saints we are not, and well we know that a holy anchorite could give a considerably better account of his honor than we.

But we, too, are honorable men, and we shall stand with our apocryphal hatchet in our hand beside an even more apocryphal cherry tree and remain, at the expense of everything, honorable men.

'60 Race Lines Up Nixon vs Kennedy

"I Like Dick"

By Paul Iffland

It is unrealistic to entertain any hopes that Nelson Rockerfeller will be drafted, for he doesn't want the nomination, and the Republican Party doesn't want him. This means that Vice-President Richard Nixon will be the Republican Party's nominee for the 1960 elections.

The scene in the Democratic camp isn't quite as clear cut, but this is what I expect to happen in Los Angles. The only thing Adlai Stevenson will receive will be a few warm handshakes for the sake of old memories.

Johnson Ruled Out

Majority leader Lyndon Johnson will be ruled out for geographical reasons. Stuart Symington will be unable to convince the delegates that the only issue of any importance is the missile race.

Already, key Democrats in the Congress have called President Eisenhower's defense budget adequate.

This leaves John Kennedy and H. Horatio Humphrey to battle it out. Both these men seem to enjoy a certain amount of popular support, and it is quite understandable in Kennedy's case.

But the reason for anyone backing the man from Minnesota escapes me. Humphrey's political philosophy is thirty years old, and I don't think that the country needs a new "New Deal" at this time.

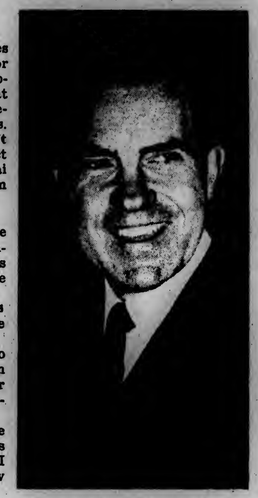
Differs With Harry

So, as much as I dislike disagreeing with Harry Truman and Eleanor Roosevelt, I predict that Kennedy will be the Democrat's choice.

When the election finally arrives, regardless of the accuracy of the above prophecies, I will vote Republican. The reason for my choice is based upon the stand taken by the G.O.P. on the following issues.

First, both the monetary and the fiscal policies of the Eisenhower administration have served as a needed curb on our economy and should be continued.

These measures will be of even greater benefit to our nation if the next President is able to make the Democratic Congress realize the need of even greater flexibility in the restrictions which now govern the refinancing of the national debt.



Balancing Factor

Secondly, I feel that a Republican President will represent a greater balancing factor in regard to the growing power of organized labor in politics.

And thirdly, I am in complete agreement with Secretary Benson's proposals for solving the farm problems.

There are many other issues which must be faced in the next four years. Our next president will be forced to handle such problems as the situation in Cuba, the position of Russia, and the stand taken by the Warren Court.

And it is my belief that adequate solutions to these problems can only come from practical Republican leadership.

Vice President Nixon

Senator Kennedy

"Give Me Jack"

By John Isselmann

In a few months the Republican and the Democratic Parties will nominate their choices for the Presidency. The Republicans have virtually selected their candidate, Richard M. Nixon.

The only contest they will have will be over which delegate will pick up the dinner tab. The Democrats, on the other hand, haven't the remotest idea who their candidate will be.

Democratic Picture

The Democratic picture looks something like this. There are five men currently mentioned as possible candidates. Three of these, Senators John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson, and Stuart Symington, are given the best chances to win the nomination.

The other two, Senator Hubert Humphrey and twice-candidate Adlai Stevenson, have no solid support and should fall by the wayside as the convention nears.

Most political observers feel that Kennedy and Johnson will arrive at the convention with about 450 pledged delegates apiece. If neither of the two can acquire the 761 votes needed for nomination, a compromise candidate, in the person of Senator Symington, will be selected.

Symington Unlikely

Symington hasn't the support shown for Kennedy and Johnson, but then again neither does he have the enemies the other two have.

It is the opinion of this writer that such a situation will not arise; rather, Senator Kennedy will win the nomination on the third or fourth ballot.

If this does occur, the religious issue will come into the picture. Even now the religious issue has been injected into the campaign, not by the Republicans, but by a few Protestant ministers. It was individuals such as these that helped kill off the chances of Al Smith in 1928.

Senator Kennedy has a number of qualities that may reduce the effect of such an attack. First, he is a handsome young man with a good background and an excellent education. Second, and most important, he is free from the tinge of Tammany Hall.

It is the fervent hope of all good Americans that the religious issue will be resolved early in the campaign and that the real issues of the campaign will be the only criterion for the selection of our next president.

With this thought in mind, it becomes apparent that only one man emerges that can direct this country through its most trying years.

Sound Judgement Needed

These next four years will call for sound judgement, based on first hand experience, on such subjects as our National Defense, Labor-Management Relations, and growing discord on Civil Rights.

Therefore, only one man can lead our country effectively for the next four years, and that is John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

Elvis Returns; Store Stocks Strange Supply

by natalie attired

BERLIN . . . WAVE THE FLAG! The big "E" is moving out. Repatriation is set for some time next month. The hip-swinging, gyrating clown in green will be cutting a new record, "Rocking Ides of March". Elvis, his guitar, and the road make three.

PASS THE PILL . . . February 6 was the night of the Sorority Dinner Dance. The Presidential played host to the pig-tailed Villanovans. Crashers were in the minority, but T. P. Sweeney and friend made the scene. The meal was good, the drinks weak, and the evening's entertainment centered around affable, chubby Tom and friend.

TAKE A NOTE . . . Purchasing a notebook is no easy task. Visiting the bookstore one finds a gigantic display of big, little, not-so-big, not-so-little, and just plain medium sized notebooks. But they are not called just notebooks; rather they are labeled "Learn-Ease", "Cheat-Ease", "Eye-Ease", Not-So-Ease" and other similar titles.

In addition they appeal to the style conscious since they come tailored as two-holed, three-holed, and four-holed bindings. (Sorry, the one button rolls aren't the Vogue this year with Hammermill Paper Co.). Paper, that's the thing!!

Acquisition of plain white is impossible. The popular spring colors of light green, walnut brown and baby blue give tint to the pages this year. NROTC students are not forgotten since there are a limited number available with a solid Navy blue decor. Also the student who is just playing the role will find comfort in the ten-cent books with solid black pages. The selection goes on and on. We wonder what ever happened to the five cent tablet.

With that, Natalie bows out. Remember you frustrated lovers!!! If she doesn't kiss you on the first date, make it the last.

St. Joseph's Student Decries Palestra Conduct

Editor's Note: This article was written as a letter by a St. Joseph's College student. The student, who understandably wishes to remain anonymous, is a psychology major studying group behavior.

A few years ago, white attending a basketball game at Penn's Palestra, I was greatly impressed by the vociferous support of the students for their favorite teams, which were busily engaged in upholding the honor and natural superiority of their respective schools.

Since that time, I have tried to avoid attending Palestra contests, except for the most important. However, being somewhat of a sports enthusiast, I have, in the past year, viewed a representative number of games.

Much to my chagrin, the oral support was now accompanied by animal gestures and music.

Monotonous Music

Someone once said that all things are generated by the combination of heat and moisture. If this is true, then the so-called spirit of our liberal colleges must have been born from the combination of beer and the irritatingly high temperature in the Palestra.

Glassy-eyed students with painted dates swing rhythmically to the capricious monotone of a primordial chant. Soon they lose all individuality and become nothing but a force pattern.

After this state is attained, anything is possible. Debris, coats, hats and even shoes are thrown; fights erupt. The only one immune to this are players.

Winning Not Important

Furthermore, even coaches participate, and as is evident to anyone who reads the BULLETIN, they are in no wise ashamed of this participation.

What are the reasons for this behavior? The true causes are subjective and vary with each individual, but what commonly serve as reasons are merely excuses.

This behavior is not to show appreciation of good performance, for I've seen the same support given to a bad performance. It is not an appeciation of a winning team, since most local colleges have established better records in other fields of athletics.

For example, Villanova has what is considered one of the best track teams in the country. How many students are on hand to cheer this fine team? In this sport, the participants sometimes outnumber the fans.

Why does this bedlam only take place at the Palestra? The Palestra merely acts as a focus. Here one may become part of the crowd, and under the pretext of school spirit, thrust off all his pent-up emotion.

Various-Type Depressives

On entering college, many men have had to give up certain pleasures and ways of life. Consequently, we have a large number of various type-depressives.

One such type, is the repressed rock and roll fan. He had to give up such pursuits on the surface, or else become a pariah. To him, participation is the re-establishing of a way of life.

Another type is one who is a member of the ever-present minority group, e.g., philosopher, millionaire, American Indian. To him, participation symbolizes defiance of his oppressors.

But now the college students are not the only participants in this state. Student support has now become a way of life. The ony requirement for entrance is lack of intelligence, and everyone knows that this is not claimed exclusively by students.

We now have the Hawks who are boiler attendants, Cats who are teamsters, and Explorers who are bank clerks.

There is, of course, a solution to the problem. The Administration should make "Spirit Courses" compulsory.

History of the Order by Thomas Mennigan, O.S.A. and John Rotelle, O.S.A.

In the formation of any kind of a society, be it a club, fraternity, or what have you, three ingredients are absolutely imperative: people, some kind of law or rule, and approbation.

In the sphere of religious orders or societies the same is true. When St. Ignatius founded the Society of Jesus, commonly called Jesuits, he followed the same pattern. With the Augustinians, however, it was quite different.

"Take and Read"

Tolle, lege. Tolle, lege. Take and read. Take and read. These words were the turning point in Augustine's life. With the utterance of these words Augustine took up and read the book of St. Paul's Epistles.

What he found there is well known: "Not in revelling and drunkenness, not in debauchery and licentiousness, not in quarrelling and jealousy: but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh, to gratify its desires." (Romans 13:13)

Augustine's passionate love of the flesh became a pure love of God; his intellectual obstacles and doubts were resolved. His decision was made. He would renounce his sinful life and the world and enter the Church.

Sought Retirement

Accordingly, Augustine sought retirement from the world with his followers in order to better know God. This concept was his constant preoccupation. Never did he envision himself as founding a great order, to preach, or do missionary work as did St. Ignatius.

His life was to be one of prayer and study in common with his followers. He had in fact established his community at Tagaste in North Africa for two years when the needs of the Church forced him to accept the office of Bishop of Hippo.

With abandoning his monastic life he added to it the active duties of the priest. This is roughly the pattern of the modern day Augustinian—a combination of active and contemplative life. However, this pattern did not come down to us unbroken from Augustine's time.

Paradoxically enough it was broken immediately following his death. His monks fled to Italy, Spain, and Gaul (France) to escape the barbarian hordes. In their new homes they lived an almost completely contemplative life for almost 700 years.

Scattered as they were, intercourse between them was practically nil so that during these seven long centuries they lived independently of one another following the rule which Saint Augustine had written for his followers. Documentary evidence of Augustinian life during this period is sparse and infrequent.

Representatives Gather

In the year 1256 representatives of the independent Augustinian branches gathered in Rome in order to unite themselves as members in the one Augustinian Order under one Superior General.

In this "Grand Union" of all hitherto independent branches of Augustinian monks following Augustine's rule, the final requirement of approbation by the Church was accomplished.

Once again the Augustinians coupled the contemplative life with the active life as did their founder when he became Bishop of Hippo. The care of souls, preaching, and missionary work again became a part of the monastic life of the Augustinian.

Augustine would never have imagined that the humble beginnings of his secluded life at Tagaste and his monastery at Hippo would one day become the great order that bears his name —the ORDER OF SAINT AUGUSTINE.

Do you think Villanova should do away with a compulsory student activities fee?

Since there is no activity in which the student is compelled to participate, it obviously means that the student is compelled to pay a fee for activities that are not compulsory and in which he might have no interest. In my opinion then, payment of the fee is incompatible with the use made of it and is therefore unnecessary.

Tom Chambers, Arts '61

I think that it is unnecessary to have a compulsory student activities fee. It seems that the greater majority of students don't have an equal opportunity to participate in all the school functions. It would be better if the students were given a choice in this matter.

Larry Mozian, Psych. '61

It is unnecessary to demand an additional expense of the Villanova student.

A compulsory fee for recreational and academic facilities seems to be more of a burden than a gift, since many of the students do not participate in the activities offered.

AMERICAN MEDICAL VOLUNTEER TELLS WHY HE'S IN INDO-CHINA

Dr. Thomas Dooley, 31-year-old physician from the U. S. who has set up a volunteer medical station in Indo-China, describes his motive in a national Catholic magazine as simply: "To help people who 'ain't got it so good.'"

The October Catholic Digest describes Dooley as a gregarious person with a flashing conversational wit.

He admits, says the magazine, that his secret ambitions include a house overhanging the ocean in Santa Barbara, but "he has traded his dreams for a hut in an unknown village in Asia two miles from a polluted river." He has a bicycle instead of a convertible and he drinks powdered coffee, though he'd prefer bourbon.

Why? "A healthier world," the physician says in the article, "is more than worth the sacrifice. I want to help (the natives) simply because we are all one family under God."

Dooley, a bachelor, says he'd like to be a priest "if I felt I was halfway worthy."

Hoffman Hits VILLANOVAN Specialists

by Tom Hoffman

dently — by attending a Student Council meeting and entirely neglect or overlook or simply refuse to see the many efforts of the Council that go on outside the meeting.

Many on campus claim that their Student Council does nothing, yet how can they ever find out if our campus main mode of communication is tied up with the passing on of superfluous trivialities or continual criticism. The last three issues of the VILLANOVAN seem to point out this trend.

Read the Product

But, have you ever spent over 30 hours trying to put out a paper? Wouldn't you want the students to read your finished product?

I would suggest to the VILLANOVAN that they reevaluate their own paper and decide upon a definite policy, which is more intent upon informing the students of what is going on at Villanova. They should get out of their office and search for the entire news and not just the superficial aspects of something, or what seems apparent to them.

I do not believe that the paper should only print those things which catch the readers' eyes, but they should give a true and accurate account of what is going on at Villanova.

Probably, this condition arose because of the apathy of our own students. How can we expect a staff of less than 10 to do all the work of putting out a high-caliber paper week-after-week and not be hit by the boredom of their position?

Donate Writers

In my estimation the student body must help the VILLANOVAN by donating more writers to the staff. Extra-curricular activities are a vital part of the college student, and the VILLANOVAN provides an excellent opportunity.

In conclusion, I hope that the new Feature Editor will continue to come to our meeting and try to find more about our Student Council, so that he may give a more accurate description of it in the future . . . and possibly decide that it does more than amuse him.

Editor's Note

Obviously, we can't allow this to pass without comment.

Mr. Hoffman blandly makes use of the quote: the VILLANOVAN has taken it upon themselves to "clean up the abuses of our student democratic process."

The origin of this quote isn't given, but it is falsely suggested that Mr. Troy (or this paper) has used it. In justice, the Chairman might have clarified this fact.

Council Publicized

On the contrary. Rather than ever saying that the Council method here has been abused, this paper's columns have been redundant with support for Council ventures.

The Council treasury and forum program were seriously backed, lest we forget. Council meetings and projects are publicized on the news pages.

But the thing at which Mr. Hoffman appears to chafe most is not the seperate items of Troy's criticism. He seems rather to resent the fact that "the new feature editor" has the brazen audacity to level criticism at the august Council.

Nowhere does he deny any of Troy's points: 1) that the Council appears too big and unwieldy; 2) that delegates engage in discourteous conversation during addressess 3) that much trivia monopolizes the agenda; 4) that the meetings provide "entertainment (not "amusement" as Mr. Hoffman states.)

Point of View

Troy's column made it clear (to us, at least) that he was writing it from one point of view: that of an uninitiated outsider giving his first impressions of meeting. He never pretended to be an "expert in parliamentary procedure."

As Troy said later, "You don't have to be an expert to recognize confusion when you see it."

The Chairman's condemnation of Troy for speaking at the meeting "out of order" certainly won't encourage non-members to attend meetings (the announced aim of the Council.)

Nowadays you must be a parliamentarian to dare to try to speak on the Council floor. If you're caught out of order, you might be denounced in the school paper.

Out of Order

It's appropriate to note that five or six of the seasoned members-in-good-standing were declared out of order at the same meeting.

(For being a "novice," Troy's views were widely applauded by more experienced observers. Even a Council Vice-President admitted that the column made legitimate points.)

We must also admit that Mr. Hoffman has donated (in his gladiatorial manner) an appreciated dose of constructive criticism of VILLANOVAN policy. And we thank him for the left-handed plea for journalism recruits. There's no doubt in our minds (as in his) that the paper's quality would increase with a substantial increase in help.

And at his suggestion, we are now even considering avoiding anything to do with the P and W station.

DEMAND CONTINUES

One of the greatest needs today is a language spoken and understood by everybody, and the time to move toward establishing an international tongue is now.

That's what Mario Pei states in the October issue of the Catholic Digest.

The tremendous increase in world travel and the even greater jump it will take in the future are cited among reasons for acting quickly.

How to accomplish teaching everyone a common language? First, says the author, let the nations of the world appoint a commission to select the language.

Second Grad Show Success

by Tony Macklin

The Graduate Theatre Department achieved its second affirmative showing in two trys with its production of John Millington Synge's "Playboy of the Western World." The play was performed Thursday through Saturday in Vasey Hall auditorium.

The show rallied from a somewhat shaky opening to attain highspots of warmth and delight. The opening pantomine scene, which is not in the published version of the play, was taken from Synge's original script. The idea of letting the audience in on the hoax (to be perpetrated by Christy) was a good one, but the pantomine of Old Mahon fell flat.

The acting was generally on a high level. Once again Jeanne Miclot gave an eloquent performance. She lit up the stage whenever she was on. Her performance ranged from flashing-eyed fire to shining tenderness.

Appealing Sincerity

She has the wonderful quality of being able to be truly moved, which in turn has a definite effect on the audience. When she was on stage the play was at its best.

Owen Klein played the male lead with finesse. He has progressed a long way, and he ably handled the key role of Christy Mahon. He proved adept at board comedy; timing his blank looks, double takes, and comic expressions for good effect.

His best work was in the scene with Pegeen and Widow Quin. His expressions of bafflement and delight gave the audience some of its greatest laughs.

For us, the most perfect male characterization came from Mike Tanney as the timid suitor, Shawn Keogh. He possesses a real flair for comedy.

He was very humorous without ever appearing strained.

As the bibulous father of Pegeen, Dick Harsberger was highly competent.

Winning Widow

Gilda Spurio was ideally cast as the Widow Quin. Her performance was admirable and far superior to her previous work in "Our Town."

Freshman Dick McIntyre did a creditable job as Jimmy Farrell. His ridiculously baggy pants were one of the hits of the evening.

Kathy Harvey was the best of the three silly girls.

Unfortunately, the play had two unconvincing performances. Tom Sines gave a damp, humorless performance as Old Mahon, Christy's "deceased" father. He had vocal limitations, and he did not show the necessary strength and broad playing that the part calls for.

In all fairness it must be mentioned that Sines had been ill days prior to the performance and it wasn't certain that he would be able to go on. Still, it appears that his was a case of unfortunate casting.

Owen Klein, Jeanne Miclot and other cast members chat at rehearsal of play.

Limited Performance

Robert Germer was weak in his initial role as Philly Cullen.

We saw the show on opening night, and the audience was surprisingly sizeable despite the bad weather. This turnout was due to the department's growing reputation, and sophomore English profs'. efforts to create budding Brooksea.

The miserable weather outside actually aided the show. The rushing wind and rain created a fresh effect.

There were some imperfections in lighting, some uneven playing, and some unconvincing stage business.

Despite these imperfections, the show had enough bright spots to provide us with a thoroughly enjoyable evening. The talent and energy of the group kept the winning streak intact.

Chauncey, the St. Bernard, seems unconcerned as Villanova students sign up as blood donors.

Red Cross Recruiting Donors Now

The legendary St. Bernard dog made an appearance at Villanova last Wednesday, but instead of bringing the usual keg of brandy, he brought the Red Cross.

Accompanying the mythical messenger of mercy were three lady volunteers of the local chapter of the American Red Cross, here for the purpose of soliciting blood donors for the annual Bloodmobile visit slated for March 9th and 10th.

Head of Group

Mrs. Milton Smith, in charge of the group, commented that the number of pledges received this year is slightly higher than last year's, but also added that this is not necessarily indicative of a greater turnout on the days of the Bloodmobile visit.

Mrs. Smith said, "We usually accept 500 pledges in order to be sure of 300 donors." The reason for this, she explained is that many students who sign up develop colds and cannot give blood on the days assigned.

Any student who gives a pint of blood is assured coverage of blood needs for himself and his immediate family for one year from the date of his donation.

But, if the maximum number of pints is received, which in our case is 300 (150 pints is the daily handling capacity of the Bloodmobile), then the same coverage is extended to the entire student body.

Late Donors

Applicants who did not previously register will be accepted by the Red Cross in the days of the Blood-mobile visit, but these applications will be restricted to those students of 21 years of age or over.

Those between the ages of 18 and 21 years may not donate blood without the written consent of a parent or guardian.

Jack Valva and Ed Scott are working with the Red Cross in taking pledges for the Villanova drive. They have permission slips available and can be contacted at the Blood-mobile table which will be set up in the Pie Shoppe at various times this week.

A.S. Plan Dinner Dance

Foremost among these events is the annual dinner dance, which will be held on April 23 at the Cynwyd Club. Music for the dance will be provided by the Esquires.

Beth Alexander Talks To Lit Club

The Literary Club and the Opera-Classica Society jointly presented a lecture by Miss Beth Alexander, a senior English major from Bryn Mawr College last Tuesday.

Miss Alexander in her lecture, Afro-Americana Folk Music, used recordings as well as her own guitar and singing voice to illustrate the various components of the music.

Africa Music

She pointed out that the American Negro drew heavily from the music of his native Africa in composing the religious work and blues songs that flourished in the pre-Civil War South.

It was during this same period that the Negro came to identify himself with the Jews of the Old Testament, waiting for a Moses or a Christ to lead him to a Promised Land.

Influence of Africa

The influence of Africa, Christianity, and the South is still present in contemporary blues songs and is even felt in modern poetry. Miss Alexander aptly exampled this with a recording of Langston Hughes reading his own poetry.

In conclusion, Miss Alexander stated that, "The epic quality and tone of the folk music effectively illustrates the fortitude of the race in overcoming all difficulties."

S.A.M. Shows Film On Decision Making Thur.

The Society for the Advancement of Management presented a film from Ohio Oil Co. entitled "You Decide," last Thursday.

The purpose of the film was to stimulate the interest of the members in relation to decision making. Several problems were offered in the form of decisions that had to be made by top management.

Following the film there was a discussion concerning the decisions made. This discussion was led by president Tom McHale.

Fr. Russell Talks To Philos. Club

The Cassiciacum Circle will hold a special meeting on Thursday, Feb. 25 at 3:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., Chairman of the Philosophy Department, will be the guest speaker. The topic of his discourse will be philosophy and philosophers.

All students who are interested in Philosophy are invited and encouraged to attend. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Ron Anderson, president of the Philosophy Club, has announced that the club will feature panel discussions and outside guest speakers at its future meetings.

The various subject-matters which will be discussed at forthcoming meetings will be: Philosophy in the Modern World, The Practicability of Philosophy, and The Future of Philosophy in an Economic World.

Arts Fraternity Pledging; Curley Named Pledgemaster

Pledging activities for D.P.M. began last Thursday. Pledgemaster Terry Curley welcomed the pledges and introduced the other pledgemasters, Bill Cassin and Bob Murphy. Senior advisors will be Jim Merikanges and Jack Daniel.

A revamped pledging system will be put into effect this year, according to President Tom Labrecque. In cooperation with Curley and a pledging committee, innovations will be made which will be "beneficial to both pledges and fraternity," according to Labrecque.

Anyone interested in pledging the Arts fraternity may receive application forms at 24 Sheehan Hall.

In other activities, Mr. Francis Coghlan of the History Department, addressed the members at a recent meeting.

Prior to the trip, the students will be shown a picture on the operations of the Stock Exchange.

Cursing Attacked As National Habit

The United States is the only civilized country in the world where blasphemy is "part and parcel of the everyday speech of men, women and even children."

That opinion is expressed in the October Catholic Digest.

Program Of The Week

Word of the Day

by Dan O'Mara

During the week of Feb. 15, Radio Station WIBG introduced a new gimmick as a public service to its listening audience.

It is called the "WORD OF THE DAY" and is designed to familiarize the listener with words that are commonly used in the English language today, However, they have a different meaning now than they did when they were originally introduced into the language.

The public service spots are being produced for WIBG by WVIL in cooperation with Villanova University's English Dep't.

Another commerical station in the Phila. area shared some of WVIL's talent recently. WHAT, an FM jazz station, had Joe Zawacki of Jazz Suite fame as its guest DJ on Sunday Feb. 14.

And speaking of DJ, Frank Thornton, a junior Arts man, has returned to WVIL recently with his edition of Waxworks. Thornton started with the Station back in 1957 as a "pop" DJ and had one of the most listened to shows on the air.

This can probably be attributed to his amicable personality behind the "Mike" and his good taste in "pop" music. Frank was also responsible for introducting "WVIL's Miss Weather Girl" to the Campus listening audience.

Word now has it that Cabrini College of Radnor, Pa. may soon be added to the WVIL listening audience. The Radio Club of this college, headed by Miss Del Sparboro, is now in the process of raising revenue to have the dormitories on their campus hooked up on WVIL's closed circuit system.

The girls are raffling off a Transistor Radio as one means of raising this revenue.

Marketing Dinner

The Marketing Club's annual Dinner Dance has been scheduled for April 24, at the Treadway Inn, St. David, Pa. Price of tickets is $7.00 per couple.

Other events discussed at recent meetings of the Club were future field trips to New York and St. Louis, and the possibility of a trip to the Scott Paper Company. Also, numerous announcements from the American Marketing Association were discussed.

Dear Capable: Dad.

Dear Dr. Frood: Recently I saw this slogan for Lucky Strike: "Remember how great cigarettes used to taste? Luckies still do." I wonder if the Lucky Strike people realize there is a most serious obfuscation here. The modifier is awkward. Does "great" modify "taste"? Or does "great" modify "cigarettes"?

'Tommy Gun' Rifles 'Cats

By Bud Simmonds

What started out to be the comeback trail turned out to be the lonesome road Wednesday night at the Palestra, as Villanova's Wildcats were defeated, 72-70, in a heartbreaker by N. I. T. bound St. Bonaventure.

After the N. Y. U. disaster, this game loomed as a big one for the 'Cats in their quest for Eastern basketball supremacy.

Led by Stith

Led by the 30 point sharpshooting of Tom Stith, the nation's second leading scorer, the Bonnies extended their win streak to eleven games and their record to 14 and 3.

The 'Cats John Driscoll put on somewhat of a shooting exhibition himself by pouring in a scorching 13 for 21 from the field for a career high of 26 points. Hubie White contributed his usual workhorse job with 16 points, 15 rebounds, plus a tremendous defensive job on Stith, the Bonnies' All-American prospect.

Although Stith the younger was the high point man for the game, sub Bill Connery was the man of the hour (or at least 40 minutes) for the visitors. The six foot one junior threw in the goal (his one and only) that broke the Wildcats' back by sneaking through the pressing 'Nova defense with nine seconds left and sinking the game winning two-pointer.

Shift Man-to-Man

The first half was nip and tuck all the way as Stith's 22 points resulted in a 39-37 Bonnie lead at the break. As the second half opened, the 'Cats shifted into a man to man defense for the second time in two games.

Hubie White then applied the cooling action to the sizzling Stith, and limited the Bonnie bomber to 8 points the rest of the way. A highlight of this ace defensive play came on a perfect snuff and steal of one of Stith's jump shots.

A towheaded junior, Ron Martin, took up where Stith left off and proceeded to garner 14 of his 18 points in the second half.

Villanova led from the first minute of the second half until three minutes to go when a St. Bonaventure drive got back the lead at 68-66. With 2:53 on the clock, the seventh and final tie came at 70-70.

The hustling Martin then made a steal as the 'Cats attempted to work the ball for a good shot. The Bonnies called a time out with 32 seconds left and set up the play which saw Connery make the quick drive and drop in the crucial deuce.

Driscoll Misses

With nine seconds remaining, the Wildcats called time and set up a play, but an out of bounds mixup saw Driscoll miss a jump, Kaminski a followup and that was all she wrote as the buzzer sounded.

As a result of his offensive effort, Stith, entering the game with 502 points, broke the St. Bonaventure single season scoring record of 507.

Rounding out the totals were Dick Kaminski with 10, captain George Raveling with 7, yeoman Tom Samuelewicz's 3, and Jim Huggard's 8 points plus his usual fine floor game.

The 'Cats dominated the boards to the tune of 44 to 22, but this control went for naught as a tough and dogged Bonnie defense was a prime factor in harnessing the Villanova attack throughout.

Cat Marksmen Make Their Mark In Upset Wins

The Villanova Varsity rifle team blasted their way to three upset victories and a new school record as they picked up the fifth, sixth and seventh wins of the season over a highly successful weekend.

On Friday, the Wildcats surprised the Coast Guard Academy, one of the top ten teams in the nation, by firing 1397 to win by 15 points. The Academy fired 1832 for their second loss of the season.

Lou Spevetz, the erratic scoring leader, came through with his finest effort of the season, firing 287 out of a possible 300 to lead the 'Cats to their upset. Charley Russel, beginning to show his last season form, placed second with 281. These were followed by Capt. Frank Murtha, 278; Ed Hogan, 278; and consistent "Tex" Coursey, 273. It was the first time in the history of Villanova that the rifle team ever beat one of the highly touted service academies.

Still hungry the next day, the Villanova marksmen smashed PMC's bid for an unbeaten season, while revenging themselves on nationally ranked Lehigh in a triangular meet.

Paced by Phil Saccacio, who fired 289 for the highest individual score of the season, and Charley Russell, 284, the sharpshooters came up with a 1414 out of a possible 1500, to break the previous record of 1408 set by Chris Kloss, Hank Miller, Fred Passerella, Walt Gould and Ed McLoughlin, in 1956.

'The Hub': Cats Greatest All-Around Since Schafer

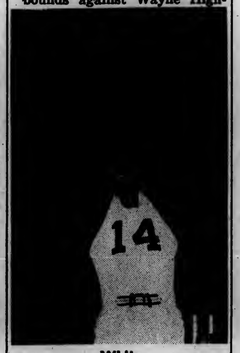
Tom Stith glided to the left of the basket, took a bounce-pass from a teammate, gracefully turned and leaped for a shot.

As Stith looked on dumbfounded, a velvety smooth, panther-quick figure soared fantastically high above him, took the ball right out of his hands, came down to the floor already dribbling, tossed a pass to one of his teammates, then sprinted upcourt to follow the play.

This was the most tremendous play in a season of tremendous plays for Hubie White, the finest sophomore in the East, and the best all since Bob Schafer's 18.5 average.

In twenty games, Hubie has averaged 18.5 points (making over 40% of his shots from the field), has rebounded well, and has played great defense. More than any other player, Hubie has been responsible for the Wildcats' fine record and high national rating.

But the "Hub" is in a strange position: because he is such a good ballplayer, no matter how well he plays, people expect him to play better.



"I hadn't even finished my freshman year, and already some of the local papers and a lot of people around here were calling me an All-American," says Hubie. "That put a great deal of pressure on me, and it's been a burden."

Much Pressure

Hubie has had pressure on him for a long time. A native of Philadelphia, he first started playing basketball at Sayre Junior High. He graduated to West Philadelphia High where he played under Doug Connelly, one of the best coaches in the city.

When Ray Scott graduated, Hubie became the man on the spot. He responded in great fashion, twice being selected to the All-Scholastic team.

In his senior year, Hubie turned in one of the all time great performances by a Philly schoolboy, scoring thirty points and grabbing twenty-five rebounds against Wayne Hightower (now at Kansas) and Overbrook.

White

Hubie received about twenty scholarship offers, but finally selected Villanova "because of its location— I wanted to stay close to my home—the beautiful campus, and because Coach Severance and George Raveling were so friendly."

Another reason the Hub picked Villanova was because he figured he would best develop his track talents at V.U.

Last year Hubie high-jumped 6'3" for Coach Jim Elliot's squad (he's done 6'6" elsewhere), set a Villanova record in the hop-step-jump (47'6"), and was a member of the 440 yard relay team which set another record (42.5 seconds).

On the basketball court, Hubie played pretty decent ball as points against St. Joseph's frosh (still another record) and averaged 28.7 points over the season.

Plays Anywhere

This season, he's been pretty good too. He's played the pivot, the corner, and backcourt on offense. On defense, he's been on the side most of the year, but has recently been playing under the basket more as Coach Severance desired more rebounding strength.

But Hubie's value to the team can't be measured in terms of tangibles. It is the intangible things that a player does that makes the difference between a good ballplayer and a great one.

When the 'Cats need a big basket, or an important rebound, or someone to stop an All-American from scoring, they look to Hubie.

Calls West Best

And the "Hub" fires in a 25 foot jump shot, or goes into the stratosphere and surrounds the missed shot, or limits a Tom Stith to eight points.

Hubie calls Jerry West the best basketball player he's seen this year. The reason West is an All-American is because he plays so well under pressure.

The pressure is on Hubie White too. And, like Jerry West, Hubie's responded magnificently. He's not an All-American yet—but he will be.

5 Fingers Make a Fist

by Tony Macklin

Maturity is a hard thing to come by.

The 'Cats still have a way to go to grow up. There are four necessary things that go into making a great team, that the 'Cats have lacked so far.

First of all, the 'Cats do not move the ball the way a good team should. Huggard controls the ball too much, he dribbles too much. At times, he looks like a miniature Atlas holding the world over his head.

There is something amiss in ball-handling. The 'Cats throw too many careless passes. Against St. Bonaventure, Villanova snatched 22 more rebounds than the Bonnies did, yet they only took one more shot. This means the 'Cats had the ball and lost it without getting a shot, twenty more times than the visitors did. A good team can not make this many mistakes.

Secondly, the 'Cats have not had the ability to hit the clutch fouls. They continually miss the first of one and one opportunities.

Hold Back Ace

Thirdly, they are not making use of their ace. The way that Hubie White has been playing recently, he must be considered the team's ace. When the going gets tough, the smart team looks to its ace. Against St. Bonnies, White didn't see the ball the last five minutes except when he himself swept a skyscraper rebound.

It is true that Coach Severance had a play worked out with twelve seconds left and the "Brown Indians" leading 72-70. White was to take a jumper from behind a double screen, but White never got the ball.

Referee John Stevens took the ball out on the far side of the court and although the 'Cats could have requested to have the ball on the near side where the play had been set up, they got confused and an impromptu play (which they got four shots out of) failed.

The fourth, and by far the greatest, imperfection in the 'Cats is an absolutely unnecessary one. Two members of the team have been chewing out their teammates in full view of the stands. These two critics are George Raveling and Jim Huggard.

I can't remember seeing any other team do this. It is bush league.

Kaminski Rattled

This snapping at the heels of a fellow player has had a detrimental effect. It has obviously hurt Kaminski's play. He is hesitant, and uncertain. He is not playing up to his capabilities. The constant hounding has sent his confidence skidding.

Certainly every member of the team has a job to do, but each also has an obligation to his teammates. He should try to contribute to each other member, rather than detract.

To take one's anger at oneself out on a teammate is a sad and hypocritical mistake. It mangles the team's solidarity.

If one knuckle (or knucklehead, take your choice) considers himself before the team. the force of the fist is not as telling. It's all right for bruising the arm, but if you're going for the whole jaw, you had better use the whole fist.

Team Effort

This is not to say that feeding an individual is wrong. If the feeding is a team effort, it is definitely good. It is when an individual puts himself before a team that you have real trouble.

Confidence is of supreme importance. When one player sacrifices a teammate, he sacrifices a part of the team's strength.

Last year St. John's had the problems that the 'Cats have now. But the Redmen won the NIT after carelessness and individuality had reared their fat, ugly heads. They won because they jelled, because they found that playing together is essential to success.

Unless the team jells, solidifies, they'll be stopped before achieving their ultimate goal. They will win some but they'll never go all the way.

The 'Cats can take Toledo, St. Joseph's, LaSalle, and the NIT if they play like a clenched fist, each knuckle leaving its mark, together belting out wins, and the title.

Good Team Spirit

The team in general has good team spirit, but they must abolish the costly moments of carelessness and thoughtless individualism, if they are to succeed. If the 'Cats aren't careful, they won't be seeded in the NIT, they'll be planted.

If greatness is going to come, it will have to hurry.

Toledo is a tough test tonight. Saturday, the 'Cats have a chance to win the Big Five crown outright. But the Hawks will be burning. LaSalle is next. Then comes the NIT.

Can the 'Cats pluck the big stitch out of the Hawk's seams, can they knit themselves together? Or when all is said and done, will it wind up as another seamy season for Villanova?

Maturity will tell the story.

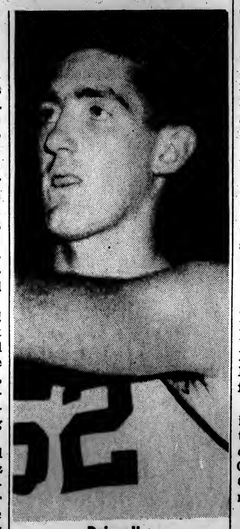
Deacons Deal Basketeers Devastating Loss in Dixie

On last Monday evening the Villanova basketball team was smashed by an 89-70 count.

The scene was Winston-Salem, North Carolina, in the Memorial Coleseum, used by the Deacons of Wake Forest as a home court.

It might be proper to say the 'Cats' last road trip turned into a funeral, with the Deacons officiating. Then elaborate on ho wthe zone collapsed under the wake of the bombing of little Billy Packer from the corners (he's 5'10" and hit 10 of his 13 field goals in the first half).

But the true picture is captured in the first lead—no excuses—the 'Cats were smashed and run off the court.



The Big Men, John Driscoll and George Raveling, weren't big enough for Frank Budd and Len Chapell, who dominated the backboards. The Soph whiz, Chapell was outstanding, scoring only 5 field goals but putting in 10 fouls and grabbing many rebounds.

Coach Al Severance countered by bringing in Tom Samuelwicz and Dave Severance who started moving the ball much better on offence. For the first time this year, playmaker Jimmy Huggard was benched and Richie Kaminski and Bob Libertore took over backcourt duties.

Then there was Hubie who fit well from the field but he found the foul line shaky again.

'Cats Out

The story behind the loss is spelled out in the fact that the Deacons out-shot, out-rebounded, out-hustled the faltering Cats

Wildcat Iceman Cometh Up With 4-1 Final Record

The Wildcat Hockey Club closed the 1959-1960 season with a 5 to 4 win over the Haddonfield Amateur Club at Haddonfield last Wednesday. This win gives the club a four and one record for this its third year.

Early Lead

Co-captain Mike Clement scored the first goal early in the first period. This was followed shortly by a score by Will Frescoln. Haddonfield rallied for a score, and the first period ended with the Wildcats ahead 2 to 1.

Two more scores at the start of the second period put the home team ahead 3 to 2. Midway through the period George McNeil and a defenseman from Haddonfield were both penalized five minutes for fighting.

Playing with 5 men against 5 instead of the usual 6 against 6, the superiorly conditioned Wildcats scored twice on goals by Co-captains Pete Smith and Mike Clement in the five minutes to retake the lead 4 to 3.

Defense Sparkles

In the third and last period, sophomore center George Del Monte scored to add another point. Fine defensive work by Kevin Shea, Jim McCormick and Frank Bozza stopped cold every scoring threat by Haddonfield until late in the final period when they scored the last goal of the game to make the final tally Haddonfield 4, Wildcats 5.

Talented Trio Pace Frosh Basketball

The Freshman team—at this writing possess a 5 won 5 lost mark with 1 game to play. Although this freshman team has great potential, it is Coach Severance's belief that a freshman team should be used to drill against the varsity in practice and develop individuals for varsity roles as they are needed.

The three mainstays of the Villanova Freshman basketball team are eagerly awaiting the time when they will have a crack at a position on the Wildcat varsity. This exciting trio of Bernie Chavis, Tom Galia, and Tom Hoover have all the tools necessary to contribute to the future of the Villanova varsity.

Hoover: 6-9, 260

The biggest freshman is Tom Hoover. Tom stands just a shade over 6'9" and tips the scales at 260 lbs. Tom played his high-school ball at Archbishop Carroll High in Washington, D. C., his hometown. While leading Carroll to the National Catholic basketball championship last year, Tom had the distinct honor of being named to the High School All-American Basketball Team. Tom led the nation's high-schoolers' in rebounds during the 58-59 season with an average grab of 31.2 a game, while scoring at a 15.3 clip per game.

Tom's talents didn't stop on the basketball court. He was a bruising fullback on the football field, and at his height and weight proved to be a devastating fullback. Hoover was besieged with 125 offers to further his athletic and academic education at various schools around the country. Even the big 10 schools offered Tom football scholarships.

Tom is 19 and a marketing major in the C & F division of the University. When pressed about next year Tom said that he would like to start, but only one man graduating and three freshmen on scholarships things will be pretty tight.

Chavis: Another Two Sport Man

"Mr. dependable" on the freshman team is Bernie Chris. Bernie possesses a wide variety of shots which include everything from a deadly jump—25 feet out—to left handed hooks from under the basket.

Bernie at 6'3" is also a fine football player and was all Metropoliton in the Washington area in both football and basketball. The Eastern High grad had various offers from universities throughout the Nation, mostly for football, but his higher regard for basketball promoted him to accept Villanova's invitation.

Like his roommate Hoover, the 20 year old Chavis is a marketing major in C & F.

The third member of this terrific threesome is Tom Galia. Tom is the leading scorer on the frosh team this year with 219 points in 9 games for a 24.3 average. Tom can be referred to as the man who is never at a loss for a shot. Galia is well known for his terrific driving ability.

Galia: High Jumping Scorer

Tom, an All Catholic selection from Saint James in Chester the past two years, was also an all-city choice last year. That is really an honor considering the high caliber of scholastic basketball played in the Philadelphia area. The former Bulldog was runnerup in scoring in the Catholic League the past two years.

Tom was also a track standout. He is holder of the Pennsylvania high jump record, 6-3. This is 2 inches taller than Tom himself.

A pre-med student, the 18 year old Galia. hopes to follow in his father's footsteps in the field of medicine.

'Tommy Gun' Rifles 'Cats

By Bud Simmonds

What started out to be the comeback trail turned out to be the lonesome road Wednesday night at the Palestra, as Villanova's Wildcats were defeated, 72-70, in a heartbreaker by N. I. T. bound St. Bonaventure.

After the N. Y. U. disaster, this game loomed as a big one for the 'Cats in their quest for Eastern basketball supremacy.

Led by Stith

Led by the 30 point sharpshooting of Tom Stith, the nation's second leading scorer, the Bonnies extended their win streak to eleven games and their record to 14 and 3.

The 'Cats John Driscoll put on somewhat of a shooting exhibition himself by pouring in a scorching 13 for 21 from the field for a career high of 26 points. Hubie White contributed his usual workhorse job with 16 points, 15 rebounds, plus a tremendous defensive job on Stith, the Bonnies' All-American prospect.

Although Stith the younger was the high point man for the game, sub Bill Connery was the man of the hour (or at least 40 minutes) for the visitors. The six foot one junior threw in the goal (his one and only) that broke the Wildcats' back by sneaking through the pressing 'Nova defense with nine seconds left and sinking the game winning two-pointer.

Shift Man-to-Man

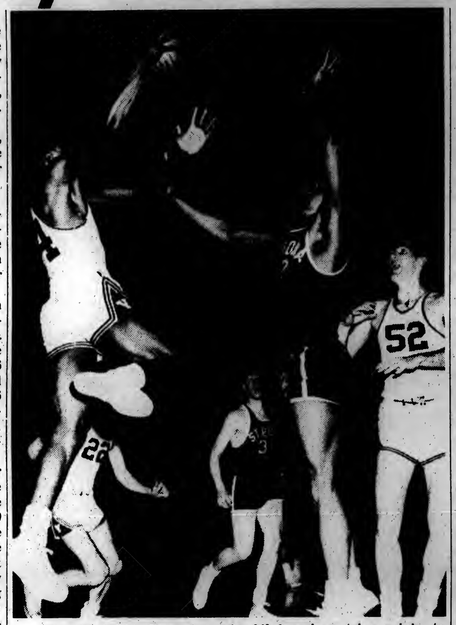
The first half was nip and tuck all the way as Stith's 22 points resulted in a 39-37 Bonnie lead at the break. As the second half opened, the 'Cats shifted into a man to man defense for the second time in two games.

Hubie White then applied the cooling action to the sizzling Stith, and limited the Bonnie bomber to 8 points the rest of the way. A highlight of this ace defensive play came on a perfect snuff and steal of one of Stith's jump shots.

A towheaded junior, Ron Martin, took up where Stith left off and proceeded to garner 14 of his 18 points in the second half.

Villanova led from the first minute of the second half until three minutes to go when a St. Bonaventure drive got back the lead at 68-66. With 2:53 on the clock, the seventh and final tie came at 70-70.

The hustling Martin then made a steal as the 'Cats attempted to work the ball for a good shot. The Bonnies called a time out with 32 seconds left and set up the play which saw Connery make the quick drive and drop in the crucial deuce.



Driscoll Misses

With nine seconds remaining, the Wildcats called time and set up a play, but an out of bounds mixup saw Driscoll miss a jump, Kaminski a followup and that was all she wrote as the buzzer sounded.

As a result of his offensive effort, Stith, entering the game with 502 points, broke the St. Bonaventure single season scoring record of 507.

Rounding out the totals were Dick Kaminski with 10, captain George Raveling with 7, yeoman Tom Samuelewiecz's 3, and Jim Huggard's 8 points plus his usual fine floor game.

The 'Cats still have a way to go to grow up. There are four necessary things that go into making a great team, that the 'Cats have lacked so far.

First of all, the 'Cats do not move the ball the way a good team should. Huggard controls the ball too much, he dribbles too much. At times, he looks like a miniature Atlas holding the world over his head.

There is something amiss in ball-handling. The 'Cats throw too many careless passes. Against St. Bonaventure, Villanova snatched 22 more rebounds than the Bonnies did, yet they only took one more shot. This means the 'Cats had the ball and lost it without getting a shot, twenty more times than the visitors did. A good team can not make this many mistakes.

Secondly, the 'Cats have not had the ability to hit the clutch fouls. They continually miss the first of one and one opportunities.

Hold Back Ace

Thirdly, they are not making use of their ace. The way that Hubie White has been playing recently, he must be considered the team's ace. When the going gets tough, the smart team looks to its ace. Against St. Bonnies, White didn't see the ball the last five minutes except when he himself swent a skyscraper rebound.

It is true that Coach Severance had a play worked out with twelve seconds left and the "Brown Indians" leading 72-70. White was to take a jumper from behind a double screen, but White never got the ball.

Referee John Stevens took the ball out on the far side of the court and although the 'Cats could have requested to have the ball on the near side where the play had been set up, they got confused and an impromptu play (which they got four shots out of) failed.

The fourth, and by far the greatest, imperfection in the 'Cats is an absolutely unnecessary one. Two members of the team have been chewing out their teammates in full view of the stands. These two critics are George Raveling and Jim Huggard.

I can't remember seeing any other team do this. It is bush league.

Kaminski Rattled

This snapping at the heels of a fellow player has had a detrimental effect. It has obviously hurt Kaminski's play. He is hesitant, and uncertain. He is not playing up to his capabilities. The constant hounding has sent his confidence skidding.

Certainly every member of the team has a job to do, but each also has an obligation to his teammates. He should try to contribute to each other member, rather than detract.

To take one's anger at oneself out on a teammate is a sad and hypocritical mistake. It mangles the team's solidarity.

If one knuckle (or knucklehead, take your choice) considers himself before the team. the force of the fist is not as telling. It's all right for bruising the arm, but if you're going for the whole jaw, you had better use the whole fist.

Team Effort

This is not to say that feeding an individual is wrong. If the feeding is a team effort, it is definitely good. It is when an individual puts himself before a team that you have real trouble.

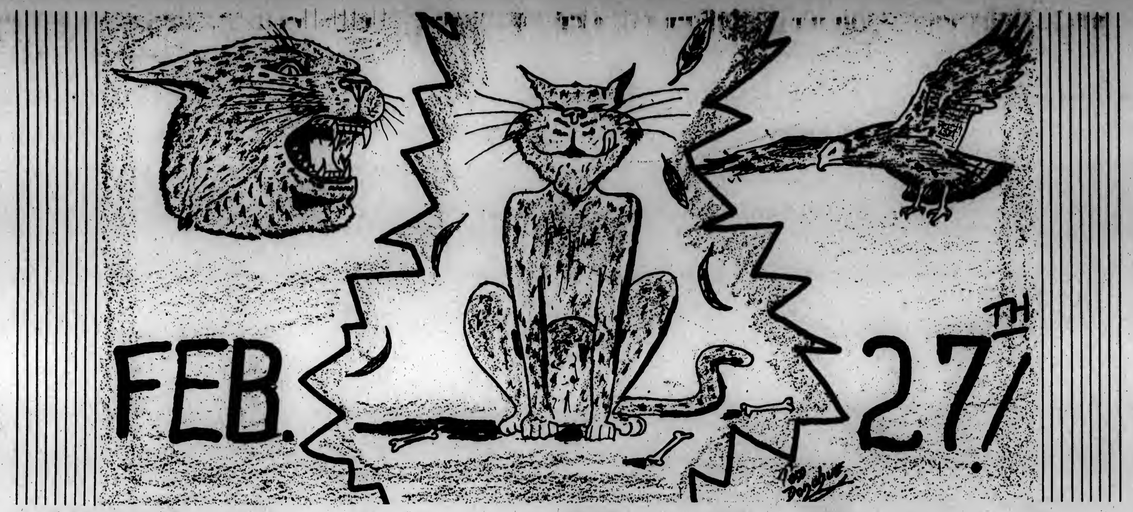
Confidence is of supreme importance. When one player sacrifices a teammate, he sacrifices a part of the team's strength.

Last year St. John's had the problems that the 'Cats have now. But the Redmen won the NIT after carelessness and individuality had reared their fat, ugly heads. They won because they jelled, because they found that playing together is essential to success.

Unless the team jells, solidifies, they'll be stopped before achieving their ultimate goal. They will win some but they'll never go all the way.

The 'Cats can take Toledo, St. Joseph's, LaSalle, and the NIT if they play like a clenched fist, each knuckle leaving its mark, together belting out wins, and the title.

Good Team Spirit



The team in general has good team spirit, but they must abolish the costly moments of carelessness and thoughtless individualism, if they are to succeed. If the 'Cats aren't careful, they won't be seeded in the NIT, they'll be planted.

If greatness is going to come, it will have to hurry.

Toledo is a tough test tonight. Saturday, the 'Cats have a chance to win the Big Five crown outright. But the Hawks will be burning. LaSalle is next. Then comes the NIT.

Can the 'Cats pluck the big stitch out of the Hawk's seams, can they knit themselves together? Or when all is said and done, will it wind up as another seamy season for Villanova?

Maturity will tell the story.

Wildcats versus Hawks Saturday

Basketeers To Meet Toledo at Palestra Tonight

Saturday night Villanova tangles with St. Josephs' at the Palestra. Before this time honored rivalry can be renewed the Wildcats face the tough Toledo Rockets in the lid lifter of a Palestra double bill tonight.

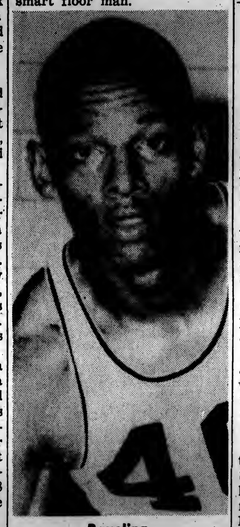
The Rockets who sport an 18-3 records have already bumped off two of the tourney selections. The victims were: Dayton 81-71 and Detroit 69-61. A victory over the 'Cats in their own back yard would be a clincher for an undecided N.I.T. berth. It would also be a terrible blow to the 'Cats chances of being seeded.

Impressive Wins

Besides the afore-mentioned victories, the Rockets hold impressive wins over: Wake Forest 70-63, Virginia Tech 48-46, Bowling Green 76-56, and Miami 56-51.

Toledo boasts an evenly balanced scoring attack and a tenacious defense. The top scorer on the club is John Papcien, a 6'5" senior forward, who has been averaging 13 points a tilt. Papcien is the possesor of a very deadly set shot from the corner, the weakest spot in the 'Cats 1-2-2 zone; he could be trouble. George Patterson, 6'7", holds down the center position.

Patterson is developing into a good scorer in the last half of a season in which he has compiled most of his 11.4 average. He is also the team's leading rebounder, pulling down about ten per game. Rounding out the front line is 6'4" Bernie Cabey, a senior. Cabey scores his points, 8 per game, on tap ins and a one hander from the corner.



In Backcourt

In the backcourt the Rockets will be without the services of Willie Newson who was averaging 10.5 points. Newson used up his eligibility during the first semester.

The vacancy will be ably filled by either Jerry Garlicki, a 6'4" junior who is chipping in 7.9 points per game, or Jim Miller, a 6'1" soph who is also averaging over 7 points.

The other guard position is held down by 5'8" Bob Pawlack, the traffic cop of the Rockets. Bob is a tricky ball handler and a competent scorer. His best night this year was a 24 point splurge against the Dayton Flyers.

Another Rocket who will see plenty of action is 6'4" senior Ned Miklovic "Mik" averaged 10 points a game as a sophomore but was inactive last season because of a football injury. He is a strong rebounder and a smart floor man.

Raveling

Saturday night the game will be played. The game is the Big Five's indoor version of the Army-Navy football classic. True, it wil not replace "Have Gun Will Travel," on the TV screen or will its outcome be headlined in the Sunday newspapers from coast to coast.

But it still is the game, as far as the lusty lunged, and lucky ticketholders at the Palestra are concerned.

The game pits the sometimes down but never out St. Joseph Hawks, against the emotional and faltering Villanova Wildcats'. On its outcome hangs: A Big Five Championship for the Wildcats; a possible past season tourney bid for the Hawks, and the pride of the thousands of fans and alumni from both schools.

Caused Incidents

Already the game has caused some curious incidents. At Villanova, mobbing ticket seekers ripped a heavy door from its hinges at the V. U. iFeldhouse. At St. Joseph's, a high official warned the students body that its actions would be closely watched during the fray.

St. Joseph's coach Jack Ramsay has already predicted a win, which Villanova's long suffering mentor Al Severance has remained unusually quite.

Last year, on Jan. 9, the Cats lost the game, in fact they lost it by 11 points, in the process they lost the Big Five Title.

Some say they choked and others say the Hawks just had too many horses. The Villanova cheering section borrowed the famous Dodger saying, "Wait till next year." Here it is next year and the Dodgers have won the Series.

K. of C. Meet Last Before IC4A'S

by Mike Donahue

Villanova's ever improving "young" track team with an eye toward the upcoming IC4A championships, is currently prepping for the Knights of Columbus games in New York Saturday night.

This weekend's meet will be the final tuneup before the annual indoor collegiate championships meet March 5 at Madison Square Garden.

As things appear now five teams are in the running for the IC4A crown, indicative of indoor collegiate track supremacy.

Maryland, featuring sprinter Jonas Spiegal, and Penn State, with a plethora of talent, figure to have a good chance to be close to or at the top.

Yale and Manhattan

Yale, paced by middle distance men, Tom Carroll, Ed Slowik, and Jim Stack, and Manhattan, boasting strength in the field events in the person of Joe Marchiony and board headliners in Artie Evans and Kyle Courtney, and in their two relay teams, both stand excellent chances of copping the diadem.

The real dark horse of the five, though, might be the Wildcats of Jim Elliott and Jim Tuppeny. The 'Cats have shown gradual but steady improvement from the outset of the season up until now.

The Main Liners' strong suits are their crack mile relay team, which has won in all but one meet thus far and solid team depth. Both showed to advantage in the National A.A.U. meet held last Saturday in New York.

As per usual Jumbo Jim's fine mile team waltzed to victory, a fact in itself not too startling. However, the circumstances under which the win was perpetrated are noteworthy.

DeAngelis Skips Relay

Ever since Bob Coffill's metatarsal injury, Elliott had been deploying Otie Drayton, Nick DeAngelis, Joe Manion, and Bob Raemore in the mile. But last weekend Elliott decided to enter DeAngelis in the 1000 since Coffill was ready to run again. Saturday, however, Elliott found himself short a man when anchorman Raemore turned up with a heavy cold.

Jumbo then called on another talented sophomore, Carl Wagner, to fill the breach. Wagner did exactly that and then some as he sped to a 49.5 second leg which helped the 'Cats post a 3:17.7, their third fastest time of the year.

The other times were: 50.7 for Dayton, 49.8 for DeAngelis, and 48.7 for anchorman Manion.

'Cats Tie Jaspers

The win vaulted Villanova into a second place tie with Manhattan in team scoring with 10 points. New York A.C. tallied the most points, 20.

Though this was the only Wildcat first place of the evening, three other Wildcats managed to score.

Drayton finished third in the 60 yard dash behind Paul Winder of Morgan State and Dan Miller of Maryland State. It was the Cleveland comet's best effort to date in the dash this season.

Pat Nicastro, running in the 1000 for the first time this season placed a commendable fourth. His time was 2:13.2, only four tenths of a second behind winner Carl Weisiger's clocking 2:12.8.

Didn't Compete

In previous meets Nicastro had confined his efforts to the two mile relay team. Saturday night, however, Elliott did not enter his two mile quartet.

The other 'placer' was Nick DeAngelis, who finished third in the 600. The versatile junior covered the distance in 1:12.4, seven tenths of a second behind Tom Murphy of the New York Athletic Club.

Buckley Fails to Qualify

Non-qualifiers for the 'Cats in the A.A.U. festival included Leon Pras, Jerry Donini, Billy Joe, and John Buckley.

Pras, sophomore hurdler, managed to reach the semifinals of the 60 yard highs before being eliminated from competition.

Donini and Joe, sophomore and freshman shotputters, respectively, failed to qualify for the finals.

Buckley, two time outdoor IC4A broad jump champ, was far off form as he failed to qualify in the event eventually won by Bo Roberson with a world record leap of twenty five feet nine and one half inches.

Mission Dance Set For Field House March 11

Preparations are now nearing completion for the eight annual Shamokinaki Mission Dance, to be held Friday, March 11, in the Field House.

Ticket committee chairman, Ken Horn, announced that sales are now underway daily in the Pie Shoppe, and a canvassing of the dormitories is planned for next Tuesday night.

Rev. Robert Burke OSA, moderator of the entire fund-raising drive which is centered around the dance, declared that "this year's affair promises to be one of the most elaborate and memorable mission dance to be held here at Villanova. Several pleasant surprises seem to be in store for all who attend."

Chapel Collections

In past years, the funds raised by the dance have been supplemented by collections taken up in the various Religious classes, a practice no longer permitted by the University.

To make up for this source of funds, collections have been taken up among the residents at chapel exercises, and from the day students in the cafeteria.

"However," declared dance chairman Bruce Strum, "the response has not been as favorable as we had expected. We hope a greater number of students will take advantage of the especially low-priced tickets during the next week.

"The dance wil be worth every cent, and the cause is certainly a worthy one."

Tickets on Sale

Student tickets may be purchased for $1.50 until next Tuesday midnight, when the usual price of $2.00 will become effective. Tickets may be purchased at the door on the night of the dance as well.

Debate Tourney

The Villanova Debate team, under guidance of Mr. Richard McDonough, will travel to Hofstra College Friday for the annual Hofstra Invitational Tournament.

Other major tournaments on the Spring agenda feature West Point, St. Joseph's College, King's College, and New York University, and Brooklyn College.

School Beneficiary Of Will Left By Strafford Woman

Villanova University is a major beneficiary under the terms of Margaret Devereux Barber, Strafford widow who died January 11.

The will has been admitted to probate in the office of Chester County Register of Wills, J. Morris Jackson. It disposes of an estate valued in preliminary estimates at $199,000.

Mrs. Barber, widow of insurance executive, George T. Barber, lived at 73 Old Eagle School Road, Strafford. She was 77 when she died.

Estate Residue

Villanova and Mrs. Barber's stepson, Hunter Francis of Hartford, Conn., share equally in residue of the estate. Bequests to members of her family, charitable institutions and friends total approximately $100,000.

The remainder is divided equally between Villanova and the stepson. Smaller bequests went to Bryn Mawr Hospital, St. Monica's Catholic Church in Berwyn, St. Katherine of Siena Catholic Church in Wayne, Rosemont College and Overbrook School for the Blind.

Mrs. Barber named J. Barton Rettew, Jr., Strafford and West Chester attorney, as executor of the estate.

Three Organizations Lose Vote In Student Council

In action taken by the Student Council last week three organizations, the VILLANOVAN, the Pershing Rifles, and the Pre-Law Society, were suspended for one month.

The penalty resulted from failure of the organizations to submit their monthly reports promptly. The suspension allows for attendance at the Council's Congress meetings but disallows voting privleges.

Steve Carton, chairman of the Fraternities and Societies Committee, announced the suspensions, noting that the Pershing Rifles had failed to submit any report.

He also warned of similar action to be taken in the future if these and other organizations fail to cooperate.

Carton also announced the Nursing sorority's application for admission to the Council.

Pi Theta Chi, in a recent reorganization move, has opened its membership to students of the Nursing curricula.

Eileen Greyson, Nursing representative to the Council, spoke for the sorority. She expressed Pi Theta Chi's interest in the Council and pointed out the sorority's growth which made it more representative.

Veterans of the Council recalled the conflict that developed when the Nursing division applied for a seat several years ago.

Despite a great deal of behind-the-scenes mumbling there was no actual parliamentary debate.

The situation seems to be changed now as the application for admission and Miss Greyson's talks were received without any audible disfavor.

Discussion and the actual voting for seating will take place at next week's Congress meeting.

"Council Is A Clique"

Jim Merikangas gives impromptu rebuttal to Jack King's rebuttal at Council meeting.

King Blasts Merikangas On Council "Clique Issue"

Jack King took sharp exception to an article appearing in last week's VILLANOVAN quoting Jim Merikangas' accusation that the Student Council is under "clique control."

Taking the floor at the biweekly meeting, King vehemently charged Merikangas remarks with sabotaging all the constructive work that the Council has undertaken this year.

Alarming Aspect

In a prepared statement, King said: "The alarming aspect of this article was that it was written by a member of the Council itself.

"I firmly believe in freedom of expression in the paper but I feel that this artcle hias cast an undeserved bad light on the Council. The complaints stated in this article should have been aired on the Council floor . . .

"As it stands now, the uninformed student probably envisions a Council in which dissension exists. I wish to go on record that I honestly believe no such thing exsits in our Council except perhaps in one or two isolated cases."

King disputed the remark about "clique-control."

"The clique," he said, "which this individual referred to is purely a figment of his imagination. A clique is defined as a small exclusive set of snobbish people.

No Such Group

"Is there such a group in the Council? Most certainly not. I will say that such a group could appear to exist since at most meetings only a few members are continually heard from.

"To me this doesn't indicate the presence of an elite group of individuals who purposely set themselves apart and rig meetings. Rather, it appears that too many members of the Council are becoming acquiescent."

King went on to refute the rest of the article. Merikangas, meanwhile, appeared surprised by King's speech. He sought and received recognition from the floor and delivered an impromptu rebuttal to King's defense.

Merikangas, who represents the Physics Club, vocally reaffirmed the charges in his article.

"After saying that the Student Council dance (last weekend) would be reasonably priced in order to put the motion through, the clique caused the price to be double the price of the Shamokinaki dance price.

Real Power

"The real power in this Council is not in the hands of the people, but in the hands of the small clique. The real power is right here (he gestured toward the Chairman's podium)."

Both received scattered ovations following their talks: King from the full-vote side; Merikangas from the half-vote side.

Merikangas later stated that his intention in the heated foray was to tell the Council members not to allow themselves to be "carried along by the decisions of the committees and the senate without full consideration of the implications of their motions."

Merikangas also charged that the "clique" was the responsible for deciding for themselves (through the VILLANOVAN) when the free day will be.

School Receives Freedom Award From Foundation

The speaker for the Law Forum tonight will be the Honorable David Berger, Solicitor of the City of Philadelphia.

Mr. Berger is a graduate of the U. of Pennsylvania Law School and is a member of the Philadelphia, American, and Federal Bar Associations. He served as Special Assistant to Earl G. Harrison, Director of Enemy Alien Information; Special Assistant to the District Attorney, member of the Council for Citizens Committee for the Charter, and Visiting Lecturer to the U. of Pennsylvania, Graduate School of Medicine.

Villanova University has recently received the George Washington Honor Medal Award.

The award, accepted last Friday afternoon by the Reverend Joseph Gildea,, O.S.A., was given as a recognition of activities and expressions which increase understanding of the American way of life.

The Freedoms Foundation was organized in 1949 as a strictly awards foundation, and annually presents recognition of this type to public figures, teachers, school systems and colleges. The underlying purpose being to reward and to stimulate propagation of the basic principles upon which our Republic, Constitution, and Bill of Rights have been constructed.

An integral part and significant affector in capturing this award for the University was the Villanova Law Forum, and its basic ideology for advancing the knowledge of the law and its achievements.

In the past the Law Forum has done this by presenting such noted persons as Catherine Drinker Bowen, the biographer of Chief Justice Holmes; Stanley K. Hornbeck, U.S. Senator; and Edmund S. Muskie, U.S. Senator.

Philosophy Prof. Delivers Lecture

Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, assistant professor of philosophy at Villanova, will deliver the Aquinas Lecture on March 7 at Georgian Court College, Lakewood, N. J., as the highlight of the commemoration of the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas.

"Progress and Modern Man" will be the topic, and the discussion will center around the question of whether modern progress represents the greatest achievement of the human mind; or whether man should lessen his pace of progress for fear that any additional advance would simply drag him deeper into the abyss of dehumanization and depersonalization.

Jim Phillips and "Sam"

Students Turn Out In Large Numbers To View AF Exhibit

The United States Air Force Information Team, headed by Captain Cletus L. Wadlow, USAF, recently spend three days at Villanova University.

The Team, accompaniel by "Sam" — the space man, was located in Dougherty Hall on March 23, 24, and 25, to advise students concerning Air Force Officer programs available to college graduates.

Captain Wadlow commented on the large number of students students who stopped by to talk to the team. He stated that "the insterest displayed in America's number one space team was a wonderful indication of the great job that Villanova is accomplishing. In today's ago of space, the emphasis is clearly on education."

The Air Force team cited the "excellent cooperation and reception" by the faculty and students.

Those students who were unable to talk to the team and who would now like to discuss the programs offered, as well as the opportunities available for graduate work, may contact Captain Wadlow at the Lafeyette Building, 437 Chestnut St., (Room 512), phone MArket 7-6050, in Philadelphia.

Chem Department Submits Papers To Chemical Society

Three members of the Chemistry Department presented papers before the Delaware Valley regional meeting of the American Chemical Society, held on February 25 at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia.

The meeting was also attended by junior and senior members of the Villanova Chemical Society, and by a number of graduate Chemistry students. Eminent scientists, educators, and industrialists from the Philadelphia area participated in the meeting.

Simultaneous Events

The conclave was so arranged that many papers, exhibits, and of Inorganic Chemistry, read discussions were taking place simultaneously. Mr. William J. Barnhurst, assistant professor "Institutes for High School Chemistry Teachers," prepared by him and Dr. G. N. Quam, chairman of the Chemistry Dept.

Dr. Kenneth O'Driscoll, assistant professor of Physical Chemistry, presented his "Dead-End Polymerization with Redox Initiators;" and Mr. James Purcell, a graduate student, read "Chrystal Structure of Zinc Glutamate," which was prepared by him and Dr. T. H. Doyne, assistant professor of Biochemistry.

Students' Symposium

In the morning, a students' symposium featured discussions on vocational and educational opportunities, and plans for a student "meeting in miniature" were initiated.

Another attraction were the exhibits displayed by over 40 scientific companies.

Concert Band Gives Recital At Nursing Home

Villanopa's Concert Band, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, opened its concert season last Wednesday at St. Francis' Nursing Home in Wilmington, Delaware.

The Villanova ensemble features for the first time in its history a female band member. She is Kathy Cox, freshman nurse.

Fiss also disclosed that this group will march in the annual St. Patrick's Day parade in New York.

Singers Perform Selections From Popular Musical

The Villanova Singers, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fiss, performed for the students at Cabrini College last Tuesday.

The Program centered around selections from the Broadway show, "Brigadoon," and included several popular numbers, all sung to the accompaniment of Lou Martucci at the piano.

Soloists featured on the program were John Anthony, singing "Every Day Is Ladies Day" and Bom Lombardo singing "Come Back To Sorrento".

The final number of the performance was the Villanova Alma Mater, rendered by the entire group, with a solo by Pete Bonfanti.

In other Singers activities, a performance was given last Wednesday night to the nurses at Fitzgerald-Mercy Hospital in Darby.

Lynx Calls For More Material In Future Issue

The Lynx is now accepting material for the Spring issue. According to Frank Murtha, editor of the campus literary magazine, some material has already been accepted, but there are still many openings.

"We want to publish a larger magazine than usual," Murtha stated. "But of course the key to this is how much good writing is submitted. We will not publish sub-par work just for the sake of quantity. So we are now making another appeal for material."

Murtha continued that "the last issue was quite well-received. Like certain other cultural forms on campus we seem to be on an upward trend."

Poetry Popular

The Lynx is accepting short stories, one-act plays, essays, and poetry. Poetry editor Jim Merikangas declared, "As usual we have received a great deal of poetry, but we still can use more." He also felt the Lynx needs a "good critical essay or two."

Managing editor Anthony Macklin was much less enchanted. "I hope the editors can produce a little more than we did in the last edition. A little more than zero."

Material to be submitted to the Lynx should be taken to Dr. John Phillipson or Mr. James Mitchell in the English office, third floor Vasey Hall or to Frank Murtha's room in 215 Sheehan Hall.

"I Remember Mummie" Title Of Turf N' Tinsel Show

Rehersal has begun for this year's Turf and Tinsel production, "I Remember Mummie".

This year's story is a take off on the recent "Payola" scandals and the more notorious "TV" frauds. Against a background 600 BC Egypt, the show begins with the return of A. H. Jr. from college, to go into business with his father, A. H.

During this time, Mummies Inc., his father's company, was sponsoring the annual Miss Nile Contest. A. H. Jr. is shocked to discover that his father has rigged the contest to have Miss Amazon win. The show is built around this theme.

Has Romance

Meanwhile, interweaved through the main plot are a romance between A. H. Jr. and one of the companies designers. Also, A. H. is trying to build a pyramid for retiring.

He wants to be the only builder of a pyramid with a roof. However, A. H. runs into a little bit of difficulty because the Pharaoh wants all pyramids built for Pharaohs only.

Father Syvinski announces that rehersals are being held in the Blue Room of the Field House on Tuesday and Thursday nights. He also commented favorably on this year's tremendous Freshmen turnout.

George Pequinot a general coordinator, also acting as the production manager reported that after early difficulties all is well.

Pequinot said that because the sixty show is a week after the students return from their Easter holidays it is necessary to prepare the program before Easter.

SEA Elects Parnell To Succeed Jim Rolls

Edward Purnell, junior Education major, has been elected to the presidency of Villanova's Student Education Association, announced Dr. George R. Cressman moderator of the Association.

Purnell replaces James Rolls as head of the organization. Other officers are Philip Ludlowe, vice president; John O'Donnell, secretary; and John Phipps, treasurer. George McGinley will serve as Student Council representative.

The elections were held at the Association's first meeting of the spring semester.

Faculty Panel Probes Possible European Unity

The International Relations society, sponsored an unprecedented faculty panel program last Wednesday in Dougherty Hall. The topic for the discussion was: "Prospects for European Unity—1960."

The symposium, which was opened to all students, consisted of three principal speakers—Dr. Alexander Rudhart, Dr. Henry L. Rofinot, and Mr. Francis Coghlan—and a moderator —Mr. Thomas Mentzer; all of whom are members of Villanova's History and Political Science Department.

After an introductory address by IRS moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova, explaining the purpose of the society and outlining the agenda for the discussion, Mentzer opened the program by remarking that the only way in which the rise of a new Hitler could be prevented, would be through a united Europe. After stating that the NATO was the most impressive attempt yet toward European unification, Dr. Rudhart took over the program with his topic, "NATO—Its Meaning Today."

Dr. Fritz Nova (left) moderator of IRS, delivers the opening address of the panel. Mr. Francis Coghlan and Dr. Henry Rofinot listen in preparation for their commentary.

Rudhart made the point that NATO is now in the position where it can no longer exist as a strictly "negative approach" toward unity. Originally organized after World War II as a deterent to the Soviet advance in Europe, Rudhart stressed that political and economic provisions are now needed to hold the organization together.

He paralleled the danger of a sole military alliance by examining the break-up of the U. S., Britian, France and Russia alliance after the Second World War, and stressed the importance of a new positive approach.

Rudhart went on to say that the beginnings of a NATO break can presently be seen in the case of France and West Germany. After the War a congenial reationship was held between the two nations, but lately their differences have come to the fore. "German shipping has been stopped at sea by the French," said Rudhart, "who have shown no respect for international law; a new stand by DeGaulle on France-German boundaries has strained the relations between the two nations."

Mr. Coghlan, who had been introduced by Nova, as "Welsh, Irish, and English,—50% of each" took the floor after Rudhart and his topic was, "The European Common Market and the European Free Trade Association."

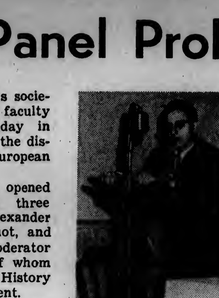
"I did not realize the problems of unity until I came to this country, said the English native. "Churchhill advocated unity out of power, but had nothing to do with it while he was in power."

Coghlan explained that England saw a chance here for unity and in 1955, she had the four member nations reduce tariff barriers for each other and in 1957 a treaty was signed between the four nations and Holland and Belgium to create mutual economy between the six nations known as the common market.

"Although there are many technical problems to be solved," Coghlan concluded, "if these two associations ever unite, they will exceed the trade of both the U. S. and Russia; and by 1970 should become a vast free trade area."

The final speaker in the discussion was Dr. Rofinot who dealt with "The U. S. Stake in European Unity." He held that the U. S. approach to foreign policy has been divided as whether it should be realistic or moralistic. As an example he pointed out the fact that during World War II, we accepted Russian aid. The fact that we should not have accepted their help was idealistic; the fact that we needed their assistance was realistic.

"During World War II we persued a realistic policy and since the war our's has been an idealistic policy," stated Rofinot. "A idealistic type of foreign policy was introduced by Woodrow Wilson when he refused to recognize the Mexican Government."



Rofinot alledged that at present our foreign policy is a combination of both idealism and realism. Idealistic, for it it wages an unending battle against Marxism; unites Europe against Marxism. And is realistic for we no longer have to be the chief anti-Marxist; also we can no longer be economically, politically, and psychologically the lone fighter of Russia; also our present foreign policy is a psychological advantage to the Europeans—in that they are not hanging by our string any more, and is also one to the Americans —in that they no longer feel that they are the sole support in the free world.

The professor also denounced the U. S. tendency toward isolationism. "Our policy of isolationism was fatal in the 1920's as was our nuetralistic policy of the 1930's," he declared.

Portrette

Coghlan Teaches History And Coaches Rugby

Among the few faculty members at Villanova from abroad is Mr.. Francis Coghlan of the Dept. of History and Political Science.

Coghlan

Born in Cardiff, Wales, Mr. Coghlan attended college at the University of London and the London School of Economics. Subsequently, he came to the U.S. where he attended Notre Dame on a Rockefeller fellowship.

After receiving his M.A. at Notre Dame, he came to Villanova. He's been completely assimilated here. While he teaches both American and European History, his forte is Modern English History and American Economic History.

Besides being a member of the American History Society and the Conference of Commonwealth Studies, Mr. Coghlan has another significant distinction.

He's coach of the newly-formed rugby team.

While at college, he played rugby and is now in the process of developing a good team here. The team has had good participation so far, and it will soon be scheduling varsity games.

Last Thursday, Mr. Coghlan was a member of the IRS panel-presentation on European Unity. His comments on Unity are significant.

In the long run he sees the possibility of European unity, but certainly not before 1970. The key to political unity lies around economic unity.

Until this is accomplished, free Europe will remain politically divided. He says that the major role of this unification will be played by England, France and Germany.

Mr. Coghlan sees the presidential election as a Republican victory.

"Nixon will be elected providing prosperity continues and providing there is no international world crisis which would discredit the Republican party. Such a crisis would be if the Soviets moved into Berlin."

Speaking on Senator Jack Kennedy, Mr. Coghlan believes that his nomination on the Democratic ticket will be doubtful.

"Kennedy is too controversial. Not so much because of his religion but because he is a New England Liberal, an aristocrat."

Villanova P.L.C. Group Largest Unit In Country

Captain A. W. Ruete, Jr., U.S.M.C., officer in charge of the Marine officer selection office of the Pennsylvania area, has recently announced that Villanova University currently has more students enrolled in the Marine Corps' Platoon Leaders Class program than any other college in the country.

Captain Ruete attributes much of this success to "the Semper Fidelis Society of Villanova, under the direction of its president Richard Delaney". At present there are approximately 65 men enrolled in the PLC program at Villanova.

70 Members

The Semper Fidelis Society has a membership of 70 persons including PLC's, NROTC Marine Option Students, Marine reservists, veterans, and students generally interested in the Marine Corps.

The chief objective of the society is to provide students enrolled in the Marine Officer training programs at Villanova an opportunity to prepare themselves physically, professionally, and morally for their duties as Marine officers.

During the year the society gives instructions in such subjects as history, drill, weapons, etc. At the present time the society is holding classes in map reading in conjunction with the Navy program directed by Major John Rooney, U.S.M.C. These courses are offered to give the members a background in courses they will receive while attending summer training at Quantico, Virginia.

Change of Command

Wiele Moakley

Wiele and Moakley Named Middie Officers in NROTC

Several changes have been executed in the commands of the Villanova N.R.O.T.C., it was announced by Cmdr. Claude Frazier, USN.

Frazier, executive officer of the Villanova installation stated that the changes were made "to give added experience and to reward men who have demonstrated qualities of leadership."

Fred Wiele retained command of the battalion, but all company commands were transferred. The posts of Executive Officer and Operations Officer of the battalion went to Tom Moakley and Steve Mahle, respectively. Company Commands went to John Nolan ("A" Company), Jim Weinert ("B" Company), and John Costano ("C" Company).

Band A Drill Team

Thomas Derr was appointed Band Commander, and the Command of the Drill Team was given to John Holas. Holas has revealed that the Drill Team has accepted an invitation to the annual St. Peter's College Invitational Meet, which will be held in Newark, N. J., on March 5.

Holas also declared that he expected the team to better its third place finish of last year, in anticipation of attending the Cherry Blossom Tournament in Washington, D.C.

Example From I.R.S.

In the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall last Wednesday, the Student Council Chairman was wearily punctuating a rather pointless meeting with the remark that "ideas for projects are withering.' It was part of a plea for members to please try and improvise some decent legislation for discussion at the next meeting.

And while the chairman was despairing that the field of originality was in need of irrigation, an interesting experiment was in progress just two doors down the hall in the East Lounge.

Here it was that three distinguished faculty members from the Department of History and Political Science were engaged in an animated panel discussion on the "Prospects for European Unity—1960."

The International Relations Society of Villanova under Joe Pultorak, with nothing to lose, had engineered one of the most highly successful undergraduate ventures of the year.

Here was free opinionated thought for the asking, and a gratifying number of Villanovans seized the invitation. It's generally hoped that IRS follows this panel with another and another, perhaps on a regular basis. And if the project achieves the reputation it deserves, it might even lure a few faculty members to its presentation. It's a matter of interest that there were five whole faculty members in the audience of 100. (Rosemont College girls almost matched them with a delegation of three.)

To return to our original discourse—what, oh what, can the Student Council do, now that original ideas are starting to wither?

A short walk down the hall after the Council meeting (which a scanty few members took) to the IRS panel could have provided a hint of possible Council activity. Here was a minority co-curricular organization, without any shadow of a $3,000 treasury, conducting with a fervor we thought obsolete, a humble project which strangely suggested our purpose for attending college.

The Council certainly would have nothing to lose and everything to gain if it launched a similar project. With all its resources, it could easily match the performance of IRS if it so desired. And unlike IRS, it could muster panelists from a greater variety of departments—English, Philosophy, Industrial Administration, Psychology, etc.

In the field of academics, the Council has shown some aptitude this year. It has marshalled a limited number of students to its assortment of highly respectable forums. It's now working fervidly to attach a fine arts course to the curriculum (negotiations are still in progress).

A faculty panel is a scheme that's been untried by the Council. If that body is actually destitute for fresh notions, we suggest that a representative of the Council huddle with Mr. Pultorak in the near future.

A Few Suggestions

There are, however, a few suggestions that IRS might consider for their next panel.

The fact that the panel discussion was being broadcast over WVIL had disadvantages which nullified the advantages. The broadcast might have added to the potential audience (a worthy intention), but at the same time it subtracted from the general candor of the speakers.

Most of them appeared fully conscious that they were courting a radio audience, and they were tempted to assume their best public poses. The East Lounge is near enough to points of WVIL coverage that interested parties shouldn't find it too strenuous to walk to the panel in the future.

Another suggestion: extend the length of the post-panel question and answer period. Again, electronic demands of the radio station made it necessary to terminate questions from the floor after a slight twenty minutes, just when the vigor of questions and answers appeared to reach a crescendo.

These are suggestions which are intended in no way to detract from the exhibition of exhilarating discussion which took place.

Move out buster, there's only room for one of us

Counterpoint

What Are Niggling Distinctions?

By TOM WOLF

The letter published by the VILLANOVAN last week was written in such thunderous prose that we were left too speechless to comment at the time.

Entitled "Cheaters Skulk from Hedge to Hedge," it attacked in vivid language the recent article in the VILLANOVAN.

The writer further stated, tapping from an admirable reservoir of literary and biblical references, that the article (written by Lou Flanagan) "is utterly incomprehensible to anyone who has the vaguest concept of honor."

This attitude betrays, in our minds, a corner of opinion in this university which contends that the problem of cheating is so reprehensible that it should be left un-discussed.

They hold that cheating is absolutely black, and that there can be no shades of gray in the matter. It's like the sin of murder: there can be no equivocation on a matter of morals.

Indeed, the writer of the letter accuses us of "equivocation." In searching through the article, we could find no hint that the sin of cheating was ever rendered the slightest bit moral by Flanagan or by any of the persons quoted therein.

If it's a question of whether cheating is immoral, we must say yes and thereafter stand mute.

But religion and philosophy have taught us about extenuating circumstances, and how they affect a sin on the personal level. The article, as approached by Flanagan, delved into the factors which might require that a little gray be added to the picture.

As the article said, there may be reasons for cheating, but there are no excuses. We set out to explore these reasons.

If our educational system makes the student feel justified in intellectual dishonesty, then it appears that thoughtful consideration should be spent to learn if there are any factors which encourage cheating.

Certainly the "honor of Hector, noble and slain," should be the prime deterrent from cheating. But why create unnecessary, functionless obstacles for the student (as, perhaps, the pressure of grades)?

This should not be the attitude: let's see how honorable Jones is; let's create a few more temptations to cheat and see how he resists.

When Dr. Robert O'Shea, in the article, said that "the cheater is not basically immoral," he didn't mean that cheating is not immoral.

The writer of the letter, handy as he is with biblical references, probably remembers words to the effect—hate the sin but love the sinner.

Priests have told us that prohibition was a useless inanity which erected an artificial opportunity for easy crime.

Do you think a student-professor coffee hour would be of mutual benefit to both parties in reducing misunderstandings, helping the student with scholastic difficultes and gving the teacher off-the-cuff information as to what may be of help to him in getting his lectures across in class?

Yes I think such an arrangement would be beneficial to both parties. The five or ten minutes before and after class is the only time available to many students for such informal talk. This informal talk is very important to a proper relationship between student and professor. The student can get to know the professor better and the professor can use some of the student's suggestions to improve his lecture periods.

Don Tieri, Poli. Sci., '61

Yes, this would give the student an opportunity to get to know his professor better and to understand his viewpoints. It would give the student more time to discuss the problems and opinions of the professor with the professor, rather than a fellow student who would tend to share the student's opinion. In short, I think it would strengthen student-professor relationships.

Pat Hand, Education, '63

It would seem to me that anyone who actively participated in his class would certainly get to know his professors well enough, and if a student ever desires to meet privately with a professor he could do so easily enough, as I understand that they all have office hours set aside for just this purpose.

Charles Baumis, English, '60

Yes, by the establishment of a closer relationship between professor and student, the ideas of one can be known and appreciated by the other. The inhibitions of the student can be taken into consideration if the professor is made aware of such. Courses can be improved if major difficulties in study are brought to light. The entire atmosphere of the university would be changed.

Madelyn Giancatirino, Engineering, '63

This question has been given great consideration in other universities, and being connected with Student Council I, as well as others have investigated this question thoroughly. We have found that it would be a great asset to the student, the faculty, and the University as a whole. The student would learn more about his teachers, and the faculty members would, in turn, gain some knowledge of the student and his goals in life. The teacher could also discern how the students react to the various teaching methods.

Eisenhower's Diplomacy Undiplomatic

Foreign Policy Towards Middle East and Latin America Criticized

By Larry Ruth

The foreign policy of the Eisenhower Administration has certainly left a lot to be desired, and its ineptness is especially evident in the Middle East and in Latin America.

Until 1957 and the formation of the Eisenhower Doctrine, the United States had no consistent and comprehensive policy toward the Middle East.

Up to that time the Eisenhower Administration depended on the whims of Secretary Dulles for its Middle Eastern policy.

But as British and French power waned in this area, the United States had the responsibility for policy thrust upon it. Both the Suez crisis of 1956 and the Lebanon and Iraq Crisis of 1958 helped awaken the United States to its responsibilities in the Middle East.

It is the opinion of Dr. Fred Khouri of the Political Science Department that President Eisenhower left too much of the foreign policy decisions to Mr. Dulles.

"Dulles," Khouri states, "didn't know as much as he thought he knew, while at the same time he disregarded the advice of his experts."

The United States, during the first six years of the Administration, was more interested in making weak paper alliances with reactionary regimes than in cementing our relations with Middle Eastern peoples on a more firm basis.

Internal Unrest Big Danger

Khouri points out that the main danger in the Middle East lies in internal unrest; hence we should build up these countries internally.

Mr. Francis Coghlan of the History Department is of the same opinion. He stated that most colonial powers recognize the fact that colonialism is at an end, but that the United States has encouraged a rush toward independence which has caused instability in these countries.

"If we do encourage independence among these people," said Coghlan, "we must be ready to give more assistance, not military, but medical, food, educational and social aid."

In 1956, when the first crisis came in Suez, it was almost entirely of the Administration's making. We had promised aid to Nasser's personal project — the Aswan Dam. When the Egyptian delegate came to this country to negotiate the details, Dulles, for no apparent reason, withdrew the American offer of support. In retaliation, Nasser nationalized the Canal. In effect we forced Nasser into Communist hands.

Mr. Coghlan said, "It is the belief of the English conservatives that the American cotton growers put pressure on the United States who took the proper action in this case.

However, it was a case of too little and too late, and it came only as a response to a situation which we ourselves had already created.

Eisenhower Doctrine

In March of 1957 the first positive U. S. foreign policy was formed in terms of the Eisenhower Doctrine. This doctrine authorized the use of U. S. troops in defense of any Middle Eastern nation asking for help "against overt Armed Aggression from any nation controlled by international communism."

In July of 1958 the second crisis appeared—the Lebanon and Iraq crisis. A revolution broke out in Iraq against the pro-Western government of the Baghdad Pact. As a result of this revolution the pro-western government was overthrown and replaced by a military dictatorship. When the same thing threatened Lebanon, Eisenhower moved in troops. In the eyes of the Arab nationalists this action nullified our Suez stand.

Khouri pointed out that the Eisenhower administration has tried to put more balance in our relations with the Arab-Israili world. He went on to say that we handled the whole question of Arab nationalism very badly.

Nasser, as a strong man, is the only Arab who can make peace with Israel. Khouri maintained that, "The stronger an Arab government is, the better chance it has of going against popular opinion and making peace with Israel."

In short, our policy toward the Middle East during the Eisenhower years has suffered from a lack of imagination.

Dr. Fritz Nova of the Political Science department seemed to sum it up when he said that, "We have lacked information on and have not been aware of the tremendous nationalism of the colonial peoples."

Instead of developing an aggressive social and economic policy toward this area, we have over-emphasized the political and military aspects and have relied on meaningless alliances.

Latin America

The Eisenhower policy in Latin America has also been typical.

Latin America has been, to a large degree, an area which the United States has both ignored and taken for granted. It has only been since the success of the Castro revolution and Nixon's ill-fated trip that the United States has come to a full realization of the Latin American scene.

Perhaps it would be more correct to say that we suffered more from a lack of policy rather than from a misguided one.

The Administration, however, did make some gestures toward the South American countries.

According to Khouri, the Eisenhower Administration invoked some quotas on South American countries which seriously hurt their markets in the United States.

It also seems to be the opinion of the men interviewed that our attitude toward dictatorships and reactionary regimes did not help us any.

Coghlan seemed to think thing that the United States still suffered from the big stick policy of Teddy Roosevelt. Certainly the anti-American stream of propoganda directed at the United States by Castro has not helped the situation any. In this respect the Eisenhower Administration had adopted a very good wait-and-see policy.

Rather than take the chance of alienating any of the countries which are sympathetic toward the Castro regime, Eisenhower has decided not to interfere in the Cuban troubles, but he has decided to wait and observe which path the revolution is taking.

This is a courageous stand for him to take since he is probably under great pressure from American financial interests who have holdings in Cuba which have been nationalized.

Castro Alienates Americans

Castro, on the other hand, has not helped his own cause too much. The elements of American society which had been sympathetic to Castro's cause are alienated by the excesses of the revolution: the nationalization of lands and the violation of civil liberties.

Many people in this country fear Castro's possible association with the communists.

Also, many of the other South American countries which had at first been sympathetic toward Castro, are now becoming disenchanted with the excesses of the revolution.

Mr. John Logue of the Political Science Department points out an interesting analogy between the present South American situation and the Republican party in the '20's and '30's.

During this period many large cities left the Republican Party partly due to its failure to adapt its economic philosophy to the changing times; many of the South American countries may now do the same.

Logue said, "While it would be politically astute for us to help the Latin American countries, we also have a moral duty to give them aid.

For the most part, our policy toward Latin America in the last seven years has been one of apathy rather than positive or negative action. We have generally tended to ignore our Latin neighbors, but the Cuban revolution and the Nixon trip have opened our eyes somewhat.

It only remains to be seen if Eisenhower's successor will not only keep our eyes toward this area, but will also take some positive action toward Latin America.

No Debate About It: Beta Gamma Is Here To Stay

By Jim Rhodes

Under the guidance of Mr. Joseph T. Jonas, the Villanova Debate Society was formally organized in the fall of 1928 under the title of "The Book and Gavel." Among its charter members are several rather familiar names; the most familiar, perhaps, being that of Al Severance.

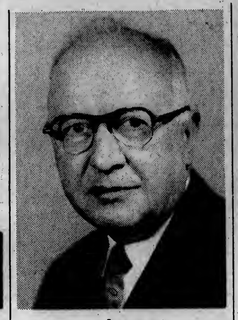
In its early beginnings, the Book and Gavel Society was known as the Literary Society, and was engaged in Dramatic arts as well as debate. By 1930, however, it was clear that, since the Society had to divide its interests in two directions, it would be wiser to separate into two individual societies.

Belle Masque Produced

This separation produced the present organization of Belle Masque and Beta Gamma. Beta Gamma was selected as the new name for the debate society since it represents, in Greek, the first letters of the old "Book and Gavel".

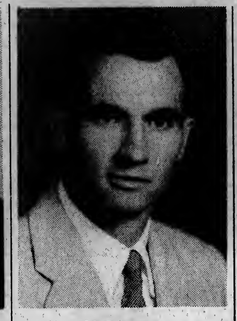
The year of 1930, however, was not merely a time of formation, but also of activity for Beta Gamma. For it was in 1930 that Villanova sent its first intercollegiate debate team to another campus for formal debate.

In this instance, the team met a very strong Harvard University team beginning a rivalry and at the same time an intercollegiate friendship which exists right up to the present day.



Administration

From this time on the Beta Gamma Debate Society gradually received the firm support of the administration. In 1956 the society came into its own and became fully supported by the Villanova Administration.



But, in this same year, Mr. Jonas found that his clinical speech work was demanding too much of his time and energy, and the debators were forced to manage for themselves. There were only about six members of the team at this time.

Costa

Jonas

The years 1956 and 1957 were years of struggle for reorganization as well as a rebirth of debating standards and activities. With the assistance of Mr. Richard McDonough, the new moderator of Beta Gamma, the Society ended the years with winning seasons.

60% Record

In fact, the society has won more than 60% of its debates since the fall of 1956, a record of which the members of the Society are rightfully proud.

By the end of 1957, membership had grown to some 25 members, and annual debates had increased to more than 100 intercollegiate debates per year.

By 1958, the Society exceeded all past achievements as it gained respect and admiration from debating colleges throughout of the east. Jim Corey, President, and Jack Serafin, Vice-President, worked closely with Mr. McDonough to spark the debating team to a 70% winning season.

It was the year for "the unexpected" as the debaters had frequent occasion to transmit the pleasant news of triumphs. Beta Gamma won the Immaculate College Novice Tournament, as well as the Rutgers College Tournament in Camden, New Jersey.

Membership Increases

Membership was spoken of in terms of 40 and 50, esprit-de-corps was high, and the administration and the Student Body both became keenly appreciative of the forward progress.

Funds increased, and the year was topped with an exciting public debate in the west lounge of Dougherty Hall. The Villanova team met and defeated Toronto University. The evening was well attended by students and faculty, who saw a brilliant debate display by Jim Corey and Jack Serafin.

The debating year of 1958 ended with many congratulations within and beyond the membership of Beta Gamma. In the spring of 1959, the effects of progress and vigor were felt when more than 15 new members joined the society.

Experienced New Members

This time, the team could boast of many new members having a wealth of high school experience. Added to the growing stature of debaters like Frank Murtha, Frank Cunningham, Dom Costa and Joe Remy, were the zealous and talented Terry Stratman, Jim Rhodes, Joe Liggers, Frank Battaglia, Gene D'Aquilla and many others.

Beta Gamma is currently busier than ever, having already successfully participated in six tournaments with nine tournaments to go. The tournaments now attended are larger and more competitive than ever.

Villanova won the Delaware U. tournament early this year, and other honors are anticipated. A public debate with Harvard is scheduled for April at Villanova.

Jim Rhodes, already preparing for next year's program, is presently conducting a vast membership campaign on campus.

Society Grateful

The Society members are thankful for the constant support from the Administration, especially from the former and present Deans of Student Activities, Rev. George McLaughlin, O.S.A., and Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., respectively.

Mr. McDonough, the present moderator of Beta Gamma, has actively encouraged students of all levels of debating ability to join in the opportunity for their self-improvement through debating.

The present officers, who are doing a splendid job in running the complex activities of Beta Gamma, are: President, Dom Costa; Vice-President, Frank Murtha; Treasurer, Jim Murray; Secretary, Tom Pfeiffer.

Along with their fellow members, the officers are full of optimism and determination to further develop the society and bring even greater honor to Villanova University.

THE SEARCH FOR BRIDEY SIGAFOOS

It was a dullish evening at the Theta house. The pledges were down in the catacombs; the actives were sacked out upstairs, not doing much of anything. Mary Ellen Krumbald was sticking pins in an effigy of the housemother; Evelyn Zinsmaster was welding a manhole cover to her charm bracelet; Algelica McKeesport was writing a letter to Fabian in blood. Like I say, it was a dullish evening.

Suddenly Dolores Vladnay stood up and stamped her foot. "Chaps," she said to her sorors, "this is too yawn-making! Let's do something gay and mad and gasp-making. Anybody got an idea?"

"No," said the sorors, shaking their little sausage curls.

"Think, chaps, think!" said Dolores and passed Marlboro cigarettes to everybody, for if there ever was a smoke to start you thinking, it is mild and flavorful Marlboro! Things come clear when you puff that good, clean smoke through that fine filter—knots untie, dilemmas dissolve, problems evaporate, cobwebs vanish, fog disperses, and the benevolent sun pours radiance on a new and dewy world. Oh, happy world! Oh, Marlboro! Oh, soft pack! Oh, flip-top box! Oh, get some already!

"I have brown eyes and I weigh 3200 pounds"

Now Geraldine Quidnunc, her drooping brain cells revivified by a good Marlboro, leapt up and cried, "Oh, I have a perfect gasser of an idea! Let's hypnotize somebody!"

"Oh, capital!" cried the sorors. "Oh, tingle-making!"

At this point, in walked a young pledge named Alice Bluegown. "Excuse me, mistresses," said she, tugging her forelock, "I have finished making your beds, doing your homework, and ironing your pleats. Will there be anything else?"

"Yes," snapped Dolores Vladnay. "When I count to three, you will be hypnotized."

"Yes, excellency," said Alice, bobbing a curtsey.

"One, two, three," said Dolores.

Alice promptly went into a trance.

"Go back," said Dolores, "back into your childhood. Go back to your fifth birthday, back to your birth, to before your birth, to your last incarnation . . . Now, who are you?"

"My name is Bridey Sigafoos," said Alice. "The year is 1818, and I am in County Cork."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"How old are you?" asked Dolores.

"I am seven," said Alice.

"Where is your mother?" asked Dolores.

"I don't know," said Alice. "She got sold at the fair last year."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Tell us about yourself," said Dolores.

"I am five feet tall," said Alice. "I have brown eyes, and I weigh 3200 pounds."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Isn't that rather heavy for a girl?" said Dolores.

"Who's a girl?" said Alice. "I'm a black and white guernsey."

"Coo!" said the sorors.

"Moo!" said Bridey Sigafoos.

"West Side Story"—

Bernstein Show Still "Cool"

by tom quigley

In the midst of a comparatively disappointing season, theatrical brilliance was reprised recently as "West Side Story" returned to the Erlanger stage for a limited engagement.

Widely acclaimed since its initial performance in 1957, musical drama has lost none of its immediacy or vibrant tension in the "new" version.

The Jerome Robbins conception of a modern-day Romeo and Juliet is set in New York's West Side where two rival gangs, the Jets and the Sharks, vie for possession of a territory.

Robbins Real Hero

Mr. Robbins is the real hero of the "Story". His inspired choreography has the entire company whirling through a series of exciting dances ranging from beautiful quiet ballets to violently staged rumbles.

The seemingly indefatigueable cast moves with alarming dexterity, always anticipating the genius of Robbins.

Repeating his original role in "West Side Story" as co-founder of the Jets is Larry Kert, an agile tenor with the ability to sing, dance and act with equal verve.

Leila Martin Perfect

Leila Martin as Maria, newly arrived from Puerto Rico, is perfect as the versatile Kert's romantic interest. Memorable duets such as "Tonight" and "One Hand, One Heart" are handled beautifully by the talented duo.

Although Miss Martin tends to vocaly overbalance her partner in the upper register, the result is most pleasant.

Caustic Complement

Anita, the wise and witty friend of Maria, excellently portrayed by Allyn McLerie, is seen to best advantage in the "America" number when she leads five girls in a caustic compliment to the nation.

Displaying remarkable dancing skill, minor members of the large cast assume a new importance in the current production. Of special note is the magnificent "Cool" ballet danced by the male ensemble.

Magical Music

From the wild opening prologue to the closing tragic moments of the show, the cast, flooded with young talent, blends contemporary problems with the musical magic of impressario Leonard Bernstein. Mr. Bernstein's pulsating rhythms coincide perfectly with the appropriate lyrics provided by Stephen Sondheim.

The New York locale is captured in Oliver Smith's generous and colorful settings and complemented by Irene Schraaf's costuming.

In all, the current production of "West Side Story" is as rewarding as it is entertaining. A much tighter, well-knit show than the original, it is a superior tribute to the musical theater and a show not to be missed.

Speeritualism

Give Committee A Compass

by bill speers

We see where the Day-Hops relations committee has finally began to make some headway in improving conditions for the long-suffering day-hops. We believe they're headed in the right direction but are taking the wrong road.

They've gotten the legendary P&W to agree to replace the wood pile on Ithan Avenue with a station. The fact that a new station is needed could hardly be questioned by anyone, it will be a boon to all C & F'ers and basketball fans.

But in working with the P & W we believe a deal that would prove more advantageous to every day-hop that uses the train every day, would be a reduction in fares.

About two years ago, college students were permitted to use the green tickets, issued by the Red Arrow Company, just like any one else attending school. Mysteriously, this privilege was taken away from college students last year, and the day-hop rider must pay the full fare.

Now these tickets cost ten cents a piece and are worth twenty cents a piece. In the case where a student uses the train five days a week both ways, the use of the green tickets saves the student a dollar a week; or approximately $30.00 a year.

A new station may look good, but a $30.00 a year savings would probably feel even better.

Recently, the Keystone Automobile Club held a banquet for members of their 25 year club. (Those employees that have served with the company at least 25 years) Mrs. Catherine Carrol, one of the planners of the affair came up with the idea of having the menu printed in Gaelic because of the abundance of "sons o' Erin" in the club's membership.

So she sent a copy of the menu in English to St. John's Night School asking them to have someone there translate it for her. To her surprise no one there could help her. So she inquired in a few convents and rectories around Philly in an effort to find a priest or nun who translate the menu. She was thwarted at every door.

Either the people she contacted had been displaced from the Emerald Isle so long that they had forgotten most of the intricies of the language or they could speak the language but not write it.

Then she encountered Father Regan, Villanova's Religion Department head, who said he had a friend in New York who could probably do the job for her. So he sent the menu off to the 'big town' and returned it with in a few days. The translation was perfect and it came off the presses just in time for the banquet.

Oh, the translator of the English piece was an employee of the Irish Air Lines by the name of Mr. Ronald Delany.

New Calculator Room Opens in C&F School

Jim Riley and Carl Wolf demonstrate use of calculators.

by Philip Valente

Two new features have been added to the third floor of the Commerce and Finance building, which should prove beneficial to both faculty and students.

The first, of particular interest to the students, is ten Monroe Calculators in the new Calculator Room. These will definately facilitate those engaged in courses which require large amounts of mathematical computations (e.g. accounting, statistics, and production).

The company has also provided instruction booklets for those who wish to learn to use the calculators. And as a further incentive to their popular use, Mr. Quinn, the company representative, will be available for questions and additional instructions.

The second new addition, the Faculty Meeting Room, is a result of the first change; for with the installation of the calculators in their present location the need for a new conference room was created. This room was constructed immediately, and will serve as a general teacher's meeting place.

Unsung Heroes: Jake Nevins, Charlie Farnan

Hank Schultz

On the ground floor of the Villanova Field House are the "offices" of two men — Jake Nevins and Charlie Farnan — who work behind the scenes keeping the Wildcat teams in the headlines.

These two often put in ten or twelve hours a day, six or seven days a week doing jobs many people take for granted. The athletes they do so much for do not forget these services.

Many of the boys under the care of trainer Jake Nevin have given him little tokens of appreciation. A life-long resident of Bryn Mawr, Jake joined the Villanova staff in 1930. Since then, he has filled his bachelor quarters with many trophies and plaques.

It has become a tradition for departing senior tracksters to present Jake with a medal engraved with their names. He has amassed a collection of fifty of these metals which he keeps at home.

He has also had made miniature statuettes of all the Villanovans who have become All-Americans or who have more than a thousand points in basketball. At present, he has 23 such trophies in his room.

Greatest Thrill

When Villanova won the Harbor bowl with a 7-0 upset victory over Nevada in 1951, the team presented Jake with a watch. The trip to the West Coast, the game, and the presentation of the watch are considered by Jake to be his greatest thrill at Villanova.

He says, however, that there were many other thrills, all of which run a close second to the Harbor Bowl. Another watch was given to him by Ron Delany after a triumph in the Inquirer games.

Many times, winners in IC-AAAA competition have given him batons engraved with their names. A plaque is being made for him with miniature track shoes with the name of all Villanovans who have competed in the Olympics and batons with the names of all Villanovans victorious in the ICAAAA games.

Equipment Manager

Although not so frequently honored as Jake, equipment manager Charlie Farnan is appreciated just as much. Here is the man who faithfully sees to it that all equipment and uniforms are in good shape.

Football players are confident that pads given to them by Charlie are in top condition. The basketball team knows that though a game was played Wednesday, the game uniforms will be ready, fresh and clean, for Saturday's game.

Baseballers are assured that bats and balls will be ready for practice, and track men know that there will be a pair of shoes ready to take the place of those worn out in the last meet.

Honored Several Times

Many outsiders do not realize the work involved in keeping football, basketball, baseball, and track teams well equipped. Such, however, was not the case with the Villanova Club of South Jersey, which presented Charlie with a plaque in recognition of the part he plays in Villanova sports.

Another group honoring Charlie was the Villanova Student Council, which gave him a silver key to the Field House at a sports assembly.

Charlie's mementos are far fewer than Jake's, but when an ex-Wildcat athlete remembers his career at Villanova, he does not think of Jake alone nor Charlie alone, but rather of Charlie and Jake.

Every athlete must of necessity see Charlie, and any athlete who has no occasion to see Jake just isn't trying.

Football Hardest

Although all sports with their variety of pulled muscles, sprains, and assorted bruises keep Jake busy, his busiest season is the football season. Charlie may hand out the best of helmets and pads, but there are still the usual bumps and bruises.

When a player is injured on the field Saturday, Jake is immediately handed a rough assignment: to have him back in action for next week's game. The obvious injuries are not the only ones Jake must attend to.

Quite often, a player notices a knee or ankle swelling up several hours after the game. Or maybe he suffered an injury not serious enough to have him removed from the game. And almost every player has a few miscellaneous cuts and bruises.

This keeps Jake jumping seven days a week for three months. And the games aren't the only times players are injured. During practice, the "neglected stars" as Jake calls them, get their chance to earn a starting berth.

He tries to block harder than the starters, and in turn forces the starters to work harder to keep their position. With all this determination, it is only natural that several players suffer injuries in practice.

This in turn adds to Jake's work, but he doesn't mind it a bit, as he enjoys his work very much.

No Favorites

When Charlie or Jake are asked what their favorite sport is, they hesitate. Then they both come out with the same answer; they just don't know. With so many interesting sports going on all the time, they find it hard to choose.

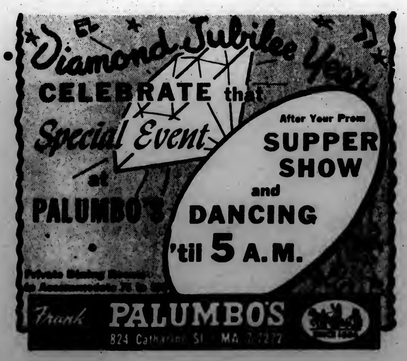
They have the same trouble trying to name Villanova's greatest athlete. Since they have been here so long, (Jake for 30 years, and Charlie for 20) they have seen almost every great athlete who ever performed at Villanova.

As Jake says, "There have been so many that have been great, it is almost impossible to pick the greatest."

Charlie seemed almost ready to give an answer, but then said, "The recent ones are easy to remember, but the guys a few years back were just as good."

Ask any of the athletes who have ever been under their care just who they consider the greatest guys in Villanova athletics, and they hesitate too. They finally admit it is a toss-up between Jake and Charlie.

Boss Choice Seeks Title



by Phil Valente

Boss Choice, champion of Villanova University Bowling League last year, is setting a torrid pace in quest of their second straight bowling crown. They lead the league by five games with the Keglers and Saints tied for second place. If they maintain their present pace the championship seems assured.

The mainstays of last year's crampionship team are Joe Petrecca and Captain Jack Reina. Other members of the team include Nick DiSimone, Jerry Snopkowski and Joe Carroll.

Last week's forfeit boosted Boss Choice's lead to five games after the Saints and Keglers split in a match for second place. The present standings in the Tuesday League are:

TEAM	W	L
BOSS CHOICE	33	7
Keglers	28	12
Saints	28	12
High Average
Jack Reina	167
Joe Petrecca	167
Nick DiSimone	166
High Three
Jack Reina	619
Joe Petrecca	550
Nick DiSimone	540

Linksmen Ready To Tee Off For 1960 Golf Season

by Phil Valente

Early next month the Villanova golfers will begin the 1960 season. Co-Captains Marty Connoly and Jim Cahill, along with Junior Dave Doyle are the only returning lettermen. This is the problem which must be solved at the very start of pratice. The loss of Reggie and Ronnie Zurinskas through graduation, and Jim Gay by way of an unprecedented occurrence has left the team in the hazardous position of starting from scratch.

The interest shown by a goodly number of students has, however, led to a hopeful outlook against tough competition. The season's opener, of a fourteen game slate, will host Gettysburg at the Aronimink links. Ten away games include such oustanding opponents as Penn State, Seton Hall and Princeton. If the golfers are going to beat any of these clubs, the team must take shape as swiftly as possible.

All newcomers are invited to attend a meeting this week in regard to tryouts. Notices, concerning time and place will be posted on the bulletin boards.

Romove the temptation and remove the crime, they have implied.

If, for instance, grade pressure is a similar perfidy, it would seem common sense to investigate. Cities are removing slums to conquer juvenile delinquency; the writer of the letter would allow the slums to remain, because its a greater test of the child's honor to behave in slums than in more civilized surroundings.

The findings in Flanagan's article were not meant to be the "niggling distinctions of self-styled moralists." The writer would call Maritain himself a "self-styled moralist."

The writer might perform a greater service to education if he would meet in public discussion with representatives of faculty and students, and probe into the cheating question.

And if this discussion would yield the verdict that the cheater, and not just the cheating, is immoral, we might accept the fact. But enough of these a priori judgements.

Desire Under The Basket Is 'Tweety' Driscoll's Forte

by Eugene O. Hewitt

The brown sphere cut an arc above the melee of players below. As it dropped toward the net a raucuous voice cut through the noise to command "Get up, Tweety, get up."

Reams and reams of words have been written, spoken and thought of as to why Tweety gets up, why he doesn't, what makes him hustle, why he doesn't, why he doesn't shoot, why he does, why he isn't aggressive, why he is. He probably has been analysed more than any other player on the team with just as many different answers and solutions.

There remains in this haze of words a fact that many overlook. John Driscoll is a calm, unruffled, darn good basketball player.

West Catholic

Cut from the varsity at West Catholic when he was a sophomore, he was determined to prove he could make the team, and so out to the proverbial playground. The next year he didn't get cut but spent his time playing on the jayvees.

His senior year he made the varsity as a starter, and became in his first and last year as a varsity player, an All-Catholic selection. Following on the heels of this distinction, the usual covey of basketball scouts surrounded him clutching promises of fame and glory.

Came to Villanova

Feeling, however, the desire to remain in Philadelphia, he matriculated at Villanova in September, 1956. For his own reasons, however, John dropped out in the middle of his first semester, and to keep in shape he joined the local AAU team, Dreger's All-Stars.

Dreger's was led by the author of "Get up, Tweety," Jimmy Huggard, and thus the two became fast friends, and the following year entered Villanova together.

As Tweety began his sophomore year, the drum-beaters of the Main Line boomed the team as Villanova's return to the hoop heights. As a sophomore he was subjected to as much pressure as one would have experienced as a senior all-American candidate almost anywhere else.

Driscoll

Hampered by a propensity to pick up three or more rapid fouls early in the game and subsequent cautions play, he became the prime object of the various previous questions. This year, however, he has answered most of his questioners and critics.

Playing good solid ball, shooting more, using his weight and strength to pull off rebounds, he has become one of the reasons the team has come as far as it has.

Causes of Change

What has caused this change in play? First of all there has to be a desire. Driscoll doesn't show it in a fiery and flamboyant manner, but watch him on the court.

The second effort to get that tap or rebound, a drive for a loose ball, and usual mark of a smaller man is John's show of desire. How many big men do you ever see crash to the floor to pick up a stray sphere? Not many.

Tweety always has a calm, almost methodical manner on and off the court. This doesn't mean he isn't putting out, it is just John Driscoll. There has to be a reason for this desire. First of all, Tweety's own wish to excel, the second, Huggard. As John has said, "Jimmie always wants to win, no matter what. You can feel it, and some of it just rubs off on me."

Last year Tweety didn't shoot much. Now he doesn't pass up the good shot. Why? "I didn't think I should shoot. Now if I have a good shot, I take it."

Fouling Out

This year John has only fouled out in two games. Now and then he will pick up one or two foolish quick fouls, but not with the regularity he did last year.

The answer to this is contained in his desire, "It's awfully rough to sit there on the bench and know you could be out there on the court if it wasn't for those fouls."

Behind everyone who makes so abrupt a chance in play, there are people who have influenced it. Al Severance and Joe Walters come in for a big share, as through their instruction, counsel, and patience, have shown Tweety how to get the most mrom his ability.

Along with them, perhaps should be his mother and girl who with their encouragement have caused him to push a little harder.

Next time you go to see the 'Cats play, watch number 52. He doesn't explode or erupt, he just gets up. For as Tweety goes up, so will Villanova go right with him.

Hubie 'Hit', Team Jelled When 'Cats Pummuled Toledo Five

by Bud Simmonds

There's no place like home and Villanova's hustling Wildcats proved this fact by soundly defeating a highly publicized

Hubie White

Toledo team, the Mid-American Conference runnerup, by the score of 74 to 52, Wednesday night.

Returning to the friendlier confines of the Palestra after the humiliating Wake Forest trip, the Cats snapped a three game losing streak by beating the Rockets and set the stage for their long awaited Hawk encounter.

Surprise Move

In a surprise move that "stimulated the starters and woke them up", coach Al Severance inserted subs Bob Liberatore and son Dave in place of regulars Dick Kaminski and captain George Raveling.

This innovation brought about a radical but profitable shakeup to the recently sluggish Cat attack.

The change of familiar faces instilled in the Villanova forces an element which has been noticeably lacking of late, that being hustle.

In the words of Coach Severance, "Hustle is the barometer of victory on any given occasion", and this game was definitely the right and necessary occasion.

Under the 26 point guiding light shed by Hubie White, the Wildcats once again displayed the mid-season form that has placed them high in the national ratings.

A Dozen Rebounds

The sophomore sensation cashed in on 11 of 20 picture-pretties from the floor as well as pulling down a dozen rebounds. White went on a scoring rampage that netted him 11 of Villanova's last 13 points of the first half to supply, in Rocket coach Eddie Melvin's opinion, "the turning point" and bring the halftime score to a 34 to 28 Cat lead.

This effort of "the Hub" plus the sniping of 14 point contributor Jim Huggard, kept the Rockets sputtering through the second half.

More of the rediscovered hustle (there's that word again) was evidenced by the fine performance of front court relief artist Tom Samulewicz, who chipped in a valuable 10 points to the Villanova cause.

The Rockets, previous conquerors of NIT bound Detroit and Dayton as well as Wake Forest, showed little example of their pre-game publicity in shooting a cold 31% and by losing the range from the field at one point for 10 minutes.

Led Toledo Scorers

The accurate hook shot of bespectacled George Patterson, who led all Tolida scorers with 14 points, augured trouble for the Main Liners at the start. The benched George Raveling, though, came on like Gangbusters, quelled Patterson's efforts, and cleared 12 rebounds in the meantime.

Sack of Troy — By Tom Troy

Maybe We Could Use Walt Disney

Once again, a self-appointed critic has sounded his tocsin and attacked the sanctum sanctorum caveat emptor. I have only one question I would like to ask him: if a gamy athlete didn't like Lifebouy soap (official soap of the Winter Olympics), would he have to remain gamy?

Or could he perhaps use Pepsi-Cola (official soft drink of the Winter Olympics), or commandeer a Renault-Dauphin (official car of the Winter Olympics), drive to Reno and get washed there?

But meanwhile, then again, he could apply to Walt Disney (official snowmaker, pseudo-dove supplier, architect of the Winter Olympics).

If so, would you say that one of the reasons the American hockey team won a gold metal is that they used Christian Brothers?

Sign a Record

Or maybe, perhaps, not having finished higher than last for two years, the Phillies' front office has told the newspaper boys in the hope-springs-eternal, there's only-one-way-to-go school to lay off for some time and not paint all the rookies as Mantles and Spahns.

But Ed Pollock does always write about current events and never reminisces. However, anyway, the Spirit Committee broke the all-time Palestra record for length of sign, smashing the old mark by five feet.

When you think about this, it leads you to wonder if Gotham and Metropolis are one and the same city, or different cities on the East Coast, or is one on the East and the other on the West coast? And whatever happened to Ozark Ike?

Since the Hawks sang "When the Hawks go Flying In" eleven times, ans the 'Cats sang "V for Villanova" only eight, why did the fine showing of the Villanova track team receive so much publicity in the Sunday papers?

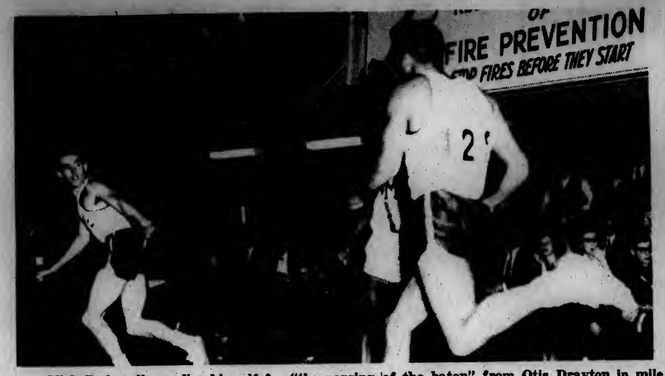
Where Was Nixon?

At any rate, the major problem confronting Harry Litwack was clearly displayed the other night. Temple has nobody to handle the ball, and they never work for the good shot. But Jack Ramsay didn't even throw one towel.

So if the game on Saturday night was really important, how come Vice-President Nixon didn't toss up the first ball? Why, on why, doesn't Hubie play under the boards all the time?

The game was replayed so many times at a cocktail party I attended Sunday evening that Villanova won.

Jim Huggard should have a sore back or a virus condition every game. He's scored 44 points in the two games he's been ailing.



Which just goes to shows you that Jim's big red muscle under the left rib cage does more than pump blood.

300 Tickets

And besides that, if Eleanor can sing "High Hopes" on King Frankie's show, then way can't Victor Strano transfer to Ohio State? Time is catching up on Victor—he must graduate sometime.

Then again, the game that had been sold out for a month had 300 tickets on sale on the night of the game. And Ed Rideout probably brought them all.

A priest sitting beside me summed up everything when he said, "Basketball makes no sense."

Nick DeAngelis readies himself for "the passing of the baton" from Otis Drayton in mile relay. Race took place during Inquirer Games at Convention Hall.

The Six-Man Four

Villanova Mile Quartet "Sprinterellas" of Season

by Mike Donahue

Depth is a thing called Villanova's mile relay team.

What other conclusion can be drawn from a six man group which has won seven times out of eight and set records in four of those triumphs?

Jumbo Jim Elliott's crack "six man four" is comprised of juniors Nick De Angelis and Joe Manion and sophomores Paul (Otie) Drayton, Bob Coffill, Bob Raemore and Carl Wagner.

Wagner is the latest of Elliott's fledging protegees to enter the national limelight.

Wagner to the Rescue

The former West Catholic ace was called upon by Jumbo Jim in the National A.A.U. meet to fill the breach when Raemore came down with a cold. He responded with a sterling 49.5 effort. Only anchorman Manion's 48.7 was better.

At the outset of the indoor season Elliott had two gaps to fill on the mile quartet. His stalwarts, Ed Collymore and Charley Stead departed via graduation leaving him only junior holdovers De Angelis and Manion from the quartet that outraced Texas in 3:10 at the Coliseum Relays last May.

On paper he had good replacements in the persons of sophomores Drayton, Coffill, Raemore and Pat Nicastro.

These four as a unit had run away with the Penn Relay freshman mile title in record time.

Walt and See

However, there were very few, if any sports scribes who went out on a limb to suggest that two of these four could duplicate Collymore and Stead's feats. Track buffs took a "When I see it I'll believe it attitude."

Well, in the first indoor meet of this season at Boston on January 16th they saw it. The fleet Cat foursome of Drayton, Coffill, Raemore and Manion took the mile relay in record time of 3:18.1. Not bad, some said, but maybe it's beginners luck.

Next showing at the Washington Star Game did nothing to dispel this "luck" epithet. The Cats won, all right, in the apparently unimpressive time of 3:25.1. There was a reason for the "poor" time though. The Washington track was a flat one, not one with banked turns. "Banked boards means a good six seconds faster time" said assistant coach Jim Tuppeny.

Cats Lose at Melrose

There was no such explanation for the only Cat loss to date incurred in the Melrose A.A. meet in New York on January 30th. "We were lousy", a disgusted Elliott informed an observer at practice the following week.

The fledging four had still not yet arrived: But when they ran in the Boston A.A. meet a week later they "made the scene" with a bang. Enroute to another record they were caught covering the mile in 3:16.9, only nine tenths of a second under the school record established in the heyday of Charley Jenkins and Ron Delany.

It was also in this meet that the Cats depth came to light. Nick De Angelis, heretofore, anchor man on the two mile team, moved over to the mile to replace Coffill who injured his metatarsal in the losing effort the week before.

Impress Local Fans

Friday, February 12th saw the young Wildcats make their local debut an impressive one as they cantered to a 3:20.3 victory (another record, natch) over Manhattan and Morgan State in the Inquire Games.

The following night Big City enthusiasts got their first glimpse of their highly touted quartet. The Cats did not disappoint. 3:17.0 was their time as they battered the New York A.C. record by almost a full second.

The following week Wagner got into the act and the "six man four" was a reality as Coffill returned to action and the versatile De Angelis moved over to the 1000.

Splinterellas IC4A Champs?

Only one obstacle stands between the plinterellas and recognition as the top hardwood sensations of the indoor season. That is the IC4A mile title, Saturday night.

A win Saturday would be doubly sweet. It would insure the crack quartet of having nationwide recognition. It might just also be the victory needed so vitally by Elliott's team to win the IC4A crown.

Hubie White

Toledo team, the Mid-American Conference runnerup, by the score of 74 to 52, Wednesday night.

Returning to the friendlier confines of the Palestra after the humiliating Wake Forest trip, the Cats snapped a three game losing streak by beating the Rockets and set the stage for their long awaited Hawk encounter.

Surprise Move

In a surprise move that "stimulated the starters and woke them up", coach Al Severance inserted subs Bob Liberatore and son Dave in place of regulars Dick Kaminski and captain George Raveling.

This innovation brought about a radical but profitable shakeup to the recently sluggish Cat attack.

The change of familiar faces instilled in the Villanova forces an element which has been noticeably lacking of late, that being hustle.

In the words of Coach Severance, "Hustle is the barometer of victory on any given occasion", and this game was definitely the right and necessary occasion.

Under the 26 point guiding light shed by Hubie White, the Wildcats once again displayed the mid-season form that has placed them high in the national ratings.

A Dozen Rebounds

The sophomore sensation cashed in on 11 of 20 picture-pretties from the floor as well as pulling down a dozen rebounds. White went on a scoring rampage that netted him 11 of Villanova's last 13 points of the first half to supply, in Rocket coach Eddie Melvin's opinion, "the turning point" and bring the halftime score to a 34 to 28 Cat lead.

This effort of "the Hub" plus the sniping of 14 point contributor Jim Huggard, kept the Rockets sputtering through the second half.

More of the rediscovered hustle (there's that word again) was evidenced by the fine performance of front court relief artist Tom Samulewicz, who chipped in a valuable 10 points to the Villanova cause.

The Rockets, previous conquerors of NIT bound Detroit and Dayton as well as Wake Forest, showed little example of their pre-game publicity in shooting a cold 31% and by losing the range from the field at one point for 10 minutes.

Led Toledo Scorers

The accurate hook shot of bespectacled George Patterson, who led all Tolida scorers with 14 points, augured trouble for the Main Liners at the start. The benched George Raveling, though, came on like Gangbusters, quelled Patterson's efforts, and cleared 12 rebounds in the meantime.

Sack of Troy — By Tom Troy

Maybe We Could Use Walt Disney

Once again, a self-appointed critic has sounded his tocsin and attacked the sanctum sanctorum caveat emptor. I have only one question I would like to ask him: if a gamy athlete didn't like Lifebouy soap (official soap of the Winter Olympics), would he have to remain gamy?

Or could he perhaps use Pepsi-Cola (official soft drink of the Winter Olympics), or commandeer a Renault-Dauphin (official car of the Winter Olympics), drive to Reno and get washed there?

But meanwhile, then again, he could apply to Walt Disney (official snowmaker, pseudo-dove-supplier, architect of the Winter Olympics).

If so, would you say that one of the reasons the American hockey team won a gold metal is that they used Christian Brothers?

Sign a Record

Or maybe, perhaps, not having finished higher than last for two years, the Phillies' front office has told the newspaper boys in the hope-springs-eternal, there's only-one-way-to-go school to lay off for some time and not paint all the rookies as Mantles and Spahns.

But Ed Pollock does always write about current events and never reminisces. However, anyway, the Spirit Committee broke the all-time Palestra record for length of sign, smashing the old mark by five feet.

When you think about this, it leads you to wonder if Gotham and Metropolis are one and the same city, or different cities on the East Coast, or is one on the East and the other on the West coast? And whatever happened to Ozark Ike?

Since the Hawks sang "When the Hawks go Flying In" eleven times, ans the 'Cats sang "V for Villanova" only eight, why did the fine showing of the Villanova track team receive so much publicity in the Sunday papers?

Where Was Nixon?

At any rate, the major problem confronting Harry Litwack was clearly displayed the other night. Temple has nobody to handle the ball, and they never work for the good shot. But Jack Ramsay didn't even throw one towel.

So if the game on Saturday night was really important, how come Vice-President Nixon didn't toss up the first ball? Why, on why, doesn't Hubie play under the boards all the time?

The game was replayed so many times at a cocktail party I attended Sunday evening that Villanova won.

Jim Huggard should have a sore back or a virus condition every game. He's scored 44 points in the two games he's been ailing.

Which just goes to shows you that Jim's big red muscle under the left rib cage does more than pump blood.

300 Tickets

And besides that, if Eleanor can sing "High Hopes" on King Frankie's show, then way can't Victor Strano transfer to Ohio State? Time is catching up on Victor—he must graduate sometime.

Then again, the game that had been sold out for a month had 300 tickets on sale on the night of the game. And Ed Rideout probably brought them all.

A priest sitting beside me summed up everything when he said, "Basketball makes no sense."

The Six-Man Four

Villanova Mile Quartet "Sprinterellas" of Season

by Mike Donahue

Depth is a thing called Villanova's mile relay team.

What other conclusion can be drawn from a six man group which has won seven times out of eight and set records in four of those triumphs?

Jumbo Jim Elliott's crack "six man four" is comprised of juniors Nick De Angelis and Joe Manion and sophomores Paul (Otie) Drayton, Bob Coffill, Bob Raemore and Carl Wagner.

Wagner is the latest of Elliott's fledging protegees to enter the national limelight.

Wagner to the Rescue

The former West Catholic ace was called upon by Jumbo Jim in the National A.A.U. meet to fill the breach when Raemore came down with a cold. He responded with a sterling 49.5 effort. Only anchorman Manion's 48.7 was better.

At the outset of the indoor season Elliott had two gaps to fill on the mile quartet. His stalwarts, Ed Collymore and Charley Stead departed via graduation leaving him only junior holdovers De Angelis and Manion from the quartet that outraced Texas in 3:10 at the Coliseum Relays last May.

On paper he had good replacements in the persons of sophomores Drayton, Coffill, Raemore and Pat Nicastro.

These four as a unit had run away with the Penn Relay freshman mile title in record time.

Wait and See

However, there were very few, if any sports scribes who went out on a limb to suggest that two of these four could duplicate Collymore and Stead's feats. Track buffs took a "When I see it I'll believe it attitude."

Well, in the first indoor meet of this season at Boston on January 16th they saw it. The fleet Cat foursome of Drayton, Coffill, Raemore and Manion took the mile relay in record time of 3:18.1. Not bad, some said, but maybe it's beginners luck.

Next showing at the Washington Star Game did nothing to dispel this "luck" epithet. The Cats won, all right, in the apparently unimpressive time of 3:25.1. There was a reason for the "poor" time though. The Washington track was a flat one, not one with banked turns. "Banked boards means a good six seconds faster time" said assistant coach Jim Tuppeny.

Cats Lose at Melrose

There was no such explanation for the only Cat loss to date incurred in the Melrose A.A. meet in New York on January 30th. "We were lousy", a disgusted Elliott informed an observer at practice the following week.

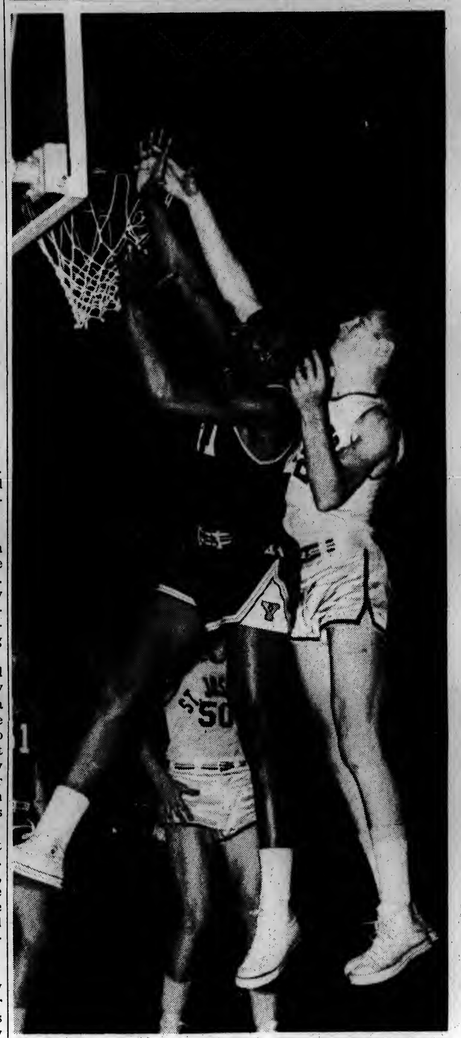
The fledging four had still not yet arrived: But when they ran in the Boston A.A. meet a week later they "made the scene" with a bang. Enroute to another record they were caught covering the mile in 3:16.9, only nine tenths of a second under the school record established in the heyday of Charley Jenkins and Ron Delany.

It was also in this meet that the Cats depth came to light. Nick De Angelis, heretofore, anchor man on the two mile team, moved over to the mile to replace Coffill who injured his metatarsal in the losing effort the week before.

Impress Local Fans

Friday, February 12th saw the young Wildcats make their local debut an impressive one as they cantered to a 3:20.3 victory (another record, natch) over Manhattan and Morgan State in the Inquire Games.

The following night Big City enthusiasts got their first glimpse of their highly touted quartet. The Cats did not disappoint. 3:17.0 was their time as they battered the New York A.C. record by almost a full second.



The following week Wagner got into the act and the "six man four" was a reality as Coffill returned to action and the versatile De Angelis moved over to the 1000.

Splinterellas IC4A Champs?

Only one obstacle stands between the plinterellas and recognition as the top hardwood sensations of the indoor season. That is the IC4A mile title, Saturday night.

A win Saturday would be doubly sweet. It would insure the crack quartet of having nationwide recognition. It might just also be the victory needed so vitally by Elliott's team to win the IC4A crown.

Cagers Prep For LaSalle Saturday

Terrific Double Header— Except For 17 Seconds

by Jim Murray

On Saturday night last, every Villanovan had a complete "catharsis."

A catharsis is a term used in Greek tragedy to denote a purgation of the emotions.

Translated, this means that every Wildcat fan was completely overjoyed when Temple knocked off St. John's in the first game, and then got their annual heartbreak when St. Joe's prevailed in the second.

For the record, Temple won 68-63, and Villanova lost 78-75.

To pick up this paper in the middle of the week and labor over the game seems cruel. We contemplated writing the score and that is all, but the game demands more.

At least a line must go here to say that Bill "Pickles" Kennedy put on one of the greatest basketball exhibitions ever witnessed anywhere. He, and the whole Temple team, deserve congratulations and a bid to a tournament.

Now, let's analyze the game. First, let us not use the referees for an excuse because they were poor excuses for referees. They were bad both ways, and there was more charging called than in the famous "Light Brigade" poem.

Next, let us rule out pressure because it was on both teams (I sure wish Joe Gallo would read the paper).

Next, let's take the rebounds —we had the edge.

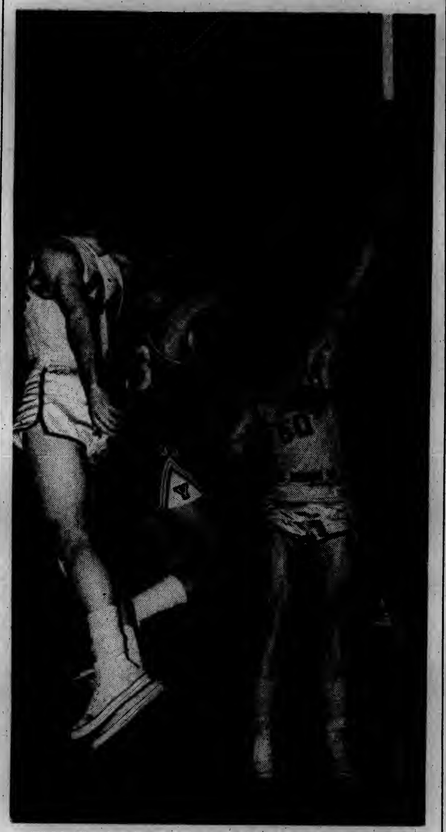
Next, let's take cheering— about even, although the Hawks had little Hawks flying about the Palestra (the Big Five Committee ruled out letting Count Villan loose in the crowd).

Next, the players—George Raveling played a great game, and the only thing that could stop him was the whistle. He guided in shots with one hand in a manner that would have been praised from here to Timbuctu, had we won. Johnny Driscoll was tremendous, especially off the boards. He blocked one shot beautifully and was called for just plain blocking.

Richie Kaminski and Bob Libertore inchanged and played good steady ball. Tom Samulewicz played solid ball.

Then there was Hubie, who all the sports writers say cannot be decribed in words. Well, he had 22 points, 8 rebounds, 4 assists and 5 fouls. This all goes along with the 9,346 cheers he got to a standing ovation when he fouled out.

And then there was Jim Huggard—all reports early Saturday said he was unable to play. Saturday night he was able to play. He was all over the court on defense, hit several clutch field goals and in general played an outstanding floor game.



All this for nought . . . to say the least because we lost. We won't go through the Hawk lineup because they'll be at least 20 pages of basketball in their own paper.

By now the story of the game is old hat and everyone is saying that Villanova could have had the shot that would have been heard around the world. The shot never got off.

INTRAMURAL BASKETBALL

According to Jim Moran, of the Intramural Department, March 2nd concludes the regular league schedules. The playoffs will take place on Monday, March 7th with the two top teams of each of the seven leagues participating.

Wildcats Aim For Share Of Big Five Title

by Dan Grove

Villanova's lately-undernourished Wildcats will try to fatten themselves Saturday night at the expense of the La Salle Explorers.

The last game of the regular season for the Cats is also the finale at the Palestra.

Both teams have been in bad slumps after each rolled up impressive winning streaks at the first of the season. La Salle won nine in a row before underrated Syracuse bumped them out of the ranks of the undefeated.

Explorer's Upset St. Joe's

Since then the Explorers upset St. Joseph to offer a challenge for Big Five Honors then lost to Penn and Temple, the latter defeat being a humiliating one.

The Cats have followed about the same general pattern. They sprinted to a number six national ranking, and a 17-1 record. Then came N.Y.U., St. Bonaventure and the Demon-Deacons.

All of a sudden Whammo! Questions arise, can the Cats win the big ones? Was Wake Forest a nightmare? When is Hubie going to go wild?

Saturday The Answer?

An impressive win Saturday could answer these questions. Be certain of one thing: La Salle needs this game. A possible tie in the M.A.C. will force a Conference decision on the N.C.A.A. representative.

A win over Villanova would indeed be an impressive credential for the La Salle status seekers.

On the other side of the ledger Villanova could strengthen the odds on their outside chance of being seeded in the N.I.T.

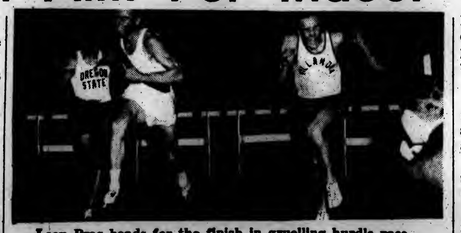
Trackmen Aim For Indoor Crown At Garden

by Mike Donahue

"Our chances hinge on the condition of Budd and Buckley."

This was Jumbo Jim Elliott's reply to a question put to him concerning the possibility of the Wildcats' copping the IC4A track title Saturday at Madison Square Garden.



Elliott disclosed that both Frank Budd and John Buckley are nursing pulled muscles.

He said that the health of these key performers will determine the difference between "fifth or sixth place" and a possible shot at the title.

Three Stay Home

With an eye on the IC4A's, Elliott left sprinter Budd, broad jumper Buckley, and middle distance man Bob Raemore home last weekend. Raemore remained home to insure full recovery from the heavy cold that felled him in New York the weekend of the A.A.U. meet.

Weekend competition at the K. of C. Games at the Garden saw the mile relay team triumph again with Carl Wagner subbing for Raemore.

Leon Pras heads for the finish in grueling hurdle race.

The 'Cat foursome of Paul Drayton, Bob Coffill, Carl Wagner, and Joe Manion posted win number seven of the season in the mile relay event. The time was 3:18.0, as Manion nipped Movgan State anchor man, Nick Ellis, by inches.

In the 600 yard run, Nick DeAngelis ran third behind Manhattan's Kye Courtney and St. John's Art Crichow.

Other Villanova points were earned by sprinter Otie Drayton in the 60 yard dash (fourth) and the two mile relay team (fourth).

Jumbo Undecided

At this writing, Elliott has not yet decided how he'll distribute his men in the various events.

Sure entries are the mile relay quartet, Paul Drayton and Budd (if he's ready) in the 60 yd. dash, Leon Pras in the 60 yd. high hurdles, Jerry Donini in the shotput, and Buckley (if healthy) in the broad jump.

Elliott revealed that he is still undecided on whether to enter a two mile relay quartet.

"I'm contemplating running Nick DeAngelis in the 600 and Pat Nicastro in the 1000," thus cutting down appreciably the point gathering potential of the two mile team.

Two Mile A Possibility

"I still might enter a two mile event even if DeAngelis and Nicastro do run in the 600 and 1000," he suggested.

Elliott regards Yale, Manhattan, and Maryland as the teams with the best shots at the title.

Yale's strength lies primarily in the 1000 yard event and the two mile relay. Key men for the Elis are Tom Carroll, Jim Stack, and Ed Slowik.

Manhattan is strong in both relays, in the 600 and 1000, and in the shot put. Men to watch for the Jaspers are Artie Evans, Kyle Courtney, and Joe Marchiony.

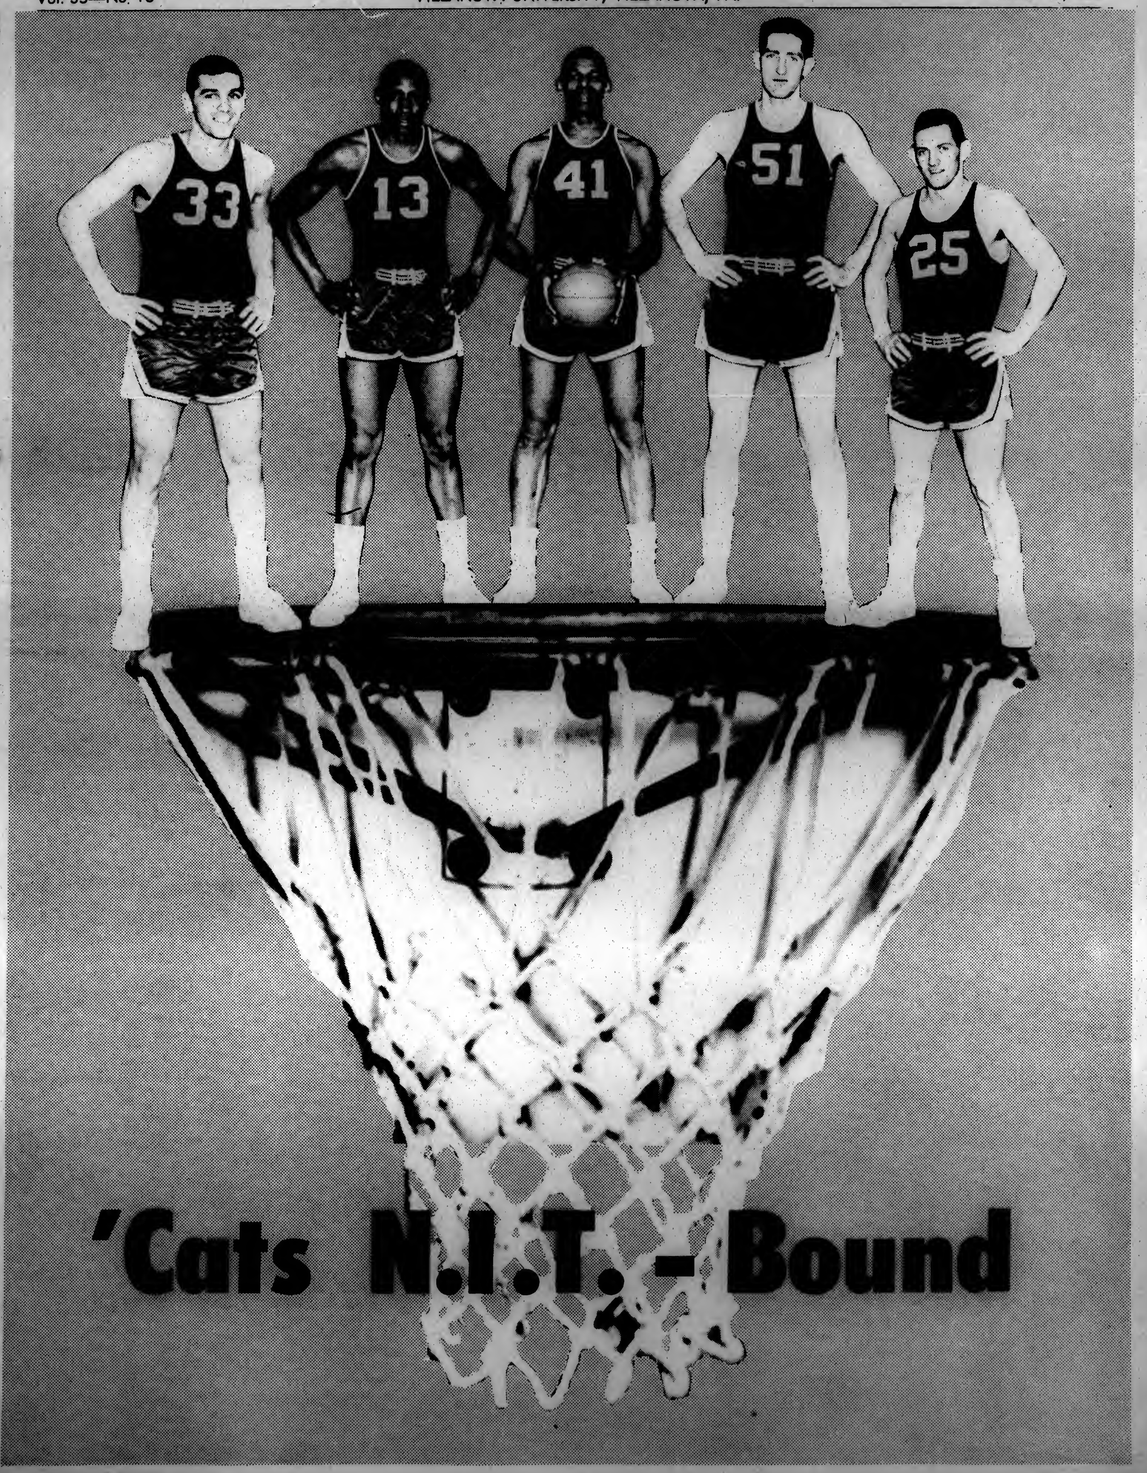
Maryland's strong suit is the 60 yd. dash. Jones Spiegal cavorts for the Terrapins in the sprints.

25 to Win

Asked to don the oracle's robe and pinpoint the total needed for a win, the amiable track mentor point-blanked, "25 should win it."

From this corner, 25 points does not seem impossible for the Wildcats to attain. Elliott, however, took no such optimistic view. "We're just hoping that Budd and Buckley will be ready. I'm making no predictions."

Prognostication



Villanovan sports analysts Dan Grove and Tom Troy conjured up a list showing how the Wildcats might possibly amass the needed 25 points: They assume that the 'Cats win the mile relay (5), possibly take second and fourth in the sprints (6), possibly place in the two mile relay (4), possibly take third in the 600 (3) and fourth in the 1000 (2), nab fifth in the shotput (1), and if Buckley is up to par, finish as high as second (4) in the broad jump.

On paper that's 25 points, which Jumbo thinks should be enough to win.

Possibly too many possibles? Saturday night will tell the story.

Should Chessman Die?

Philosophy Dept. Members Would Say No

For the ninth time in twelve years, convict and author Caryl Chessman has been sentenced to death in the gas chamber of the State of California.

The ninth sentence, pronounced last Wednesday, March 2, fixed Chessman's final day to be May 2, 1960. In past months, Chessman's case has achieved world wide noteriety. In light of this the Villanovan has sought the opinions of several of the members of the Villanova Philosophy Department; Dr. Robert O' Shea, Mr. J. Whalen and Mr. Gabriel Di Federico.

Has Fulfilled Punishment

In regard to the time which has elapsed since Chessman was tried, Mr. Whalen feels that "Chessman has already fulfilled a just punishment by the long waiting period which an ineffectual legal system has imposed on him in this case.

"Therefore", he continued, "a non-capital punishment rather than execution ought to be imposed in Chessman's case."

Mr. Whalen qualified his statement, however, by holding that such a judgement would not militate against the rights of the State of California, either to abolish or to continue capital punishment in future cases.

State Has Right

Thus, he believes, "the State of California has the right to execute Chessman, assuming he has been properly tried and convicted."

It is the opinion of Dr. O'Shea that eight prolonged stays of execution indicates that "there is present in this case, from the legal point of view, a lack of clarity, such that Chessman's guilt is not beyond the level of that reasonable doubt which is recognized as extenuating under the law."

by Jack Maurer

"This also indicates," he confirmed "that the application of penal law in the State of California has not been clarified. The final decision of the California Supreme Court which ruled Chessman subject to capital punishment was too far removed in time from the actual crimes to be effective."

Mr. Whalen

" . . . non-capital punishment"

Dr. O'Shea deems it possible then that the passage of time has effectually removed the jurisdiction of the State of California over the Chessman case, and that therefore no alternative is left to the State of California but to release him.

Should Have Died

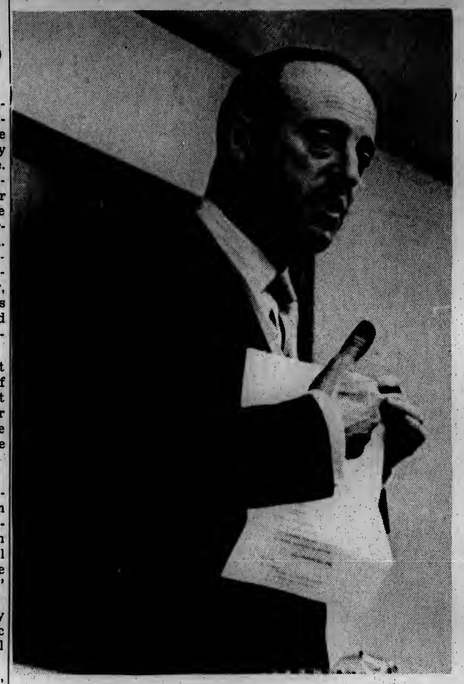
"Chessman" he stated, "should have been executed eleven years ago; California has bungled."

The state has the right to execute one of its citizens wh that citizen has been clearly established to be an injust aggressor, and the state must impose the death penalty as the only adequate means of self defense.

"Yet," said Dr. O' Shea, "superior methods for providing for this common defense, render the death penalty obsolete and irrational, and therefore immoral. The state has the power to execution in regard to the Chessman case, but the point is now, 11½ years after the crime, is death the best method in regard to Chessman or can there be another method?"

Mr. Di Federico pointed out that "it is the prerogative of Governors of States to grant reprieves and pardons, under the law, for good and justifiable reasons, one which might be world wide public opinion."

Incident in Uruguay



"The State Department informed Governor Brown of an existing opinion in high Uruguayan circles that the Chessman execution would be detrimental to the diplomatic status of the United States and its President."

This point of view certainly reflects the opinion of public officials elsewhere as a perusal of the world press will reveal.

"It was," said Di Federico, "The right, if not the duty of Mr. Rubothom to inform Governor Brown of these evident facts so that Brown would have at his disposal all such material as might enter into the complete formation of this decision."

"To the degree that his literary activity might be a true indication of his rehabilitation" remarked Dr. O'Shea, "it should certainly be considered among the various reasons for his pardon."

Hon. David Berger at Forum

Law Forum Hears Reasons For Decline in Commuters

"The American character has declined. We now fall out of bed and into our car, then off to the office."

This comment concerning the reasons for the decline of commuter transportation, was one of many expressed by the Honorable David Berger at the Law Forum last Wednesday evening.

Berger, who is solicitor of the city of Philadelphia, stated that the transportation and traffic problems which now harass most major cities are becoming nationwide in scope.

"The problem as it exists today," according to Berger, "began in 1947." At that time the auto-makers began producing cars at a fantastic pace. The car-starved American public took up the challenge, and an orgy of auto buying ensued.

Two-Fold Effect

This, in turn, created a two-fold effect: a decrease in the use of railroad transportation, and an increase in automobile transportation. As an example of the problem, Berger cited the condition of commuter facilities of the Philadelphia area.

He said that in 1956, the railroads began taking some trains out of service and increasing fares to combat their losses. But this caused a still further decline in the number of riders. The question then arose as to the legality of the railroads action in pulling trains out of service.

Legal Wrangling

"Finally, after much legal wrangling, I entered into negotiations with the railroad," Berger declared.

The result of these negotiations was a contract by which the City of Philadelphia and the railroad companies serving the city would work together towards a modern and efficient system of transportation for the benefit of all concerned, he said.

Mr. Berger stated that the terms of the contract provided that the City of Philadelphia agree to compensate the railroads for losses which they might incur in the pursuance of the plan. The railroads in turn agreed to allow the City the right to list the trains which would be used.

The first step forward was "Operation Northwest", which served the commuters in the Chestnut Hill area. This proved so successful that new plans were designed to serve the commuters of other suburban districts.

Unified System

"What the plans called for", explained Berger, "was a unified system starting from the core." He said this would involve the bus which the commuter rides to the trains, the train itself, and finally the loop bus which the commuter takes when he arrives in the City.

The problem now arsose as to the eventual financing or the project. Mr. Berger proposed a non-profit corporation which would handle this matter. This corporation, the Passenger Service Improvement Corporation of Philadelphia, has as its chief aims the promotion, development, improvement, and maintainance of commuter transportation facilities of Philadelphia.

Berger forsees that the corporation can be financed by the City Council and expresses the belief that loans might be obtained from the Federal Government.

Shamokinaki Dance Slated For Field House Friday

The annual Shamokinaki Mission dance will be held this Friday night in the Field house, with music provided by the "Villanovans."

This year's moderator of the affair is Rev. Robert Burke O.S.A., a new addition to Villanova's faculty. Commenting on the forthcoming dance, Fr. Burke announced that several innovations are planned in an effort to make the eighth Shamokinaki dance the most enjoyable to date.

Japanese Tea Set

Among the "extras" on the evening's agenda is a door prize of a Japanese tea set, currently on exhibit in the show case of the Day Student's cafeteria. Also on display are some of the spot-dance prizes to be awarded during the course of the evening.

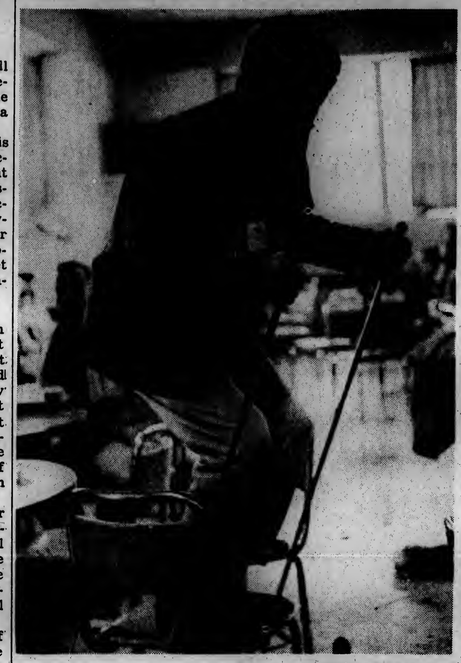
"In addition", remarked Fr. Burke, "appropriate momentos of the occasion will be distributed to all the young ladies present. The entire evening should be a tremendous success."

Cooperation in the affair has been received from several neighboring schools. Publicity chairman Pete Devlin reports that the most popular local girls' colleges have given their students late permissions in order to contribute to the success of the dance.

Late Permissions

Both Cabrini College and Immaculata have extended their curfews to 1 a.m., while the more remote Chestnut Hill granted 1:30 permissions. Rosemont girls are also among the favored, having been given a 12:30 deadline.

The traditional program, this year drawn up under the direction of Junior nursing student Eileen Greyson, will also be distributed at the dance. "In recognition of the increasing favorable response to petitions for this noble cause, this year's program will be the largest yet printed for Shamokinaki," commented Miss Greyson.



Tickets $2.00

Tickets for the dance are on sale daily in the Pie Shoppe at $2.00 each. Ken Horn, ticket committee chairman, announced that the response has been very favorable, and a large turnout is expected. Preceding the ticket sales, a collection of contributions was taken up among the students under the direction of chairmen Jim Hooker and Ken Kraemer.

The decorations planned for the Field House will be in keeping with the general oriental theme of Shamokinaki. Jake Krupa, in charge of creating the Far-Eastern atmosphere, promised a "pleasing and colorful decor."

Earl Denlinger, in charge of refreshments, added that "The oriental effect will even have its influence at the two refreshment counters, although along somewhat less elaborate lines."

Snow Protection Villanova Style

Blizzard Hits

The snow last week cancelled a day of class and drove Villanovans into all sorts of fiendish attire, as shown here.

Portrette

Peretti-Yearbook Editor Individualist with Scarf

The man behind the book—the 1960 Belle-Aire, that is—is senior Tom Peretti. Tom, who is editor-in-chief of the Belle-Air, comes from Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he graduated with honors from Catholic Central High School.

While attending high school, he was active in publications and dramatics, and participated in Young Republican Activities. As a matter of fact, he was a page at several Republican State Conventions. His interest in political work exerted a considerable influence of his choice of government service or diplomatic service as a career. With this end in mind, Tom entered Villanova in 1956 as a Political Science Major.

Tom joined the Belle-Air staff in his junior year. At this time, he became treasurer of the Philadelphia Region N.F.C.C.S., and worked in I.C.G. The climax of his activity-filled years occurred this year, when Tom was appointed editor-in-chief of the Belle Air and named to Who's Who. He is also the yearbook's representative to student council and treasurer of D.P.M.

Tom, who can be identified readily by his ever present green scarf and the prominent display of his fraternity pin, has very definite opinions on subjects of importance to him. "I like people and I feel that they should be treated as individuals. My pet peeve is loss of identity of the individual, and the prevalent tendency to handle people as a group. My views on this subject extend into the field of education, which should definitely be individualized.

Tom has channeled all of his energies into "project Belle Aire" in his attempt to make this yearbook "the best yet". He has worked long and hard in forming the staff.

Peretti

"The Belle Aire is no joke; it is an expensive project."

Since he is a political science major, Tom finds much fascination in the world of politcis. To say that he is a die-hard moderate Republican is a gross understatement, and he will be only to glad to convince everyone of this fact. Nixon is his choice for President in the Fall.

Upon graduation, Tom hopes to be employed with the National Security Agency or pursue a career in the advertising or the publishing field.

"Crucible" by Miller

Belle Masque To Feature Witchcraft

Witchcraft, black magic, Puritanic religious fervor, and the undercurrent of sin that was so often found in early New England are the main ingredients of Belle Masque's spring production, "The Crucible."

Written by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Arthur Miller, this play is the deeply melodramatic story of how an honest man of principle can be destroyed by the public hysteria that was such an integral part of old Salem during the Puritan era.

Fine Play

Mr. Richard Duprey, director of the show, expressed his pleasure at the choice of the play-selecting committee. "It is a fine play, the product of a fine playwright," he said, "and I think we have the cast that is capable of making it come to life."

The cast is composed of a mixture of seasoned veterans and promising newcomers. Among the old grads are Tony Provenzano in the role of John Proctor, the honest, hard-working farmer, and Jack Milton as Mr. Hale, the sincere, zealous minister who is an expert on the ways of the devil.

John McGarry is cast as Giles Corey, blunt, out-spoken old farmer, and Alan Willig takes the part of the Reverend Parris.

New Faces

One of the new faces in the show is Bill DiPaolo as Governor Danforth, the head of the province.

The three principle female parts are divided among girls from Immaculata, Rosemont, and Villanova. Kathy Crane, a junior at Rosemont College, plays the role of Abigail, a lying, scheming servant girl who denounces scores of innocent people as tools of the devil.

John Proctor's cold but devoted wife, Elizabeth, is played by Mary Shaffer, a junior at Immaculata College. Joanne Dynakowski, a freshman nursing student at Villanova, rounds out the leading roles in the part of Mary Warren, a weak, fearful servant girl.

This show is the fourth major dramatic production to be presented on the Villanova campus this year, the others being "The Bonds of Interest," "Our Town," and "Playboy of the Western World."

Summer European Tour

The Rotary Club of Springfield, Delaware County, has available, two $300 grants for summer tour in Europe.

The tour is offered to any Villanova Undergraduate student who is at least a sophomore or 21 yrs. of age and a resident of Springfield.

Actual cost of the tour is $600, so the student will be responsible for half the cost.

Band Invited To March In Parade On St. Pat's Day

The Villanova University Marching Band has been invited to participate in the Greater Philadelphia Saint Patrick's Day Parade, which will be held March 13.

This marks the first time that an invitation has ever been extended to the Band to march in the parade.

Rev. Henry Syvinski, O.S.A., moderator of the Band, has stated that, in his opinion, "The appearances of the Band at Villanova's football games, and the publicity given it over WRCV, were influential in obtaining the invitation."

He added that he believes increased student participation and the efforts of Dr. Herbert Fiss, the conductor, have greatly contributed to the Band's success this year.

"Gerry Pajak, the president, and Bill Diepenbrock, its student director, have collaborated on the Band's many fine marching formations," Father said. "We are currently in the midst of r most successful season, with a greatly increased repertoire, and we intend to duplicate previous performances for the parade."

Commissioner Speaks To Pre-Law Society

Randolph E. Wise, City Commissioner, Department of Public Welfare City of Philadelphia, will speak before the Pre-Law Society on March 10, at 10:30 a.m., in room 110, C&F amphitheater.

Mr. Wise will speak on "City Government and the Law". He obtained his MS from the Boston School of Social Work, and in 1957 received an Honoris Causa, Doctor of Laws from LaSalle College. He has also served in many public offices, and was Director of Parole, National Probation and Parole Association, N. Y. before coming to Philadelphia.

This is Mr. Wise's first visit to the campus and all students are invited to attend this lecture.

The Pre-Law Society is also sponsoring two other programs. The first, is a field trip to the Federal Court in Philadelphia on March 30, and the second, a drive for articles for the Pre-Law Journal.

Thirteen articles will be accepted and may cover Civil Rights, Drug Addiction, Federal and State Legal Systems, Law and Religion, and Law and Medicine.

New German Chief Topples Traditions

Germany's new president is fracturing many unwritten rules of German tradition.

Heinrich Leubke, says the Catholic Digest, was born on a farm in a remote German village; most German heads of state have come from aristocratic families. He is unassuming, even shy; the Germans are accustomed to looking upon their leaders with awe and reverence. He is a Roman Catholic; this is the first time in history that both the German president and chancellor are Catholics.

Every soldier snapped to attention when the major entered the mess hall except the new recruit cook.

"Why didn't you come to attention when I entered?" the major asked.

"Sir," came the recruit's reply, "I'm cooking a recipe that says 'Do not stir for 20 minutes.'"

Arts Sophs To Be Tested

The Reverend Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., has announced that all Second Semester Arts and Science Sophomores will be tested on Wednesday, March 30, at 9:00 a.m. in Vasey Auditorium.

All those who are to take this test will also assemble on the prior Thursday, March 24 at 10:30 a.m., in Vasey Auditorium to hear an address by Dean Sullivan in conjunction with the tests.

All morning classes will be automatically excused.

The test, given by the Education Testing Service, applies to the three sections of Arts & Science individually: Social Science, Humanities, and Natural Sciences.

It will serve as an achievement measure primarily, but will also prepare the students for the Graduate Record Examination, which is given under the same program and is required for entrance to most graduate schools.

Policy Statement

There was cause for celebration in the VILLANOVAN office last Tuesday evening. We opened our mail, and lo! before our gaze lay a phenomenon—a letter to the editor.

Neatly typed and single spaced, it covered the expanse of one full page and modestly continued onto a second. Startled staff members huddled around to see if it was a prank, learned that it was authentic, and silently read it from start to finish.

Strange thing about this letter: it didn't denounce the food situation; it didn't berate VILLANOVAN sensationalism; nor did it blast the Adiminstration for taking down shower curtains.

In an unprecedented move, it concerned itself with something rather scholastic—foreign policy. It took polite and discreet exception to an article featured in last week's paper which was critical of the Eisenhower foreign policy.

This isn't the first letter this paper has received this year concerning an issue of substantial nature. It was the second. The first was submitted—not by a student—but by a priest, pertaining to a previous article on cheating.

Outside quarters have often asked the VILLANOVAN just why we never print letters to the editor, and we must glumly repeat the same excuse time and again: we can't print what we haven't got.

Before someone asks: "what has the paper ever published that has deserved any sort of comment,"—we will here note several statements abstracted from articles printed this year.

- "Spirit never won a ball game."
- "The government depended on the whims of Secretary Dulles."
- "The statement by the Jesuit . . . attempts to harness the people into accepting his (Kennedy's) Catholicism."
- "What would we lose by government loans falling into the hands of communists?"
- "Because of our child-like fear of responsibility, we have created the Ivy club."
- "There can be no other excuse for some of the inanities the Council introduces."
- "Lock all the fanatics in the Palestra and burn it down."
- "A thing that's worth having is worth cheating for."
- "Proctors for exams have been accused of looking the other way when they observe cheating at Villanova."
- " 'Suddenly, Last Summer' is the work of a man who may be America's greatest playwright."
- "Why can't we learn to accept this swastika sham in the same vein?"
- "Ike's conservative political theories, though intrinsically sound, are contradictory in practice."
- "The only requirement for entrance into college is lack of intelligence."

Perhaps this week's letter to the editor (printed at right) will demonstrate that such statements as the above can be disputed if there exists somewhere on campus a mind supple enough to tackle the subject matter. A large portion of the letters received this year were deemed unfit for publication, largely on the grounds that they were too petty or abusive. Several were withheld out of charity to the writers whose grammatical deficiencies might have caused embarrassment.

But the letter in today's issue is in a class by itself, the first of its kind submitted by a student this semester. We hope it isn't the last.

Here is a policy statement: The VILLANOVAN will publish any intelligent letter submitted by Thursday. We give special attention to concise letters which give at least the pretense of displaying college level brain activity.

In the meantime, some sort of award should be presented to J. Harry Klemm, the author of today's pioneer letter.

Open The Library Stacks?

by Jim Merikangas

Carlyle once said "The true University these days is a collection of books". We have here at Villanova a fine collection of books. Our library is the same size as the undergraduate library at Harvard and is growing at the rate of 200 books a week.

We receive 425 periodicals, we have facilities for microfilm and recordings, we use the Library of Congress system to make it easy to find the book you want.

Extensive Facilities

We have a browsing room, a reserve room, a reference room, a music room, a faculty room and the Villanova room, which houses such rare relics that it is only opened once a year.

One thing is lacking however, and that is free and easy access to the books we have. Let me quote from Jacques Barzun's book "The Teacher in America" (LB 2321 .B2 Villanova library). He is discussing our problem.

Barzun Discusses problem

"Beyond all this a college library needs open shelves. A college dean once boasted in a newspaper that his instructors could always be found surrounded by their books.

"Well, the students should be besieged in the same manner. They must live close to books: it is a part of the definition of the word "student". They must find, on the shelves, books that they were looking for and that they did not know existed.

"They must be able to go from shelf to shelf, tracking down an idea, a name, or a picture. And all this freely, in a mood of peaceful laissez faire.

"Libraries generally have not enough copies of assigned books (non-text books) and libraries are too apprehensive about the stealing of those they have.

"I say that a college ought to be proud, within reason, to have its books stolen. Why do people steal money? Because they value it. Apply this to books and you may get a measure of effective education.

"Naturally purloining should not be encouraged or even condoned; but it should be accepted as a running expense which would find its natural limits in the average deviation from right conduct among normal American youth.

"In other words, the library —originally founded to give out books—becomes a Museum, designed to keep them in."

Don't Close Stacks

I realize that the value of books stolen per annum amounts to the fabulous sum of the combined room and board of 3 resident students, but I am sure there is some other solution to the problem besides closing the stacks.

Perhaps we should, as is inscribed on the old library in Berne, "Let no profane person enter", and deny the use of the library to known criminals. Or maybe we should trust to the inherent honesty of Catholic gentlemen and show our faith in Villanova manhood.

I believe that if the stacks

Denies That Dulles Bungled Policy

The foreign policy of a nation such as ours is bound to draw criticism no matter which way it turns; it is impossible to satisfy everyone all of the time.

Nevertheless, to call United States policy in two areas of the globe "typical" of our entire policy is certainly unwarranted. The possible inadequacies of policy in the Near East and Latin America has been allowed to overshadow the many successes in other areas of the world.

Criticize Foster Dulles

You have chosen to eriticize John Foster Dulles on the basis of the Suez crisis, saying that he changed his mind for "no apparent reason". This was a rather naive charge to make, for you are implying that the entire foreign policy of this country depended on the whims of one man. This is not how our State Department operates.

There are several factors which must be brought forward before any conclusions are drawn regarding the Suez crisis.

First, the United States was willing to loan Egypt $56 million to build the Aswan Dam. The World Bank (IBRD) agreed to loan $200 million, and Great Britan $14 million. Egypt's ability to pay this enormous loan without danger to its economy was doubted by many economists.

Second, a powerful faction in Congress was against the loan. This faction was composed of three groups: southern representatives of cotton farmers who feared Egyptian competition, the pro-Israeli group, and the right-wingers who were against any foreign loans. Also, this was an election year.

Third, Nasser had been gradually inclining toward Moscow in hopes of gaining American aid. He had the previous year purchased Czech arms, and he followed an anti-West policy throughout the Near East and Africa.

Can't See Nasser

Fourth, several Near Eastern powers did not want want to see a too-powerful Nasser. These included Turkey, Iran, Iraq, Saudi-Arabia, and Pakistan.

Fifth, a strong British government faction and British public opinion were against Nasser. They quite frankly wanted to see his government collapse.

Sixth, we believed that the Soviet offer to Nasser was a bluff to assure our loan, that the amount the Soviets offered would hurt their own economy. This assumption proved to be correct.

So, on July 20, 1956, Dulles informed the Egyptian ambassador that we were withdrawing our loan. The next day Britan withdrew hers, the World Bank loan was cancelled, and on July 26 Nasser, to finance the Aswan Dam, nationalized the Suez Canal, precipitating the Suez crisis. Subsequently, the United States united with the Soviet Union in the UN to end the Anglo-French invasion of Egypt.

On the basis of these factors, I think it fair to ask for a re-evaluation of your judgment on American foreign policy regarding the Suez question.

The nurses have lost their lounge in Vasey Hall. It has been replaced by a very much smaller one in Vasey Hall. Future sorority meetings, etc. will be held in shifts.

Though Perry Como chose the senior queen, little did the seniors know that he would be singing their theme song—"letters, we get letters."

The article last week by Larry Ruth was necessarily cut because of spatial limitations. Another chapter will be forthcoming.

New Shell Game Found; Capitol Midnight Oil Burns

by natalie attired

Howcum nobody sees flying saucers anymore? Many seniors who are constantly contemplating their future have now started taking notes during the popular T.V. show, "How To Marry A Millionaire."

Those who wish a primary source should feel free to contact a Mr. Antony Armstrong Jones.

Speaking of the British, here are some titles of plays currently being staged in London: "The Night Life of A Virile Potato;" "The Bride of The Boll Weevil;" "The Spoonful of Scented Cart Grease;" and "Darling Rhinoceros, Your Slip Is Showing." Needless to say, they are all tragedies.

Never heard anything like "Achtung! Achtung! . . . " on the public address system before. We owe a great deal of thanks to the Immigration Department for sending one of their samples.

Rugged Individualist

Bad grammar and poor syntax are keeping the midnight oil burning in the Capitol. Hardy Southerners are keeping alive the American tradition of rugged individualism by taking Army cots and electric razors.

What's to blame: the system or sentiment? Is it a file-buster or "full-of-it-buster?"

President Eisenhower has been described on his recent South American tour as a "Walking American Flag." Was he waving or bending in the breeze?

Lost and Found—One Senior, at the Sheraton Hotel.

Cabrini Weekend

Old Natalie was subpoenaed recently. The legal-looking document was an announcement of social festivities at Cabrini College. The kids (from that school in the woods) sponsored a weekend Feb. 26-28. We hope it was a success but if that publicity stunt could be used as a criterion, they have our sympathy.

Football parleys and the old shell game have found a cousin vice on campus "en la biblioteca" (library). The gamble now is: do we have the book or don't we, is the book in or isn't it, will I get the book or won't I? Don't become frustrated, you knowledge-seeker!! Take refuge in the idea that maybe you didn't want the book anyway.

Our congratulations to Miss Beth Sewell Alexander of Bryn Mawr College who spoke at a duo-organization meeting recently. The appreciative audience, in the main, was comprised of Arts men and the limited attendance of the lecture room can be attributed to the usual insouciance of the student body. Nevertheless, the lecture proved to be interesting and capably delivered; a fact much to Miss Alexander's credit.

S&H Stamps

It is rumored on good authority that the Rosies have scored a first (who said it couldn't be done?) In addition to the cultural, social and intellectual benefits of the notorious TEA HOUSE, they have added the services of an honest-to-goodness popcorn machine. The solemn symbol of progress is coin-operated, of course. Now the Commandoes can eat corn while listening to it.

Sheldon Pollack, debonair resident senior, mistakenly applied two S&H green stamps to a letter the other day and mailed same. The letter, unfortunately, was returned and in addition, Mr. Pollack received a set of hair curlers, courtesy of U.S. Post Office.

He who laughs last—probably had it explained to him.

Joust In The Round

The Knyghte and the Dragonne

by Robert F. Conlin

Doing some rather extensive work in the library recently on Old English and Anglo-Saxon literature, I found on the fourth stack level, thrust into an old copy of Chapman's I, The Jury, a very old manuscript apparently overlooked by the library cataloguers.

Sneaking it past the discerning eye of the gendarme at the door by wrapping it around my left leg, I took the "find" home for closer observation.

There, after considerable analysis, I attributed it to the young Chaucer, probably written in the throes of puberty.

I have taken the liberty of explaining the fine points of this work through a very lucid and intelligible marginal gloss.

This is its first publication, and if authenticated, I will present "THE KNYGHTE AND THE DRAGONNE" to the English Department for a possible radio debut on the harbinger of the Neo-Renaissance, WIBG, this Sunday morning on the Jerry Lee Lewis Hour from 6:30 to 7:30.

Though very old, the epic contains a wise moral, appropriate in this day of the A-bomb, the H-bomb, and Mae West, and as American as the A-bomb, the H-bomb, and Mae West.

THE KNYGHTE AND THE DRAGONNE
. . . possibly by Geoffrey Chaucer

Tom Troy resolves to be a Knight and destroy evil.

Once wast a roto-gravure boye
By nayme wast knowne as THOMAS TROYE
Who wished that he could be a knygthe
But dreaded much bothe toil and fyghte.
And these of course, were attrybutes
Of alle who wishe to drawe on bootes.
So THOMAS TROYE didst swallowe harde
And lefte sayfe VILLANOVANE yarde,
Insearche of ogre, monstere foule
To slaye b ymeans of dis-embowel.

Leaving the sanctuary of the Villanovan, he ventures to the underworld.

He traversed to thatte land belowe
The world where somme newespaperes growe.
Quakynge as mayde his searche
Brayve Tom o'erlooked no cayve or lurche.
Until one gloomye Thors-daye nyghte
DOK-KERE-TEE HALL came to his syghte
Where legendes tolde thatte therein sette
A dragonne who for manye yeares
Didst terrorize and happen feares
Amongst the Villanovane folk
Who feared fierce nature's aweful joke.

Approaching Dougherty Hall he recalls a legend of a fierce and potent dragon who appears there every Thursday.

The Villanova peasants do not revolt against the monster as it releases them from their toils one day a year.

COUNCYLLE ruled with potente hande
The legende saith though understande,
The peasantes lette the dragonne lyve
For one free daye the rogue woulde give Eache yeare or so the tayle was tolde
By somme were there, extremelie olde
To Tom as at an inne he stopped
For draughte of stoute, called olde PIE SHOPPE.
Here many other lays he'd heare
From VILLANOVANES, peasants there.
One saide the beaste was fierce and meane
Quicke and agile, tough and leane
Who woulde devoure all who cayme
To threatene COUNCYLE's powere game.
The peasants never saw this beaste
But somme told tayles of human feastes
On Knyghtes who challenged COUNCYLETTE
And never knewe thatte daye's regrette.

Numerous legends told Tom at a local inn convince him that the peasants at Villanova are held in awe of their dragon through their ignorance.

Yet THOMAS TROYE, he did not feare
He swore to have thatte dragonne's eare
And so he traversed to LOUNGE EASTE
This horrore for himself to seest.
But there to brave TOM TROYE's surprize
Omnipotent Lizard met not his eyes.
Insteadde he sae a bloatted worme
Withe vulnerable bellye whyte upturned.
A poore excuse for dragonne kynge.
Wast this dissipated weaklynge thynge.
Fiftye, nay sixtye, nay even more of heades, the syghte of which was sore.
Heye jabbered on of triviale stuffe
Till Tom was sicke, thoughe he wast toughe.

Tom's suspicions of a hoax are confirmed.

The "powerful beast" is an impotent, bloated dragon of many heads, all of which keep up a constant meaningless jabber.

Tom realizes his superiority and the fact that a few well placed jabs would silence the slothful beast, but decides it is below him to attack such a useless creature.

The noise alone wast deafynynge
LOUNGE EASTE let off tremendous ringe.
TOM TROYE unsheathed his myghty sworde
And thoughte he'd slaye this useless bore
But thynkynge twicet, he putte dirk backe
And left the halle, tremendous rack't.
Howe foolish would the efforte be
Of using sworde or repartee
To sylence thatte foolishe syghte
And howe belowe thatte would-be knyghte.

Tom Troy returns to the land of the Villanovan while the dragon of many heads continues to bamboozle everyone.

EPILOGUE

TOM TROYE didst quitte the chivalryes
And returned to poundynge keys.
The beast? It likelye lives todaye
Be peasantes foolishe as they saye.

Who's For Vice? Office Assumes New Import

By Matt McCue

Down from the dawn of time came the first Vice-President; a hirsute being was he.

At the beginning he was merely a useless appendage to the U. S. governmental system; he gradually developed into less.

From the Vice-President in the Nineteenth Century who showed up in Washington twice during his term (both inaugurals) and who spent his time duck shooting, to the "glorious" days of Richard Nixon, the vice-presidency has come a long way.

Worth His Salt

Throughout most of our history, for any candidate worth his salt to accept the Vice-Presidental nomination was an admission of political death. Vultures would flock around his corpse.

Theodore Roosevelt, when he got too obstreperous in his own state (New York), was kicked upstairs to the Vice-Presidency and to supposed oblivion, only to emerge as one of our strongest and best Presidents.

In previous years too, Vice-Presidents were picked for almost anything but ability (it's a wonder some of them could read or write) despite the fact that only one heart beat separated them from the Presidency.

Today the situation has radically changed and the vice-presidency, at least under Ike, has assumed a new position. Due to the particularly crushing load which a modern president must bear and the uncertain condition of health, Dick Nixon has stepped in and gained himself the certain nomination for the Presidency in 1960.

Important Role

In the years to come, it is almost a sure bet that the vice-presidency will continue to play an increasingly more important role in our governmental system.

Despite the fact that many vice-presidents have succeeded to the Presidency (Adams, Van Buren and Taft to name a few) this post has never been considered a springboard to the Presidency, but this also should change in the future.

Richard Nixon in his unique role of an "active" Vice-President has won much acclaim for his conduct on both the foreign and domestic scene. His personal courage on his South American tour when he was spit upon, evoked the praise of all Americans. (Who knows, Latin spittle might have supplied the mortar that builds us our next President.)

Possible Candidates

At the political convention this year, the Republicians and Democrats will meet to choose their respective candidates, not only for president, but also his running mate.

This latter is traditionally the choice of the Presidential nominee, but in actual fact, involves a host of other factors such as religion, heritage, and state; things which would tend to balance the ticket for greater appeal to the voter.

Since the G.O.P. alone has a sure presidential nominee, this writer is constrained in his predictions as to the vice-presidential nominee to this party. A host of possibilities present themselves: Henry Cabot Lodge, Charles Halleck, Hugh Scott, Kenneth B. Keating, and James Mitchel; others will undoubtedly appear as convention time draws near.

Henry Cabot Lodge and Senator Halleck are well known nationally but their conservatism, in my opinion, should seem to rule them off the Nixon ticket.

Senators Scott and Keating are not too well known nationally but have proven themselves excellent vote-getters. The former, however, appeals, to the same type of voter that Nixon does, while the latter is somewhat too old (69) for the post.

The best Republican vice-presidential candidate, (with the exception of Nelson Rockerfeller, who says he will not accept the nomination in any event) is, in my opinion, James Paul Mitchel, the present Secretary of Labor. He embodies most nearly the classical ideal choice for veep.

He is a Catholic and would gain important support for the ticket from that group (if it's a group) especially in the event that the Democrats run a Catholic. He is from New Jersey and would geographically balance the Californian Nixon.

He is liberal and would soften the impression some people have that Nixon is a bit too conservative. Last but not least, through his handling of labor relations, he has secured an appeal which Nixon distinctly lacks with the rank and file voters of labor.

The Democratic Vice-Presidential picture is too obscure for any predictions to be forthcoming from this writer. Any one of the avowed presidential candidates might possibly accept second place on the ticket despite his stout denials to the contrary.

Many Democratic political pundits simply drool at the mention of a Stevenson-Kennedy ticket and this I believe is not out of the realm of the possible. Republican leaders, on the other hand, believe that a Nixon-Rockerfeller ticket would also be unbeatable.

The new Vice-President in 1961 will be an important man regardless of his party affilliations.

"Down from the dawn of time came the first Vice- President; a hirsute being was he."

Charlie and Freddie Return To Entertain and Discern

by bill speers

Time: Present Place: Near
Characters: Charlie, the sophomore and Freddie the freshman

(Enter Charlie and Freddie)

Charlie: (Gayly sprinting between the two resident halls towards the student union building which he hasn't passed since November; and only then to see for himself, if the rumors about a new science building being built was true.) Hey, Freddie! How are ya' kid?

Freddie: Fine, how are you, Charlie?

Charlie: Never felt better. Keepin' trim on those sandwiches from our dispensin' machine down at our cafeteria. Since Lent came along, those abstinence days have really been foulin' up the ol' mechanism. (laughs)

Freddie: Yes, I've heard about the new machine.

Charlie: Ya' mean ya' haven't even seen it yet? Where ya' been?

Freddie: (resolvedly) Well, Charlie, I decided that this semester I was going to have my noon day meal in the other cafeteria; thereby coming in closer contact with those students of the University that indulge in studies other than my own; consequently gaining a vaster knowledge of the world and its people.

Charlie: (overwhelmed) Easy, kid, easy. Your cloudin' my glasses! Listen, you'd like ta be the well-rounded student, right?

Freddie: (staunchly) Right.

Charlie: Well would ya' be so kind as ta tell me how you're goin' ta become rounded with a crowd of squares? (confidently) Stick with us kid, and you'll go places.

Freddie: (meekly) Yes, well I'll think about that, Charlie.

Charlie: Hey, why are ya' carryin' around an index card on your co . . . (in ultimate non-expectance) YOUR PLEDGING!!!

Freddie: Yes, Charlie, I thought it the proper thing to do. You know, with being collegiate and all.

Charlie: Ya' never made a nattier move, my boy. Stick with it. No matter if they insult and embarass you in front of your friends; no matter if they send you ta the local bijou to pose with the then "artist"; no matter if they use your lunch money to satisfy their taste for a real cigarette; no matter if they beat and slap you around—take it with a smile. Remember it's traditional, it's collegiate, it's a prelude to grandeur. Who's your pledge bas . . . er . . . I mean pledgemaster?

Freddie: (proudly) There he goes now. The fellow in the Navy uniform.

Charlie: In the Navy, eh. It's Tuesday, I guess he's goin' ta the afternoon matinee over in the Navy Building. Did the frat show you anything yet?

Freddie: Well, last week we had a lecture on Norwegian games.

Charlie: Norwegian games! Wait until ya' get the one on Roman games. Ya' know the ones I mean. (pokes Freddie in the ribs with his elbow.)

Freddie: You're not a member of the frat, are you Charlie?

Charlie: Well, kid, I'm sort of an honorary member. I didn't haveta' pledge. The ol' man is a dram disperser. So I'm automatically in.

Freddie: (bewildered) What's a dram disperser, Charlie.

Charlie: (looking around, then whispering) That's what the frat heads told me to put down as my father's occupation, on my file card. It means beer distributor. For some odd reason, the frat heads don't want me ta tell anyone.

Freddie: I won't tell anybody, Charlie, ya' can be sure of that.

Charlie: Thanks, kid. Well I'll have ta be movin' along Freddie. Goin' ta see if they really closed the library stacks. So long, kid.

Freddie: Yeh, so long, Charlie.

Things Augustinian

Gregor Mendel's Sacrifice Aids World

by Monte Marshall, O.S.A.

In the northeastern corner of Czechoslovakia, amidst the rolling, upland plains bordering on Poland, lies the small village of Heinzendorf. Here, in 1882, a son was born to Anton and Rosine Mendel.

Christened Johann, he seemed destined to share someday in the same laborious existence as that of his father, and his father before him—that of a peasant landholder in the then Austro-Hungarian Empire.

As he grew older he began to show the traits which were to characterize him through life, and one day to make him famous—an intense desire for learning, a real love for the soil, and a rugged tenacity in pursuing his goals.

The capabilities of the keen and eager student so impressed the local schoolmaster that he urged Johann's parents to send him on for higher education.

Despite the fact that this would not only entail great sacrifice on their part, but would also mean that Herr Mendel would have to give up his cherished hope that his only son would someday take over the farm, they yielded to the universal desire of all parents—that their children should become, have, and do what they themselves could not.

Living on what little food and money his parents were able to send him and what he himself earned by tutoring other students, he devoted all his energies to the pursuit of knowledge and wisdom.

Having completed his philosophical studies (which then included the natural sciences) at the ago of twenty-one, he was attracted to the life led by the Augustinian monks in the Monastery of St. Thomas at Brunn, the capital city of Moravia.

In this monastery, famous as a center of culture and learning, he was received into the Order on October 9, 1843, taking Gregor as his religious name. Upon the completion of his Theology courses, four years later, he was ordained a priest.

Following his ordination he served as a parish priest for one year, and then was sent to teach in a nearby high school.

It was during the fourteen years that he taught in this school that he carried on the now-famous experiments in the monastery garden. These experiments, on the common garden-pea, led him to discover the fundamental laws which govern the transmission of hereditary characters, and thus to lay the foundation for the modern science of genetics with its invaluable contributions to agriculture, animal-breeding, and eugenics.

The Nihilist

Fraternities Unbrotherly

by jose conlin

A casual look about the campus reveals that spring is incontestably upon us, for the fraternity pledging season has begun.

What a thrilling sight it is each year and what an uplift to observe the many sallow youths wending their paths toward manhood with an index-card emblazoned on their bosoms as tickets of admission!

Who can say that we Villanovans feel inferior to our Ivy League and Big Ten brethren? Certainly no one has seen the maturity in the face of a "big brother" demanding a cigarette of a lowly pledge.

Fraternities Imitative

Who hasn't snickered at the feigned overlordship of the pledgemasters as they wean the freshman from the adolescent activities of high school and introduce him to their world of manhood?

Hardly the student with insight who realize that only through imitating feebly and following blatantly the acknowleged initiators and determiners of American College tradition can Villanova become one of these leading few.

Pshaw on those soreheads who because they can't pass the rigid and trying initiations that are set up, rationalize their position by indifference and ridiculous accusations.

Unfounded accusations like, "The pseudo-fraternities have no reason to exist, perform no function for the University or the students, provide no facilities or privileges for members.

"They have no competing counterparts to stimulate them, present no tangible reason for membership and are generally a complete waste of time and the greatest of the multitude of shams, mockeries and farces on campus."

Pshaw!

Terrific Skits

Villanova students should be thankful and proud of their fraternities. Who can forget the many guffaws we all enjoyed when one fraternity sent their pledges about their classwork carrying lanterns and "T"-squares, red handkerchiefs and huge posters bearing the wittiest in humiliating and humorous titles?

Despite our uproar at this and many other terrific skits, however, we didn't forget that the long faced frosh was learning a profund lesson not to be forgotten in the humiliation of it all, a lesson we all know well and needs no explanation.

What kicks we got as we taught the pledges other lessons when we pounded their bottoms with the ceremonial paddles. One could almost see them mature to his own level before his eyes as he wielded the club, all but doubled with hilarity.

It's completly inconceivable why the older students and veterans don't join the fraternities, advanced in maturity as they are.

Villanova thanks the fraternities for rescuing the Joyce Kiely mile from the useless fun and entertainment to which it was generating and transforming it into a fiercely competitive inter-fraternity event, an event that now everyone is over-anxious and dying to see.

Thanks, fraternities for preserving the venerated Villanova tradition of "Orthodox Inertia" by nipping that bit of nonsensical originality in the proverbial bud.

So march on, fraternities of Villanova and keep up the good work or name or aims or games, whichever the case may be. Be indulgent to your critics and their unfounded talk and if perchance we should forget you, forgive us.

Next March, I'm sure, when the index cards pop up from that mysterious somewhere, Villanova will exclaim with joy and pride, if surprize, "Why, what do you know; they've probably been here all year!"

Exclusive Report

Rockefeller Still Tries For Presidential Race

By Bob Brothers

(Reprinted from the Daily Republican, Phoenixville, Pa.).

The cloak and dagger candidacy of Nelson Rockefeller continues to roll along in its self-made political mist as New York and Capitol Hill observers increasingly chime, "Who's kidding whom?"

Although the governor has increasingly denied presidential aspirations for 1960, two weekly publications, Human Events and National Review, think differently.

Also, Senator Barry Goldwater, Arizona Republican, told an audience at the Hill School, Pottstown, last month that Rockefeller "certainly is running" for the Republican presidential candidacy.

Dispels Belief

In a recent dispatch from Albany, N.Y., New York Daily News political writer Jim Desmond reported: "Any lingering belief that Governor Rockefeller resigned his presidential ambitions when he announced in December that he would not challenge Vice President Nixon in the early Republican primaries was dispelled by political and legislative developments here."

Desmond wrote that the word is being spread privately among New York State Republican county leaders to hold back on any endorsement of Nixon's candidacy.

Although many Empire State GOPers are anxious to join the Nixon bandwagon, the governor's sit-tight mandate is being interpreted only one way—Rocky is in the race up to his grin.

Tough Sledding

Although Nelson faces tough sledding this session with GOP legislators over "liberal" legislation he wants enacted, the benevolent billionaire expects to pick up valuable out-of-state support because of his plan to transfer the 10 per cent federal telephone tax to the states for school aid.

Despite the fact the measure is Ike-opposed, Rockefeller defended his stand while meeting with the President last week and reportedly he counts on an upsurge of support from Republican politicos whose states are looking for ways to ease local educations costs.

As Rockefeller reached for support beyond New York, more information came out regarding his vast Manhattan propaganda mill.

Already reported in Human Events and elsewhere are the doings of the 70-man Rockefeller research staff located on 55th St., just off Central Park West, in a two-building former Rockefeller town house.

Top Specialists

The political command headquarters is stocked with elaborate equipment and manned by top specialists—political advisers, speech writers, and research analysts—all ready for possible resumption of his bid to challenge Nixon at the convention.

But there is more evidence that Rocky still hopes to win the GOP crown at the Chicago convention.

Human Events staffers have discovered another "nomination operation" heretofore not mentioned in the press: a secret corps of 15 Rockefellerites operating in a seven-room suite on the sixth floor of 10 Rockefeller Plaza.

Secret Activities

The operation is supposedly "hush-hush" with no visitors allowed and all concerned under strict orders not to discuss their activities with outsiders.

Their job is to wade through the Nation's press and clip all references to Rockefeller.

Pamphlets are compiled on the good things columnists and editorial writers say about him.

Rockefeller has now adopted a coy attitude regarding the nomination and many are convinced he will re-enter the Presidential dogfight after the New York legislature adjourns this month.

Withdrawal

Many recall that at the time of his December 26 "withdrawal" Rocky gave his legislative commitments as a major reason for pulling out.

Now, observers reason, Nelson can resume barnstorming free of pressing state business and criticism that he is neglecting his duties.

The New York Post asked recently: "Is Governor Rockefeller back in the Presidential race? His advisors say he never really got out, just withdrew temporarily.

To top observers who follow such "secret" operations, it is apparent that Rockefeller's golden steamroller continues to move in the direction of the White House as the invisible paint covering it begins to chip away.

EAT, DRINK AND BE MARRIED

On a recent tour of seventy million American colleges, I was struck by two outstanding facts: first, the great number of students who smoke Marlboro, and second, the great number of students who are married.

The first phenomenon—the vast multitude of Marlboro smokers—comes as no surprise for, as everyone knows, the college student is an enormously intelligent organism, and what could be more intelligent than to smoke Marlboro? After all, pleasure is what you smoke for and pleasure is what Marlboro delivers—pleasure in every puff of that good golden tobacco. If you think flavor went out when filters came in—try a Marlboro. Light up and see for yourself... Or, if you like, don't light up. Just take a Marlboro, unlighted, and puff a couple of times. Get that wonderful flavor? You bet you do! Even without lighting you can taste Marlboro's excellent filter blend. Also you can make your package last practically forever.

No, I say, it was not the great number of Marlboro smokers that astounded me, it was the great number of married students. You may find this hard to believe but latest statistics show that at some coeducational colleges the proportion of married undergraduates runs as high as thirty percent! And, what is even more startling, fully one-quarter of these marriages have been blessed with issue!

Here now is a figure to give you pause! Not that we don't all love babies. Of course we do! Babies are pink and fetching rascals, given to winsome noises and droll expressions, and we all like nothing better than to rain kisses on their soft little skulls. But just the same, to the young campus couple who are parents for the first time the baby is likely to be a source of considerable worry. Therefore, let me devote today's column to a few helpful hints on the care of babies.

First of all, we will take up the matter of diet. In the past, babies were raised largely on table scraps. This, however, was outlawed by the Smoot-Hawley Act, and today babies are fed a scientific formula consisting of dextrose, maltose, distilled water, evaporated milk and a twist of lemon peel.

After eating, the baby tends to grow sleepy. A lullaby is very useful to help it fall asleep. In case you don't know any lullabies, make one up. This is not at all difficult. In a lullaby the words are unimportant since the baby doesn't understand them anyhow. The important thing is the sound. All you have to do is string together a bunch of nonsense syllables, taking care that they make an agreeable sound. For example:

Go to sleep, my little infant,
Goo-goo moo-moo poo-poo binfant.

Having fed and serenaded the baby, arrange it in the position for slumber. A baby sleeps best on its stomach so place it that way in its crib. Then to make sure it will not turn itself over during the night lay a soft but fairly heavy object on its back—another baby, for instance.

© 1960 Max Shulman

And when baby is fast asleep—the little angel!—why don't you relax and give yourself a treat? With Marlboro—or if you like mildness but you don't like filters—with Philip Morris made in long size and regular by the sponsors of this column.

ICG To Serve As Host For Mock Political Convention

Larry Ruth, president of Villanova's chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Gorernment, has announced that Villanova will be the scene of the Southeast regional convention of the I.C.G.

This model political convention will be held in Vasey Auditorium on Saturday, March 12. Those participating will be I.C.G. members of Villanova, Drexel, Haverford, Immaculata, Penn, Rosemont, West Chester State, and P.M.C. These 150 delegates will represent well over 20,000 students of the participating schools.

The convention this year will have Miss Genevieve Blatt, Secretary of Internal Affairs for the state of Pennsylvania, guest speaker.

Miss Blatt is one of the co-founders of I.C.G. and is at present the State Executive Director. Ruth announced that the Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, president, will also address the assembly.

Two-Fold Objective

The convention will fulfill a two-fold objective: that of drawing up a bi-partisan platform and that of nominating a presidential candidate. The platform which will be passed by the delegates, meeting in the General Assembly, will have all the qualities of a true political platform, according to Ruth.

He further stated that the platform will embody all the proposals which the students feel are pertinent in our government today.

In describing the method by which a worthwhile platform is finally arrived at, Ruth emphasized the work involved,

The work originates in the I.C.G. chapter of each school. The chapter president or chairman appoints committees to work on various planks, which then together will form the platform. Each plank is therefore approved at the chapter level before it is taken to the regional convention.

At the convention, the committees assigned to each plank will go into session. While in session the delegates debate the good and bad points of each plank. The net result of this committee work is that from one of three planks will be presented to the General Assembly for their approval.

Time Allotted

In the General Assembly, each committee will be allotted a certain amount of time to present its planks of planks. At all times during these proceedings in the Assembly, Parliamentary Law will be adhered to.

Once the debating on the planks has ceased, the delegates will vote. This voting will have the effect of producing a platform which is indicative of the beliefs of the majority of the delegates.

The second phase of this convention concerns itself with the nomination of a presidential candidate. Each school will be permitted to nominate one candidate. The Villanova chapter will nominate Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

On the first ballot, each school will vote for its own candidate. On sebsequent ballots, however, the candidate with the least votes will be eliminated until one man with a majority remains.

"Dog Eat Dog"

"The convention", says Ruth, "will be one of the most significant events to take place on the Villanova campus this year." Not only will the convention afford the delegates the opportunity of participating in a close facsimile of the "dog eat dog" Democratic and Republican conventions, but it will also be a pleasant mixture of education and fun."

Sure Cure

There is one good way to show that we need open stacks. Let everyone take a night off from watching television and go to the library.

Request 5 or 6 books that you have been meaning to read and see if the three people behind the desk can possibly supply the demand. Until everyone begins to use the library, and uses it properly: "Shelved around us lie the mummied authors."

Let us do as Shakespeare suggests, "Come, and take choice of all by library, and so beguile thy sorrow."

Villanova is one of 350 colleges and universities across the country who are participating in the "Continental Classroom," which are nationally-televised lectures offering classroom credit in physics and chemistry.

The lectures are presented five days a week on NBC at 6:30 in the morning.

In 1958 "Continental Classroom" was inaugurated with a course in Atomic Age Physics by Dr. Harvey White of the University of California. This year the television-lectures are giving a course in Modern Chemistry by Dr. John F. Baxter of the University of Florida.

Dr. William Driscoll, professor of Physics, who is Villanova's director of the continental program, reports that this year there are four students matriculated for the TV course at Villanova. When the lectures terminate, says Driscoll the viewer-students come to Villanova to be tested. If their showing is favorable they are awarded VU credits. Of the three students registered last year at Villanova all three received credit.

"Continental Classroom" was launched in response to President Eisenhower's appeal "for prompt action to improve and expand the teaching of Science." Cost of the program—more than a million dollars the first year—has been underwritten by ten corporations together with the Ford Foundation, the American Association of Colleges for Teachers Education, and the American Chemical Society.

The success of Continental Classroom is indicated by interviews conducted with 800 viewers of last year's course. Of these, 96 percent felt the course had sharply raised their scientific knowledge. Eighty-one percent of the teachers interviewed said that they had learned helpful new techniques.

The Rev. Robert M. Sullivan O.S.A., Dean of Arts and Science and Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., Vice-President for Academic Affairs, have been attending the National Conference on Higher Education at the Pick-Congress Hotel in Chicago.

The theme of this year's conference is "Platform for Higher Education: Guide Lines for the Sixties." This conference is being attended by over a thousand leading educators from the teaching and administrative staffs of most major colleges and universities in the country.

Dr. Nicholas A. Michels Addresses Biology Class

"Ancient Egyptian priests knew more about the human liver than do some modern doctors," declared Dr. Nicholas A. Michels at a recent meeting of the Biology Club.

Dr. Michels, well-known anatomist from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, addressed the Club on "The Newer Anatomy of the Liver; Its Variant Blood Supply and Collateral Circulation."

He stated that "A doctor must so thoroughly know his subject that he need not bury his mistakes." He was referring to the fact that 50% of livers observed were different from the standard text book description of the liver.

Dr. Michels, who has studied in the U. S., France, and Belgium, has been interested in the liver for some 20 years.

He began his lecture by citing the history of liver study and the various levels of medical knowledge, including the use of the liver in Medieval sorcery.

Robert W. Rea, Jr. Portrait Presented to C&F Library

The C&F Library has recently received a portrait of Robert W. Rea, Jr., which was placed on the third floor of the C&F building just outside the Rea Memorial Library.

The portrait was given in conjunction with the previous initial donation from Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rea, of Devon, in memory of their son, Robert W. Rea Jr.

The Library itself has reached past the 1,000 volume mark, is now receiving over 65 technical periodicals, and has markedly increased its participation in the inter-library loan program.

Mrs. Miriam B. Milligan, the librarian states; "the library is young but is growing nicely. It should soon reach its objective."

Priests At Convention

The Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., Vice President of Academic Affairs, and Rev. Francis Smith, Director of Admissions attended a convention of the College Entrance Examination Board at Franklin College on March 4th.

This year's meeting included several informal discussions on the pertinent problems in entrance procedures and of new entrants. The panels were participated in by all member schools of this region—one of eight in the nation.

Council Sets Office Hours Program Into Motion Here

"We've set it up so the hours are convenient for every student."

So observed Jim Hooker, treasurer of the Student Council on the subject of the newly instituted Office Hours program.

According to Hooker, the 23 Council members who are class representatives will hold office hours on a bi-monthly basis.

Alternate Weeks

Two weeks out of four the representatives will be available for consultation with their constituents.

The meetings to be held Monday through Thursday on alternate weeks from now until mid-April will be informal sessions. Discussion will be on the level of topical campus problems, said Hooker.

The program is on a bi-monthly and not a weekly basis because of the unavailability of classrooms for meeting places. Also, the Administration ruled out the use of the Student Council office.

The program will run until mid-April at which time each class representative will submit in writing to Hooker his personal opinion of the merits of the system.

"Then I'll personnally evaluate the program in light of the representatives' opinion. If student response is good, we might try the same thing next semester," said Hooker.

"One thing further," he interjected. "If some students find that their representatives hold hours at times when they can't see them, then these people should go to any representative whose hours are convenient for them."

Computer Symposium

Mr. Emil Amelotti, Chairman of the Mathematics Department, has announced that Villanova will be the scene of a computer symposium on Thursday, March 10 from 2 to 5 p.m. in 110 C & F.

The symposium, conducted by representatives of the I. B. M. Company, will hear Dr. James Kearns, the I. B. M. University Representative of the Eastern Region, speak on "The Role of Computers in Higher Education."

This discourse will include an introduction to computers and the use of computers in the university.

Student Rally Dance Called Limited Success

The Student Council's second fund raising effort, the Student Body dance was "a limited success" according to John Driscoll ticket chairman for the dance.

According to prior agreement, the administration agreed to double the amount of profits realized by the Congress from the dance.

The first council money making adventure was the movie program.

Raymond, while refusing to quote figures, asserted that the council did not finish in the red despite the sparse attendance.

At the height of the dance there didn't appear to be more than 126 couples on the floor.

"However", Raymond insisted "there were 250 tickets sold for the affair."

Raymond, council publicist, cited a possible reason for the meager crowd by pointing out that "we were in conflict with three local affairs: a prom at Immaculata, and mixers at Harcum and Cabrini.

The 1 out of 20 that didn't get smoked

There's a lot of satisfaction in pointing out something good to a friend. That's why it often happens that one cigarette out of a pack of Dual Filter Tareytons never does get smoked.

People break it open to demonstrate its unique Dual Filter containing Activated Charcoal. They may not know why it works so well, but they do know this: It delivers far more than high filtration . . . it brings out the best taste of the best tobaccos—as no single filter can!

Try a pack of Tareytons. We believe the extra pleasure they bring will soon have you passing the good word to your friends.

HERE'S HOW THE DUAL FILTER DOES IT:

1. It combines a unique inner filter of ACTIVATED CHARCOAL . . . definitely proved to make the smoke of a cigarette mild and smooth . . .
2. with an efficient pure white outer filter. Together they bring you the real thing in mildness and fine tobacco taste!

Question: Do you think that Caryl Chessman should be executed?

Caryl Chessman exists as a living example to future criminals. But I believe that most delinquents lack the intelligence to comprehend the slow death he undergoes each time he approaches the gas chamber. He has certainly had time in which to prove his innocence. Since he was convicted, his only future should be the gas chamber.

Kathy Cox
Nursing, '63

I believe that Caryl Chessman should die. He has escaped death for 12 years on one technicality after another. He was definitely proven guilty at his trial and so far he has not found or produced any new evidence to disprove this verdict.

Frank Pacello
Pre-Law, '61

Caryl Chessman was adjudged guilty in 1948 of crimes lawfully punishable by death. And yet, through various ways and means, he lives today. I only hope that on Judgement Day there will be enough South Americans available to raise hell in heaven if I don't get a break. Or should I write a book?

John C. Walsh
Accounting, '62

After twelve years and eight stays of execution, Caryl Chessman is still guilty of a crime which is punishable by death in the state of California. His actions during that time do not lessen in any degree his guilt. Has he paid his debt to society? Only society can decide that issue. As a member of society, I feel that he should suffer the sentence that was imposed on him.

Howard Silcox
C & F, '60

Caryl Chessman should be committed to the death chamber for his brutal crime. The fact that it was committed more than a decade ago does not alter his guilt. His keen mind and ability to pick out technicalities has taken him from death's door many times. Should not this shrewdness be a criterion for holding him responsible for his action? If anyone deserves to lose his life, Chessman does.

Pete P. Devlin
Elect. Engr., '61

There can be justice without capital punishment and vice versa. Capital punishment exists with justice, with the state, in order to preserve the society. I do not believe that the society as it exists in California would collapse if Chessman were granted a reprieve.

Philosophy Prof. Delivers Lecture

Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, assistant professor of philosophy at Villanova, delivered the Aquinas Lecture on March 7 at Georgian Court College, Lakewood, N. J., as the highlight of the commemoration of the feast of St. Thomas Aquinas.

"Progress and Modern Man" was the topic, and the discussion centered around the question of whether modern progress represents the greatest achievement of the human mind; or whether man should lessen his pace of progress for fear that any additional advance would simply drag him deeper into the abyss of dehumanization and depersonalization.

Delegates Attend NFCCS Confab

This past weekend, March 4, 5, and 6, one hundred and fifty students from 15 colleges assembled at the Sheraton Hotel in Philadelphia for the Fourth Annual State Congress of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Catholic Student

Under the theme, "The Catholic Student; Complacent Conformist or Motovated Individual", topics of contemporary problems, morality, and college life as well as problems directly to the organizational aspects of N.F.C.C.S. were discussed.

The possibility of a Catholic-Spirited city with the generation of today's Catholic Students was the keynote of a speech delivered to the congress by Dennis Clark, member of the Philadelphia Catholic Interracial Council and the Philadelphia Housing Authority.

Clark discussed the history, evolution, and present problems of cities, stressing the urgent need for Catholic leadership in city planning and various urban problems.

Elmer Brock, Director of the Delaware Area of the National Conference of Christian and Jews lead a seminar on Christian Brotherhood.

Brock emphasized the present situation of racial prejudice in the United States and stated that we, as Catholics, should be leading the way toward the day when such situations would cease to exist.

Discuss Morality

Frank McCormick of Villanova participated in a panel on "Morality and Greatness". Special emphasis was given to the moral problems facing the Catholic who wants to achieve greatness in the fields of politics and literature.

Officially representing Villanova at the Congress were Dave Doyle, Gene Felch, Jim Hooker, Jim Scalia, and Maurice Murphy.

This is the eight consecutive year that the National Federation of Catholic College Students—National Newman Club Federation's tours will take hundred of Catholic college students to the historical highlights and fun spots of Europe.

The 1960 program includes four itineraries, with travel through France, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Holland,

Council Not Expected To Cut Half-Votes in Project

"Despite rumors to the contrary, we are not trying to eliminate half-vote members from the Council," said Bob DeLisa, Student Council vice-president.

This statement was issued following a marathon meeting of a special committee of the Council last week.

The purpose of the meeting, and ones to follow, was to initiate re-evaluation of the Council, with an aim at greater efficiency, said DeLisa.

Greater Representation

"This does not mean we are trying to get rid of all the clubs and societies on the Council. In fact it is conceivable that we might have even grater representation."

DeLisa and the committee, which has representative from all classes, and full and half-votes, plan to have their efforts come into fruition by April.

The committee is aiming at the structure of the Council in its re-evaluation policy. In particular, the bi-cameral representation will be examined.

An attempt will be made to improve the efficiency of the existing constitution by putting some of its theories into practice.

Boost Prestige

"This," said DeLisa, "will boost the prestige of the Council by making it a more workable organization."

These announcements as released by DeLisa come after considerable behind-the-scene discussion. Some Council members had felt that DeLisa was negotiating a play whereby all of the half-votes would be removed from the Council proper.

As such, the plan was reported to have been received with mixed feeling. Some members agreed that the group was too large and unwieldy, but others felt that the representation was necessary.

DeLisa denied any such intentions.

James Whalen Joins Philosophy Department

Mr. James Whalen, has joined the Philosophy Department for the Spring semester, according to Dr. Donald Gallagher, vice-chairman of the Department.

Whalen has just returned from two years of study at the Institute of Higher Philosophy in Louvaine University in Belgium, where he studied the neo-Platonic sources of St. Thomas Aquinas.

There he finished his courses for his doctorate and is in the process of writing his thesis: "The Doctrine of Circularity in Aquinas."

He is presently teaching Logic and Business Ethics here.

Whalen earned his bachelor's degree at St. Louis University and his master's degree at Boston College.

Offer Survival Course

In the very near future the Intramural Department will be offering the Red Cross Life Saving Course. All students interested in the course please report to Mr. Geisz in the Field House Pool on Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.

Chestnut Hill College Show

A new show has been added to the WVIL schedule this past week. It is the "Chestnut Hill College Show," which will now be heard weekly on Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 p.m. This show replaces "Cadence Capers" which has been dropped from the Station's schedule.

Misses Lois Winberg and Janice Grobski, Junior Speech Majors at Chestnut Hill were the first girls to represent their college.

Chestnut Hill is one of the many girl's colleges that is represented on WVIL by the members of their Radio Clubs. Other participating colleges are Rosemont, Cabrini, and Immaculata.

Our own Villanova nurses are also heard weekly on the Station at 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons. Anne McCrea and Mary Fay supply the music and chatter for a half hour of good listening.—Dan O'Mara.

Knights Slate Meeting

Dr. Robert O' Shea, Grand Knight of the Father Ludwig Council of the Knights of Columbus, has announced the forthcoming events on the Council's agenda.

There will be a meeting on Wednesday, March 16 at 7:30 p.m. in John Barry Hall. A guest speaker will discuss the fourth degree of Knighthood. Dr. O'Shea declared that anyone who has been in the third degree for at least a year is eligible for fourth degree membership and that all pertinent information and application blanks can be obtained in his office.

He added that there will be an exemplification of the first degree on Monday, April 4 and again on April 25.

Lucky Strike's Dr. Frood to the rescue:

Foolproof Formula Simplifies Chemistry

Dear Dr. Frood: I am having a difficult time in chemistry. We are studying the chemical properties of acids, and I have become utterly confused. Can you help me understand acids?

J. Bunsen Burner

Dear Bunsen: Take two parts of hydrochloric acid and three parts nitric acid. Pour into saucer. Stir mixture with finger. Note how much shorter the finger becomes. That is due to the chemical action of the acid.

Dear Dr. Frood: I was amazed at the recent survey which proved that the poorest students were students with cars. Would you comment, please?

Dean

Dear Dean: I was amazed, too. In my day only the rich students had cars.

Dear Dr. Frood: On the level, do you smoke Luckies?

Doubting Tom

Dear Tom: On the level, I do smoke Luckies. I also smoke Luckies on inclines. And once enjoyed one while scaling the vertical face of Mt. Everest.

Dear Dr. Frood: Exactly what is the difference between adult westerns and what I suppose you would call juvenile westerns?

Channel Selector

Dear Channel: It's the horses. The hero on juvenile westerns rides a pure white horse or a palomino. In adult westerns, the hero's horse is brown, sincere, mature-looking.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am going out for the college play and have become interested in the "Method" school of acting. Could you tell me how this differs from ordinary acting?

Thespis

Dear Thesp: It is all a matter of how you throw yourself into your part. For instance, when playing "Peter Pan" the ordinary actor flies through the air on guide wires. When the "Method" actor plays the role, wires are unnecessary.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am friendly, outgoing, tolerant, athletic, well to do and a good conversationalist. Why does everybody hate me?

Hurt

Dear Hurt: I don't know why—we just do.

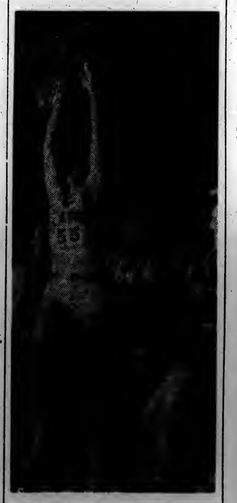
St. Louis University, 18-6 — Missouri Valley
Coach John Bennington



The third place finishers in the tough Missouri Valley Conference, St. Louis brings an experienced, well-coached team into the N.I.T. Last year they were one of the four seeded teams, but were upset in the quarter-finals by Providence. Pete McCaffrey, 6-6 senior, leads the club in scoring and rebounding. He holds the school scoring record ofr one game with 39 points. Possessor of an excellent jump shot, a strong, rough player, McCaffrey is the "Best of St. Louis." At center there is 6-10 junior Bob Nordmann. Vastly improved over last year, he still lacks adequate speed to get the best from his size. At the other foreward there is 6-8 senior George Burkel, a good rebounder with a soft shot. He is very thin and consequently not real rought under the boards. Handling the backcourt duties there are two able men. Glen Menkowski, 6-3 junior, and 6-1 soph Tom Kiefer. Both are good drivers and shooters and have very quick hands. St. Louis is capable of real good ball, witnessed by their wins over St. John's, North Carolina, Kentucky, and Providence.

Bradley, 22-2 — Missouri Valley
Coach Chuck Osbourne

The Bradley Braves are led by 6-6 sophomore Chet Walker, who is the team's leading scorer and rebounder. Inflictors of Cincinatti's only loss of the season, the Braves are a fast, smooth operating team. Not having too much height, they make it up by excellent shooting and a fast moving offense. The floor leader is Mike Owens, 6-1 guard who is a very good shooter and able ball handler. Working at the foreward posts are Alphra Saunders, 6-2 junior, and Dan Smith, 6-4, senior. Both are fair rebounders and have good jump shots. Walker is the big gun in the Braves' camp. He is very strong and rough, with an excellent shooting eye and is able to run with the fast break after taking the rebound to start it. Bradley has to be the pre-Tournament pick to win.

Temple, 16-8 — Middle Atlantic Conference
Coach Harry Litwack

Led by All-American Bill (Pickles) Kennedy, the Temple Owls have to be the Cinderella team of the tournament. Kennedy is one of the finest backcourters in the country, is a great clutch player, and a fine shooter. He can drive, shoot from the outside, hit jump shots, in fact, make two from anywhere on the court. When there is a clutch play, invariably it is Kennedy who performs it. His finest game this year was in leading the Owls in overtime to an upset over St. John's. Running with Kennedy in the backcourt is sophomore Bruce Drysdale, a stady, smooth player who has a good set shot. The custodians of the boards are 6-4 Russ Gaddon and Earl Proctor, both good jumpers who can handle almost anyone their size or three inches taller. Both are good shooters, very quick and strong. The fifth man is 6-3 Ed Devery, a good defensive ballplayer who, on occasion, has good shooting nights. The Owls are small, but very well coached and don't make many mistakes. They can run with anybody and can shoot well. Their only handicap is inexperience and lack of height.

St. John's 17-7 — Independent
Coach Joe Lapchick

The Redmen of St. John's returns of the scene of their greatest accomplishment of last year when they defend their N.I.T. title in Madison Square Garden. Led by All-American Leaping Tony Jackson, the Redmen finally have jelled as a team after early season miscues. A mid-season win streak of 11 games saw them knock off Providence and West Virginia before being stopped in overtime by Temple. With only one senior in the starting line, the Redmen are a young, strong team. Mike Pedone, the senior, handles the backcourt along with Ivan Kovacs, 5-10 sophomore. Both players are excellent ball handlers and good drivers and direct their offense well. Leroy Ellis, the 6-9 center, teams with 6-4 Willie Hall and Jackson in the forecourt to give the New Yorkers good size and rebounding ability. If the Redmen can recover from the losses to Temple and N. Y. U., then can win the tournament.

St. Bonaventure, 17-3 — Independent
Coach Eddie Donovan

The Brown Indians from Olean, N. Y., are led by the now famous Stith Brothers, Tom and Sam. The main offense employed by the Bonnies is getting the ball inside to 6-5 Tom Stith. Stith has all kinds of shots and a accurate with most of them. When Tom is cold or closely guarded 6-2 brother Sam will hit on jump shots from around 20 feet out. Another dangerous threat is Ron "Whitey" Martin a 6-2 guard. Martin is deadly with one hand set shots from 25 feet and further out. The others starters are 6-2 Bill Connery, a junior and 6-4 soph Ed Petrovich. The Bonnies have already beaten three of the teams in the N.I.T., St. John's 95-78, Providence 90-89 (3 overtimes), and the Wildcats at the Palestra 72-70.

Providence, 19-4 — Independent
Coach Joe Mullaney

The Providence Friars are one of the most exciting college teams in America. Some of the games these boys have played have been enough to make heart cases out of their fans. The Friars have lost to Bradley 57-55, St. Louis 65-61, St. John 67-64 (vot.) and St. Bonaventure 90-89 in three overtimes. All the afore mentioned teams will be N.I.T. participants. Providence has defeated Santa Clara 62-60, Boston College 59-56, Holy Cross 80-68, and St. Joseph's 64-63. All American Lennie Wilkins 6-2, the captain and 6 foot John Egan are the boys that make the New Englanders go. 6-10 Jim Hadnat, a sophomore is the big man in Providence attack. 6-5 Jim Woods and 6-4 Dick Whalen are the forwards with 6-1 Tom Moynahan the sixth man.

Holy Cross, 18-5 — Independent
Coach Roy Leenig

The Crusaders are a team that utilizes a close knit weave to set up their best scorer Jack Foley. Foley, known as the "shot", is a 6-5 soph who can wipe out or build up a lead in a matter of minutes. H. C. has one of the smoothest backcourts around in six footer Tim Shea and George Blaney, both good shots. Up front under the boards with Foley are 6-5 Ralph Brandt a senior, and 6-5 Dave Slattery a sophomore. The Crusaders make good use of a tight zone defense. Holy Cross has not lost a home game, but has succumbed to National powers Wake Forrest 80-71; Utah 92-84; N. Y. U. 74-60; Providence 80-68; and Syracuse 85-80 on the road.

Dayton, 18-6 — Independent
Coach Tommy Blackburn

The Flyer's of Coach Tommy Blackburn wing into the N.I.T. with a solid 18-6 record. Impressive victims were Xavier twice, Wake Forest, Louisville and Memphis State. The Flyer's seven times the runner up in this tournament, boast a bal control style of game with a hard nose defense. In two games they held Wake Forest to 106 points. Blackburn is known for juggling his starting lineup as much as Casey Stengel but in all probability he will start: 6-6 Gary Rogerbuck a sporadic soph, and 6-2 Stan Greenberg a terrific hook shooter at the forwards; the center will be 6-6 Joe Kennelly or 6-6 Pat Allan; Terry Bockhorn and Frank Case give the Flyer's a great combination in the backcourt. Case is the team's leading scorer while Bockhorn does everything for the club. Good reserves are 6-0 Tom Hatton and 6-5 Hank Josefczyk.

Utah State, 20-4 — Skyline
Coach Cecil Baker

Runnerup in the Skyline Conference with a 20-4 record. The Aggies most impressive win of the year was a 73-61 decision over Utah. They are led by 6-3 senior Jerry Schofield the leading rebounder in the conference last year, and also the team's leading scorer. The other forward is 6-3 Danny Thomas, a transfer from Purdue. The starting center will be either 6-4 Richard Livid or Dave Langrack both good board men. In the backcourt coach Cecil Baker will go with 5-9 Max Perry the team's ace ball handler who is averaging over 15 points per game. Perry's running mate is 5-11 Ralph Cullimore the top defensive player on the club.

Memphis State, 18-4 — Independent
Coach Bob Vanatta's

The Tigers have compiled an 18-4 record this year against a lack luster bunch of opponents. The Mountain Tigers are led by six-foot guard Skip Wolfe a top scorer and ace defensive man. The other guard position is held down by six-foot Gene Wilfong whose brother is an N.B.A. star. Their center is 6-6 George Price the team's leading rebounder. The side men are 6-6 Frank Snyder and 6-5 Lowery Kicks both good rebounders. Front line reserves are 6-8 Jim Donavan and six-foot Bill Koehler.

And the V. U. Captain—George Raveling

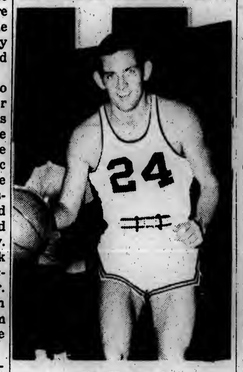
Villanova's Pocket Rocket A Tough, Hungry Scrapper

by Hank Schultz

The big man goes up; a rebound is taken, and a quick pass shoots to the little man with 24 on his jersey.

As he scampers toward the goal, two team-mates race down by his side. "Go, Jimmy, go!" roar the fans. Then, as he closes in on the basket, he flips the ball behind his back.

A beautiful goal, and another assist for Jimmy Huggard. Then the opposing team calls time out, and the crowd roars as the teams leave the court. Some are cheering for the rebound, some for the shot, but all for the play and the man who quarterbacked it.



Here is a fellow who looks no more like a basketball player than Wilt Chamberlain looks like a midget wrestler—until he gets on the court. When he graduated from West Catholic in Philadelphia (Class of '51) he had not even tried out for basketball. However, he enjoyed watching playground ball, and finally deceided to give it a try.

Here his determination took over. Night after night he practiced, getting better and better. He finally was asked to join Dregers Stars, an A.A.U. team in the Philadelphia league. Here he really came into his own.

After John Driscoll left Villanova and joined the Stars, Jim and Tweety became fast friends. After a trip to Denver, for the A.A.U. championship in '56 (the Stars lost in the first round), Driscoll started talking to Hug about college. Finally, Villanova offered him a scholarship, and, though already 24, he decided to come to Villanova.

The fighting spirit he had on the playground was strengthened, and the flashy ball-hawk soon earned a reputation. The local sportswriters soon started to sing the praises of Jim Huggard, partially because of his sharp-shooting, partially because of his tricky passes, but mostly because of his spirit.

Last year, though only a sophomore, he earned a starting berth on what was supposed to be a weak Villanova team. His never-say-die spirit caught on with the rest of the team, and the Wildcats started to move.

Jim Huggard

By now, it was known that Jim Kenny was not coming back, and ball-handling was up to Huggard. This was a big job for a little man, but Hug responded to the call.

In the 59 opener against Princeton, he scored only 11 points, but contributed several assists and earned the praise of the local sportswriters for his manner of working the ball.

Against Scranton, he was sensational. Pinpoint passes, deadeye shooting, and, believe it or not, several rebounds, added up to 25 points and 15 assists. And a 110-78 victory for the Cats.

As the season progressed that spirit of Huggard's helped move the team. Some people started to say that there was too much spirit; that Huggard was getting cocky. Those who know Jim know differently. It was just his way. Yelling, squawking, bawl-out team-mates were all part of a night's work for Hug.

6-0, 7-0, 8-0, 9-0, 10th in the country and first in the East. Nobody could beat the 'Cats. The Temple game was next. A determined bunch of Owls tried, behind Bill Kennedy, to upset the 'Cats. It was a good try, and it almost worked. But when the Owls tried a full court press, Huggard saved the day. Dribbling around or through Temple's two backcourt aces, Hug held off the Temple attack.

With less tdan a minute to play, and the Cats nine big points ahead, Temple stole the ball. Huggard wanted it back—at all costs. His determined spirit caused him to cut in front of Ed Devery in an attempt to get the ball. The excited stands were suddenly silent as Huggard slumped to the floor, face twisted with pain.

Ten minutes later, he was still there. Rumors, all bad, rippled through the stands. Then the word came. Muscle spasms, he'd be O.K. Because of this injury, Hug still wears a brace on his back, and often feels pain during the games.

First Defeat

The Saturday night after the Temple game, the Wildcats met defeat for the first time, at the hands of Jerry West-led Mountaineers of West Virginia.

Although a doubtful starter, Huggard played what he calls his greatest game. The papers called his 27-point showing "gutty, game." One sportswriter remarked "Here is the type of player we thought no longer existed, a man who can get up and fight."

Even his coach had a few compliments. "He laid his heart on the line," Al Severance told the team.

Maybe nobody took notice, but that's exactly what he's been doing all year. In fact, that's what he's been doing ever since he started playing basketball, and will continue doing until he quits playing.

Honorable Mention

He has won recognition for his play, however, in the form of Honorable Mention All-American. And don't forget he'll be back next year.

When asked about our chances in the N.I.T., he answers confidently, "If we can put three good games together, we can do it. I'll predict we'll win." Then he adds "providing, of course, that the other team doesn't shoot 56%."

Baseball, Too

Come the spring and Jim will change his sport. From the court to the diamond, as Hug once more will take over third base for the Baseball Cats. Last year, as a sophomore, he earned his letter in baseball, too, and got to start a few games.

A Finance major, Jim hopes to teach and coach in high school after graduation. He has coached now and then in playground ball, so he has some experience.

When asked who he will style his coaching technique after, he stated, "Well, when you get around, you pick up a few ideas from all the teams you see play. You mix them up with your own ideas. No two coaches are alike, and yet they all have thir good points."

No matter what style of coaching he follows, if he can give his boys his spirit, he's sure to come up with winning teams.

Sack of Troy — By Tom Troy

Colorful IC4A's Better Than Circus

When I was a kid, I remember that one of the big highlights of every year would occur each spring when the Circus came to town.

The Circus officially opened on a Monday, but the real show started on the Sunday that preceded. Very early that day the Circus would arrive at the freight yards of the North Philadelphia Station at Broad & Glenwood.

Then, the entire Circus party would march to the Circus grounds at 11th & Erie. (This area is now occupied by a PTC barn and an Acme market. O lost youth, ne'er regained!)

That parade was just about the greatest thing that ever happened.

Big Top Goes Up

The site at 11th & Erie had been swarming with workers for many hours before dawn, clearing and leveling the lot. When the equipment arrived, they immediately began the task of raising the tents.

The most spectacular sight of all was the raising of the Big Top. Thousands and thousands of yards of canvas with hundreds of guy ropes extending from it lay on the ground .

Then the tremendously long center pole would be inserted and, with the elephants helping, the canvas would be pushed high into the air, billowing and blowing there as the wind whipped it about.

The men holding the guy ropes would strain to hold the canvas as others pounded stakes into the ground to capture the wayward canvas and transform it into a tent, THE tent.

Circus Moves Indoors

By the time the workers had finished, the drab, ugly lot which only a few hours before had been nothing but gravel and crab grass was changed into a colorful city within a city.

After witnessing the hustle and bustle of unloading the circus cars, the parading to the grounds, the raising of the tents, and the preparing of the show, seeing the show itself was almost anti-climatic.

But still, there was magnificent spectacle. The Big Top show with its clowns, lions, monkeys, trapeze acts, was five rings of wonderment.

But the really great show was just in walking about, viewing the sideshows with their freaks and fakes, the hustlers, small time con men with plaid coats, gaudy colored vests, derbys, and, yes, even spats; sniffing the smells of roasted popcorn, cotton candy, hot dogs; hearing the cries of the hawkers, the roar of the lions, the cackle of the hyena, the laughter of other kids.

All is gone now. The Circus has been forced by an inexorable force—economics—to move indoors. There, it suffers so much by comparison with its former status that it doesn't seem right to call it a Circus. Alas, lakaday, woe is me.

Track Meet the Greatest

Woe WAS me. For I've found a substitute for the Circus. A substitute that even overshadows the Circus. Whereas the latter suffered drastically when it moved indoors, its replacement is in its element indoors. What is it? Of course, it's an indoor track meet. And specifically, the ICAAAA indoor meet.

There is color, humor, fantastic action, drama, intense excitement, and irony in the IC4A. A maelstrom of activity takes place within the gayly decorated arena as hundreds of athletes in varied colored uniforms dash, hurdle, vault, leap, jump, run, or just sit in an area bound by an oval of boarded track only 160 yards around.

School banners decorate the sides of Madison Square Garden. There's the bright red of Albright, the orange of Syracuse, the stately grey and yellow of West Point, the kelly green of Manhattan, the blue and white of Villanova.

Buckley's Jump Big

Humor is provided mainly by the small kids who compete in the special PAL medley relay. They scurry about the boards like mice escaping the cat.

Action? WOW! John Buckley finally avoids fouling, and sails 23'9¾" in the broad jump. Villanova, with "an outside chance" of winning the team title has five big points before the evening competition begins.

Joe Marchiony of Manhattan breaks the shot put record; Frank Budd and Otie Drayton finish first and third in the 60 yard dash; Leon Pras roars from behind to finish second in the hurdles.

Yale's Jim Stack puts on a tremendous burst of speed to inch out Rudy Smith and Art Crichlow; Ron Gregory of Notre Dame and Tom Laris of Dartmouth win the mile and two-mile runs while a guy named Thomas takes off a radiant white warm-up uniform and high jumps 6'4" without running in his approach to the bar.

Hollywood Turns Down Plot

Yale picks up nine points in the 1000 yd. run, and after eight events leads with 19 points. Villanova has 17, but has two aces in the hole—the mile and two mile relay teams. Excitement? Drama? It's just like the movies.

Jerry Hackett moves ahead of the Yaleman running the first leg of the two-mile relay. Jon Dante keeps the lead, Nick DeAngelis increases it, Pat Nicastro fights off everybody, wins going away.

The score, with one event remaining: Yale 22—Villanova 22. Hollywood would never do this. Nobody would believe it.

Joe Manion, Carl Wagner, Bob Coffill, and Bob Raemore race against Yale and the clock. The finest college relay team in America wins. So does Villanova.

For the third time in four years, Villanova has won the IC4A team championship. The large total of 20 Villanova students cheer. Everybody else goes home or watches Thomas jump 7'.

You know, I didn't see one Hawk. I wonder why?

'Cats Regain Confidence With LaSalle Win

by Bud Simmonds

With a share of the Big Five title to be gained and some lost pride to be regained, the Villanova Wildcats set their sights and attained both Saturday in rolling over LaSalle, 68-52, at the Palestra.

Sparked by the 22 points of backcourt ace, Jim Huggard, and the 14 points of his sidekick, Dick Kaminski, the Cats wound their regular season with a 19-5 record. In the final game of the collegiate schedule at the Palestra, the Villanovans cleared up any doubts to their fans of their readiness for the National Invitation Tournament as they garnered their first share of a Big Five Championship.

The usually tough Explorers offered little resistance to the Villanova five except for some proficiency from the charity line (24 for 30), and the first half ended on a dunk by Hubie White to make it 36-28.

Poor Shooting

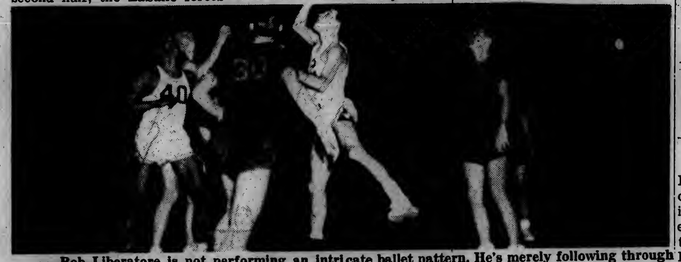
Then for the first nine minutes and thirteen seconds of the second half, the LaSalle forces could manage only one field goal and the Wildcats took advantage to this cold marksmanship to widen the gap to a more solid 50-34.

The only thing for the upset-denied LaSalle fans to cheer about the 22 point effort of their hustling pivotman, Bob Alden, as the three other departing seniors, Heyer, Bantivoglio, and Brolly contributed little to the Explorer cause.

Raveling's Farewell

In contrast, Captain George Raveling, the only graduating Wildcat, said farewell to the Palestra in a workhorse performance by pulling down 20 rebounds and dropping in 9 points for the Main Liners.

A major roadblock in the LaSalle victory path was a lackluster 22% shooting average from the field compared to a respectable 44% for the Cats. Therein lies the tale for throughout it appeared that the Explorers couldn't buy a basket.



This was especially true in the case of the usually deadly Heyer who was held to a two year low of 4 points by the pressing zone defense.

Liberatore Helps

In their NIT tuneup, regulars John Driscoll and Hubie White were in foul trouble early and secored 2 and 11 points respectively but hustling reserve, Bob Liberatore, chipped in 8 points to pick up the slack.

Huggard was at his sparkling best in this one as he deftly dribbled and drove the exploited Explorers into submission. He continuously settled the Cats down as their play intermittently started to fall into the shoddy pattern of their opponents, which was inevitable in a rout of this kind.

Both teams had been in bad slumps after each rolled up impressive winning streaks at the first of the season. La Salle won nine in a row before underrated Syracuse bumped them out of the ranks of the undefeated.

Bob Liberatore is not performing an intricate ballet pattern. He's merely following through on a successful field goal effort.

Villanova-Detroit Second Game Tonite

Hubie White dunks in the final two pointer of the first half in the LaSalle game.

Life Saving Course

In the very near future the Intramural Department will be offering the Red Cross Life Saving Course. All students interested in the course please report to Mr. Geisz in the Field House Pool on Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.

Horses Aces Champ At Bit To Be Intramural Champs

The Intramural Basketball playoffs (the NIT of the V. U. campus) are upon us and should prove to be the hottest in recent years.

In the playoffs are such hot clubs as Darryls Dandies, The Jesters, Horse Aces, Small Five, and the Amboys. The Amboys finished second in last year's playoffs losing to the champion Bravo Co. by a 56-48 count.

At this writing no games have been played, but this writer feels that the final playoff will be between Horses Aces and Small Five.

Members of Horses Aces include John Gallen, John Meakin and Jim Rolls while the Small Five (any similarity between the name and the size of the players on this team is purely concidental—all are at least 6' tall) has such performers as Fred Wheeler and Walt France.

Fellers and Le Mault are the best frosh breasttrokers and butterflyers respectively and will add much needed depth and strength to these events.

Nencetti, one of the best divers among the frosh of the city will undoubtedly team with George Robertson, the only diving holdover next year.

Five Teams Still in Competition for Bowling Laurels

By Phil Valente

The champion of the Wednesday Bowling league, in all probability, will not be known until the final day of the season. Of the five teams in the league, all are still very much in the running. The Keglets and Toppers with idential records of 24 wins and 20 losses are tied for first place. The Straight Shooters, captained by Joe Whalen are in third place followed by the "Six New Yorkers and One" captained by John Volpe in fourth place "The Lucky Strikes" is captained by John Fitzgerald.

Last week the Toppers, led by Paul Rosedale and Chuck Capone, inflicted a humiliating defeat upon the Keglets, beating them four straight games. As a result of this encounter the Toppers and Keglets are tied for first place. The Keglets, led by Dave Reeber, John Sweeney and Sam Gruineisen may get their chance to avenge last week's beating when the two teams meet this week. In a handicap league, such as this, anything can happen.

At this writing the won-lost records were as follows:

Team	W	L
Keglets	24	20
Toppers	24	20
Straight Shooters	23	17
"6 New Yorkers and One"	24	16
Lucky Strikes	20	24

Talent Laden Frosh Mermen Post Impressive Record

by Gene Hewitt

In order to log a 9 win, 2 loss record in any sport, it is necessary to have good material. To notch it against very good competition, the material must be even better.

Such is the material to be found on the frosh swim team.

Leading the list of candidates for a varsity berth next year is Ed Brier an alumnus of Hope High School in Providence, R.I.

Brier A "Natural"

A finisher in the top ten of the Senior National A.A.U. long distance swim in 1959, Brier has to be the best distance swimmer to don the blue trunks of Villanova since the inception of the swim team.

Brier is described in the words of his coach Jack Lumsden as "a natural swimmer, who shows enough promise to be one of the great ones."

Strong praise from a coach of Lumsden's usual reserve needs illumination. What has Brier done?

First of all, in a winning team effort against the Penn frosh in the last meet of the year, he snapped a record of 20 years standing in the 220 yard freestyle.

New Record Set

In the process, he set a new freshman and varsity standard of 2.19.7. The former record had been 2:20.1 set by William Hopper in 1940. In the same meet he chopped ten seconds off the 440 yard free-style record of 5:22 set by Lou Schoener in 1958.

What makes these achievements more notable however is Brier's training methods. Unless there is a swimming meet the next day, he spends his training in the weight room lifting and doing exercise designed to lengthen and strenghten the muscles used in swimming.

Then the day before the meet he will work out in the pool swimming about a mile. Although it seems unorthodox, the training method seems to be working to an extent.

Other members of the freshmen natadors who seem to be a good bet to win a starting varsity berth next year are Mike Powers, Al Hicks, Jim Grimm, Pat O'Donnell, Jim Feller, Al Nencetti and Mike Le Moult.

Good Prospects

Powers and Grimm are both sprinters and on the basis of their times seem to have the inside track on the starting spots next year.

O'Donnell, a backstroke and individual medley man, will have to battle it out with Hicks to take over those spots on the varsity which will be left vacant by the graduation of Captain Frank Keefe.

Raveling in Shrine Game

George Raveling, the only senior on Villanova's highly rated basketball team, will not end his playing with the conclusion of the NIT. The 'Cats' captain has been named to appear in the East-West Shrine game to be played in Kanas City, March 26. George will play with the top college stars in the country.

Shrewd Coaches + Gritty Team = IC's 4 Us!!

by Mike Donahue

A young, but determined, "gutty," and, above all superior —coached group of trackmen brought Villanova back to the pinnacle of the trackdom Saturday night when they annexed the IC4A track championship at Madison Square Garden.

The title, third in four years for the minions of Jim Elliott and Jim Tuppeny might have been the sweetest of the three since it was probably the most unexpected.

Only two men, of those "in the know," regarded the fledgling Cats as more than long shots for the team championship indicative of Eastern indoor track supremacy.

Who?

Coaches Knew

"Jumbo and I knew we had a good chance for it all along," Assistant Coach Tuppeny confided.

"We knew, though, that it would take an awful lot of hard work and the best performance from everybody.

"Well, the boys did work hard, ad Saturday they 'had it' when the pressure was on."

That the proteges of the messrs. Jim had it when it counted Saturday is indisputable although not readily discernible unless you were at the Garden.

Dante's Muscle Spasm

Take for example, the crucial two mile relay, Sunday's papers mentioned that leadoff man Jerry Hackett was bumped at the start yet still managed to pass the rest of the field and give Jon Dante a lead. What wasn't related was that long-legged Dante managed to hold the lead during his stint despite a muscle spasm which necessitated some heavy tape on his right thigh.

Nick DeAngelis places baton in safe hands of Pat Nicastro for final leg of two-mile relay.

On the third leg Nicky DeAngelis shot out into the lead, lost it to Holy Cross for three-quarters of a lap, and then grittily stormed back to shoot in front of the final turn so that Pat Nicastro had a slight lead going into the final leg.

Nicastro :153.3

Nicastro responded to the pressure packed situation (V. U. was losing to Yale, 17-19, at this point) with a blistering 1:53.3 anchor leg as he held off Holy Cross to win by 2 yards.

Yale, however, managed third which meant that going into the final event of the evening, the Eli's and the 'Cats were deadlocked for team honors with 22 points each.

Front row center came the mile relay teams of Yale and Villanova (among others), Joe Manion, usually the six-man four's anchor led off, drawing outside position in the staggered field.

Manion raced around the first turn, and out-legged Yale and Manhattan to the inside lane and managed to starve off every challenger to head him during his stint.

3:18 8 for Milers

So did Carl Wagner, Bobby Coffill, and Bob Raemore and the Cats were home in 3:18.8, no meet record, but good enough time to cop the IC4A title fod Villanova.

The late evening drama was preceded by some equally spine-tingling efforts by Leon Pras in the 60 yard hurdles and by Frank Budd and Otie Drayton in the 60 yard dash.

Pras confounded New York track experts by hurdling his way to second place behind Hirsute Bill Johnson of Maryland.

The soph obstacler was not off the blocks too fast but his closing thrust almost won him the race, photos showed.

Budd by a Whisker

In a photo finish to beat all photo finishes, Budd snapped the string a whisker ahead of Bob Brown, Penn State, and teammate Drayton. Otie, a notoriously poor starter, finished so strongly that V. U. almost had a 1-2 in the dash.

Although Brown had been the favorite to win the dash, Budd's victory was not so astounding to the New York press corps as John Buckley's broad jump triumph.

Jesse Abramson, foremost track authority and writer for the World Telegram and Sun in his pre-meet prognostication did not even list Buck as a potential point-getter.

It was the jaunty senior's afternoon win that gave the Catsimpetus toward the title.

Other Blue and White participants in the IC4A spectacular were Angelo Sivieri and Lance Hugelmeyer in the two mile and Ron Meyers in the hurdles.

Meyers, the burly sophomore who just recovered from a knee injury, had the misfortune to fall in one of the qualifying heats, he was ahead at the time.

Coaches Elated

"We're very proud of the boys," Tuppeny added, "But don't think that Saturday's win ended everything. We started practicing Monday for the outdoor IC4A's."

However, the indoor season isn't over yet. Friday night the IC4A Champs journey to Chicago for the Daily News relays. Then Saturday it's up to Milwaukee for the Journal Games.

The only change contemplated by the coaches is running the mile relay team in Chicago, and entering no two mile team. The procedure will be reversed Saturday with the milers abstaining from competition.

'Cats-Titans Scouting Report — by Tony Macklin & Lee Carnaghi

Hubie White

White is a liquid-smooth, rocket-heeled sophomore forward. He is the most consistent member of the 'Cats and is averaging over eighteen points a game. He is second in rebounding with nine a game. He is a ballplayer's ball player: unselfish, always hustling, determined, fluid. If he has any weakness they have to be his lack of driving, and his sometimes uncertainty in ball-handling. All in all, 6-3 White is the 'Cats ice man, the man to look for in the clutch.

Jim Huggard

Huggard is the man who makes the 'Cats go, when they go. He tends at times to play sticky with the ball, but when he's moving it, the 'Cats look good. When an opposing player offers him a challenge, he doesn't stop until he has stolen the ball, and left the enemy looking foolish. He has averaged fifteen points a game. He has a tendency to palm the ball. Defensive leech, playmaker, and solid scorer, Huggard is a tough, hungry ball player.

George Raveling

Raveling is the team's best rebounder. The 6-6 captain can shoot from outside with a jumper, but his greatest value to the team lies in his rugged work under the boards where he displays one of the finest tapping touches in the country. A Raveling tap in is a picture play. Raveling is a moody ball player, but when he decides to work under the boards (where games are won), his play can be murderous on the opposition.

John Driscoll

Driscoll, at 6-8, has shown definite improvement this year. His defense play of late has credited him with a number of blocks and clutch rebounds. His offensive work under the boards, and a soft jump shot gave him a team season high of thirteen field goals against St. Bonaventure. He is hindered by the tendency to take an unnecessary dribble before making his scoring move. This sometimes cancels a scoring opportunity.

Dick Kaminski

Kaminski, 6-2 guard, is as good a shot as there is on the team when he is relaxed. He is a tough driver and possesses great body control. He can hit from the outside. He is limited by a lack of confidence and defensive shortcomings. But with a hot hand, Kaminski can break open any ball game.

Bench

The bench is led by Bob Liberatore, Tom Samulewicz, and Dave Severance. Liberatore is nervous with a great shot, Samulewicz, is a hustler, and Severance is rugged.

SUMMATION

Villanova's forte has been its tight zone defense which has limited the opposition to 62 points a game. On offense when the 'Cats run there aren't many teams that can stay with them. But the 'Cats don't have the stamina to run for long stretches. The teams that have caused the 'Cats trouble, have been the teams that have moved the ball. West Virginia, St. Bonnie's, NYU, Wake Forest, and St. Joe's all made it zip.

..The 'Cats record is 19-6 and they scrubbed Temple 81-69 and lost to St. Bonaventure 70-72. Villanova will probably employ picks and screens to loose White. Huggard is the greatest key. He is the pivotal player. He has to move the ball. Villanova's enemies are the Garden and carelessness. Their strength is team balance, coupled with great individual potential.

Dave DeBusschere

DeBusschere (pronounced de-busher, with the accent on the second syllable) is the Titans' "man to watch." The 6-5 soph forward stands ninth in the country in scoring with a 25 pt. average, and is second in rebound percentage. Ecstatic Detroit fans that he has "no weaknesses." He was called "the best soph seen in the Garden since Oscar" by New York writers when he led Detroit to an easy victory over Iona earlier this season. His most impressive performance has been a 39 pt. 38 rebound job against Central Michigan. DeBusschere, who almost came to Villanova, hes been named to the UPI All-American team, and was named to first team A-A by the coaches of Notre Dame, Xavier, Marquette, and Purdue, who saw him perform. He hits hooks and layups and his best shot is a 25 foot jumper.

Charlie North

North is another 6-5 soph who is pushing Detroit into national basketball prominence. (The NIT is Detroit's first post-season tournament). The negro center teams with DeBusschere to control boards. He is the Titans' second high scorer. North is a flashy, crowd pleaser type ball player who tends to showboat at times.

Ray Albee

Albee is Detroit's co-captain and playmaker. The 5-9 senior is a fast, solid ball player who leads the team in assists and hits the nets for double figures. Albee is a good outside shot and a tough driver. He is a Bruce Drysdale (Temple) type player. He has been called "the best backcourt man Detroit has ever had" by his coach Bob Calihan.

George Heger

Heger is a 6-4 junior forward who can be tough off the boards. He, at times, slows Detroits' fast break attack with ball-handling mistakes.

Larry Hughes

Hughes is a 6-4 junior who can play guard or forward. He finished second to Albee in scoring last year but has slacked off in scoring with the addition of DeBusschere and North. He is a versatile ball player who could be the "surprise" performer against Villanova.

Bench

The bench is headed by sophomores Frank "Chick" Chickowski and Russ Schoenherr. Chickowski at 6-1 is a fine ball-handler and a good shot, but lacks experience. 6-6 Schoenherr is a good shot but is somewhat timid in action.

SUMMATION

Detroit is a fast-breaking, high-scoring ball club. They are in the top ten in the country in team offense and have averaged 82 points a game. They have hit a hundred three times. The Titans' record is 20-6 with all six loses coming on the road. They have defeated Purdue 84-63 and Seton Hall 101-77. They have split with Notre Dame, Marquette and Xavier. They have lost to Toledo 61-69, and Canisius 60-71. Villanova defeated Toledo 74-52 and knocked off Canisius 75-66. Like Villanova, Detroit is a young team that is strong off the boards and plays best when it is running. Inexperience is its greatest weakness.

CONCLUSION

Bench: Villanova stronger.

Shooting: Even.

Rebounding: Detroit a very slight edge. The Titans rank sixth to VU's seventh in national rebounding percentage. DeBusschere gets twenty a game.

Backcourt: Villanova edge.

Prediction: Detroit's offense against Villanova's defense, DeBusschere versus White, Albee versus Huggard—a tossup.

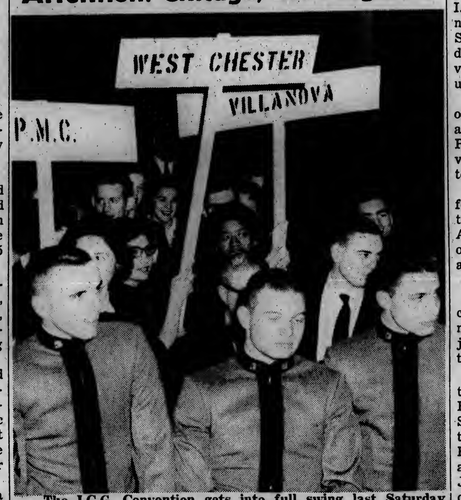
Belle Masque To Present "Crucible" Theatre-in-Round

Theater in the round will be used for Belle Masque's presentation of "The Crucible" by Arthur Miller.

Emphasize External

The play will be presented from Wednesday March 23rd through Saturday the 27th in the Field House. Curtain time for all performances will be 8:15 p.m.

The round, will affect a de-emphasization of externals ie., scenery, props, and the like, which will allow a direct emphasis to be placed on the acting of this dramatic play.



Set designer Owen Klein and Mike D'Alonzo have also planned to raise the audience seating above the actual dramatic stage action. This will in effect improve the acoustics and make every seat an excellent one for viewing the play.

"The Crucible" concerns a trial drama of a man who as a result of his own adultery finds himself in the dilemma of choosing between the gallows or his own principles. The play deals with the frightening situation that results from careless accusations of mob hysteria.

Drama Develops

A type of psychological drama develops by which the characters build up in themselves fanaticisms until they reach the peak of an emotional crisis.

Attention! Chicago, Los Angeles

The I.C.G. Convention gets into full swing last Saturday in Vasey Hall Auditorium. The Convention nominated Sen. John F. Kennedy for Presidential candidate by a vote of 49 to 46.

With thunderous applause, the Villanova delegation to the I.C.G. Convention approved the nomination of their candidate, Sen. John F. Kennedy, for president in the model political convention held in Vasey Auditorium last Saturday.

Kennedy's nomination came on the fifth ballot in a run-off against Governor Lawrence of Pennsylvania. The final tally of votes resulted in a 49 to 46 victory for Kennedy.

One of the most significant features of the convention was that Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), the dark-horse candidate of the P.M.C. delegation, showed amazing strength in the voting.

Planks Passed

In addition to having their candidate nominated, the Villanova delegation also had a majority of their planks passed by the General Assembly.

Guest speaker at the convention was Miss Genevieve Blatt, Executive Director of I.C.G. and Secretary of Internal Affairs for the state of Pennsylvania. Miss Blatt spoke on her experiences at political conventions. Fr. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A. president, gave the welcoming address to the delegates.

Following the address by Fr. Klekotka, Larry Ruth president of the Villanova Chapter of I.C.G. nominated Mary Wiest of Immaculata for Speaker of the Assembly. She was then elected by a unanimous vote. The Chief Clerk of the Assembly was Ester Sylvester of Rosemont.

After Elections

After the elections of Speaker and Clerk were concluded, the delegates went to their respective committees. In the committee sessions the planks, which were to be presented before the Assembly were voted on.

The Assembly which re-convened in the afternoon had the responsibility of passing or rejecting the planks which had come out of each committee. The Villanova delegation had at least one and in some cases two planks reported out of each of the seven committees.

Villanova delegates prominent in the Convention were: Ed McLaughlin, First Parliamentarian of the General Assembly; Bill McCarthy, who gave the nominating speech for Kennedy; John Isleman, who gave the seconding speech; Ed Ruick, Sergeant at Arms; and Jack McAteer, Chairman of Foreign Relations Committee.

Junior Biology Majors Have Orientation Meet.

Junior Biology majors will have an orientation meeting on Thursday, March 17, at 10:30 in the anatomy lab. The subject will be application to professional schools.

Freshmen Council Members Start Grievance Committee

Chuck Butler and Mike Romano, freshman representatives, have announced plans for the inauguration of a Freshman Grievance Committee.

This committee will be a sub-representative body consisting of delegates from each school on campus.

Cite Problems

It will be designed so as to bring before the class representatives the problems and ideas that may arise within the class that would otherwise go unnoticed.

Primarily, it serves as an instrument of common contact between the class and their representatives as well as an advisory body to them.

Butler claims, "this will unite the class and eliminate as much as possible unequal representation."

Each delegate will be chosen by his fellow students from small groups coinciding with the religion sections. Each religion instructor will announce the election rules of his section which will then select its committee representative at their convenience. Selection, however, must be divorced from the religion classes.

Following Pledge

Butler and Romano in doing this are following up a plank of their election platform. They took the election by a fairly comfortable margin on the "Voice of Unity" platform last month and have just recently taken their seats on the Council.

Volunteers or nominees must be approved by at least a majority of their respective groups by either a written ballot or a show of hands. Then all groups must have delegates elected by Thursday March 25, when they are to meet with the class representatives for the first time during the activities period in the Classroom Annex.

Anderson to Speak

The Philosophy Club will hold a meeting on Thursday, March 18 at 3:30 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. Dr. James Anderson of the Philosophy Department will be guest speaker. His topic will be "The Person in the Modern World."

Dr. Walter Klein will comment and discuss certain aspects of the problem in relation to the economic orientation

Cardinal Newman Today—Part I

What is a Real University?

By Lou Refacco

The international competition between the United States and the Soviet Union has produced many interesting side effects. One such effect has been the scrutiny directed toward the educational system in the United States. The aspect of the situaton to receive the most comment has been the emphasis on technological subjects in American schools.

Fischer

Although the furor has done little but confuse parents and conscientious pre-college students, it might prove provocative to approach this queston from a different point of view.

The most logical point of departure is the concept of the university expressed by John Cardinal Newman in his classic and erudite "The idea of a University."

For an accurate and pertinent interpretation we approached Mr. Jerome J. Fischer, associate professor and moderator of Freshmen English at Villanova. Asked whether or not Cardinal Newman's work is still the classic statement of what a university ought to be, Mr. Fischer replied, "Yes, with reservations."

He explained that certain basic concepts in Cardinal Newman's work must be understood in order to gain an intelligent interpretation of the thesis. Fundamental to the proper understanding of the work in Mr. Fischer's opinion is correctly defining Newman's terms, such as: university, knowledge, and learning.

For Cardinal Newman a university is a "place where thinking minds gather to exchange thoughts," it is not a place of routine formal lectures and all the other pedagogical practices we normally assign to American universities.

Also Mr. Fischer contended that "people" tend to confuse Newman's terms "knowledge" and "learning." To Newman, knowledge was the acquisition of a "philosophical habit" or the development of one's mind." In contrast, learning was understood to be the mere "accumulation of facts."

"This development of the intellect was the primary purpose of universities in Cardinal Newman's thesis," added Mr. Fischer; this is not necessarily the objective of the curricula in modern schools.

This naturally led to the question whether twentieth century universities should or ought to revamp their curricula and offer only Liberal Arts courses.

To this question Mr. Fischer pointed out that in our present society such a plan "is hardly practicable; society is neither ready nor willing to change the present system." Could, for example Villanova University completely reorganize itself along the lines proposed by Cardinal Newman?

"The answer to whether or not this should or ought to be done should be obvious to everyone," Mr. Fischer explained. This would entatil discontinuing the Engineering Business, and Nursing schools.

Many theories have been advanced which could prove to be worthy of evaluation, but in concluding his opinions concerning the ideas of Cardinal Newman, Mr. Fischer seemed convinced that "one might wish Newman's ideas were workable today, but we must perforce grieve that our world, shaped by the forces of the twentieth century, is not the same world in which Newman lived, and wrote."

Smith Defends English Dept. On Rock and Roll Station

What is the Villanova English Department doing on a Rock and Roll station?

Dr. Charles Smith, station director of WVIL, gave his answer to this question pertaining to the WVIL-produced program called "Word of the Day" which is aired over local station WIBG on a daily basis. WIBG has been known as a rock and roll station.

"This is a fallacious question," said Dr. Smith. "WIBG had approached us and asked if we were interested in joining their public service programming, and after due consideration, we accepted."

He pointed out that similar programs are conducted by Temple, Penn State, Drexel, the Learned Society of America, and Notre Dame.

WIBG doesn't want to be known as exclusively a rock and roll station," he said. "Within the past two months, they have supplemented their programming with considerable public service.

"It is only because they reflect popular taste in music that they play rock and roll music. In a recent survey it was proved that, between the hours of 7 and 8 a.m., 42 percent of the listening audience is tuned to WIBG.

"Educators thought that that station had enough status and reached a sufficiently large audience to make it worth broadcasting programs of high educational caliber.

"WVIL welcomed the chance to participate," he added, citing three reasons for accepting.

"First, it gives WVIL an opportunity to use their facilities and talent on a professional station. Second, it gives Villanova a chance to make a contribution to public services of this large station. Third, because it reaches so many, it can only serve Villanova public relations."

widespread in undergraduate circles that the English Department has suffered a loss of prestige by appearing on the station sandwiched between such artists as Fabian and Frankie Avalon.

"In contrast to this attitude," said Dr. Smith, "In the number of times that I've been on the show, all the opinions that I have heard ranged from interested to favorable."

"For the highbrows that say Villanova suffers by appearing on a rock 'n' roll station, it may be said that any worthwhile program can only raise the level of the station, and so long as it is a worthwhile program, can only tend to increase the prestige of the University."

Dr. Smith pointed out the stimulation of interest in etymology on campus as another asset. He remarked on the professional handling of station manager, Dan O'Mara with the production of the shows.

"I for one am glad to be connected with the show and hope to continue to produce it as long as interested learned members of the English Department (or others) can suggest a worthwhile "word for the day."

Manno To Commence Hist. Lecture Series

The Fourth Annual Series of Lectures sponsored by the History and Political Science Department, will open next Wednesday, March 23.

The speaker will be Dr. Francis J. Manno whose topic will be: "1860: In Retrospect."

The 1960 Lecture Series will consider the significant events of the 19th century. Following Dr. Manno's lecture will be Mr. Bernard Dean who will deliver a lecture "The Last Compromise: The Crisis of 1860-1861" on March 30.

Dr. Joseph George, Jr. will discuss the "Lincoln Paradox", Wednesday, April 6.

Council Wants To Plug Steam Leak In Dougherty Hall

Jim Merikangas, representative of the Physics Club on the Student Council, set last week's meeting into an uproar with what was described as the most novel proposal of the Council in several years.

In language which reminded one delegate of "LYNX material," the motion read:

Foul Liquids

"In that there exists on the roof of Dougherty Hall, west side, a funnel, chimney, or smokestack, that exhausts foul and noxious gases and discharges liquids upon those pedestrians entering said building, especially between the hours of 7:30 and noon, be it moved that to alleviate this discomfort and annoyance that steps be taken, such as raising or relocating the pipe or suspending its use."

Merikangas stated later in the corridor that: "Although first met with laughter, the seriousness of this proposal was soon realized."

There followed a discussion as to which committee this project would be given for work, one suggestion being that a special committee be formed to investigate and perhaps analyze the liquid coming from the pipe in question.

On the floor, Merikangas said that his major apprehension was that "no one knows exactly what this liquid is."

King Comment

"Jack King," said Merikangas, "later commented that this was perhaps the most important issue raised at the meeting."

Immediately following the meeting, several members went upstairs to the second floor of Dougherty to examine this pipe from the Belle Aire office window.

Other motions raised at the meeting which were treated with significant deliberation were:

To correct abuses in the infirmary;

That teachers submit to student evaluation;

That the Council request through the Administration to do a more thorough job in cleaning off the snow off campus.

Closing the meeting, Chairman Tom Hoffman expressed gratitude to the Council for "coming through with new motions this meeting."

At the previous meeting, he had besought members to devise such new motions because "original ideas were starting to wither."

School 'Scope Shoots Eclipse

Last Saturday evening, members of the Villanova Astronomy Dept. witnessed and photographed the eclipse of the moon. Starting about 12:30 a.m. they began to take photos and continued doing so until the eclipse ended at 4:30 a.m.

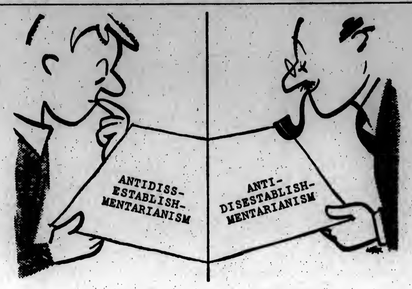
The members were able to train the telescope on the moon and acquired several photos as shown above. The obsevatory was visited frequently by many of the students living on the and enjoyed coffee and doughnuts throughout the night.

All tolled, 5 photographs were taken, commencing at the start of the eclipse and continuing until it ended in the early morning hours. At the height of the eclipse the lunar body took on a reddish color which gave a very unusual appearance, unlike any that people would normally see.

This was one of the first big projects undertaken by the Astronomy Dept. since the new telescope was erected last year.

The operation of the telescope was conducted by George McCook with Thomas Yodzis as the photography advisor.

Jim Murray Leaves Paper Temporarily



Jim Murray, sports editor of the VILLANOVAN, has announced that he has taken a leave of absence from the paper.

Murray has deposited the sports responsibility on the sports staff until he is able to resume duties.

He promised that Tom Troy will return next week with column.

As his final official act, Murray announced that a special meeting of the sports staff, without exception, will be held in the Student Council office for tomorrow night at 8:30.

Villanova Middies Forced To Cancel "Operation Paris"

by Don McCoy

Last week the Villanova "Middies" were ordered to report for active duty. Groans quickly grew into cheers as the duty assignment was announced.

In conjunction with the Fete de Francaise held recently in Philadelphia, featuring the top Parisian models presenting Dior's new creations, the N.R.O.T.C. was called upon to provide escorts for les femmes. Speculation spread thru Barry Hall as to who the lucky men would be.

Shoes were shined, uniforms pressed and brushed, the book store had a run on French vocabulary guides; but then the official word was passed "Operation PARIS cancelled."

It was later revealed that the committee from the Festival who originally petitioned Villanova for escorts did not have the authority to do so. There were several broken spirits, but the general appearance at drill was usually "squared away" as the result of the preparation for the Fete de Francaise.

The extremes of the claims offered for this last category.

This last category was responsibile for some of the wildest claims ever seen on this campus. Any resemblance to reality was coincidental, as the Middies clamored for the opportunity.

SYNGE BIOGRAPHER HERE

Playboy Caused Riots Everywhere

by JAMES McDONOUGH

Last Wednesday afternoon local Irish were especially happy and in the East lounge of Dougherty Hall there was standing room only.

Villanova literati turned out in volume to hear Dr. David Green, of New York University and biographer of John Millington Synge deliver a forty-five minute speech on "Problems and Methods of a Literary Biographer."

His Experiences

The lecture was centered around the biographer's experiences gathering information in Ireland for his book. Green, who is half Irish, "the louder half," seemed to enjoy the speech as much as he enjoyed his experiences on the Emerald Isle.

Because Synge was a pariah from his family, his papers were not allowed to be opened for fifty years. Green was the first biographer outside the family to see the author's personal files.

In order to capture the spirit of Synge's period, the biographer made a special trip to the Aran Islands where the Irish playwright had spent much time and where the turning point of his literary life happened.

The speaker said "The people (of Aran) haven't changed since the time of Synge; they are the most primitive people in Ireland."

It was on his trip to the Aran Islands that Green met Dr. Charles Smith, Villanova's Irish scholar. Said Green, "IT seems strange when in the dead of winter two characters by the names of Smith and Green arrived at Aran."

McDonough's House

The only guest house on the Island is the McDonough's "which except for a new cement floor hasn't changed since the days of Synge."

The writer reported that it took fourteen months to gather the biographical information, fourteen months to write the first draft, and four months to finish it.

"I killed him off at three o'clock in the morning, and then I woke my wife because I felt so depressed."

During the question and answer period which followed, Green spoke about the riots in connection with opening performances of Synge's most famous work, "Playboy of the Western World."

Riots Every Night

Green related, with a bit of Irish pride, that there were riots every night of the opening week at the Abbey theatre in Dublin, in 1908, and when the Abbey troupe came to America there were riots in New York, Boston, and in Philadelphia, "the whole company was thrown in jail," he said.

"The Irish have a special talent for attacking each other . . . especially their writers," said the Irish scholar. This bit of information might explain the recent disturbances at Madison Square Garden.

In answer to another question on how he became interested in Irish study, Green replied "during my student days at Harvard," then added, "that Roman Catholic Universities should be ashamed for neglecting this field of study."

The audience was one of the biggest ever seen for a Villanova guest lecturer.

The lecture was brought to order by Professor Charles Bodarsn, Chairman of the English Department. The speaker was given a lengthy introduction by Smith.

New York University's Irish scholar has made many television appearances. He showed a lot of audience contact and made the Irish nuns blush only once.

Several nuns were present. They were introduced to Dr. Green after the lecture.

Future Lectures For Department

Dr. David Green's lecture was the first in a series of lectures which are sponsorer by the English Department. Later this Spring, the Department has tentatively scheduled lectures by Dr. G. B. Harrison, Shakespeare scholar from the University of Michigan, and Dr. Alan Gilbert, Milton scholar who is currently lecturing on Italian literature at the University of Pennsylvania.

Portrette

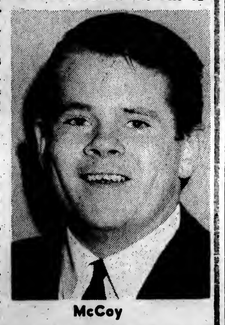
McCoy — Commuter Between C&F and Dougherty Hall

Tom McCoy, senior Pre-Law major, combines talent and geniality.

Tom graduated from Malvern Prep where he was a class officer for four years, played varsity football for two years, and played a minor lead in a muscial play.

As a Villanovan, Tom is "Mr. Committee." To use a cliche Tom has been on more committees than you could shake a stick at. In his sophomore year he was on the Soph Cotillion Committee.

More Committees



In subsequent years, McCoy was on the Junior Class Steering Committee, the Junior Ring Committee, Junior Prom and Dinner Dance Committee, the Dukes of Dixieland Jazz Committee, Senior Class Steering Committee, and lately the co-chairman of the Senior Prom.

McCoy's real talent lies in his "upstage" ability. As mentioned, he started his theatrical career in high school. Last year, Tom had the singing lead in the Belle Masque production, "The Higher You Climb."

This year, he has a dramatic role in "The Crucible." The locale of the play is Salem, Mass. The play centers about witchery during the 17th Century, which Tom says, promises to prove very interesting and exciting. "Sincerely, I think the play will be great, and I'm sure that everyone will echo my sentiments."

Poetry Author

Tom possesses other varied interests. In the line of poetry, he has had a poem published in the LYNX and hopes to have a few more in the Spring issue of the LYNX. He has also sent a number of his poems to various publishers, but none have yet been accepted.

McCoy receives pleasure from the simple things in life. He enjoys sitting in the Pie Shoppe, reading Sandy Grady, and watching Villanova teams in action.

Upon graduation, Tom plans to obtain his master's degree, and eventually teach.

Seniors Told Of Missing Credits

Recently 20 Arts seniors received notices that they would not be able to graduate with their class.

Of these, ten were transfer students who still had credits to make up and nine more had cumulative averages that didn't approximate the 2.00 required by the University, according to Father Sullivan, Dean of the Arts School.

To only one of these students was the letter a complete surprise; he had a defencicy in the number of credits brought about by the taking of failed courses as electives at a later date.

The practice of sending out deficiency slips to seniors as early as March is not new, said Father Sullivan.

These students will have a chance to graduate however by either making up missed courses in summer school or next semester; those with low cumulative averages will be able to bring them up by the taking of additional courses in the future.

Upon fulfillment of the requirments the student will be graduated and will receive his respective degree.

Science Building Project Running Ahead of Schedule

The conglomerate of concrete cross-beams that has recently been stretched across the campus between the Library and the Naval Science building is now clearly discernible as the new Science Building.

Frank Dubler, Villanova's Job Coordinator, estimates the job as approximately 30% complete and running substantially ahead of schedule. He claims that this was made possible because of the number of workers kept on the job throughout the winter and the extraordinary steps taken to make is possible to pour concrete at low temperatures.

20 Cars of Limestone

Dubler goes on to state that nearly all the concrete beams have been placed and that the twenty cars of limestine which are to arrive soon will enable them to complete the shell of the building shortly.

The cornerstone will be laid on May 17 and the building should be fully completed by February '61.

Externally, the building will present a cascade of blue and green tinted glass margined with stonework and panels of alberne stones, which will render it in congruity with the design of the rest of the campus.

Internally, it will demonstrate that marriage of presentability and practicality that is characterized in the C&F building.

A close examination of the building shows that it is actually two separate structures. The only link between the west wing (the section facing Mendel) and the east wing (paralleling the Library) is a tunnel and the three-level arch between them on the east corner.

Outlined Facilities

Dr. William Driscoll of the Physics Department, in a recent talk before the Physics Club thoroughly outlined the facilities of the east wing, which will house physics and mathematics departments.

He noted such facilities as a sub-critical atomic reactor; shops for making laboratory equipment; nuclear physics, electronic and optic labs; project rooms and darkrooms.

This will be properly arranged around mathematics and physics offices, a large computer, and three general laboratories.

Driscoll also noted that the new facilities will increase the working area by about eight times the present space. This also applies to all departments which will be accomodated in the new Science Building.

Father Rongione's Book Reviewed In CEAP Press

The recent issue of the Catholic Educational Association Bulletin, calls "Conferences on the Beatitudes" by the Rev. Louis A. Rongione O.S.A. an "immense benefit to any religious."

Father Rongione is at present Dean of the Graduate School and Professor of Philosophy at Villanova.

The book, itself, is a result of several years of experience in giving conferences and of constant modification of this material.

The C.E.A.P. goes on to state that "Father Rongione has analyzed the beatitudes with a clarity and simplicity . . . which recommends it as a guide for priests engaged in giving discourses to Sisters."

They further state, "The Beatitudes' should be in the library of every religious house."

Healy To Address Accounting Group

At the March 3 Accounting Society meeting, the guest speaker was Mr. Joseph P. Healy, a certified public accountant, who spoke on "Oportunities in Public Accounting."

Healy graduated from Villanova in 1948, served as a marine officer in Korea and was made a principal in the national accounting firm of Haskins & Sells in June, 1958.

The principle topic of business to be discussed at the next meeting will be the Third Annual Dinner Dance which will be held at the Cynwyd Club on Saturday, April 23.

Smith Defends English Dept. On Rock and Roll Station

What is the Villanova English Department doing on a Rock and Roll station?

Dr. Charles Smith, station director of WVIL, gave his answer to this question pertaining to the WVIL-produced program called "Word of the Day" which is aired over local station WIBG on a daily basis. WIBG has been known as a rock and roll station.

"This is a fallacious question," said Dr. Smith. "WIBG had approached us and asked if we were interested in joining their public service programming, and after due consideration, we accepted."

He pointed out that similar programs are conducted by Temple, Penn State, Drexel, the Learned Society of America, and Notre Dame.

WIBG doesn't want to be known as exclusively a rock and roll station," he said. "Within the past two months, they have supplemented their programming with considerable public service.

"It is only because they reflect popular taste in music that they play rock and roll music. In a recent survey it was proved that, between the hours of 7 and 8 a.m., 42 percent of the listening audience is tuned to WIBG.

"Educators thought that that station had enough status and reached a sufficiently large audience to make it worth broadcasting programs of high educational caliber.

"WVIL welcomed the chance to participate," he added, citing three reasons for accepting.

"First, it gives WVIL an opportunity to use their facilities and talent on a professional station. Second, it gives Villanova a chance to make a contribution to public services of this large station. Third, because it reaches so many, it can only serve Villanova public relations."

widespread in undergraduate circles that the English Department has suffered a loss of prestige by appearing on the station sandwiched between such artists as Fabian and Frankie Avalon.

"In contrast to this attitude," said Dr. Smith, "In the number of times that I've been on the show, all the opinions that I have heard ranged from interested to favorable."

"For the highbrows that say Villanova suffers by appearing on a rock 'n' roll station, it may be said that any worthwhile program can only raise the level of the station, and so long as it is a worthwhile program, can only tend to increase the prestige of the University."

Dr. Smith pointed out the stimulation of interest in etymology on campus as another asset. He remarked on the professional handling of station manager, Dan O'Mara with the production of the shows.

"I for one am glad to be connected with the show and hope to continue to produce it as long as interested learned members of the English Department (or others) can suggest a worthwhile "word for the day."

Manno To Commence Hist. Lecture Series

The Fourth Annual Series of Lectures sponsored by the History and Political Science Department, will open next Wednesday, March 23.

The speaker will be Dr. Francis J. Manno whose topic will be: "1860: In Retrospect."

The 1960 Lecture Series will consider the significant events of the 19th century. Following Dr. Manno's lecture will be Mr. Bernard Dean who will deliver a lecture "The Last Compromise: The Crisis of 1860-1861" on March 30.

Dr. Joseph George, Jr. will discuss the "Lincoln Paradox", Wednesday, April 6.

Council Wants To Plug Steam Leak In Dougherty Hall

Jim Merikangas, representative of the Physics Club on the Student Council, set last week's meeting into an uproar with what was described as the most novel proposal of the Council in several years.

In language which reminded one delegate of "LYNX material," the motion read:

Foul Liquids

"In that there exists on the roof of Dougherty Hall, west side, a funnel, chimney, or smokestack, that exhausts foul and noxious gases and discharges liquids upon those pedestrians entering said building, especially between the hours of 7:30 and noon, be it moved that to alleviate this discomfort and annoyance that steps be taken, such as raising or relocating the pipe or suspending its use."

Merikangas stated later in the corridor that: "Although first met with laughter, the seriousness of this proposal was soon realized."

There followed a discussion as to which committee this project would be given for work, one suggestion being that a special committee be formed to investigate and perhaps analyze the liquid coming from the pipe in question.

On the floor, Merikangas said that his major apprehension was that "no one knows exactly what this liquid is."

King Comment

"Jack King," said Merikangas, "later commented that this was perhaps the most important issue raised at the meeting."

Immediately following the meeting, several members went upstairs to the second floor of Dougherty to examine this pipe from the Belle Aire office window.

Other motions raised at the meeting which were treated with significant deliberation were:

To correct abuses in the infirmary;

That teachers submit to student evaluation;

That the Council request through the Administration to do a more thorough job in cleaning off the snow off campus.

Closing the meeting, Chairman Tom Hoffman expressed gratitude to the Council for "coming through with new motions this meeting."

At the previous meeting, he had besought members to devise such new motions because "original ideas were starting to wither."

School 'Scope Shoots Eclipse

Last Saturday evening, members of the Villanova Astronomy Dept. witnessed and photographed the eclipse of the moon. Starting about 12:30 a.m. they began to take photos and continued doing so until the eclipse ended at 4:30 a.m.

The members were able to train the telescope on the moon and acquired several photos as shown above. The obsevatory was visited frequently by many of the students living on the and enjoyed coffee and doughnuts throughout the night.

All tolled, 5 photographs were taken, commencing at the start of the eclipse and continuing until it ended in the early morning hours. At the height of the eclipse the lunar body took on a reddish color which gave a very unusual appearance, unlike any that people would normally see.

This was one of the first big projects undertaken by the Astronomy Dept. since the new telescope was erected last year.

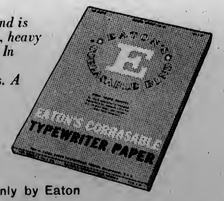
The operation of the telescope was conducted by George McCook with Thomas Yodzis as the photography advisor.

Jim Murray Leaves Paper Temporarily

Jim Murray, sports editor of the VILLANOVAN, has announced that he has taken a leave of absence from the paper.

Murray has deposited the sports responsibility on the sports staff until he is able to resume duties.

He promised that Tom Troy will return next week with column.



As his final official act, Murray announced that a special meeting of the sports staff, without exception, will be held in the Student Council office for tomorrow night at 8:30.

Villanova Middies Forced To Cancel "Operation Paris"

by Don McCoy

Last week the Villanova "Middies" were ordered to report for active duty. Groans quickly grew into cheers as the duty assignment was announced.

In conjunction with the Fete de Francaise held recently in Philadelphia, featuring the top Parisian models presenting Dior's new creations, the N.R.O.T.C. was called upon to provide escorts for les femmes. Speculation spread thru Barry Hall as to who the lucky men would be.

Shoes were shined, uniforms pressed and brushed, the book store had a run on French vocabulary guides; but then the official word was passed "Operation PARIS cancelled."

It was later revealed that the committee from the Festival who originally petitioned Villanova for escorts did not have the authority to do so. There were several broken spirits, but the general appearance at drill was usually "squared away" as the result of the preparation for the Fete de Francaise.

The extremes of the claims offered for this last category.

This last category was responsible for some of the wildest claims ever seen on this campus. Any resemblance to reality was coincidental, as the Middies clamored for the opportunity.

SYNGE BIOGRAPHER HERE

Playboy Caused Riots Everywhere

by JAMES McDONOUGH

Last Wednesday afternoon local Irish were especially happy and in the East lounge of Dougherty Hall there was standing room only.

Villanova literati turned out in volume to hear Dr. David Green, of New York University and biographer of John Millington Synge deliver a forty-five minute speech on "Problems and Methods of a Literary Biographer."

His Experiences

The lecture was centered around the biographer's experiences gathering information in Ireland for his book. Green, who is half Irish, "the louder half," seemed to enjoy the speech as much as he enjoyed his experiences on the Emerald Isle.

Because Synge was a pariah from his family, his papers were not allowed to be opened for fifty years. Green was the first biographer outside the family to see the author's personal files.

In order to capture the spirit of Synge's period, the biographer made a special trip to the Aran Islands where the Irish playwright had spent much time and where the turning point of his literary life happened.

The speaker said "The people (of Aran) haven't changed since the time of Synge; they are the most primitive people in Ireland."

It was on his trip to the Aran Islands that Green met Dr. Charles Smith. Villanova's Irish scholar. Said Green, "IT seems strange when in the dead of winter two characters by the names of Smith and Green arrived at Aran."

McDonough's House

The only guest house on the Island is the McDonough's "which except for a new cement floor hasn't changed since the days of Synge."

The writer reported that it took fourteen months to gather the biographical information, fourteen months to write the first draft, and four months to finish it.

"I killed him off at three o'clock in the morning, and then I woke my wife because I felt so depressed."

During the question and answer period which followed, Green spoke about the riots in connection with opening performances of Synge's most famous work, "Playboy of the Western World."

Riots Every Night

Green related, with a bit of Irish pride, that there were riots every night of the opening week at the Abbey theatre in Dublin, in 1908, and when the Abbey troupe came to America there were riots in New York, Boston, and in Philadelphia, "the whole company was thrown in jail," he said.

"The Irish have a special talent for attacking each other . . . especially their writers," said the Irish scholar. This bit of information might explain the recent disturbances at Madison Square Garden.

In answer to another question on how he became interested in Irish study, Green replied "during my student days at Harvard," then added, "that Roman Catholic Universities should be ashamed for neglecting this field of study."

The audience was one of the biggest ever seen for a Villanova guest lecturer.

The lecture was brought to order by Professor Charles Bodarsn, Chairman of the English Department. The speaker was given a lengthy introduction by Smith.

New York University's Irish scholar has made many television appearances. He showed a lot of audience contact and made the Irish nuns blush only once.

Several nuns were present. They were introduced to Dr. Green after the lecture.

Future Lectures For Department

Dr. David Green's lecture was the first in a series of lectures which are sponsorer by the English Department. Later this Spring, the Department has tentatively scheduled lectures by Dr. G. B. Harrison, Shakespeare scholar from the University of Michigan, and Dr. Alan Gilbert, Milton scholar who is currently lecturing on Italian literature at the University of Pennsylvania.

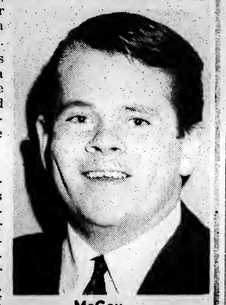
McCoy – Commuter Between C&F and Dougherty Hall

Tom McCoy, senior Pre-Law major, combines talent and geniality.

Tom graduated from Malvern Prep where he was a class officer for four years, played varsity football for two years, and played a minor lead in a muscial play.

As a Villanovan, Tom is "Mr. Committee." To use a cliche Tom has been on more committees than you could shake a stick at. In his sophomore year he was on the Soph Cotillion Committee.

More Committees



In subsequent years, McCoy was on the Junior Class Steering Committee, the Junior Ring Committee, Junior Prom and Dinner Dance Committee, the Dukes of Dixieland Jazz Committee, Senior Class Steering Committee, and lately the co-chairman of the Senior Prom.

McCoy's real talent lies in his "upstage" ability. As mentioned, he started his theatrical career in high school. Last year, Tom had the singing lead in the Belle Masque production, "The Higher You Climb."

This year, he has a dramatic role in "The Crucible." The locale of the play is Salem, Mass. The play centers about witchery during the 17th Century, which Tom says, promises to prove very interesting and exciting. "Sincerely, I think the play will be great, and I'm sure that everyone will echo my sentiments."

Poetry Author

Tom possesses other varied interests. In the line of poetry, he has had a poem published in the LYNX and hopes to have a few more in the Spring issue of the LYNX. He has also sent a number of his poems to various publishers, but none have yet been accepted.

McCoy

McCoy receives pleasure from the simple things in life. He enjoys sitting in the Pie Shoppe, reading Sandy Grady, and watching Villanova teams in action.

Upon graduation, Tom plans to obtain his master's degree, and eventually teach.

Seniors Told Of Missing Credits

Recently 20 Arts seniors received notices that they would not be able to graduate with their class.

Of these, ten were transfer students who still had credits to make up and nine more had cumulative averages that didn't approximate the 2.00 required by the University, according to Father Sullivan, Dean of the Arts School.

To only one of these students was the letter a complete surprise; he had a defencicy in the number of credits brought about by the taking of failed courses as electives at a later date.

The practice of sending out deficiency slips to seniors as early as March is not new, said Father Sullivan.

These students will have a chance to graduate however by either making up missed courses in summer school or next semester; those with low cumulative averages will be able to bring them up by the taking of additional courses in the future.

Upon fulfillment of the requirments the student will be graduated and will receive his respective degree.

Whither Rembrandt

The Student Council surprisingly enjoys general student support in one of its most illustrious projects of the year—the addition of a Fine Arts course to the Villanova curriculum. That this support exists is a matter of record in Council files. The trouble was taken to conduct a poll among a sampling of students (senior Arts) earlier in the year testing general sentiment towards a Fine Arts course, and in a gratifying display of enthusiasm, the findings were nearly unanimous in showing that:

- most students would like to see such course started; and
- most would have signed up for the course had it been available.

The Administration has registered a favorable opinion of the course, having been presented with the results of the poll, but it has remained non-commital about when it might start and who will teach it. Understandably, the Administration wants to be assured of a justifiable response (a similar course failed several years ago because of student disinterest).

The need for a Fine Arts course is made self-evident by modern standards of society, and it's been remarked that the average Villanovan wouldn't know a Rembrandt from a peach basket. Any student turned loose on society today should have some criterion for judging works of paintings, sculpture. and music; for recognizing the hopes and aspirations in real objects of art. Villanova should offer a Fine Arts course if only to perpetuate the Augustinian tradition of developing the "whole man."

The Council hasn't been idle while the authorities have been deliberating the issue. A scouting party has travelled to the Philadelphia Museum of Art where it has learned that the Museum would be more than eager to teach an extension course here in the Fine Arts.

The museum has conducted a successful extension course at St. Joseph's College and expects to do likewise at LaSalle in the near future. Equipped with colored slides, the museum would provide highly qualified teachers to come here at university expense.

As a suggestion to the Council, we recommend that they set their sights higher than a one-semester's course in the subject. Several persons on campus and elsewhere, well versed in the Arts, all agree that one single semester can hardly do justice to the material. The minimum request from the Administration should be a two-semester course, with the hope for enlargement later.

Student support for the Council is mandatory in this project. If the Council learns that it can best serve the school (to say nothing of education) by pursuing worthwhile projects of academic nature, it might abandon the trivalities (like correcting the steam discharge in Dougherty Hall).

In all justice, the Council deserves volumes of respect for tackling this venture and following through with such perseverence.

"But DAHLING! You don't know about Fine Arts? What school did YOU go to?"

Counterpoint

Kennedy as Vice President

By TOM WOLF

Matt McCue, the VILLANOVAN's self-styled political writer, last week cogently demonstrated that the office of national vice-president has blazed a hot trail of progress from its hirsute origins.

In 1960, the office is second only to the president's in fact as well as in name, and a case in point is Richard Nixon, who appears to have used the eight years of his tenure as one gigantic campaign for the top job.

And despite all the vice-presidential good fortune of Nixon, we still have to tolerate attitudes about the office which reek of disdain and border on contempt.

"I will not accept the vice-presidential nomination under any circumstances," said Sen. John Kennedy at present the leading Democratic figure in Gallop polls. And this is the wailing statement of most of the other leading candidates. Rockefeller knew the White House was beyond reach with Nixon on the scene, so he bowed out of the race, adding the usual footnote that he would have nothing whatsoever to do with the vice-presidency as though second place on the ticket was a one-way ticket to futility and anonymity.

Kennedy's disrespect for the office is more flagrant than Reckefeller's. It's quite conceivable that Rockefeller holds the governorship of New York second only in importance to that of the presidency, and one can appreciate his feelings in this light.

But Kennedy should show a trifle more regard for the office which he spurns so regularly.

Whereas, in the past, the vice-president's only hope of succeeding to the presidency lay in the mortal departure of the president, Nixon has shown rather convincingly that the vice-president of today can look forward to election in his own right.

Kennedy probably believes that, if the party receives any hint from him that he's willing to accept second place on the ticket, the party would swiftly place him there.

Thus the party would placate non-Catholics by running a protestant for president, and at the same time, satisfy Catholics by including one of their number on the ticket.

But Kennedy, and especially Kennedy, shouldn't be so insolent about the vice-presidency, even in view of the above consideration. He certainly has been no LaFollette in the senate, and the work he's done has been no greater than the less-propagandized work of fifty or sixty of his colleagues.

Perhaps he owes it to the electorate to prove himself in a job which requires a bit more singular responsibility — four or eight years as a vice-president.

To many people his highest qualification is an irresistible charm, a useful but hardly a qualifying attribute of the highest office in the country.

President Eisenhower has been largely responsible for giving the vice-presidency a larger executive role, which was added to its legislative role. A Kennedy-like attitude toward the office doesn't help any progress Eisenhower has made.

And when Kennedy finally discovers that he's nominated vice-president at the convention anyway (which he probably will be) he's going to be gastrically upset when he has to eat his words.

Perhaps it would be a healthy sort of thing if the job of veep would be rendered attractive enough so that politicians of extremely high caliber would consider the post important enough to strive for deliberately.

Now, wouldn't that be novel? A top politician who comes right out with the statement "I'll accept the vice-presidential nomination under ANY conditions!"

Jack, why don't you be the first?

Letter to the Editor

Indoctrination Is A One-Way Street

Recent discussion in the VILLANOVAN on the subject of cheating and reactions to such discussions point up a subject of complaint on the part of some students, which we on the faculty might take note of. I am referring to the need felt by many students of more opportunities for free discussion and open debate on issues encountered within the University.

This need of the student is, in my belief, fundamentally a problem of communications between the world of the student and the world of the University. As a new faculty member, having come only recently from the world of the student and more remotely from the world of business I should like to discuss this problem of communications from the bi-polar view of student and teacher.

Tranquil Student Mentality

A newcomer to Villanova is struck immediately by the tranquil aspect both of the campus and of the student mentality. Such tranquility can be misleading. Ordinarily it belongs only to wisdom and experience; in students it is apt to reveal too much passivity in the face of indoctrination from on high.

My point is: are the students being guided into too facile an acceptance of partial answers or are they being led to see alternative answers, to criticize and weigh these answers, and to seek the truth alone in all honesty and integrity?

The problem here is one of communications—between the order of reason found in the University and the disorder of the splintered, departmentalized life of the student and his current environment.

The fallacy of indoctrination is immediately apparent. Indoctrination is unilateral, it is a one-way street. It presents the truth, but does not meet the issues or answer the problems. And even the truth it presents is fragmentary and packaged .

Questions Faculty Communications

The problem at issue, then, is to determine just how the faculty communicates with the students in presenting to them the unity of truth and how the student communicates with the faculty in revealing their problems which are essentially fragmented areas in need of unification.

Here at Villanova several new areas of communication have opened up which bespeak a cooperative effort to search for the unity of truth amidst complex problems. The recent International Relations Panel Discussion so expertly editorialized in the March 2nd VILLANOVAN, comes immediately to mind.

It is a remarkable fact that two other institutions at Villanova, already well-established, have gone almost unnoticed and unused by the students as channels of communication between the two poles of student-world and University-world.

I mean the VILLANOVAN itself and the LYNX.

The outside world puts a high premium on such "advertising media" and "forums" of public opinion. A fuller use of these instruments of communication—for example, through more critical commentary in both publications, or through more student use of the "Letter to the Editor" section (as in the N.Y. Times) presenting student problems and ideas—might well serve to supplement (not supplant) in our modern educational system the traditional classroom area for the presentation of the unity of truth as an answer to complete problems.

Think of Tuition

There is always a danger on the part of the faculty to think of the student as making a contribution to his University in terms only of competence in examinations or of tuition.

His contribution, it is true is frequently in terms of pointing up the problems of his everyday life-like the problems of cheating—and of his envioronment. But unless he and his fellow students first see the problem, they will not be in a position to accept a solution when it is offered.

And it is when the University itself, in the person of its faculty sees the problem as being a problem to these students, that is one step closer to bringing out the unity of truth and closing the gap between the order of reason in the University and the order of action in the life of the student.

Typical Concept of Eire Actually Is Untypical

by lou flanagan

When Americans think of St. Patrick's Day, they usually think of shamrocks, green ties, clay pipes, and blackthorn sticks.

Unfortunately, their impression of Ireland goes no deeper than this, eitherr. It is the stage Irishman who is responsible for this conception. Most Americans has the Irish "typed" in their minds just as they have "typed" the Italians, French, etc.

In our own American way we have selected a few strange characteristics and applied them to the race in general. Howevet, Ireland is a little different than most people think.

The casual tourist to that country might get the impression that Ireland is merely a Celtic fringe of the British Isles. This is far from the truth, though it is easy to understand why this is the case.

English Used

The English language is spoken in most parts of Ireland. British and Irish currency is inttchangeable, and American and British rock 'n' roll records are popular in Eire.

Bht beneath this veneer is a rich culture, one which the English tried to blot out suring the 800 years that they occupied Ireland (Mr. Coghlin, please note).

The Irish language was suppressed, as was education, religion, and the right to own land. At one time, no Irishman was permitted to live within five miles of any town.

By deviocs methods, the Irish were able to survive these persecutions. Schools were established in the fields; priests shuttled around the country by an underground "railroad;" and the Irish language was preserved in the misty glens of western Ireland.

Golden Age

Today, Ireland has one of the best educational systems around. Medical schools in Dublin are among the best in the world. Irish writers have contributed more than their share to western literature. The Catholic religion is nowhere stronger than in Irelan.

Ireland was fortunate in that it did not experience the dark ages which eclipsed Europe after the fall of the Roman Empire. In that aeriod, Ireland had its Golden Age.

Monasteries in Ireland in that time were centers of learning for all Europe. An English historian, speaking of one of these monastic centers, nsays that "this silent place was a great seat of learning, cultlre, and Christian faith, a lighthouse of the art o fliving, in the long nigdt of chaos and barbarism which fell upon Europe . . . "

Culture Survives

Today, Ireland is a country intent on catching up with modern Europe. Basically, Ireland is a poor agrarian country. The people prefer solitude and contentment of a lonely cottage, rather than big city life.

Therefore, the only "green" in Ireland is in the countryside, and that is there because it rains all the time.

If you visit Ireland today, and carefully study the people, you will discover that the Irish, although very contented, are aware of the blow to their culture that the English occupation caused.

Library Stacked

Their literature, especially their poems, is filled with a melancholy air, a haunting sadness about past glories that are lost. perhaps forever.

The old Irish heroes such as Brian Beru, Cuchlain, and the more recent ones, Michael Collins, Sir Roger Casement, and three of her poets, Padraic Pearse, Thomas Mac Dunagh, and J. M. Plunkett are all remembered as people who gave their lives that Ireland might be free.

Villanova has tangible evidence of this Irish culture in its Library. The Book of Kells on permanent exhibition there is a reproduction of an illuminated manuscript of the four Gospels written between 500 and 800 in Meath Ireland.

This manuscript, and many other books, were donated by Mr. Joseph McGarrity, a famous Irish-American patriot. Eamon DeValera, President of the Irish Republic, called Mr. McGarrity "The most devoted to Ireland . . . of all the Americans I met when I was in the United States."

Greene Film Scintillates

by tony macklin

England's Graham Greene is one of a meagre number of major Catholic writers: one of two living novelists (Evelyn Waugh being the other). Greene's work is divided into two distinct categories: serious moral works and "sinister psychological thrillers." The latter he calls "entertainments."

The latest of these entertainments, "Our Man in Havana," which adds a bright star to Greene's authorial banner, has been made into a delightful film by Columbia pictures. It is now appearing at the Arcadia.

Greene, a master story-teller, has rejoined forces with Carol Reed (who produced and directed the duo's highly successful "The Third Man") to create a bright, witty and—considering the approach—a surprisingly suspenseful film.

Great Cast

A juicy cast has been recruited from both sides of the Atlantic. Alec Guinness does his usual wonderful acting job as plain, ordinary Jim Wormold, the daiquiri drinking, vacuum cleaner salesman.

Guiness is ideal as the seemingly innocuous Wormold who, having been abandoned by his wife, has but one desire—to raise enough money to get his daughter out of Cuba and to Switzerland, where she can have the benefits of a finishing school.

He gets his opportunity to obtain the necessary funds when he is approached by a British secret service man (Noel Coward) who wants him to become "Our man in Havana."

Wormold becomes secret agent 59200 stroke 5. After bungling failure in attempts to recruit assistant agents, Wormold decides to invent them. His imagination thrives.

Mirth & Mayhem

To the home office, he sends plans of atomic installations hidden in the mountains. They are strangely similar to various vacuum cleaners.

He becomes recognized as "the best agent in the Western Hemisphere." Enemy agents are aroused, murder and intrigue result, and the whole, crazy shebang goes dancing to its ironic conclusion.

Guinness is a disarming actor. In his subtle, but sure manner he makes each scene a snappy treat.

Guinness is certainly not alone in achieving an accomplished performance. Noel Coward provides dry "British" humor as the staid, not-too-competent agent recruiter.

Burl Ives glows in a sensitive role that keeps the show from running away. He portrays the Wormold's best friend, a German expatriate doctor, who is a tragic dreamer.

Character Suffers

As the stuttering "private soldier" who is outsmarted by Wormold, Paul Rogers performs quite capably. This is another of the ordinary, pathetic men that Greene knows so well, but the film portrayal loses some of the pathos of the character of the book.

Attractive Blond Jo Morrow is engaging as Wormold's spirited daughter. Maureen O'Hara supplies the romantic interest, (the film has a bit of everything) as Wormold's secretary.

Comedian Ernie Kovacs plays it fairly straight as the many-sided Captain Segura, "the Red Vulture." He combines tongue-in-cheek emoting with a sinister air.

"Our Man in Havana" is a fresh, serio-comic film. It is preposterous, but is drawn with human characters. One can't take it seriously, and yet moments of real suspense are injected by Reed's deft touches.

The film is on one hand, a droll, sprightly spoof; on another hand, a sardonic satire; and on a third, a wry thriller.

Humorous Plot

Greene is a master of situation, and his scenes are both dramatic and comical. The scheming intrigue in the men's room (see the film), the assassination attempt at the banquet with the tainted chicken platter being shuffled around the table, the bourbon-scotch checker game, are all memorable for portions of their hilarity.

Greene wrote the screen play and stays close to his book. He is rewarded far better in this film than in his last endeavor, "The Quiet American."

"Our Man in Havana" is a thoroughly unique film. It is one "entertainment" that is sheer, scintillating enjoyment.

Miller Moves From Pens to Prizes

By Bill Friend

Arthur Miller, the renowned playwright, was born in New York City in 1915. His early life showed very little promise of any leaning toward the literary.

At 17 years of age, he had read nothing more profound than the Rover Boys. It wasn't until high school that he first made an attempt at writing—the description of a fountain pen.

His first interest in creative writing was awakened after he had read "The Brothers Karamazov." So impressed was he with this novel that he believed that he was born to be a writer, and, having already graduated from high school, he immediately began saving enough money so that he could attend college.

Wretched Record

Despite his wretched scholastic record, the emotion and sincerity in the letters he wrote seeking admission enabled him to enroll in the University of Michigan as a student of journalism.

He wrote his first play in the ten days of spring vacation, and it won several prizes. With his confidence established, he began to write plays in earnest, turning out an average of two a year while at school.

These efforts, and the quality of his writing, merited him the University's Avery Hepwood award for creative writing in drama.

After graduation, he worked at various jobs, including motion picture screen writing and radio. In 1944, he "made" Broadway for the first time, with his production of "The Man Who Had All The Luck." It flopped.

"Focus"

He then turned to the field of the novel and wrote a book entitled "Focus." His next theatrical venture, "All My Sons," resulted in the New York Drama Critics Circle award.

Two years later, in 1947, this success was followed by the much-heralded "Death Of A Salesman," which, in addition to the New York Drama Critics Circle Award, won the Pulitzer Prize.

Then came "The Crucible" in 1953, and "A View From The Bridge" in 1955.

From the honors that have been heaped on this man, it is evident that he is a playwright of the first order. "Death Of A Salesman" has been acclaimed as an American epic. Brooks Atkinson of the NEW YORK TIMES calls it "one of the finest dramas in the American theatre."

Of "A View From The Bridge," Walter Kerr of the New York HERALD TRIBUNE said "A dramatic bonfire! A must for anyone who is at all interested in what the contemporary American theatre is thinking about."

"Crucible" Here

This month, Villanova will witness a production of one of Miller's plays when the Belle Masque dramatic organization presents "The Crucible."

This show, laid in the setting of old Salem during the 17th Century is an electrifying piece of theatre, concerned with the emotions of the people who were unjustly accused of witchcraft as a means to further the worldly ends of their accusers.

It exhibits the straight-laced and unbending Puritanic principles that were often nothing more than the outward guises for conditions of human corruptions and vice.

The Belle Masque production of this show will be done "in the round" in order to establish better communication between the audience and the performers. Such is the level of Miller's plays that few can help but be caught up in the flair of emotional action, and this play has been given such acclaim that is a favorite among amateur theatre groups.

Drama Review

Drab Theatre Season Saved By "Miracle", Old Plays

By Stan Gogol

As the cold, blustery winds of March blow, the Philly theater season starts into the home stretch. For a season that showed much promise before-hand, it has proved to be a dud so far.

On the straight play level, only two real standouts previewed here. The first, which opened the season and seemed to foretell a good one, was "The Miracle Worker". It told the story of the education of the young Helen Keller and featured the brilliant playing of Anne Bancroft and Patty Duke.

Andersonville Trial

The second was "The Andersonville Trial"—a gripping evening of entertainment. It starred George C. Scott (best remembered for his role of prosecutor in "Anatomy of a Murder"), Albert Dekker, and Herbert Berghof. It was Mr. Scott's evening all the way with the story of Andersonville taking second place.

These were the best that the season had to offer. In the also-ran catagory we had "The Tenth Man" which, while it didn't receive too good a reception here, is enjoying a profitable run in New York. Likewise with the Lauren Bacall starrer, "Goodbye Charlie".

Casualties

This brings us to the casualties, and there have been many. Comedy in particular had a hard time of it. "Roman Candle" and "A Distant Bell" both closed after unfavorable receptions both here and in New York. "Jupiter and the Pagans" closed after a week here, not even making the move to New York.

Early entries in the drama department—"Jolly's Progress" and "The Hanging Tree" both closed in New York. Later entries didn't do much better.

"The Cool World", a story of gang tensions closed after two performances. "The Good Soup" received a five to two veto by the critics this week and probably won't be around too long.

"There Was a Little Girl" opened to bad reviews and was to close after 8 performances this past week, but the producers have decided to give it a deserved chance for a few more weeks at least.

"Semi-Detached"

Still to face the critics is "Semi-Detached". Its reviews here make New York success a toss up.

The season was brightened somewhat by the one revival and a number of touring companies which played here. The revival was George Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House" with an all star cast of superior talent.

Cornelia Otis Skinner and Cyril Ritchard headed the touring version of "The Pleasure of His Company," while the Lunts appeared in "The Visit". Needless to say, both productions were well done and well received.

Another version of "The View From The Bridge" starring Luther Adler, and the touring company of "J.B." complete our serious theater picture with the exception of "Viva Madison Avenue" a new comedy starring Buddy Hackett and Fred Clark.

"What is this thing called Love?"

by Harold Freyermuth, O.S.A.

What is it that compels a man to volunteer to leave his country, his relatives, many of his friends? To adapt himself to an entirely new culture? To study and learn a language which at first sight seems almost impossible? To fight prejudices? To be laughed at and possibly even hated?

There can be only one answer to these questions. This answer is best summed up in the very first sentence of St. Augustine's rule for religious, "Before all else most dearly beloved brethren, love God, then your fellow men".

It is this spirit, this love which reflects itself in the tireless zeal of the missionary in his effort to spread God's glory among all men.

Nine Heroes

The Augustinian provinces of the United States have nine such heroes of God in the most virile sense of the word, now living in our missions in Japan. How did the Japanese people accept these men, three of whom arrived in their country only seven years after the A-bomb catastrophe? We will let the facts speak for themselves.

On November 22, 1952 three Augustinian priests arrived in Nagasaki. This marked the return of the Augustinians to a land where only ½ of 1% are Christian and only 40% of these are Catholic. (1 out of 500). In this same land their Augustinian brothers from Spain had labored to spread Catholic Faith from 1603 until 1614.

It was in this year of 1614 that an Imperial edict was passed in Japan banning all missionary work and all foreigners from the country. This edict led to the persecution and massacre of Japanese Catholics.

Eleven Martyrs

Among these martyrs, beatified by Pope Pius IX in 1867, are five Augustinian Priests and six native laymen who were duly professed tertiaries of the Order.

Our three Fathers first studied for a year at a Yokahama monastery. They then purchased from the Marianist brothers a building and about five acres of land in the Shiroyama district of Nagasaki less than a mile from the spot of the Atomic bomb blast of 1945.

The property soon became a parish under the patronage of Our Mother of Consolation, and numbered approximately 1,300 faithful and a local mission field of 50,000 pagans. In 1954, upon the wish of the Bishop of Nagasaki that the Augustinians have contact with the university students, two of our Fathers joined the English faculty of the University of Nagasaki.

They were the first priests to hold chairs on that faculty. The University itself had at that time a student body of 4,000—only 10 of whom are baptized.

In seven years the picture has changed much. There now stands in place of the original one building, a Church and Monastery building, the Child Center and Kindergarten which 150 children (mostly non-Catholic) attend, the Parochial Grade School and Middle School where 400 Catholic children of the parish are taught and the Hostel for university.

In the more important terms of spititual success the parish has in seven years grown from approximately 1,300 to 2,000 Catholic people who are sharing and returning the love of our missonaries, as a living proof of God's blessing on their work.

What is it that makes these instruments of God become all things to all men? What is it that makes our Augustinian missionaries tick? It is this thing called Love!

"AN EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES"

Twinkly, lovable old Dr. Wagstaff Sigafoos, head of chemistry at the Upper Rhode Island College of Science and Palmistry, cares naught for glory and wealth. All he cares about is to work in his laboratory, to play Mozart quartets with a few cronies, to smoke a good Marlboro, and to throw sticks for his faithful dog Trey to fetch.

So when, after years of patient research, Dr. Sigafoos discovered Reverso, a shaving cream which causes whiskers to grow inward instead of outward, thus enabling a man to bite off his beard instead of shaving it, it never even crossed his mind that he had come upon a key to fame and riches; he simply assigned all his royalties from Reverso to the college and went on with his quiet life of working in the laboratory, playing Mozart quartets, smoking good Marlboros and throwing sticks for his faithful dog Trey. (Trey, incidentally, had died some years earlier but habit is a strong thing and Dr. Sigafoos to this day continues to throw sticks.)

As everyone knows, Reverso turned out to be a madly successful shaving cream. Royalties in the first month amounted to $290,000, which came in mighty handy, believe you me, because the college had long been postponing some urgently needed repairs—a lightning rod for the men's dormitory, new hoops for the basketball court, leather patches for the chess team's elbows and a penwiper for the Director of Admissions.

In the second month royalties amounted to an even million dollars and the college bought Marlboro cigarettes for all students and faculty members. It is interesting that the college chose Marlboro cigarettes though they could well have afforded more expensive brands. The reason is simply this: you can pay more for a cigarette but you can't get a better flavor, a better smoke. If you think flavor went out when filters came in, try a Marlboro. The filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste. You, too, can smoke like a millionaire at a cost which does no violence to the slimmest of budgets. Marlboros come in soft pack or flip-top box and can be found at any tobacco counter. Millionaires can be found on yachts.

But I digress. We were speaking of the royalties from Reverso which continue to accrue at an astonishing rate—now in excess of one million dollars per week. The college is doing all it can to spend the money; the student-faculty ratio which used to be thirty students to one teacher is now thirty teachers to one student; the Gulf Stream has been purchased for the Department of Marine Biology; the Dean of Women has been gold-plated.

But money does not buy happiness, especially in the college world. Poverty and ivy—that is the academic life—not power and pelf. The Upper Rhode Island College of Science and Palmistry is frankly embarrassed by all this wealth, but I am pleased to report that the trustees are not taking their calamity lying down. Last week they earmarked all royalties for a crash research program headed by Dr. Wagstaff Sigafoos to develop a whisker which is resistant to Reverso. Let us all join in wishing the old gentleman success.

The sponsors of this column can't offer you money but they can offer you fine smoking flavor—with or without filter. If you favor filters try a Marlboro. If non-filters are your pleasure pick a Philip Morris.

Track Team Ends Winning Season

by Mike Donahue

The 'Cats efforts over the last nine weeks of the season have provided track buffs in general and Wildcat loyalists in particular with many pleasant surprises.

Highlights

Among these were the 3:18.1 turned in by Paul Drayton, Bob Coffill, Bob Raemore, and Joe Manion in their first fling indoors at Boston on January 16; the 7:40.0 (best time on the Eastern circuit) in the two mile relay posted by Frank Hegarty, Jon Dante, Pat Nicastro, and DeAngelis at the Millrose Games, January 30; The 3:16.9 (also best of the season in the East) mile run by Drayton, DeAngelis, Manion, and Raemore in their return trip to Boston February 6; hurdler Leon Pras' steady improvement topped off by a strong second in the IC4A meet March 5 in New York; Millrose Games and his IC4A repetition of the same feat to show New York press skeptics that his first win was no fluke; and lastly broad jumper John Buckley's jinx-defying win in sprinter Frank Budd's early season upset of Bob Brown in the the IC4A meet which was the big psychological factor in the 'Cats copping of the indoor diadem.

One of the few disappointments of the season was the first defeat of the mile relay team. The upset was perpetrated by Manhattan in the Millrose Games.

2nd Loss

The second loss for the milers was incurred last Friday night at Chicago in the Daily News relays. There the foursome of Drayton, DeAngelis, Manion, and Raemore met defeat on the heels of a 'hot' Central Michigan team. The winners' time was a swift 3:17.1.

Sophomore middle distance ace Patty Nicastro also lost in the Chicago meet, placing fourth in the 1000 yard run.

Saturday Jumbo Jim and his charges journeyed up to Milwaukee for the Journal Games and fared no better than they did in the Windy City.

Drayton In the Dash

The two mile relay team, composed of Manion, Jerry Hackett, DeAngelis, and Nicastro finished in arrears of Michigan, and Ohio State. The Spartans' winning time was 7:42.2.

Sophomore Drayton, switching from his usual position as leadoff man on the mile team, dropped back to the 50 yard dash since Elliott did not run his milers in Milwaukee. However, Otie finished out of the money as Ed Miles, Indiana, Brown, Tom Robinson, Michigan and Brooks Johnson, Chicago Track Club, garnered the top four places.

Carl Wagner hands off to Nick DeAngelis in Mile Relay race.

Anyone who wishes to be a Baseball manager report to Field House this week.

Sports Writer Sends Letter From the Garden

Thank God the fans were wrong. Villanova didn't choke up, Dick Kaminski wasn't there just because the rules call for 5 men on a team, and George Raveling didn't miss those two fouls in the last seconds.

Because of those three reasons, Villanova's bid for the N.I.T. crown got off to a successful start. Villanova won a game many fans thought they would lose; a clutch game.

A Detroit fan in the crowd kept insisting that Detroit should be in the N.C.A.A., and would probably run wild in the N.I.T. as soon as Villanova won, however,, he changed his tune to, "Just wait 'till these boys play some real teams."

We won, so maybe we should forget the mistakes. There were some mistakes, you know. The first half, Detroit got too many easy cheap shots and most of the crucial rebounds went to Detroit, as their men continually got better position.

One fan asked me (and he was serious) if Huggard ever practiced foul shooting. Detroit fouled im almost without fear in the closing minutes.

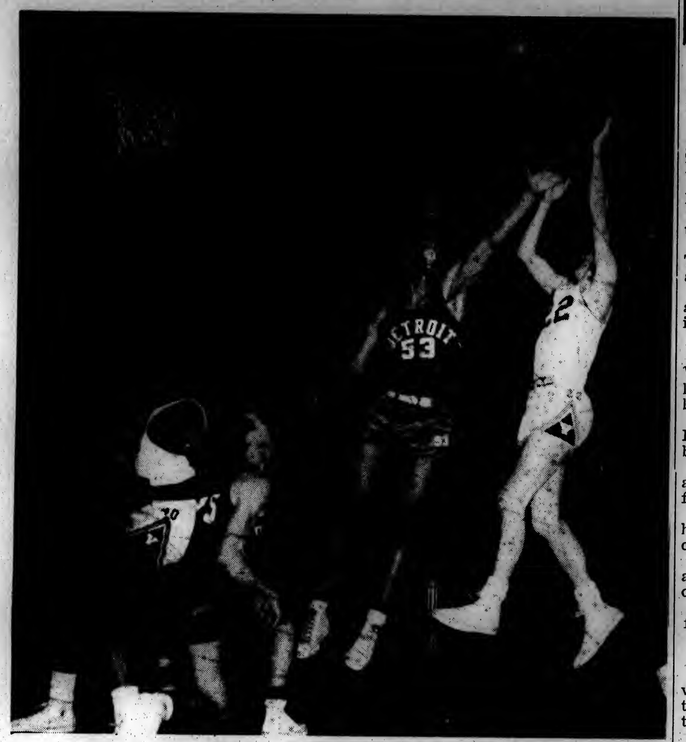
What happened to Hubie? The first half, he just couldn't get going. Then the second half, he couldn't be stopped. That first half! Graceful, yes; quick, yes; but a dead-eye; never.

That graceful jump of his just didn't go in. The night was filled with exciting basketball, and the game was filled with exciting plays. We won't talk about Detroit"s plays, except for one that is best forgotten. Detroit got the ball directly under their basket. Everyone moved one way, including all five Villavans. Everyone, that is, except Dave DeBusscheve who got the ball, and made an easy shot. Too easy.

Dick Kaminski caught everyone's eye with a beautiful three pointer early in the game. Another Kaminski gem was a brilliant steal, with a perfect lead pass to Huggard. Dick was just unbelievable the entire game, playing like an All-American.

The fans were impressed with Villanova's showing in the game. The last ten minutes were worrysome, but they made it a game worth seeing at half-time, everyone was sure they were due to choke, but they didn't. Detroit's press was tight, skillful, and almost effective. The difference was Huggard's ball-handling near the end.

When Hug left the game with 17 minutes to go, the fans thought it was all over for the "Cats". Then in came Villanova's secret weapon: Bob Liberatore. Bob came in, and took over. He scored Villanova's next 7 points, and got the "Cats" growling again. Those jump shots rival Hubie's for grace. He made it all look so easy.



The fans applauded Huggard when he worked the ball near the end. One traitorous Providence fan said he is just as good as Egan. Since this is not a rating service and I'm prejudiced anyway, I'll refrain from making statements I can't back up. The Detroit fan liked his style enough to state, "He and that ball must be old friends, they sure do get along great."

The papers said the turning point of the game was North's removal. Well as one of the Garden Guards said, "They can only score so often, and each basket is worth two points no matter who makes it."

White, Kaminski, Brighten Darkened Television Screen

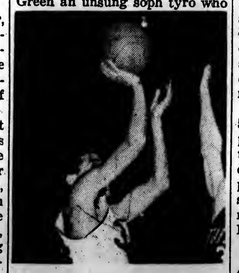
by Mike Donahue

"And just think White's only a sophomore and Kaminski has another year. You have a good right to say ' wait 'till next year'."

This comment was voiced by a fellow TV viewer last Saturday afternoon in a post-mortem rehash of Saturday's heart pumper.

No empty words these, either, for in the pressure-packed atmosphere that pervaded Villanova's abbreviated stay in the NIT last week our two heretofore reluctant Wildcats came of age.

That White was magnificent was borne out by the local press as well by the statistics. The latter showed Hubie with 12 for 21 from the floor, 11 rebounds, and six assists. His domination of the last minutes of the game almost forced TV announcer, Marty Glickman, underplaying it all the way, out of his approach to the game.



Kaminski Overlooked

Kaminski's brilliance was not quite so highly eulogized. Nevertheless it was the dapper junior's icy coolness that sparked the 'Cats early second half push. It was Kaminski who hit the first shot, along jumper that got the 'Cats underway early in the second period, after a poor first half.

(The skitterishness of the Main Liners in the initial session was matched only by Glickman's figeting, unprofessional handling of the halftime show.)

Before the smooth junior connected, Utah State had a 42-35 bulge and appeared set to run the 'Cats into the boards because the smaller Utes were beating them off the boards.

In the persons of Cornell Green an unsung soph tyro who looked like the West's answer to Oscar Robertson, and Ty Wellbon, an uncoordinated but springy leaper, Utah State outpositioned, outfought and outhustled the 'Cats for every offensive rebound in the first half.

Perry 'Clutch' Too

Kaminski's bucket triggered the uphill 'Cats. Utah State, spearheaded by mitey Max Perry, staved off the early 'Cat bids, however.

But each time the Westerners threatened to sew it up, Kaminski was on the spot to keep the Main Liners in contention.

bleak when Perry's bucket made

For instance things looked it 45-53, with less than ten minutes to go.

However it was Richie to the rescue. Two Kaminski jumpers sliced it to 49-53 and set the stage for Hubie's palpitating heroics, culminated by his steal of Perry's rebound and his ensuing score—tying layup. Then came the overtime and Hubie's never attained seventh assist.

Six assists, eleven rebounds, 55% sharpshooting and 27 points is a pretty fair effort, though. So was Hug's all out defense, George's late game pivot play, Tweety's seldom seen but effective driving, Sammy's usual 110% hustle, and Libby's spot relief of Huggard.

"Wait 'Till Next Year"

From one vantage point though it was the tough clutch shooting of Kaminski, born of newly found confidence, and the all-around dependability of White, born of newly assumed leadership, that stood out. Stood out so far in fact that the 1960-61 'Cat opponents just might look back on our cries of "wait 'till next year" and tag them as their funeral dirge.

Oppositionville just might rue the day Richie Kaminski and Hubie White came of age before a national TV audience.

Readers are the Jury

By Tony Macklin

I have just torn up a column.

The reason that that prose is shredded is because of a member of the 'Cats starting five. This is the second time this player has spoken to me. His words shook me up.

He feels the power of the press has been misused.

I have never written anything that I have not believed. Sometimes I may have been wrong, or lacked discretion, but I have never written without integrity.

I have always insisted that to write platitudes is useless. I cannot write a saccharine column. What I try to do is write a constructive criticism, a sharp analysis. When a team loses, there must be reasons.

Opinion can hurt; but perhaps it helps a little bit too. That is the idea. When one is working with opinion, he is also working with feelings, and that is the curse.

It is too bad that actors, athletes and writers are not automatons for our personalities and emotions keep getting in the way.

On the Line

The actor, or ball player, or writer lays it on the line. When he does his job he deserves credit, sometimes superlatives. When he fails, it has to be different. They shouldn't be people, but they are.

By this introduction I am trying to solve a dilemma. I realize that I havq upset people with some of my writing, but it has been unavoidable.

When I express an opinion. it is up to the reader to make a judgment on it. He can accept it as true, or reject it as false. He makes the decision.

An actor has his medium—the stage, a ball player has his medium—the court, and writer has his medium—the column.

All three are trying to do their jobs to the best of their ability, there is no question about that. But they are all open to censure.

In the long run it comes down to this—the playgoer, the fan, or the reader is the final judge.

National Invitational Tourney

Now to the NIT.

There is little reason to go very deeply into the 'Cats vanquishment at the hands of Utah State. Anyone who was there or witnessed the game through the paralyzing eye of the TV cameras knows what was wrong.

Rebounding, ball-handling, and defense were all less than adequate.

6-4 Cornell Green and 6-4 Tyler Wilbon consistently rebounded over VU's taller big men.

Utah's little man, Max "the magician" Perry was cool and terrific. He had 22 points (6-14) and he iced the game with two icy fouls in the overtime period. He also gave his team the lasting lead with a pass under the bucket to Joe Worthen who ducked it. It was Worthen's only score.

Perry had six assists and sliced open the 'Cats defense with deft, tricky passes.

The really discouraging thing about the loss was that Villanova was a good ten points better than Utah State. The 'Cats had the height and the bench.

Hustle the Difference

In the long run the heady play of the "the magician," and finer team play proved to be the difference. Coach Al Severance's favorite word "hustle," told the story.

The game also showed that both teams were overrated. Providence should flog Utah State in the semi-finals.

Hubie White has to be the 'Cats most valuable player over the season. He has been consistent, he has been cool and he has been clutch The momentary lapse that proved so costly, was more agonizing to him than anyone.

When he laid up the frantic goal that tied the game in the regulation time, it was the most thrilling moment of the season. It was accompished on sheer fight.

White definitely has All-America potential. And his attitude is All-American.

Kaminski Stars

Rick Kaminski finally relaxed and came alive in the Garden. After the St. Bonaventure game VU fans were ready to roast Richard. Not too much was expected of him in the NIT by the average fan. But Kaminski took the good shots, made a good percentage, and came home with forty points in two games.

The stellar Detroit game performance of Tom Samulewicz and Bob Liberatore should also be mentioned.

All in all, the NIT was a disappointment. The 'Cats played thrilling ball but it was also unsteady ball. This proved to be their downfall.

VILLANOVAN Presidential Poll To Be Held Tonight

The VILLANOVAN will conduct a poll this evening to determine the preferences of Villanova students concerning the national presidential candidates.

Select Candidates

Students will be asked to select their candidates from both parties (as the national conventions do), deciding upon single candidates from both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Two weeks hence, another poll will be conducted to determine the general choice between the two candidates selected in tonight's poll. It will be Villanova's preview of the general election.

Resident students will be asked to register their opinions as they leave the dining hall, and day-hops will be polled tomorrow afternoon.

The greatest variety of opinion is expected to arise from choice of a Democratic candidate. The most prominent candidates are Sen. John Kennedy (leader in Gallop Polls); Sen. Stuart Symington; Sen. Hubert Humphrey; former governor Adlai Stevenson; and Sen. Lyndon Johnson.

Republican Choices

The Republican nomination seems virtually assured for Vice-President Richard M. Nixon. His only possible apparent competitor is Nelson Rockefeller, governor of New York, who has publicly denied his candidacy.

The results of the poll will be announced in the VILLANOVAN two weeks from today.

Although the poll has tried to include every possible presidential candidate, write-in candidates will be accepted.

The results of the first poll will be shut to the candidates in both parties. The result of the record poll will also be sent to Villanova's choice for President.

PLEASE VOTE TONIGHT!

Mary Schaffer listens sympathetically to Tony Provenzono as Belle Masque's production of "The Crucible" begins final rehearsals.

Play Inspired By 'Witch Hunts' Of Senator McCarthy

The Belle Masque production of "The Crucible" by Arthur Miller is flavored with the ingredients of witchcraft, black magic, Puritanical religious fervor, and the undercurrent of sin that was so prevalent in early New England.

Starts Tonight

The play will be presented from tonight through Saturday the 27th in the Field House. Curtain time for all performances will be 8:15 p.m.

According to John Barlas, Publicity Chairman, this play was written by Miller soon after his questioning by Sen. McCarthy in relation to his alleged leftist activities.

"Whether Arthur Miller had an axe to grind or not, doesn't much matter because the message of this play is also an echo of the Salem Inquisition," says Barlas.

One of the most significant features of this production will be its presentation in "the round". This will in effect deemphasize scenery, props, and the like while allowing a more direct emphasis to be placed on the acting of this dramatic play.

Seasoned Veterans

The cast is composed of a mixture of seasoned veterans and promising newcomers. Tony Provenzano has been cast in the lead role of John Proctor, the honest hard-working farmer.

Also prominent in male roles are Jack Milton as Mr. Hale, the sincere, zealous minister who is an expert on the devil, and John McGarry who plays Giles Corey, a blunt out-spoken old farmer.

The principle female roles are being played by Kathy Crane, Mary Shaffer, and Joanne Dynakowski. The girls are from Rosemont, Immaculata, and Villanova respectively.

Others, who are appearing in thhe play are Alan Willig, as the Reverend Parris; Bill DiPaolo, as Governor Danforth; and Mary Warren as a weak, fearful servant girl.

Barlas added that those who see the play will be able to decide for thhemselves whether Arthur Miller has made a direct affront on the Senator or whether he speaks somehow to mankind with a most ponderous message.

Scalia Reports

Richard Maltby Orchestra To Play For Junior Prom

Junior prom-goers will dance to the music of Richard Maltby and his orchestra, according to Bob Scalia, president of the junior class.

Tickets for the dance, to be held May 6 in the Field House, will cost $6.00.

Scalia disclosed that the decorations for the prom "will be quite unique." He said that John Livezey and Bob Redmond have decided on a theme "which will not be revealed until a later date."

Scrolls for Programs

"This much I will say, though," Scalia interjected. "The prom programs will be in the form of scrolls about 18 inches high. They are really impressive-looking.

"The favors will consist of champagne bottles filled with bubble bath."

Decorations for the prom will be handled by a committee headed by Bill Friend and Paul Gallagher. "They started work this week," Scalia remarked.

Bob Hope Queen Judge

Pictures submitted for the Queen Contest will be judged by Bob Hope, Scalia revealed. The entries may be turned in between March 27 and April 3 at 153 or 233 Sullivan. They must be at least 5 by 7 in size.

Hope will pick the five finalists. Maltby will then select the queen at the prom.

According to the junior president, Maltby's ensemble will consist of 13 musicians and a female vocalist.

Physical Set-Up

When queried as to the proposed physical set-up of the Field House for the prom, Scalia said "The band will be on one side of the Field House, as it was for the Charity Ball. There will be tables and chairs set up, too.

"At present," Scalia said, "there is a committee looking into the possibility of securing reduced rates on tuxedos, corsages, and motel accomodations in the area."

Committee Reports

Committee Reports submitted detailing the final work on each of the other events on the Junior Week agenda have also been submitted to Scalia.

Jim Strazzela and Bob Cassin, co-chairmen for Mother's Day said that the diaper dan pictures which will be exhibited in the east lounge of Dougherty for the amusement of the Mother's Day audience have started to come in, Scalia said.

Jack McDonnell and Harry Mitchell are the Diaper Dan co-chairmen.

Guill Show Wednesday

The Guill's variety show pushed back from Tuesday to Wednesday of Junior Week will probably feature two separate acts.

Scalia said that their identity and that of the dinner dance band will be announced.

Seminary Guild Launches Drive For New Members

The annual drive for membership in the Augustinian Seminary Guild begins next Monday, March 28, and will continue until Friday, April 1.

Organized to obtain funds for the education of young seminarians, the Guild seeks both new and renewed memberships in this special student drive. Enrollment in the Seminary Guild entitles the member to daily Masses and prayers by seminarians and Augustinian priests the world over.

Ordinarily, the offering for enrollment is one dollar. However, students may obtain membership for themselves, friends, or for living or deceased members of their families for only fifty cents. In addition perpetual membership may be obtained for ten dollars, while families may be enrolled for fifty dollars.

Rev. Francis X. Kelly O.S.A., moderator of the Guild, has established a new system to conduct this year's campaign. resentatives will visit the resident' dormitories in an effort to obtain subscriptions, while letters will be sent to all the day students. Tables are also to be situated in Dougherty Hall and the Commerce and Finance building, at which students may enroll.

Members of the Student Council Religious Affairs Committee, under the chairmanship of John Castano, will be conducting the week-long campaign for the Guild. Father Kelly, moderator says "the Seminary Guild looks forward to another successful student membership drive, and to the spiritual assistance which it can give its many members."

Arthur Miller

Arthur Miller, whose play, "The Crucible," is being currently produced by Belle Masque, has had a successful career as a playwright. As a result of his second theatrical venture, "All My Sons," he received the New York Drama Critics Circle award. Two years later, in 1947, this success was followed by the much-heralded "Death of a Salesman", which in addition to the New York Drama Critics Circle Award, won the Pulitzer Prize.

Then came "The Crucible" in 1953, and "A View from the Bridge" in 1953.

Dr. Gallager To Speak At Manhattanville

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher of the Philosophy Department will deliver a lecture at Manhattanville College of the Sacred Heart on Sunday, April 3.

The topic of Dr. Gallagher's discourse will be "Contemporary Philosophies." This lecture will be sponsored by N.Y. NFCCS.

Residents Draw For Rooms Starting Tues.

Drawing for resident rooms will take place on March 29, 30, and 31. Juniors will draw numbers on Tuesday, sophomores Wednesday, and freshmen Friday.

The drawings will take place in the Student Council office between the hours of 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The list of the numbers drawn will then be submitted to Rev. George McLaughlin, OSA, Dean of Men, by the Elections Committee, which will supervise the proceedings.

Room assignments, based on priority of the numbers drawn, will be made on April 5, 6, and 7.

What Teeth!

Connie Bracken inspects Maureen McDade's teeth with a needle sharpener glass at Valley Forge General Hospital. They are both Sr. Nurses at Villanova.

Speaker On World Affairs To Be Guest At IRS Dinner

Joseph Pultorak, president of IRS, announced last Wednesday evening at the regular IRS meeting that Dr. Edwin Wright, of the Department of State, will address that organization in the East Lounge on April 7.

Dr. Wright, who will speak on "World Affairs," will be introduced by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President.

After a film report on current political trends in Africa, the first projects committee disclosed extensive plans for a weekend trip to Washington D.C. on April 22 and 23.

Leave Friday

The IRS delegation, including nursing representatives, will leave Villanova early Friday by chartered bus and return late Saturday night.

In keeping in harmony with the theme of the trip, "Foreign Policy," the tour will include visits to the Senate, Foreign Relations Committee; the House, Foreign Affairs Committee; and a talk on Foreign Policy by one of the Legislators. The group will also sit in on Congress in session.

Saturday, they will visit both Republican and Democratic headquarters as well as the Catholic Association for International Peace, where a Church dignitary will present the Church's viewpoints on Foreign Policy.

All IRS members are invited to participate. However, reservations are limited. The total cost for everything is approximated at $10.

The second project report introduced a similarly larger project; the IRS Banquet and Social, which will be held at the Baum Gardens in Norristown on May 4th. The membership elected to bring dates.

Concluding Banquet

This banquet serves as a conclusion to the IRS year as well as an inauguration ceremony for new officers. In conjunction with this approaching completion of the IRS year, Pultorak points out: "This is the ideal time for those who are interested in International Relations to join the club. The club offers the opportunity for a practical approach to the aspects and problems of Foreign Affairs, and allows the student to take an active part in state and national IRS organizations."

First Student Council Treasury Nears $3000 Goal

The maximum $3000 total of the Student Council treasury will soon be almost realized, according to Tom Hoffman, Council Chairmen.

With revenue accrued from the Council dance and the movies, the treasury now stands at $528.92.

University Matches

The income up to $1000 from the remaining movies added to this total will be matched by the University. The University will also add $1000, making the maximum allowable total to be $3000.

Hoffman expressed satisfaction with these figures, especially at the income from the movies. "The movies have been averaging a profit of almost $100 and with three more remaining, we will come very close to attaining our goal," he said.

The chairmen explained that the budget for next year will be decided by the incumbent officers of the Council and the new officers shortly after their election in May.

The funds will be allotted to the various committees at the beginning of the semester to allow them to plan their activities.

Line up Speakers

"For example," Hoffman said, "the Academic Affairs committee will be allotted a certain amount, allowing them to line up speakers for the rest of the year."

"The successful movie program could be boosted by the purchase of a projector, instead of having to borrow or rent one."

Wise To Discuss Penal System At Pre-Law Meeting

Randolph E. Wise, Philadelphia's Welfare Commissioner, discussed his present and former public offices before a recent meeting of the Pre-Law Society.

The address, which was attended by members of the Society and many guests, stressed particularly the archaic structure of the Pennsylvania penal system.

Wise pointed out that the individual counties pay the cost of prisons in this state, and further stated that probation is "most effective if applied properly."

He also holds that pardons, as opposed to probation, should be granted "only in extreme cases."

Concerning his present position, Wise spoke of the many Welfare institutions now being operated, or planned, by the city. He cited Riverview, the home for the aged, as the finest in the nation.

Wise also urged Society members to "hunger for information as to the welfare of your fellow citizens." It is his view that "you can set patterns for the future growth of other citizens. Above all, keep a sense of justice."

Dr. Buford Named Asst. Grad Dean

The University has currently announced the appointment of Dr. Albert H. Buford as Assistant to the Dean of the Graduate School.

Dr. Buford has been with the University since 1957 in the capacity of Associate Professor of English and has taught on both the graduate and undergraduate levels.

After graduating from the University of Tennessee in 1934, he was awarded his doctorate by the University of North Carolina in 1946. Since then, he has taught in such schools and Loyola, Fordham, Tennessee, and North Carolina.

Buford, upon this appointment, pointed out: "I feel that a person in administrative work should not loose sight of the most important contributions one can make to the University campus: teaching and scholarly research."

He will continue in his capacity as associate professor and teach courses corresponding to his special interests, which are the English Rennaisiance and English Biographical writers.

The new office has such duties as the study of programs of other universities and the promotion of steps to keep abreast of developments.

In addition to this, Buford interprets his position as projecting the duty to "Work with University Librarian to see that the library will more adequately serve needs of the Graduate Faculty."

He also expressed deep interest in the growth of Graduate Studies at Villanova and a sensitivity as to the opportunities developing within the Assistantship program for the development of new teachers

Campus Camera

By John Rosella and Jim Phillips

Question: Do you think there is adequate information supplied to the Villanova student concerning School Activities?

I feel that information is rarely supplied to the Villanova student. Although the students are responsible, to a large extent, for familiarizing themselves with student affairs, they can't be expected to weed out poorly publicized news. Too frequently are notices posted in only one building. If a piece of information pertains to the University or one of its classes, it should be posted on a university-wide basis.

Chuck Butler
Pre-Med '63

I believe that the lack of interest and representation of students in the various student activities accounts for the poor information given to us. Once the administration realizes student interests in student affairs. I do not wish to place the burden of guilt on the administration, but on the students themselves. Most students don't realize that student activities, and affairs, are as much a part of their education as their studies.

Donald Reardon,
Junior Arts '61

Through the various bulletin boards, the Dougherty Hall address system, and the abridged clarity of the VILLANOVAN, I think so. The main problems however are the lacadasical interest taken by the students in these affairs and the failure of the Council and committee members to openly discuss recommendations and criticisms with their respective constituents. A more vigorous approach, including better public relations and stimulating advertising, seems be the proper solution.

Larry Everling,
Arts '62

I honestly think that since the inception of the campus calander which is printed weekly and posted on the bulletin board there should be no students saying "I didn't know." However, I think the activity should take upon itself the duty to make known its activities, so that it can be noted on the campus calander. If the students would take only two minutes a day to look at the bulletin boards in Dougherty, no information would go undisseminated.

Dial-Log

WVIL Emphasizes Variety In Presentation of Jazz

"The Tops in Pops," "The Sound of the Big Bands," and "The Music of the Masters" are the trademarks on many of the of the Stations on the air waves today.

However, the lovers of jazz still seem to be unable to find their type of music on the dial; save those who own FM radios.

Quick Tour

A quick tour through an average college dorm would reveal the market for jazz. The sound of this music echoes through the halls, but it is usually coming from a hi-fi set.

This has its disadvantages though; the major one being that it limits the selection of the music for the enthusiast and his neighbors to the size of his collection.

Variety is a big thing in jazz, and, thanks to this variety, it is no longer the exclusive music of a "beat generation".

When the producers at WVIL developed "Jazz Suite", now heard weekday evenings at 7:30 p.m., they took this variety factor into consideration.

The moods set up by the hosts and the music played vary from show to show. Bill Dzubak, for instance, is probably the only man on campus who can read poetry to a college listening audience and still keep this interest.

The weaving of his selection of music and topics of discussion result in an hour and a half of pleasant listening for all rather than a select few.

Different Moods

A different mood is established by Joe Zawacki, who probes deep into the WVIL library, as well as his own, to bring back some of the favorites of past years.

The music of Fats Waller, Jimmy Rushing, and Kid Ory, which was popular in the 20's and 30's is featured on Zawacki's show . . . something that is not heard too often on commercial stations.

Jazz Suite, recently an hour long show, was increased to an hour and a half due to popular demand.— by Dan O'Mara

Business School Should Recognize Individual

Dr. Klein, Dr. Anderson Tackle Dehumanization Problem

By James McDonough

"The Business School of the future is not going to be . . . a place where you learn rules of thumb and get descriptive material of marketing channels . . . "

Thus spoke Dr. Walter Klein, who in conjunction with Dr. James Anderson of the Philosophy Department, delivered a lecture before the Philosophy Club last Thursday on the topic, "The Person in the Modern World."

Intrinsic Worth

Business schools today, said Klein, are just beginning to realize, as the business world itself is realizing, the intrinsic worth of the individual.

The business man as a person working within an organization is a completely new concept, he added. Organizations have long considered and, for the most part, still do today, the employee in terms "of what value is this man to the company."

They view the person, he said, only as an instrument of money making, of economic profit.

This pragmatic, dehumanistic outlook of organizations has developed because of three basic causes:

First, "from technology, we can not be more human in industry because the technology does not allow it. There are still many jobs where the best qualified persons are morons."

Second, "the principles of management that we have are based upon an over-simplified understanding or knowledge of the human person."

And last, quotes Klein, "dehumanization in industry and organizations stems from the fact that we have little knowledge about the impact of the manager himself upon the organization . . . how he uses or can use the organization."

Traditional Command

The lecturer suggests that the "traditional chains of command, such as the social pressure brought upon the individual by the organization, as in the organization man, are proving inadequate.

"If organizations would consider the employee as individual because it respects the individual human being, said Klein "they're going to see an increase in material profits, as a by-product. First, consider the welfare of the person and the welfare of the organization is guaranteed.

"The principles of management have assumed the same kind of economic man that exists in economic theory: A man conceived as a rational being but defined narrowly, showing his material wants as primary."

Today, said Klein, this view has been broadened to include the social aspect of man over the rational. Industry is now giving "canned courses in human relationship and conference techniques, but with same results because the organization is considering the company over the individual. This limited definition of man has not only penetrated industry but has seeped into the schools."

Optimistic Prediction

However, Klein ended with an optomistic prediction, confident that industry and business schools are realizing that the person is the principle concern of the organization.

Anderson

Klein's talk followed and elaborated upon the basic philosophical tenets presented by Dr. Anderson. Dr. Anderson's speech developed philosophically the topic "The Person in the Modern World."

Modern Society

Before beginning his analysis of modern society, Anderson defined two concepts of man: man as an individual because of his material nature, and man as a "person because of his spiritual nature".

Using these two concepts, Anderson brought out that modern society views only in his material aspect, that is an individual not as a person.

The end of society is essentially profit; therefore, in light of this end, man is considered only as an economic instrument in service of that end.

This interpretation's primary end is to procure the maximum benefit of the individual . . . and not the moral and spiritual benefit of the person," and that it "believes in the absolute liberty of property, business, and pleasure."

Individual Treatment

Anderson stated that, as far as the treatment of the individual is concerned, the communist society and the American society are the same. Both societies are anti-individualistic.

Anderson referred to our schools stating that education of today is viewed in economic terms of the utility of professor and student.

He prefixed to this thought a praise for Catholic education saying "a respect for transendental values and truth is a reality on the Catholic campus whereas, it is not so on the non-Catholic campus."'

"Catholics are in a wonderfully privileged position to be above the bourgeois individualism of the modern world, "to be in it but not of it."

He finished by saying that "Catholic schools are almost infinitely better in many of the most important human things!"

Provenzano Stars In Belle Masque "Crucible"

Upon graduation from high school, two years passed before Tony Provenzano decided to enter college. From then on, Tony has not only provided many pleasureful hours for audiences, but has gained a philosophy of life.

Tony graduated from St. Mary's in Perth Amboy. It was there that the first sparks of his theatrical ability were seen. In high school he had the lead role in "Call Me Madam." While there, he also played in "What A Life" and "Jenny, Kiss Me."

Grandfather A Playwright

Tony traces his theatrical inclinations to his grandfather, who was an Italian playwright. However, his grandfather gave this up to come to America.

After graduation from high school, Tony sought a job in a steel mill, where he worked for the next year and a half. Subsequently, he entered Villanova.

Besides being in Belle Masque Drama Society, Provenzano is in the Pre-Law Society, intramurals, and in his spare time, holds several jobs.

Lead Role

Presently, Tony has the lead role in the suspenseful thriller, "The Crucible." He has also had character roles in past Belle Masque productions such as "Tiger At The Gates," "Inspector General," "Taming Of The Shrew," and "The Higher You Climb."

Provenzano has also taken lead roles in a number of Community theatre plays. Among these were "Desire Under The Elms" by Eugene O'Neill, and "Summer and Smoke," by Tenessee Williams.

Best Play

However, according to Tony, it looks like THE play to see is "The Crucible." He believes it is the best play produced at Villanova since "St. Joan.'

Provenzano

"It's been the best play I've been in since I've been here. So is the cast. The quality of the play is good. Its pertinent to our times even though it takes place in 1692."

Villanova has given Tony a philosophy of life. "Villanova has opened my eyes to many things. I've met people from different environments and gained valuable experience. Most important, I've gained a true set of values; not a materialistic set. What is essential in life is intangible, and Villanova has made me aware of this."

When graduation rolls around, Tony is going into the theatre. His initial effort will be made at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City.

News Briefs On Campus

Debators Win Negative

Mr. Richard R. McDonough, Moderator of the Beta Gamma Debating Society, has announced the results of the recent Brooklyn College Tournament. The issue at hand was whether Congress should be allowed to reverse decisions of the Supreme Court.

The Villanova team, which debated the negative, consisted of Frank McCormick and Tom Reilley. They won all five of their debates including a close one with West Point.

The affirmative team of Mark Quinn and Ron Anderson lost their five against the top teams in the tournament.

In other debates of the past week the Villanova teams defeated Ursinus and Rutgers of Camden.

Canadian Lectures

Rev. Robert Russell, OSA, Chairman of the Philosophy Department, has announced that Dr. Raymond Klibansky of McGill University will deliver the annual lecture in honor of St. Augustine on Sunday, April 24, in the Field House.

Tho topic of Dr. Klibansky's discourse will be "Platonism and Augustinianism." During the course of the lecture Dr. Klibansky will discuss the relative merits of each of these philosophic systems. He will also explain the Platonic influence found in the writings of St. Augustine.

Night School Frat Starts

Initiation for Alpha Sigma Lambda, the evening school fraternity, will be held on April 2, it was announced by Dr. Charles P. Bruderle.

The ceremonies will begin at 6:30 P.M. at the Lamppost Inn, Wayne.

Dr. Bruderle added that eligibility for membership is a 3.2 cumulative index for students who have completed 30 credit hours in the Evening Division.

Junior Prom Queen

The Junior Prom, which will be held on May 5, will be highlighted by the crowning of a Prom queen. All juniors who attend the Prom may enter their dates.

Co-chairmen of the contest, Butch McNally and Paul Fitzpatrick, have announced the rules which are to be followed.

All entrants should submit pictures of their dates to rooms 153 or 233 Sullivan Hall between March 27 and April 3. These pictures should be of minimum size of 5" by 7".

The Ken Dell Modeling School is going to judge the pictures and narrow the selection to 15 contestants. These 15 pictures will then be sent to Steve Allen, who will select the five finalists from this number.

The winner of the contest will be selected from the five finalists by the members of the band which will play at the Prom.

Communion Breakfast

The Spring Communion Breakfast of the K. of C. will be held on Sunday, April 3 in accordance with a decision reached at the March meeting of the Council.

Tickets and information are currently available from Dave Grennon, 344 Sheehan or Robert O'Shea in the Philosophy Office.

Commerce and Finance Freshmen to Meet Thurs.

The Rev. Joseph C. Bartley O.S.A., has announced that, all C&F Freshmen are to meet in Vasey Hall Auditorium on March 24, at 10:30 a.m.

Each of the Chairmen in the Departments of Accounting, Finance, Industrial Administration, Marketing and Pre-Law will explain the requirements of the major he represents and the job opportunities to which it leads.

Witch Hunting

Belle Masque opens tonight witth Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," a show which promises to overwhelm audiences with sheer dramatic power. Chalk this up to the two important factors: good dramatic presentation by the theatre group; and a dynamite laden script by Miller.

Miller may or may not have planned it that way, but the story of the Salem witch trials displays a not-too-veiled commentary on the investigatory antics of the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, the divinely-commissioned chairman of the Senate Investigating Subcommittee of ten years ago.

When you see "The Crucible" you'll notice the similarities: the reckless tribunals of the Salem witch-hunters; the fear of witnesses to testify for fear of self-incrimination; the inner turmoil of the protagonist—torn between telling the truth and being punished, and lying to save himself and loved ones.

With trepidation, the play brings to mind with anything but nostalgia, a sardonic description from Commentary Magazine of the McCarthy method while he was in his so-called glory: "Here we have a barnfull of mice. In this barn, roaming about with complete impunity, are three mice which are rabid. The most expedient way to dispose of the three poisonous mice is to burn the barn. Hence, the barn is burned."

Why revive the issue of McCarthyism by staging "The Crucible?" Of course, the play possesses a great deal of universality without the McCarthy interpretation, and Miller meant it to be so. The story of Salem, as depicted, would have been just as captivating had there never been a senator from Wisconsin.

But this issue may go down in history as the foremost domestic ideological controversy of the past decade. Even today, six years after the senator finally surrendered his inquisitor's bench, the issue can be revived by the mere mention of his name. Reaction from "The Crucible" should be that much more fuel.

A large liberal element among the faculty would rather forget the whole episode and hope it's dead forever.

With greater volume, the voice of the pro-McCarthy (or apparently pro-McCarthy) elements are also being heard. Last semester, the library displayed the ultra-conservative "Individualist" in a glass-covered case, with all four pages of four separate issues trumpeting simultaneously. The pamphlet, thus enshrined, was a living blacklist, condemning persons and groups critical of McCarthy.

Some people regret the passing of the McCarthy-type investigations from the national scene. They mourn that the excitement of clearing the rabid mice out of the barn is gone, and no one has replaced the grand exterminator of evil.

But then, the old excitement is also gone from Salem now that witches are no longer put to the torch. Progress has a way of stifling all the fun.

Thanks to Belle Masque and the university for having the courage to depict the dubious ethics of barn burning.

Counterpoint

English Dept. and WIBG

By JOE CONLIN

Anyone who dialed a certain Philadelphia radio station recently has perhaps been surprised to hear a voice declaring himself of the Villanova English Department and thereupon launching into a rather interesting review of the history and derivation of some well-known, everyday word.

Regular Feature

This "Word of the Day" as the feature is called is apparently presented regularly throughout the course of the station's broadcasting day in conjunction with Villanova's station, WVIL.

Now there can, of course, be only one motivation why the doubtlessly well-intentioned professors of the English Department and administrators of WVIL would agree to this promotional stunt and it is an idealistic one, if futile.

For the vain hope of presenting a cultural enlightenment to the lethargic masses in indeed futile. This is ture especially when it is considered that the great number of this certain station's listeners are of that well-known trying teenage. This dimwitted group finds nothing in "Word of the Day" than something to joke about in their clumsy way.

It is indeed unfortunate that the cultural level of the people of our country has sunk to such depths

Praiseworthy and Interesting

The idea behind "Word of the Day" is praiseworthy and the feature (the twice I've heard it) is interesting and maybe even enlightening.

The shame of it all is that for any self-respecting person to hear what it to be said, he must first be pelted or rather, bombarded with hours of raucous recordings, grating commercials and childish commentary of announcers who (granting they are rational human beings) must laugh or sneer at their finger-snapping following for its idiotic adulation and patronage.

Parody On Music

That intelligent efforts towards mass education should be preceded and followed by this disgusting parody on music is all but appalling.

And, it is remarkable that the English professors should think that they could elevate a listening audience whose intelligence is distinguishable from that of an herd of burros simply because of the absence of tails.

Thus, the comedy of the serious educator sandwiched between the quivering whimperings of Frankie Avalon and Fabulous Fabian is tempered considerably by the tragedy that only through this selfsame medium can an intelligent voice be heard.

Farce Will Die

Fortunately, "Word of the Day" is but an ethereal promotional stunt and "the voice crying in the desert" will quickly be rejected by the cha cha-ing public. Then, maybe, this tragic-comic farce can be forgotten.

Letter to the Editor

Plan For Halting Library Thievery

It was with a great deal of satisfaction that I read the well-documented comments of Jim Merikangas in last week's Villanovan. At long last, someone has publicly expressed the sentiments of a great majority of the student body regarding the closed stacks in the university library.

It is indeed unfortunate that this majority should suffer because of the immature and self-centered actions of a few "students", yet it is likewise understandable that the university had to take some action to eliminate the rampant book stealing and wanton destruction of property that existed at the time. But is the university taking the "easy way out?"

In light of the comments of Jacques Barzun exposed in last week's "Counterpoint", it would seem that the university has a responsibility to attempt every possible solution to the problem before resorting to the most obvious one.

I would tend to disagree with Mr. Merikangas in his contention that the lesson has been learned and opening of the stacks again would result in a "reasonable level" of book stealing, however, with a bit more effort and positive action, perhaps sufficient control of the problem could be achieved.

My complete faith in this possibility has prompted me to submit what might be a workable solution.

Located on various levels of the library, there exist approximately eight entrances to the stacks—all but one of which are locked. Would it be possible to open one of these, to be used strictly as an entrance to the shelves?

Control could be achieved by stationing a a guard or library employee to insure that this entrance was used strictly as intended. The only remaining exit would be at the circulation desk, where the books would be charged to the students as before.

Of course, the objection will be raised that it is a relatively simple matter to drop a book out the window and pick it up outside. But it would also be relatively simple to install screens or wire coverings over the windows to prevent this. The monstrous panes of Alumni Hall boast of a similar protection, and if athletics are worthy of the expense, can the scholastic aims of a university be logically denied?

If I may re-quote Mr. Berzun: "They (students) must be able to go from shelf to shelf, tracking down an idea, a name, or a picture." Certainly the payment of a library fee warrants at least this privilege.

On Library Article

I wish to express my complete agreement with Mr. Merikangas's article on the Library problem. There have been many complaints about the present system, but Mr. Merikangas seems to be the first one to approach the problem calmly and intelligently.

"Closed stacks" hardly seems the solution to the library's main problem, the petty pilfering of books. Obviously, some positive thinking is in order; for example, moving the main desk nearer the front door, or perhaps facilities could be maintained for checking un-needed personal books prior to entering the stacks. At any rate, depriving the majority of trustworthy students the priviedge of examining books firsthand is definitely not the answer.

The public libraries in Philadelphia and in most communities maintain open stacks for the benefit of everyone. Theirs is not the advantage of a school library, that of having a smaller, more select group utilizing the facilities, yet the stacks remain open! The theft of books from these public libraries must be at a minimum, else the staffs would be forced to close the stacks.

Is it a reasonable assumption that honesty is more prevalent amidst the general public, than among a comparatively smaller group of Catholic men? I think not and I hope not!

The stacks should be opened to the student body, and the problem of petty larceny by irresponsible children should be solved with some common sense approaches.

Villanova Culture Conforms To Standards

By Jose Conlin

It was his first job with the Evaluation Board, Villanova was. And it was the last for the bedraggled hulk I met in a quaint Arch Street bistro last week. From his foam-flecked mouth I was to hear one of the most tragic tales since Rapunzel. His name is unimportant, he was B.S., M.S., and Ph.D. in Evaluation and Accrediting and he was now a derelict.

Since early youth when he questioned his instructor's capabilities with finger paints he had wanted with the passion of VanGogh to evaluate teachers, to improve education, to accredit colleges.

Intensive study at the Sorbonne, graduate work in Herzogovina, student workshop in Conshohocken, all these went into the making of a man, an accrediting man. It was all for naught.

He thought he was ready, he thought he knew what a college should be. He was to be disillusioned.

The recent stew-bum signalled for King's Men and continued as I, enraptured, failed to notice the jovial innkeep scoop my few denarii into the cash register.

His first assignment was in the Student Cultral Attitude phase of accrediting for the Punxsutawney Accrediting Council. His first mission: Villanova University.

He thought he did his job well; he stalked dormitory corridors, dodging playfully tossed but lethally lit butts; he broke bread in the Pie Shoppe with apprehensive freshmen; he talked "shop" with the naturally gregarious upperclassmen, laughed at their crude jokes; he eavesdropped at informal discussions, lurked behind trash-cans and came away satisfied that he had an extensive coverage on the cultural views of the student body.

He worked late several nights on his report; detailing, elaborating, footnoting, concising, clarifying until a resume of suitable length was all that remained.

Scarcely had he finished when the board was called to a meeting to rule on Villanova. Deans cringed under the haughty visage of the the all-powerful Grand Accreditor who gathered his lieutenants about him.

After a four-hour faux pas on the necessity of uniform standards in American higher education, the Grand Accreditor called for reports. The Dean of the Indian Lore Department fell to the floor clutching his chest.

"Unless you wish to note some deviations, kindly respond with a Yea or Nay," the Accreditor yawned. "Schlossman! Are the teachers and administration of the Albanian Economics Department of said University equal to the standards of Punxsutawney Accrediting Council?" droned the chairman hastily.

"So she says to me, dese guys really are Kookie." Brockton overhears a typical conversation.

"Yea" piped a non-descript evaluator whom my drinking friend had previously thought to be a doormouse. The swarthy chairman of that department beamed as a disgruntled chap next to him apparently paid on some obscure wager.

On and on with the queries, followed by torrents of "yea's". English, History, Physics, Accounting, Engineering—the gamut. Finally the chairman announced the review of allied fields.

"Is the cultural attitude of the students at said University congruent with current American standards?"

My friend rose, clearing his throat, believing that he had the first deviation. He listed the rather one-tract, gynecentric trend of student conversations, the finger snapping devotion to a popular imitation of music, the narrow extent of entertainment pursued in low class television programs, the ignorance of any better screenplay than "I was a Teenage Werewolf," the impression of all stageplay as extinct vaudeville, the ignorance of any so-called music not in key of B-flat, etc., etc.

"Mr. Brockton," interrupted the chairman, "I clearly stated that if there are no deviations from the standards upon which the people of this country rest, let the question be answered with a YEA. Brockton! Are students of said University familiar with current events? Do they know Elvis is back?" the chairman continued.

My friend does not remember the rest. He had fallen to his chair a broken man. The Sorbonne! Herzogovina! He rested his case and stared blankly at the empty bottle of King's Men. A roach foundered in the sticky bottle.

The Thumb

Hitch-Hiking Historical

by lance kelter

After registration when you were a freshman you compared schedules with your friends and found that the I.B.M. machine had you all coming to school at different hours.

Not being as lucky as the N.R.O.T.C. admiral who flies to campus once a year, you were posed with the problem—How To Get To School?

If you don't own your own Triumph, if the car pool is filled by the time it passes your house, if you're not near the on-campus railroad or if you have to travel 30 days and nights to get to 69th street so you can get the high fare or high speed line, you have to HITCHHIKE.

Although legally it is not allowed, sometimes self preservation rules and you must resort to this old custom.

Brief History

Hitchhike as defined by Webster means, to cake one's way, esp. when hiking by getting rides on automobiles. Now that the definition's taken care of, let's give a brief history.

The first hitchhikers were the famous pairs on Noah's Ark—this was indeed a great ride because it was the only boat. Then the next great step was in the middle ages when the crusades sparked mass hitchhiking. (Teutonic Knights who gave rides were comparable to rides in Cadillacs today).

The next great age of the hitchhiker came during the gold rush days—Indians formed a league to stomp out hitchhikers.

This almost worked, for hitchhiking went through its dark ages, then a light—a flood of light and what emerged was the first Ford.

This brings us up to today when we have the ideal statue in the law books of Alaska making it illegal to pass a hitchhiker.

After the sketchy history any phase may be studied for a lifetime) we are ready to learn the modern rules for the modern Villanova day hop.

Number One, check the weather to select right attire—in Philadelphia area you can get the weather by dialing the word YESTERDAY.

Number Two, Sunny weather means time to wear the advertisement or blazer; this enhances chance of one hop ride to school.

Number Three, Rainy weather—always make sure books are not concealed; remember they are your best ticket.

Number Four, Snow, stay home. I have hitchhiked to school in five blizzards. Results, oh didn't you hear over ZZZ FM Japan no school today or the residents don't make it anyway?

Number Five, Never have bulgy pockets, people are afraid of concealed weapons.

Number Six, Get to know your local cop on the corner and school crossing guard—that way you won't get arrested.

Number Seven, Don't stand on the middle of a hill, you're liable to get run over.

Number Eight, Always smile even after six consecutive cars have splashed you with water.

Number Nine, Truck drivers who give you rides while showing a no rider sign in the window are breaking the law. Therefore, make sure you stay on the floor 'till your stop.

Number Ten, Always be polite, courteous, obliging to a person nice enough to pick you up. For heavens sake don't rob anybody because you'll mess things up for everybody.

These are just a few of the many rules, their are many more and many facets to this sport Yes, sport, because hitchike racing is being considered for the 1980 games in Siberia.

If we have helped you get a ride or made your ride a little more enjoyable, it is purely by accident.

Spring Will Spring

by natalie attired

If Winter is here, can Spring be far behind? Yes, it can. But Spring is actually just around the corner, and we wish to be the first harbinger of that volitile season.

With Spring, our dull little campus shines, and green lawns spread themselves where only mud dared appear before and our spanking new fences just gleam in the April sun. No longer will we be bothered by those blue and purple shadows.

With Spring many new campus activities stir from their winter snoozes and begin blossoming, nurtured by crispy little rays of sun.

Dirty Department

Belle Masque un-FOLDS its arms and cries the merits of "The Crucible," by A. Miller. This promises to o'ershadow the graduate dept's dirty little play, "Playboy Of The Western World." We have, to be sure, a dirty little graduate dept.

"I Remember Mummy" is T'n'A's little addition to campus life. These patrons of the arts have been practicing for several months, and still show no improvement.

Vasey Revamped

There is now a ladies lounge in the basement of Vasey Hall. Yahoo!!!

Due to the mutable pre-Spring weather in the Philadelphia area, we deem it necessary that those people to whom this Spring weather may appear strange should be informed as to proper apparel.

Popular Blazers

Blazers are popular and even practical, when a fur hood is attached.

MOLE

Blue button-down shirts if lined with millium.

Loafers are here to stay, if they are hob-nailed.

Tattle-tale gray sweat socks make it because they eliminate glare from the snow.

Scarfs will replace ties in many patterns, scotch or foulard.

You'll need a hat and we suggest one similar to those worn by the State Police.

These suggestions will definitely be sufficient until the warm weather returns some time next November.

Lynx: 3 New Eds., Deadline March 24

By Frank Murtha

There are three new appointments to the Lynx editorial staff effective this week. Paul Iffland, senior History major and controversial political writer for the VILLANOVAN will fill the post of Business Manager which was left vacant by Hoffman's resignation.

Iffland hopes to put some of his "conservative" economic policies into effect in an effort to sodilify the Lynx's traditionally sound foundation.

Freshman Gary Evans was added to the poetry staff, headed by Jim Merikangas. Evans brings with him considerable experience. He was editor of his high school literary magazine.

Valente Named

Phil Valente, Villanovan Business Manager, replaces Jim McAteer as Publicity Agent. Valente, the active and vociferous advocate of the attempted C&F culture and extra-curricular "Renaissance" hopes to awaken the obviously latent literary interest of his fellow C&F students.

Perhaps he can. Being familiar with the history of previous publications and their reception among the C&Fer, I doubt it.

We sell about 300 copies each year, "There are some 4000 students matriculated here. The point is obvious. And what's more, half of them don't even know what or who the Lynx is.

In any Ivy League college, the literary magazine meets with gratifying success. The editors are besieged with material submitted by hopeful literary aspirants. Their staffs, between publications, work long hours sifting material. Here the staff sits around twiddling its thumbs, waiting for the material to trickle in.

This is just one more complaint about absence of literary talent and interest on the Villanova campus, in a long list of complaints that date back through the past four years and have been reitirated this year by various staff editors including poetry editor, Jim Merikangas, and managing editor, Tony Macklin.

By and For Villanovans

The Lynx, is Villanova's organ of literary expression. It is by and for Villanovans. The Lynx staff does the best it can with the material received. The largest burden rests on the students. It's up to you to decide what caliber magazine you want and the amount of support you are willing to give it. If you don't care . . . well, that's your perogative.

The deadline for the Spring issue of the Lynx is March 24. All material, short stories, essays, poems, etc. must be submitted by then to myself in 215 Sheehan Hall, Jim Merikangas, 110 Sheehan Hall, Mr. Mitchell or Dr. Phillipson of the English Dept. All material should be typewritten.

Those who submitted material for the Fall issue are asked to stop at by at 215 Sheehan to have it returned. Any desired criticism will be gladly given.

Anyone who wishes to work on the Lynx staff for the coming publication may see me, or any other member of the staff.

Becoming An Augustinian

Every September a group of young men begin an important part of their lives with a ten day retreat in Staten Island, New York. These are the men who have just entered the Augustain Order.

After the retreat the seminarians go to New Hamburg, New York, which is located on the Hudson River near Poughkeepsie. The seminarians spend a year in New Hamburg as novices, and while they are learn to pray, work, and play as members of a family, the Augustian family.

Following their novitiate the seminarians come to Villanova University. During the three years which they spend at Villanova they pursue their college studies, majoring in philosophy.

It is also during this time that the seminarians take their first vows. They are the simple vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience.

When they are graduated from Villanova with a B.A. they are transfered to the Augustinian College in Washington, D.C. The College is located directly across the street from the shrine of the Immaculate Conception, and it is here that the seminarians spend three years studying theology before they take their solemn vows and are ordained.

However, the schooling is not yet completed. The seminarians, now priests, spend a fourth year studying theology.

Upon completion of the four years of theological studies the priests receive their assignments. It may be as a parish priest, a high school teacher, or a college instructor.

During the first four or five months after their assignment the priests continue their education with a seminar-type instruction from the older priests who are living in the same house.

This is but part of the training that an Augustinian undergoes. The journey, at times, may be difficult, but the final rewards make it well worth the effort.

Life isn't all Theology texts.

Visits by Relatives and friends help keep the Seminarians in contact with home life.

Recreation — A vital part of the Seminarian's Life.

Football, Baseball Practice

IN THE SPORTLITE

by John Duffy

When anyone connected with the basketball team wants any information the cry, "ask Murph," is heard. Murph in this instance happens to be William AA. Murphy, better known as Bill or Murph, the head manager of the basketball team. Murph is a man of many talents, all of which are directed toward the betterment of the Villanova basketball team.

Murph's duties are numerous and varied. He is in charge of everything from making up itinerary sheets to giving out meal tickets, to having a few cigars handy for the coach.

When asked about how he happened to become a manager, Murph said that he always liked basketball and played J. V. and some varsity ball in high school, but was pretty small at 5-7. (Now Murph is a good sized 5-11.) When he came to Villanova in the fall of '57 he tried out for the basketball team, but without luck. "They had a great team with guys like Huggard, Kenny, Kaminski, and Liberatore, and I was lost. My sophomore year I broke in and this year I'm head manager."

Bill explained that being a basketball manager has been a wonderful experience. "I have been places that I wouldn't ordinarily have had a chance to visit. I also have learned many things that will prove valuable in later life."

Murphy

Murph said that the most exciting trips for him was the one to Buffalo last year, his first, and this year's jaunt to Greensboro for the N. C. State game. "They waited on us hand and foot and made us feel like kings, even after we won."

Bill, who is a junior in finance, is from Tamaqua, Pa. and attended Marian High School. His roommate, Frank Marchese, also a basketball manager, jokingly calls Murph a "May Day boy" because he was born on May 1st. Murph will be 21 on the aforementioned date.

Questioned about his basketball team Bill replied, "They are a very good team, but a few bad breaks against N.Y.U. and St. Bonny really hurt us."

Murph went on to add that next year they should be first in the East and no lower than fifth in the country. He reasons that N.Y.U. loses Sanders, their whole team, and the Bonnies lose Sam Stith, "who means a lot more to that team than a lot of people think.

"With the addition of Tom Hoover, Tom Galia, and Bernie Chavis, we should be even better next year."

— Sports Chatter —

Two More Personalities

By Tony Macklin

To a Villanova basketball team already topsy-turvy with personalities, there will be the addition of two more controversial individuals for next year's season.

These two question mark characters are Tom Galia and Tom Hoover. Both have been merely going through the motions with a lightly-coached, so-so frosh team. They have sat and watched the varsity founder at times this season, and they have imagined themselves righting the 'Cats with a shot or a rebound, Their chance is coming, they have served their apprenticeship. Now comes the "big time."

Tom Galia is the boy Coach Al Severance feels is the best shot in the school. Tom is a cool, confident, muscular young man who possesses tremendous potential. He has taken more shots in his young career than most ball players take in a lifetime.

Honors or Failure

Anyone who has watched Galia play is wondering what will happen when he joins White, Huggard, and company. Will Galia shoot himself right out of the starting lineup, or will he shoot himself to Eastern honors?

Galia is an individualist who dribbles all over the court until he winds up with the shot. Why doesn't he let his teammates work for him, set him up for the shot? "I like to use a pick," he explained, "but I like to do it myself. When you do it yourself you know it will get done." He is not being odious with this statement, just honest and supremely confident—he believes in himself.

"When you're behind by two, you can pick up two quick baskets and put your team ahead," he said.

No Real Problem

There are many who feel that dissension is a distinct possibility with so many individuals on the team next year. "There are three men who can score 25 points a game," Tom said. "None of them are going to want to give them up, and they all may get them. But don't think it (individualism) will be as much of a problem as everybody thinks."

"Jimmy and I get along well," he answered in reference to a question about the irrepressible Huggard.

"I'm looking forward to next year," Galia concluded, and one could see that he has been looking forward to it for a long time.

Moving up to the 'Cats' varsity with Galia will be tall Tom Hoover, who is also already under fire. Hoover may be even more so because of his more ebullient personality. He is an exhibitionistic, outspoken, unrestrained whale of a ball player. When he speaks it is with color and humor, although at times he strains credibility. He is never at a loss for an answer.

Varsity Limelight

Sometimes this year he gave the appearance of listlessness on the court. "When you play varsity ball you're playing for a million people, not just 30 or 40 like when you're a freshman. We're going to need the boards next year and regardless if I'm "lazy" or not it's going to be different, real different."

He uncurled like a great cat. He talked about the tremendous speed that the team will possess next year. "Anything that's around me I'll get," he said boldly of his rebounding capabilities. "All they need is the ball off the boards. I know my job, to get that ball. The one thing that makes me happy is getting the ball off the backboards. When I do that, I'm the happiest man alive," he beamed.

Tom spoke of next year's Dixie Classic, the City Series, and the NIT in optimistic tones. Could over-confidence play a part? "No!" He felt the team would be too hungry to let that happen. "Desire is the key. I know this kid's got it," he sang. "The team will keep inspiring each other."

White Unstoppable

Hoover also had two opinions on other members of the team: first, "Nobody's going to stop Hubie, that's out of the question;" secondly, "If we play team ball, it's all over."

In conclusion, Tom had an answer to the abuse he has received and may receive in the future, "Whether I play like Wilt Chamberlain, or you write like Walter Winchell, there will still be people who get on us."

"I've shot off my mouth, now I've got to prove myself," Hoover concluded.

On paper, the team fattened by the addition of Galia and Hoover, looks devastating. It might not be. The 'Cats lose their best rebounder and although he wasn't at his best in the last games, still his loss will be felt. The key is Hoover. If Tom doesn't come through the 'Cats will not have the overpowering board strength that they are counting on, and the whole team will be slowed down. A great deal rests on his shoulders.

Furious Scramble

It appears that there should be a furious scramble for starting positions next year, and those positions may be fairly steady for Severance, "like Casey Stengle," believes in sticking with a winning combination.

The real key to next year's success or failure, lies in the human qualities, the intangibles. The team must blend.

It has been proven time and again that individualism is costly in the long run. Look what happened to Providence. Fantasticly gifted Johnny Egan cost the Friars the NIT championship when he tried to put the icing on the final game cake all by himself. The cake fell. And they should have walked away with the tourney.

Individualism seems the only real threat to the 'Cats next year. In any event, it should be interesting.

Horses Aces Lasso 'Mural Crown

by Hank Schultz

Last December saw the start of another year of Villanova intramural basketball. March 16, 3 months and 480 games later, it was all over, and the new champs were crowned. John Gallen's "Horses Aces" beat the Small Five of Fred Weile and Mike Marinak, 33-26. In the game, played last Wed. on the Field House court, the Aces jumped off to an early lead, which they kept through the entire game. The game was a hard fought affair, and, though never ahead, the Small Five made it a game worth watching.

After ten minutes of one-sided ball, the Small Five called time with the score 11-3, favor of the Aces. As soon as they returned to the court, the Small Five started hustling. A flashy layup by Weile, made it 11-5. Then a jumper by Weile and a set shot by Ron Dobies brought the score to 11-9. This was the closest they came.

The Horses Aces decided it was getting too close, and decided to do something about it. A foul shot by Jim Rolls, followed by a tap-in by the same man, and an outside shot made it 16-9. After five minutes without a score, the Five scored again, and fought hard to get closer before the half. A nice steal by Weile went for naught, as Marinak missed the shot, and Rolls rebounded for the Aces. In trying to get the ball, Dobies fouled the Aces' Cona, who calmly sank two shots in a one-on-one situation. The clock, which by intramural rules runs even during foul shots, ran out at this point, and the Horses Aces held an 18-11 halftime lead.

After the ten minute break, both teams came back on the court determined to run the the other team right off the court. Both defenses were tight, which kept the scoring down. All through the half, they exchanged goals almost evenly. Several times the Small Five seemed to be on the verge of a rally, but each time the Aces came through with timely plays.

Yes, you're seeing correctly! Double exposure illustrates typical Intramural offense and defense, i.e., everyone — everywhere!

With tricky little Ed Monahan handling the ball, the Small Five looked very much improved over the first half. But the tight defense and stronger rebounding of the Aces kept them outside. The only time they successfully worked the ball inside in the second half was on a 'cool' play by Weile, who faked out Jim Rolls and scampered by him for the score. The Aces' Keeley stood out in the second half, as he played well, both on offense and defense. He handled the ball well, and late in the game, broke up several Small Five plays. Keeley had been hit in the face late in the first half, and he seemed destined to sit out the game. Then with ten minutes to go, and the Small Five hounding them, the Aces put Keeley back in. Moments after his return, he got into the thick of the action. Jim Rolls pulled down a rebound, spun around, and fired the Small Five team for the two pointer.

For a while, both teams slacked off, and the Ace's 8 point lead seemed more than enough. Then, with 5 minutes to go, Weile fed Marinak who sank it. Monahan's two-pointer brought them within 4 points at 30-26 with 3 minutes left. This proved to be the last score for the Little People. Keeley's foul shot made it 31-26, and time was running out. The desperate Five fouled Keeley while trying to get the ball. He missed his shot, but Rolls tapped in the rebound for the final score of the game.

The high man for the game was Weile, who scored 8 points for the losers. The Aces' high was 7, scored by both Keeley and Cona. The rebounding was controlled by Rolls, who pulled down 19. Weile grabbed 14 for the Small Five, while John Gallen helped Rolls by snaring 9 for the winners. Captain Gallen, incidentally, was thrown into the showers fully dressed by his jubilant team.

This game differed from all other intramural games in three ways. First, there were time outs. Each team was allowed one per half. Secondly, the halftime pause was lengthened to ten minutes. But the last and greatest difference was in the brand of officiating. Jim Moran, who was bouncing around more than the basketball, was the capable umpire. He was very competently assisted by Bob Haverlin.

The Aces earned the bid for the title by knocking off Reagan's Raiders, 46-36, in the semi-final game. In this game, Rolls was the big gun, scoring 12 points, and, though no count was made of the rebounds, he got more than his share. Mitchell, who scored only 2 points against the Small Five, came through with 8 in the semi-final game. Also among the high scorers were Meakin with 7 and Moore with 6. For the Raiders, Pete Federico scored 9 for the team high, followed by team captain Tom Wall and Connor with 7 each.

The game, though hard fought, was never close, as the Aces took an early lead and kept it. They were leading 22-15 at the half, and at one point led by 13 points.

Early in the second half, the lead was narrowed to 5 points, but the Raiders could not get any closer.

With the basketball season over, and spring on its way, the intramural department has laid plans for the softball leagues. The games will start March 29, and continue into May.

Entry blanks are available on all bulletin boards or in the Intramural office. These must be filled out and turned in by March 25, and no late entries will be accepted.

Spring Training In Snow Poses Problem For Mahan

On Thursday March 31, the cry "Play Ball" will echo through Villanova's new baseball diamond.

Before this happy event takes place coach Art Mahan has several things to do. Number one, he must hope for either man made or act of God melting of the snow on the new field. Number two, he must introduce his forty odd variety hopefuls to the new field and some old basic fundamentals. Number three, he must select a starting nine from a veteran group of varsity candidates.

Thus far, last year's Big Five champions have been able to get only as far as the tennis courts for outside practice.

Here and in the gym the basic fundamentals are being worked out. This brings up the problem of selecting the nine starting players.. This year it is a hard job with only three men graduating from last year's squad.

The first problem seems to be first-base This spot was left vacant by Captain George Emma who has since signed with the New York Yankees. One of the prime candidates is hard hitting lefty, Bill Platco who was a reserve last year and helped at first and in the outfield.

Next the rest of the infield seems to be fairly deep with the two veteran mainstays Freddy (always ready) Anthony and Bobby (Rabbit) Klinck heading the list, Don McGinley, Al Melega, and Danny Wrenn are following close behind.

BASEBALL GAME
VILLANOVA

GETTYSBURG
Thursday. March 31

Moving to the outfield the Wildcats really look strong. The strong arms and bats of Ed Monahan, Paul Borian, Joe Cramer, Andy Meade and Tom Griffith, that figured in the 'cats 12-8 record, are all back.

Back to the infield to the pitchers and catchers who will see service this season. Behind the plate there is a strong silent figure returned from last year's team. He was only a soph but was the fist string catcher the entire season. He doesn't say much but his bat was the loudest on the team last year. Jack Fahey smashed out a booming .415 average. A soph this year, Al Weigand is a strong contender for battery duty.

Pitchers on the right side of the mound include Ed Morehouser, Harry Neff and Tom Prestoure. Big Harry & Co. are expected to help fill the gap left by the loss of Joe Michill and Nal Bauser.

On the left side of the mound the sun is really shining. Lee Parry a top notch hurler of two seasons is back and ready to go. Fearsome Frank Kreutzer, a mainstay on last year's mound staff is back humming his great fast ball. Then there is last but far from least a sophomore lefty named Phil Fidalgo who should help the 'Cats be the quickest left handed outfield on the East coast.

All in all it looks like the 'Cats baseball team is pretty strong but this is on paper so let's hold our praise 'till we see how strong they are in the field.

'CATS BATS

Mike Mullen has signed up as a manager for the coming season . . . Coach Art Mahan besides being pitching, catching, outfield and infield coach has become a medic—fixing up several indoor practice casualties. . . . If you think the coach has a lot of jobs, check trainer Jake Neven. The last time we looked in he was taking care of football, baseball, and track athletes along with a basketball player and a couple of intramural casualties.

Former Speaker of House Scheduled For Law Forum

Representative Joseph W. Martin, former Speaker of the House of Representatives and former Republican minority leader in the House, will address the Villanova Law Forum on Tuesday, April 19, at 8:30 p.m.

This is the sixth and last in the current forum series conducted by the Law School.

Martin

Martin had served as minority leader until the last election, when he was replaced by Rep. Charles Halleck.

House and Senate

Martin was born in North Attleboro, Mass. His initial experience in politics was as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives in 1912. He served two years and later was elected to the Senate, 1915-1917.

Martin has been a member of the 69th through 83rd Congresses. In 1936, he was eastern manager of the Republican National Campaign. In 1937 and 1938, he was chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee.

Congressman Martin was elected Republican Leader of the House in 1939 and was made Speaker of the House in 1947, 1948 and 1953. Except for the 50th and 83rd Congresses, he was minority leader of the House.

Permanent Chairman

At Philadelphia in 1940, he was chosen permanent chairman of the Republican National Convention, and in the same year elected chairman of the Republican National Committee.

In 1942 he resigned as chairman of the Republican National Committee but was chosen again in 1948.

Martin was also permanent chairman for the National Conventions at Chicago in 1944, 1947-48, 1952, and 1956.

Handbook Planned For Future Freshmen

The Student Activities Committee has revealed tentative plans to prepare a Student Activities Handbook for distribution to next year's freshman class at regisration.

As proposed by the Committee, the Handbook would consist of short statements of the aims, purposes, and ideals of all organizations on campus.

Sal DiBlasio and Jim Kearney of the Committee has stated that "This idea is brought up periodically but always seems to die from lack of interest."

"This year, however," Di Blasio stated, "we have started with a survey which indicated that almost all organizations would be in favor of the Handbook. Thus we feel we are starting with favorable backing."

Juniors Announce Plans For Mothers' Day Fete

The main activities for May 2, junior Mothers' Day, have been announced by co-chairmen Jim Strazzella and Bill Cassin.

The day will begin when the mothers, after receiving corsages, attend an 11:00 High Mass with their sons. The Mass, to be sung by the V.U. Singers, will be celebrated in the Grotto. Prior to a catered dinner in the Field House, the class memorial will be dedicated. At the dinner, a lasting favor to commemerate the day will be presented to the mothers.

Tickets for this "Day for Mom on a Silver Platter" will go on sale after the Easter vacation.

Edwin M. Wright Addresses IRS Tomorrow Night

Edwin Milton Wright, of the Department of State, will be guest speaker for the International Relations Society of Villanova tomorrow evening.

The Rev. John A. Klokotka, O.S.A., President, will introduce Wright, who will speak on "Current Problems in International Relations." The talk will be delivered in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall at 7:30.

Wright, a native of Iran, received his A.B. from Wooster College, his M.A. from Columbia and has done graduate work at the School of Oriental Studies, American University, Cairo.

History Teacher

Before going with the Department of State, he was Lecturer in History at Columbia University; research analyst in the Office of Strategic Services; and a Lieutenant Colonel in the United States Army in the Near East.

He joined the State Department in 1946 as a Country Specialist. Later he served as Special Assistant under the Assistant Secretary for Near Eastern, South Asian, and African Affairs.

In 1955, he took the position of Head of the Department of Career Studies at the Foreign Service Institute. He is now head of the Dept. of Career Studies.

Worked With Voice

Over and above this, Mr. Wright assisted in the organization of the Voice of America broadcasts for the Near East, and is a fequent lecturer at the U. S. Military and Naval Academies and John Hopkins University.

Gallagher Lecture

Dr. Donald Gallagher, vice chairman of the Philosophy Dept., wil speak to the Christian Student Movement next May 1 at the Bryn Mawr Converse House.

He will speak on the Christian Moral Philosophy of Jacques Maritain. The C.S.M. is composed of students from Haverford, Bryn Mawr, and Swarthmore.

Dr. anh Mrs. Gallagher are presently completing a book on Jacques Maritain.

Kennedy Swamps Nixon In Villanova Presidential Poll

Villanova students have overwhelmingly chosen Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) for their favorite candidate for the next president of the United States.

Kennedy

In a poll conducted by the VILANUVAN, Villanova allowed Sen. Kennedy to crush Vice President Richard Nixon by a near 3-to-2 margin. The final tally was 639 to 371.

Two-time candidate Adlai Stevenson finished third with a relatively insignificant total of 29 votes. Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York received 24, and Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) received 8.

The poll was conducted with the aid of pledges from Delta Pi Mu, Villanova Arts fraternity.

The ballots were colored by a variety of write-in votes naming such announced and unannounced candidates as: Harry Byrd, Sen. Edmund Muskie, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, Gov. Robert Meyner, and Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, among others.

Many students offered reasons for selecting their candidates. A significant number admitted that they were of Republican sentiment, but were crossing party lines to vote for Sen. Kennedy on the basis of choosing "the best man for the job."

Remarkably few Democrats switched to vote for Nixon or any of the Republican nominees.

"Let's face it," said one person, "Kennedy's Catholic and even though we're a minority group we're large enough to rate at least one Catholic president."

A junior English major voted for Nixon for this reason: "Kennedy will win, I know, but even though I'm a Democrat, I can't stand Kennedy winning in a Catholic school just because he's Catholic. My vote for Nixon is a protest vote against such stupidity."

Other Vote-Getters:

Strom Thurmond, Harry Truman, Yogi Berra, Alfred Nueman, Sen. Strom Thurmond, Jim Merikangas, Earl Long, Eugene Debs, Stan Musial, Orphan Annie, Dr. Khouri, Margaret Sanger, and Bob DeLisa.

Cardinal Newman Today—Part 2

Arts Study Should Precede Any Technical Education

By Lou Refacco

In his introductory remarks in a former issue of the VILLANOVAN, Mr. Jerome J. Fischer of the Villanova English Department provided his ideas concerning John Cardinal Newman's The Idea of a University.

Primary among these was that Mr. Fischer still considered Newman's definition the classic statement of the ideal University and yet he reluctantly observed that it was not "practicable" in our society.

Asked to elucidate more specifically on Newman's definition, he answered that a University was "a place of teaching universal knowledge. Its object is, above everything else, at least implicity, the subject matter of its teaching." He reminds us that these branches are not isolated from and independent of one another but form a whole or system.

To quote Newman again, "they run into each other, and complete each other, and . . . in proportion to our view of them as a whole, is the exactness and trustworthiness of the knowledge which they separately convey." The source of imparting knowledge to the intellect in this way is what Newman calls its culture, and the knowledge which is both its instrument and result he calls Liberal Knowledge.

Mr. Fischer also suggested that we must be conscious of the fact that Cardinal Newman lived a century ago and that he was associated with universities in another country.

The most recent attempt at a plan similar to Newman's was the "Great Books Program" that was employed for a while at the University of Chicago and still is, after a fashion, at St. John's College in Annapolis. Also a few select Liberal Arts Colleges still continue to offer only courses that strive for the goal Cardinal Newman proposed.

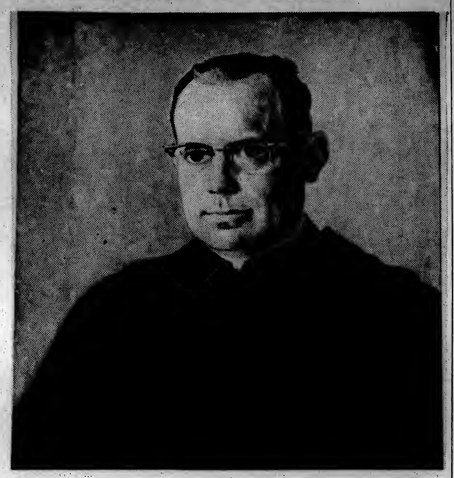
Samulewicz Named Winner Of Second Drizin Award

Tom Samulewicz was presented with the second annual Chuck Drizin Award at the tenth basketball banquet of the Villanova Club of South Jersey last Thursday night.

Samulewicz was cited for his scholastic achievement, competitive spirit and intangibles that "exemplify the Villanova gentleman."

White Most Valuable

Hubie White was named the most valuable player by his teammates. The sophomore was presented with the award by Charles Boyle, class of 1930.



Samulewicz was elected by a four man panel: Rev. Joseph Kemme, O.S.A., Al Severance, Coach, and Jim Murray, VILLANOVAN sports editor.

Richie Kaminski and Jim Huggard were named as the 1960-61 squad co-captains.

Bill Campbell, sportscaster for WCAU was toastmaster at the banquet.

Oil Portrait of President

This new oil portrait of Rev. John A. Klekotka, President, painted by Edward Lis, was unveiled Sunday at Friends of Library meeting.

Gallagher To Deliver Three Lectures At Local Colleges In Near Future

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher, vice-chairman of the Philosophy Department, is slated to deliver three lectures before various groups in the near future.

He will address the Philosophy Club of Lincoln University, Oxford, Pa., on April 26. His topic will be "Existentialism."

On April 27, Dr. Gallagher will deliver one of a series of talks at Holy Family College, Torresdale, Pa. Here he will speak on "Karl Jaspers and Existentialism."

The third lecture will take place on May 1 at the Bryn Mawr Converse House, when he will explain the Catholic viewpoint on Christian moral philosophy before the Christian Student Movement.

Canadian Prof Will Deliver Augustine Speech

The second annual Saint Augustine Lecture will be delivered by Dr. Raymond Klibanski, Professor of Philosophy at McGill University. It will be given on at 3 p.m. on April 23 in the Field House.

Dr. Klibansky will speak on the general topic of the role of Augustine and Augustiniaism in developing and perpetuating the Platonic tradition. He is a foremost authority on the history of Platonism.

Begun Last Year

The inaugural lecture of the series, "Saint Augustine on Personality", was delivered in 1959 by the eminent scholar, Rev. Paul Henry, S. J., of the Catholic Institute de Paris. Each annual lecture is published in book form by the Macmillan Company.

Professor Klibansky has been awarded two doctorates from the German University of Heidelberg. He has also attended the Universities of Kiel and Hamburg. Dr. Klibansky's career as an educator started in 1929 with an assignment at Heidelberg. He has held important lectureships at the universities of Oxford, London, Zurich, Rome and Louvain. He is also a former Director of Studies at the Warburg Institute at the University of London.

Among Klibansky's more important original works are: The Continuity of the Platonic Tradition and Plato's Parmenides in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance.

Rev. John A. Klekotka, president blesses new darkroom Monday. With him is Rev. John A. Schoener.

Last Monday saw the opening of Villanova's new Photography Department along with a blessing ceremony and an open house.

Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of the University performed the blessing ceremony.

The new unit consists of an office-portrait studio and darkroom and is located in the east wing basement of Sullivan Hall.

The Photography Department is now an independent organization and has established a new and intricate system of filling the school's everyday need of photographic work.

All men are now operating within their respective specialties and assignments are scheduled and photos are processed systematically.

The new system has been made possible by the new equipment such as the new Omega enlarger, the Crown graphic and drum dryer.

Law School Tests Here

Villanova has been designated as a testing center for the nationwide administration of the Law School Admission Test on Saturday, April 9th, Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein announced. The test will be administered in Garey Hall, the Law School Building.

The test is required for all prospective Law School applicants. Candidates must file their complete applications with the Educational Testing Service, 20 Nassau Street, Princeton, New Jersey, at least ten days before the date of the examination.

Candidates may procure application forms and information bulletins at the office of the Registrar of the Law School.

Profs Attend Confab

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher and Dr. James F. Anderson of the Philosophy Department, both members of the National Executive Council of the American Catholic Association, will attend the Association's annual convention at St. Louis University on April 18 and 19.

O'Shea Lectures Clubs

Dr. Robert O'Shea of the Philosophy Department was the guest speaker at the recent Chemistry and Physics Clubs Communion Breakfast. The topic of Dr. O'Shea's discourse was "The Relation Between Science and Philosophy."

Library Friends Meet

On Sunday, April 3, the Friends of the Villanova Library held their Spring meeting.

This organization, under the direction of Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., has been of great assistance to the Villanova Library.

Sunday's meeting was presided over by William T. Cooke, and the principle speaker was Miss Dorothy Grafly, noted editor and publisher of the magazine Art in Focus.

The very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A. also spoke.

The meeting began at 2:30 with the unvailing of a portrait of Father Klekotka.

Science Conference

The Annual Eastern Colleges Science Conference will be held on April 21, 22, 23, and 24 at Hunter College in New York. Chemistry majors John Schmidt, Joseph Reman and Edmund Richezza will represent Villanova as speakers.

Edward Zehler and John Hauser will participate as official delegates. Other chemistry students will attend with Dr. K. F. O'Driscoll as moderator of the group.

Jesuit Speaks Here

The Rev. A. H. Scheller, S. J. addressed a group of students interested in social work in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall on Monday last.

The Jesuit Speaker is presently director of the School of Social Service at St. Louis University.

I.C.G. at Conference

Representatives of the Villanova Chapter of I.C.G. recently attended a student conference sponsored by the Citizenship Clearing House.

The Villanova delegates who attended are Larry Ruth, chapter president, Bob Piccone and Ed McLaughlin.

Fr. Scherz To Speak

The Reverend Gustav Scherz, CSSR., will address the National Science Foundation Class on Friday, April 8th at 3:30 p.m. in 215 Mendel Hall. The topic of the discourse will center around the achievements of Nocolaus Steno, a 17th century anatomist and geologist.

Fr. Scherz, who is from Copenhagen, was recently appointed Regent Professor at the University of California. He has previously lectured at Yale, Dartmouth, Marquette and the University of Illinois.

Debators Reach Semis

Richard R. McDonough, moderator of the Beta Gamma Debating Society, has announced the results of the recent American University Tournament.

The Villanova team of Joe Liggera and Terry Stratman registered a 7-9 record in the tournament, which consisted in four rounds of both affirmative and negative debate.

The defeat of the Liggera-Stratman team eliminated Villanova from a chance to compete in the finals of the national debating championship.

liberal education requires little explanation or defense. The issue to be considered is the emphasis that is placed on different sets of college curricula.

Fischer

Mr. Fischer said that "Newman implies that instruction or professional training belongs to some institution other than a University; his whole plan seems to suggest professional training subsequent to a Liberal Education."

But we live in a society oriented toward the pragmatic or practical. People today go to school to learn some method of earning a living and they want to learn this in as short a time as possible.

Practical-Minded

Said Mr. Fisher: "Keep in mind that the very structure of our society today militates against the primacy of a liberal education as opposed to a practical, 'professional' one. In spite of this, Newman's ideas might still be put to use; this would, however, involve a complete reorganization of our educational system."

The plan would not be as dramatic a reorganization as might be supposed from a superficial study. The change would be based on the conviction that the present school system is not geared to allow the average student to realize his full potential and definitely offers no challenge for the talented one.

If we may borrow an idea from a recent lecture by Dr. James F. Anderson of the Philosophy Department, education has become a "product" in our social structure. Compulsory education and our economy of abundance have possibly compromised the quality of our school system.

Suggested Curriculum

In Mr. Fischer's opinion, grade school training could very easily be compressed into six years. The normal four year high school term could be shortened to three years. A liberal education on the college level could occupy the next three years, after which the student could embark on a course of study in a technical or professional "institute."

His "institute" training might take anywhere from two to four years. He would thus take no longer to complete his education than he does now, but his intellectual faculties would be greatly enhanced.

After outlining this plan Mr. Fischer concluded with the remark that, "such a system might produce Newman's Christian gentleman, in our world."

Donahue Named Editor Of Junior Week Edition

Michael Donahue, Associate Editor of the VILLANOVAN, has been named editor of the Junior Week edition of the newspaper, according to Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., moderator.

Donahue, a General Arts dayhop from Norristown, Pa., said that the Junior Week issue will come out on Monday, May 2, which is Mother's Day.

Assignments Out

"All the assignments have been handed out to various members of the Junior Class, not necessarily just those juniors currently on the VILLANOVAN staff," he said.

"However, I'm counting on those juniors who are presently on the staff for editorial assistance," the Junior Week editor remarked.

According to Donahue, today is the deadline for all stories. The format of the paper will be along traditional lines "with the possible exception of more overall humor in the articles."

"I do have one innovation in mind which, if effected, will give the 1960 Junior week paper at least one strikingly original element," Donahue hinted, without divulging it.

Donahue

"Because of their efforts I think I can cut down appreciably on the 66 consecutive hours spent at the printer's by Wolf and his staff last year," Donahue added hopefully.

Bob Brothers Is NOT The Typical Collegian

Bob Brothers is a perfect example of what the typical college student is not. In this day and age when college is mentioned, we think of carefree crew-cut figures in low cut sneakers, "khakis" and boat neck sweaters who see fall as a time for pre and post game parties and spring at the first sign of picnic weather.

Bob, a senior Arts major, is a quiet, business-like person who has constantly caught the campus eye with his imaginative stunts.

In addition to being a colorful figure both on and off campus, Bob has contributed his literary skill to the VILLANOVAN mainly in the humorous vein. He also held the office of President of the Russian Club last year and works as Assistant City Editor of the Phoenixville Daily Republican.

Bob has many definite ideas about life and no inhibitions about them. Last year he started a move to repeal the 19th Amendment, the one that has to do with women voting. He thinks that women should be treated with love and affection but not as co-workers.

"That's the reason behind the beard I grew Freshman year," he explained. "This is the only thing I can do that a woman can't. I shaved because social pressure was brought to bear on me."

Led by a great interest in Russian politics, Bob has taken many courses here that had to do with the U.S.S.R.

Upon graduation, Bob hopes to go to Russia as a correspondent. He has interviews scheduled with Time magazine and the New York Herald-Tribune for this purpose.

BROTHERS

Perhaps he will be best remembered for his unusual Christmas cards one of which shows President Eisenhower, Khrushchev, Elvis Presley, and himself arm in arm radiating Yuletide warmth.

Bob testifies that his three years at Villanova has been among the most enjoyable in his life, but he feels something is still lacking.

"I would like to sever my umbilical chord from society until such time as it 'shapes up'."

Bob Brothers may not be the typical campus character, but he might be the most interesting.

Lettau Announces the Dates for Elections

Nominations for class officers and Student Council representatives will be held April 21, Herb Lettau announced at last Wednesday's Student Congress meeting.

Lettau,, co-chairman of the elections' Committee, then disclosed that the students will elect the senior, junior, and sophomore presidents, vice-presidents, secretaries, treasurers and representatives from the April 21 nominees in the general election May 12.

Council Chairman Tom Hoffman also revealed the Council election procedure. Nominations will be placed at the Senate meeting of May 16.

Election of the 1960-61 Council cabinet including the chairman, will be held at the congress meeting of May 18.

Herman Plays for Jrs.; Allen Judges Queens

The Sylvan Herman orchestra will play at the Junior Dinner Dance for the Broadwood Hotel, May 7.

This was revealed jointly by Tim McNamar, Chairman of the dinner dance and Bob Scalia, class president.

Scalia also disclosed that the Junior Queen judge will not be Bob Hope as reported in the March 23 edition of the VILLANOVAN. The judging will be done by Steve Allen.

McAdams To Get Villanovan Award

One of Philadelphia's ace newsmen has been selected as this year's recipient of the St. Augustine Award.

Leonard McAdams of the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER will receive the award at the VILLANOVAN-WVIL Dinner Dance to be held on April 23 at the Warwick Hotel.

The award is presented annually to a prominent Catholic in the field of journalism and communications.

McAdams' career in journalism, which runs back to 1924, has encompassed such major and sensational news stories as the Gold-Adams spy case, the Philadelphia Homes for the Aged investigation, and the recent Kane-Doyle murder and Maryanne Mitchell murder.

Journalistic Posts

After graduation from St. Joseph's Prep in 1924, he held posts on the EVENING BULLETIN, the CATHOLIC STANDARD AND TIMES, and the now-defunct PUBLIC LEDGER.

He joined the New Jersey Edition of the INQUIRER in 1926 as a Camden police reporter, and shortly afterwards experienced what he calls "the most tragic incident of my career."

"I went into the police station one day and was met by a distraught woman—almost hysterical. About ten feet from her, on a morgue slab, was a little boy's battered body. He was obviously dead.

"She was his mother, and she didn't realize the kid was dead. There was no one around in a position to tell her.

"We newsmen are supposed to be a hard-bitten lot," he concluded, "but when you meet with a situation like that, it isn't easy to be cynical like you're supposed to."

Prof. George Delivers Final Civil War Lecture Tonight

Dr. Henry George will conclude the History Department's annual lecture series this evening with an address on "The Lincoln Paradox."

George

Dr. George has stated that his speech will concern "aspects of the character and career of Lincoln which are not usually stressed." Lincoln's role as a "dictator" during the Civil War, and such traits as his lack of patience and use of sarcasm will enter the discussion.

A noted Lincoln scholar, Dr. George became associated with Villanova in September of last year. Since then, he has discovered hitherto unknown letters by Lincoln, which will form the basis of a study on Northern propaganda during the Civil War.

Previously, he has published a study of the Leonard Volk life mask of Lincoln, a biographical sketch of a Lincoln Scholar, and a work on Lincoln, John Wilkes Booth, and the Theatre.

Dr. George is a member of the National Lincoln-Civil War Council, the Illinois State Historical Society, the Pennsylvania Historical Society, and the Lincoln group of Boston.

The general theme of this year's series of lectures has been a consideration of the significant events of a century ago, and an analysis of the nature of the crisis which led to the Civil War.

Manno Cautions Against Radicals

The relation of the fanaticism of the Civil War era as compared to some of the radical movements present in America today was discussed by Dr. Francis J. Manno at the initial lecture sponsored by the Department of History and Political Science.

"Radical thinking of the nature expressed by groups such as national associations for the advancement of one racial group or another can very well destroy the United States," said Dr. Manno.

Another aspect of the Civil War period discussed in the lecture was the significant but practically unrecognized role of John Greenleaf Whittier as an abolitionist writer.

Greatest Crisis

Dr. Manno quoted Henry A. Poenmann as saying that during the greatest crisis in the history of the Republic, Whittier hammered out poems as weapons for a moral crusade and that he exerted more influence than any other literary figure except possibly Lowell and Harriet Beecher Stowe in the crusade against slavery.

Manno

In his later years following the emancipation of the slaves, Whittier quietly withdrew from the national scene. He realized that the main purpose of his life insofar as it influenced the welfare of his people had been achieved, according to Manno.

Dr. Manno also discussed the tempo of the times in 1860. He emphasized the excitement caused a bit of political news: Abraham Lincoln had been elected President of the United States.

Lincoln Election

Retracing the steps leading to the election of Lincoln, Dr. Manno began with a study of the Republican candidates who were bidding for the nomination. William Seward, a most prominent candidate was rejected because it was felt that his radicalism would repel the voters it hoped to attract. Another candidate who was given serious consideration was Justice McLean of the Supreme Court. He was rejected, however, because of his age.

Dean Probes War Causes

"The Kansas-Nebraska Act was the most disastrous piece of legislation ever passed. Not only did it re-open old wounds but also rubbed salt into them."

This comment concerning a cause for the breakdown of the spirit of compromise prior to the Civil War was one of many expressed by Mr. Bernard Dean at the second lecture sponsored by the Department of History and Political Science last Wednesday evening.

Dean stated that the compromises which had delayed an earlier conflict were based on a two-fold problem: slavery and territorial expansion. The problem of slavery only came to the forefront after the invention of the cottin gin. Before this the question of slavery was treated with indifference in the South.

Territory Expansion

The problem of territorial expansion actually began with the desire of Missouri to be admitted to the Union as a slave state. Thus for the first time in history the advancement of slavery became interwoven with national growth, according to Dean.

Dean

The Missouri problem, however, was solved by the Compromise of 1820, better known as the Missouri Compromise. The years following the signing saw little controversy over the slavery-territorial issue.

The conflict reappeared again with California applying for admission to the Union. As before the issue was settled by what came to be known as the Compromise of 1850.

Dean added that the "tragic decade" which followed saw the United States torn between the opposing camps of the North, which favored abolition or free-soilism, and the South, which favored the extension of slavery.

Attracted Populace

In the North the "Free Soil Theory" attracted the majority of the populace Abraham Lincoln, the Republican candidate for the presidency was a proponent of this doctrine. Because of this and his virtual anonymity outside his section, his name failed to appear on many ballots in the South.

The Kennedy Bloc

It's fun to watch so many American Catholics lose control when a Catholic candidate for the presidency is hit on the "religion issue." They cry for justice, saying that "a candidate's religion should have no bearing on the election at all; all bigotry aside, you must vote for the best man for the job."

On that hypothesis, it would follow that the Catholic too, is bound to disregard the factor of religion and vote for the most qualified man. It follows in theory, but apparently not in practice.

Take the Wisconsin primary election of yesterday. Sen. Kennedy won, receiving the "Catholic vote" as expected. At last it seems that the "Catholic vote" can probably hold its own with the Labor bloc, the Farm bloc, and the Anything bloc—a dubious honor. Newspapers last night disclosed how Catholic Republicans made a mass exodus across party lines, with the noblest excuse ever: to offset the defecting biased Democrats who wouldn't vote for a Catholic.

As published in this issue, Villanovans, in a presidential poll, overwhelmingly flocked to their tow-headed, co-religionist from Massachusetts.

Now, we admit that Kennedy might have won on the votes of Villanovans who conscientiously suspended their religious affinities long enough to arrive at an objective, intelligent verdict.

Then again, we have ample evidence that religion did influence the outcome. A startling number of students candidly confessed to crossing party lines, to join the Catholic bloc. As one person put it: "It's about time we get a Catholic in there." And Catholics are so aghast when non-Catholics raise the religion issue.

Kennedy's ideas on Labor, Business, Communism, Russia, Algeria, Parochial schools, bomb-testing, and education appeared irrelevant to most Villanovans—Kennedy is one of us, they felt.

Something should be done soon to allay that consummate fear held by certain Protestants (especially clergy) that American Catholicism will rally solidly to a Catholic candidate de facto. The Protestant is understandably disquieted when he pictures this formidable bloc of voters laying siege to the White House.

Just once we'd like to see a Catholic university state a ponular preference for Nixon (IF such a student body sincerely prefers him after intelligent deliberation.)

The mock convention of I.C.G. last month became farcial when Kennedy won and Nixon wasn't even nominated!

When Catholics expect objectivity from Protestant voters, it seems that Queensbury rules require similar cogitation on the part of Catholics. Maturity in this respect is long in coming, but without it, the coming election will become quite a show with an assortment of emotional outbursts providing the orchestration.

The Integration Issue

By DENIS CARDONE

More than likely this fall there will be several student issues in the campaigning of both parties. The farm bills, federal aid to education, the defense budget will be badgered back and forth. Conspicuous by its absence will be the segregation vs. integration issue. This remains as a political "hot-potato" and its solution to the Nixons and Kennedys will seem as formidable as the Gordian knot.

Several have acted on it; Governor Faubus has retreated to historical precedent and chosen Alexander's method; others have been burned by it, notably Lyndon Johnson; but most have been discreet and have avoided it.

The seemingly prudent recourse of the latter and the rashness of the other two citations obviously have not been the solution. This is not to suggest that there exists a specific plan solution that would skillfully reconcile the Negro-white issue rather it is another cry in the wilderness deploring it.

To gain a fresh and sobering outlook on the situation one can go to the words of Reverend Walter J. Ong ("American Catholic Crossroads", MacMillan, N. Y.)

Father Ong's observations lay bare one embarrassing fact: the U. S. now stands last in the proportional number of refugees from Hungary and other oppressed countries. These people have heard of the racial difficulties here and not wanting to go to another hell-on-earth, are settling in England, Germany, and France instead.

Other commentators have pointed out that the virtually untapped natural resources of Africa will be lost to Communism if for no other reason than the racial issue. The strife in Africa now is only a recent manifestation of a continent that has been seething for quite sometime. Although the U. S. is only indirectly concerned as a Western nation, these people are very sensitive as to what they hear of us. Imagine the reception of the news of the Little Rocks, the Knoxvilles, the Arlingtons.

Previously this inner conflict was just that, inner, but now with most of the continent gaining independence, Africa's feelings must be reckoned with, and she must be appreciated, for she can now act with international ramifications.

This is just a sampling of the disfavor over the American racial situation. The burden of resolving this issue will not be a light one for the next president. Resolve he must, for the situation is no longer a domestic one, "trouble in our own back yard," it is one that is slowly being felt all over the world.

Letter to the Editor

McCarthyism Was Sorely Mistreated

I congratulate you. Between the usual number of pages of nonsense, you have managed to include a little political thought. Moreover, you have properly rejected the often misused cliche, "de mortuis nil nisi bonum."

Where the individual represents a period of history, the passing of that individual should not terminate discussion of the era. Of course, I am referring to your issue of March 23, given over to publicizing the Belle Masque's production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," a play which you proudly recall was "inspired by the 'witch hunts' of Senator McCarthy." By employing the VILLANOVAN as a sounding board for your sentiments, you have shamed both yourself and your University.

At the outset, let us put aside McCarthy, and look at your "method" of treating him.

First you mourn that witnesses before the Senate Special Investigating Committee were "torn between telling the truth and being punished, and lying to save (themselves) and loved ones." Has it ever occured to you that these individuals might have committed acts quite deserving of punishment, or that honorable men don't lie to save themselves?

Then, while quoting freely from "Commentary," a publication of the American Jewish Committee, which incidentally, in its March issue condems the famed Oberammergau Passion Play as anti-semitic, you falsely label the "Individualist" as "a living blacklist, condeming persons and groups critical of McCarthy."

But best of all, you have found a prophet, Arthur Miller. Yet how can the VILLANOVAN so pervert the inscription "veritas," and the cross, on which it stands? Arthur Miller, who has admitted that he was a Communist, and from indications has never regretted the fact; who spits on the capitalistic society, as is evidenced in his plays, is your hero, and by implication, is a hero of the University. How do you so completely ignore this "ponderous message," as you call it, which Miller spouts forth?

Perhaps you have paid him a greater tribute than you realize when you boast that he "has had a successful career as a playwright." For what greater evidence of success could we have whose goal is to spread to the world the propoganda of the evils of a capitalistic society, particularly that society in the United States, than to have a Catholic university see fit to help him spread his propoganda through the staging of his play, and to have that University's paper choose his as its prophet.

"Word of the Day"

Many opinions have been voiced recently in regard to "The Word Of The Day," a one minute capsule which is heard daily on Radio Station WIBG.

One of the most publicized opinions is that of Joe Conlin, whose article appeared in the last issue of the VILLANOVAN. To the unaware reader, this article was very informative and deserved consideration.

However, one of the most disturbing accusations is that which claims the producers of this series are making a futile attempt to culturally enlighten the lethargic masses.

It is agreed that the highbrow and the Ivory Tower set do not make it a habit to listen to this Station but then again, the "Word Of The Day" would not necessarily be of interest to them, since their rhetoric is already highly developed.

The average homemaker constitutes the listening audience during the principal hours of broadcast for this station. And, I would call them far from dull or stupid. As for these "dim witted teenagers" he refers to in his article, they may jokingly speak of this series, but that only shows that they must acquire some knowledge from this capsule if they are able to joke about it.

We do not claim that this one minute capsule will set the world on fire, or skyrocket the sale of dictionaries, but at least, as long as a few of these "lethargic listeners" do learn something from these series, we feel that we are accomplishing our aim.

Too Much Emotion In The Potion: Masque 'Crucible'

By Tony Macklin

Two weeks ago, March 23-27, Belle Masque presented Arthur Miller's "The Crucible," in the Field House. The choice of the play coupled with the tremendous enthusiasm of the cast returned the group to prosperity.

Writing a review of the show has proved dificult for this reviewer in that his opinion does not coincide with the general view. We enjoyed the show but found it somewhat unconvincing. This was due to a lack of involvement and the inability to forget that the people on stage were actors in a play.

For us, the finest major performances came from Mary Shaffer and Bill Di Paolo. Fine-featured Miss Shaffer gave a beautiful, low-keyed performance. She has a highly distinctive voice and a naturalness that shaped a memorable Elizabeth Proctor.

Not Too Cold

Under the circumstances, the complaint that she was too icy is largely invalid, for if she had decided to emote broadly there would have been chaos on stage. It is true that more warmth in the crucial final scene might have added to its effectiveness.

Everything considered, Mary Shaffer's portrayal was the oasis in a stormy desert.

As Danforth, Bill Di Paolo showed strength, timing, and poise. His appearance involved us in the play for the only appreciable length of time.

Di Paolo was slightly limited by his youth which prevented him from appearing as aged as he should have. But his control, his vocal power and the effective use he made of his eyes made his an impressive, polished performance.

Tony Provenzano must be placed in a special classification. Provenzano has the tools and the ability. He received many raves, but we feel that he overplayed.

Too Much Strain

He portrayed John Proctor with a weighty hand, often employing grotesque gestures and hulking posturing. He manufactured a voice that rang hollow with a strained artificial quality. Provenzano has the physical appeal, but he limited himself by assuming too unnatural a pose. Perhaps this was caused by too great an effort to create sensuality.

Our real problem was that we could never forget that Provenzano was "acting."

The scene with him in it that impressed us most was the one at the table where he struggled over the commandments. He relied on sensitivity in this scene.

Generally though, Provenzano played Proctor at such a pitch that when it came time to call on great emotion, he did not have enough fresh fury left. If there had been more a contrast in the level of his playing it would have packed more of a punch.

Great Passion

Provenzano possesses tremendous intensity and enthusiasm and for many this was enough. Perhaps we were ducking too much for him to land a knockout blow, but unfortunately it never did find its mark.

Attractive blond Kathy Crane, on first impression, gave a solid but strangely unmemorable performance. The second time we saw the show we came away with a stronger impression. She is a fine actress with an expressive face. Her yellow bird scene was truly piercing.

Jack Milton, as the intellectual Reverend Hale, brought the first real breath of naturalness in a rather slow first act. His cool, saint-like appearance was very effective. He had some trouble handling the emotion, as did many of the cast members. But overall, his sometimes shaky performance was cool and sensitive enough to be quite appealing.

Scanlon Shines

Carole Scanlon made a small role glitter as the fiery and bewitching West Indian, Tituba.

Villanova freshman nurse Joanne Dynakowski (Mary Warren) offered an expressive, troubled countenance in her initial Belle Masque role. She showed enough promise to make one feel that she will be doing leads before she's through.

John McGarry (Giles Corey) showed humor and believable anger in a well-handled role and Alan Willig capably creat-

Try A Grotesque Twist

NOTE: Someone once said that the essence of written humor is the trick played on the reader's mind when the mental picture it has built up is suddenly and unexpectedly twisted in grotesque fashion. In words, it's a switcheroo, with the mind playing the sucker. Like this:

We sat there, she and I, with the light from the fireplace dancing in our eyes. Then, without speaking, she scooped up her mud pie and placed it on the coffee table at our feet.

"What will it be like when we're married?" she whispered, wiping her soft, muddy hands on my sweater. I drew her closer.

"If all goes well, darling," I said, "we'll buy that small estate in Greenwich, raise a few kids, and keep cows on the sun porch." She smiled, gave my hand a pat, and then slipped away to stir up the fire, which was melting the soles of my sneakers. Her live body, silhouetted against the dying flames, threw a soft shadow across the room, and I wanted to tell her how I loved her.

"You know how much you mean to me," I said, offering her a cigarette. She threw it in the fire and set up her Arabian water pipe.

"I know," she said, "and sometimes, when I'm alone here in the house, I start wondering about us." She struck a match and her eyes shone as she lit my mustache. "You dear," she purred, "you're too good for me. You're considerate, loving, and you look so handsome with your mustache burning that way." I took a drink and put out the fire.

"Come on, let's go out on the terrace," I suggested, helping her to her feet. She took my hand, and I led her through the French doors that opened to the patio. We stood there and gazed out over the city lights.

"A damn fly just bit me on the arm," she said, swatting away at the elusive insect. I put my arms around her, and she caught me behind the ear with her fist.

"Got the little beggar!" she exclaimed. "Tse-Tse," she said, and flicked him over the balcony. The moon was just appearing over the horizon, and I began visualizing the whole area bathed in its pale light. Down below us, darkness hid everything but the hundreds of white lights and neon signs on the main street. I glanced at her as she stood there by my side, spitting peach pits over the edge.

"Your mother thinks we should have a simple wedding," she said, "but I've always dreamed of a cathedral ceremony, with hundreds of guests and a huge reception in the downtown armory." She picked a radish from the flower box and gazed fondly at it.

"You shall have whatever your little heart desires," I murmured, toying with her sideburns, "but must you insist upon growing radishes in the flower boxes?" She smiled, and a slight breeze rippled her auburn hair. The moonlight drained the color from her cheeks, giving her an unearthly, ethereal appearance, and I saw that her eyes were wide open.

"Your eyes remind me of two billiard balls," I said, leaning against the railing. She lowered her lids and began chewing on a scallion.

"I know I'm a silly fool for asking," she said, "but tell me, have you ever loved another woman?" She placed her hand in mine.

"Let go of my hand," I cried, "you're hurting me," and I kicked her in the shoulder. We clutched at each other, and she began unraveling my sweater.

"Knit one, purl two," she chanted, and I held her close to me.

"Why must we always quarrel so?" I asked, wiping the tears from her eyes.

"Because we are lovers," she said, wiping the tears from my eyes.

"Come on," I said, "let's go back inside," and I led her through the french doors into the living room. We sat down at the piano and I romped through "Flight of the Bumble Bee."

"You're tender," she said, tucking a scallion into my breast pocket. I wanted to tell her how I hated scallions, but this was her night, and I didn't want to spoil a minute of it. The moonlight had filtered through the french doors and was covering the floor with its almost artificial light. Suddenly, she broke from my grasp and ran to the fireplace, turning her back to me.

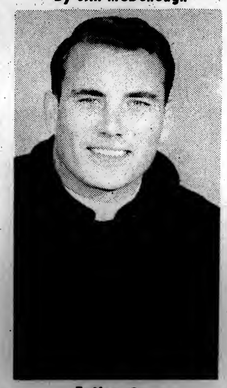
"There's something I must tell you," she said in a quavering voice.

"Yes?" I said, throwing the scallion into the wastebasket.

"The fire is out," she sobbed, throwing herself on the sofa. So I broke the coffee table and started another fire. At daybreak they found us standing there on the terrace, eating scallions and watching the sun come up.

Father Oroz Sees Cuba Growing Worse

By Jim McDonough



"Communism, as a political regime, can win the popular support because the people are not prepared against communist ideas."

The preceeding grim forcast was Rev. Policarpo Oroz's summation of the Cuban problem.

Fr. Oroz, a Spanish Augustian at Villanova who is studying for his master's in English, has just returned from the "Sugar Isle" after a five week sojourn.

Fr. Oroz reports that the Castro government has been following a communistic policy. Plantations have been divided, all businesses have been nationalized, second houses must be sold for twenty year maturable bonds, all citizens (both male and female) over the age of fourteen may be called at any time to work for the government.

Young people, quotes Fr. Oroz, are seen marching through the streets and it is said that military advisors are coming from Russia. Also, another important point to keep in mind: both Raul Castro and Che Guevara, the Minister of the Treasury, are known communists and great influences upon the policies of Castro.

Father Oroz

Fr. Oroz made it clear that Castro, himself, is not a communist. He draws great power from the fanatical Cuban peasant; however, his present position is precarious because his reforms have aleinated both the upper class and the middle class. Here Father warns Americans not to believe the middle class to be small — it isn't.

About the students Fr. Oroz stated that the Communist ideology has infiltrated the Central University of Havana. There is widespread support of humanistic and Communistic principles among the students.

In one instance, he told a student that the Pope had condemened Communism, the student replied, "I don't care what the Pope says." In addition the students have formed a Communist union.

Education in general, quotes Fr. Oroz, is below standard. The public schools have not equipped the people to recognize the subtleties and pernicious implications which underlie the present regime's program.

Only about twenty percent of the present schools are under the aegis of the church—in a country eighty-five percent Catholic. Moreover, since only about six percent of the Cubans go to mass on Sunday, it is difficult for the Church's ideas to reach the public.

True the Catholics do use

TV and Radio, but this is nullified by the fact that two Franciscan commentators favor the government's policies.

What may develop into real trouble is Castro's position toward the treasuries of the Churches. Many of the Cuban Churches have great quantities of gold and silver in the form of sacred vessels.

Castro wants these precious metals turned over to the government for the purchase of arms. If this proposal is realized, Fr. Oroz says, there will be open war between the two groups.

The result may be bad for the religion, for Father states that the people just don't care about the church. At the present, however, there exists a peaceful coexistence.

Of course Castro's recent Anti-American demonstrations were discussed. Fr. Oroz said the Cuban people do not dislike the American people, only the government.

When Eisenhower flies through South America preaching liberty and natural rights and the democratic way of life and at home Negroes are not allowed to vote, or use this cup, or learn at this school, or sit at this counter, the Cubans see the disparity.

In Europe people call the American bigoted and two-faced, but there are no Negroes in Europe. However, this is not the case in Cuba.

There are Negroes in Cuba; and there is no prejudice in Cuba. Father Oroz saw mixed couples walking in the streets. It is the same in Brazil. Fr. Oroz reports that among Cubans our narrow racial views have lost us many friends.

Belle Masque Review

ed the Reverend Parris.

Peter Allard (Thomas Putnam) and Richard Tichenor (Francis Nurse) were uncomfortable and sparkless in their roles. Marianne Brennan was a bit too bewitched as Rebecca Nurse.

The play was in the round, which is supposed to be conducive to sublety. Some of the seats got more backs than others, but it was generally well-received.

Too Much Bluster

All in all, "The Crucible" was an interesting and entertaining show. However it boiled a little too indiscriminately to be in this reviewer's cup.

This playgoer prefers natural theatre, that relies on sensitivity, rather than the broad, bigger than life type theatre. Life has many crucibles and we can accept some of them as being "bigger than life." But when emotion becomes smaller or greater than feeling then you have problems.

The play was played for hysteria, but emotion is like being punched in the arm. After a while the arm gets dull and one stops feeling the blow.

We were not affected by the end of the play as much as we know we should have been. Perhaps it was because we felt that if Elizabeth was willing to let John go so easily, so were we. Or then again, maybe we were just willing to let him be put out of his misery.

All personal views aside, Belle Masque can now stand tall. The "The Crucible" was a popular success, that much is indisputable.

Junior Dinner Dance Ticket Sale Slated

Tim McNamar, Junior Dinner Dance Chairman, has announced that tickets will go on sale April 22.

The tickets will be sold that day on the second floor of Dougherty Hall. From April 25-29 they will be sold in the Pie Shoppe. After this date they will be obtainable from him in room 118 Sheehan. He said that only complete tables would be sold on the first day of sales.

Matric cards and a first-come-first-choice basis will prevail throughout the sales. A diagram of the ballroom floor and tables will be posted on the Junior class bulletin board in the near future.

Attention

Father Paquette wishes to express his thanks to the student who picked up his wallet on the Villanova railroad station platform on Friday evening, March 18, and returned it to the monastery.

STUDENTS WITH CARS THREE EVENINGS and Saturday—$30.00 to $60.00 per week plus $100 00 to $500.00 scholarship bonus. Apply at Placement bureau on Thursday April 7th at 10:30 a.m. or call BR 9-7073. Mr. James Kelly a Villanova graduate will conduct the interviews.

"NO PARKING"

As everyone knows, the most serious problem facing American colleges today is the shortage of parking space for students' cars.

Many remedies have been offered to solve this vexing dilemma. For instance, it has been suggested that all students be required to drive small foreign sports cars which can be carried in the purse or pocket. This would, of course, solve the parking problem but it would make double dating impossible—unless, that is, the boys make the girls run along behind the car. But that is no solution either because by the time they get to the prom the girls will be panting so hard that they will wilt their corsages.

Another suggested cure for our parking woes is that all students smoke Marlboro cigarettes. At first glance this seems an excellent solution because we all know Marlboro is the cigarette which proved that flavor did not go out when filters came in—and when we sit around and smoke good Marlboros we are so possessed by sweet contentment that none of us wishes ever to leave, which means no gadding about which means no driving, which means no parking problem.

But the argument in favor of Marlboros overlooks one important fact: when you run out of Marlboros you must go get some more, which means driving, which means parking, which means you're right back where you started.

Probably the most practical suggestion to alleviate the campus parking situation is to tear down every school of dentistry in the country and turn it into a parking lot. This is not to say that dentistry is unimportant. Gracious, no! Dentistry is important and vital and a shining part of our American heritage. But the fact is there is no real need for separate schools of dentistry. Dentistry could easily bemoved to the school of mining engineering. Surely anyone who can drill a thousand feet for oil can fill a simple little cavity.

Take the case of dental student Fred C. Sigafoos...

This experiment—combining dentistry with mining engineering—has already been tried at several colleges—and with some very interesting results. Take, for instance, the case of a dental student named Fred C. Sigafoos. One day recently Fred was out practicing with his drilling rig in a vacant lot just off campus. He sank a shaft two hundred feet deep and, to his surprise and delight, he struck a detergent mine. For a while Fred thought his fortune was made but he soon learned that he had drilled into the storage tank of the Eagle Laundry. Walter P. Eagle, president of the laundry, was mad as all get-out and things looked mighty black for Fred. But it all ended well. When Mr. Eagle called Fred into his office to chew him out, it so happened that Mr. Eagle's beautiful daughter, Patient Griselda, was present. For years Patient Griselda had been patiently waiting for the right man. "That's him!" she cried upon spying Fred—and today Fred is a full partner in the Eagle Laundry in charge of pleats and ruffles.

In The Sportlite

by John Duffy

When someone talks to Joe Chase he gets feeling that he is not just talking to the sports publicist of Villanova but to a loyal fan. Joe's "rah-rah" spirit can be attested to by many Villanova rooters who were present at the Temple basketball game on Jan. 13.

A Temple supporter took exception to some of Mr. Chase's statements on the ability of one Hubert White and proceeded to assault Joe with abuses, both verbal and physical. Only cooler heads and bigger men prevented Joe from asserting that his convictions were not to be denied. Aside from this little exploitation of his pugilistic ability, Joe has enjoyed a smooth and happy three years as Villanova's sports publicist.

Area Native

Joseph F. Chase was born in Yeadon, Pa., on August 24, 1929. He attended West Catholic High School in Philadelphia and graduated in 1947. After graduation Joe took a job as an accountant in Philadelphia. Joe entered the Air Force in 1951 and spent the majority of his time in service at Gary Air Force Base in San Marcus, Texas. While he was at Gary, Joe was made the athletic coordinator, and had charge of virtually of the athletic events that took place there. Joe received his discharge from Uncle Sam's Air Force in November of '53 and entered VU in February of '54.

During his sophomore year he was student assistant under Gene Ruane, now the university's public relations director. In his junior year Jim Gallo was the sports publicist and Joe was his man Friday. Harry Nash was the publicist in his senior year, and when he resigned to go into the Navy in December of '56 Joe got the job.

Graduated In '57

Joe received his accounting degree in June of '57 and when the administration asked him to remain in his present capacity, Joe accepted.

Joe said the most exciting and thrilling event that he can remember at Villanova were in the Spring of '58. At the Penn Relays the track team won the distance relay, sprint medley, and mile relay, setting the meet record in each event.

One of Joe's many chores is that of press box custodian, and general manager. That he takes this duty seriously can be attested to by the fact that his press box hospitality has twice reaped for him awards citing Villanova's as one of the three most improved press boxes in the country.

He has also received many personal commendations from visiting fourth-estaters for the services he has provided for them.

For Joe Chase his job has been a most rewarding and enjoyable employment. Joe maintains that a man must be happy in his job and like what he is doing. And Joe Chase likes sports.

Chase has also been named publicity director for the upcoming IC4A championships to be held here May 27-28.

'Mural Keglers In Semis Reina Leads Boss Choice

by Phillip Valente, Jr.

Seven teams qualified for the Intramural quarter finals. The teams were The Tappers, Saints, Keglets, Straight Shooters, Anthracite Coal, Boss-Choice, and the Mickwops.

The first round activities were started when the Saints played the Keglets. A great team effort on the part of the Saints helped them sweep two straight games from the Keglets.

The Straight Shooters had no trouble in sweeping two straight games to eliminate Anthracite Coal. The high man of the match was Dave Keegan of Anthracite Coal who bowled 519, but his commendable performance wasn't enough to hold back the great team effort of the Straight Shooters.

The real excitement of the quarter finals was in a match between the Mickwops and Boss-Choice. The Mickwops were a high seeded team and were expected to rout last year's champs. In the first game of the series the Mickwops whipped the Boss-Choice by 142 pins. Under the guidance of Capt. Jack Reina, the Boss-Choice team swept the next two games thereby eliminating the Mickwops. Jack Reina and Nick Silveri rolled like champs and were helped by the fine team play of Joe Petrecca and Joe Carroll.

The outstanding series for the Boss-Choice team were by Jack Reina, (547 for a 182 average) and Nick Silveri (514 for a 171 average). For the Mickwops, Sal Rico took the high series honors with 525 for a 175 average. The second round opponents will be Saints against the Tappers and the Boss-Choice against the Straight Shooters. The Tappers were the only team that drew a "by."

John Buckley makes jump in hop step and jump in last year's Penn Relay's.

Buckley Moves Indoors After Shining Outdoors

by Bud Simmonds

Here it was the IC4A's and Villanova wasn't even considered to have an outside chance of victory. Track fans awaited a three-way fight to take place among Yale, Manhatten, and Penn State.

Then in the afternoon when the broad jump was scheduled an event occurred which laid the foundation for perhaps the most pleasing Villanova upset in a long time.

Senior John Buckley, called "the key" to the Wildcats chances by coach Jumbo Elliott, with a sore right leg and a long record of unsuccessful indoor attempts came through by winning the jump with a solid 23 feet 9¼ inches.

Win Supplies Spark

This performance was the spark which ignited the flame to melt the opposition in the Wildcats drive for their third IC4A championship in four years.

Because this was Buckley's first indoor victory since 1957, this feat was considered by critics (especially the New York press) to be a great surprise by the Villanova senior. They couldn't have been more wrong.

Buckley Comes Through

Although the team victory was the stuff that dreams are made of, Buck's victory to coach Elliott was definitely not in this category." He knew what he had to do and he did it," said jumbo.

Buck's record of indoor failures was thought by many to be a mental block too great to overcome despite his previous success outdoors. They obviously overlooked his determination and sureness in himself.

Although he considers the win his most thrilling achievement so far, Buckley, himself, feels that he was "past the stage of confidence" that was felt he lacked before this pressure meet. Upon looking at the records it is easy to see why.

Consecutive IC4A Titles

In the 1958 outdoor IC4A's as a sophomore, John took 1rst place with a jump of 25 feet ¾ inches in helping the Wildcats to their second championship in a row. The following year the 'Cats didn't win the title, but Buckley retained his individual crown by jumping 25 feet 6½ inches to notch a new school record.

The friendly, easygoing senior hails from St. James High in Chester, Pa. where he won the State Catholic broad jump as well as the 100 yard dash with a 9.9 clocking.

Outside of his track endeavors, Buck enjoys a good round of golf or a game of pool for diversion. During the summer vacation, John's place in the sun can be found in Ocean City, New Jersey.

Future Plans

A marketing major, he is indefinite about his plans after graduation. This summer, however, Buck's mind is turned to thoughts of the Olympic trials which take place in California on July 2 and 3.

When questioned on his feelings about his coaches, Tuppeny and Elliott, he feels he "owes everything he has accomplished to them". Buck also thinks that when the present sophomores mature and develop, they will have the best team in Villanova's history.

Concerning the immediate future, jaunty John looks with optimistic anticipation to the outdoor season with the IC4A and NCAA championships holding the spotlight. He expects his stiffest competition to come from Ralph Boston of Tennessee A&A and Darrell Horn of Oregon State.

Aided by the confidence and knack for rising to the the occasion that is John Buckley's, Villanova's track fortunes should show a definite rise in the team's quest for laurels in 1960.

Mahan Men Win Opener, To Host Explorers Friday

By Jim Murray

Princeton Game: Postponed till 26th

This Friday the Wildcats baseball nine plays host to the LaSalle Explorers at home. The game starts at 2:30 and will be on the new field behind the Field oHuse.

Last year the 'Cats split with the LaSalle nine. Both games were decided by one run. The game played here at Villanova was won when Capt. George Emma, smashed a scorcher off the third lease bag to drive in the winning run.

The 'Cats started their season on a pleasant note as the left handed duo of Frank Kreutzer and Phil Fidalgo beat Gettysburg 10-5.

Big Frank worked four innings and allowed one hit and one run while striking out seven.

Fireman Phil took over in the fifth and K.O.-ed ten by way of strikes. He also walked seven Bullets (How can you walk a bullet?).

The 'Cats started their offense early Fred Anthony walked, advanced to second on Ed Monahan's sacrifice and scored when Bobby Klenek's infield shot was overthrown by Bullet third baseman, George Shalick.

The second run came in the second frame when centerfielder Jolting Joe Cramer singled in Billy Plater who had walked. The 'Cats scored again in the fourth, twice in the fifth and once in the sixth. The attach was led by Anthony, Cramer and Don Meliga.

In the seventh the Bullets closed the gap to 6-5, when Fidalgo got wild. However, the 'Cats erupted for four runs on four hits. Ed Monthon, Bill Plater, Don Meliga got singles while Freddie Anthony had a submarine double (he dove into second base.

"It was good to get the first game in and better to win it," said coach Art Mahon.

Cats Bats . . . In their last game with Princeton two years ago, the 'Cats won 6-0 behind an eighteen strikeout performance by Jack Kelly . . . Paul Bonian made it from second to home on an infield play in the Gettysburg game . . . The snow fence being put up during the game gave the 'Cats a floating ground rule, as each section went up any ball that cleared it was an automatic home run. The rule was not put into effect.

Winning Combo From '52 Returns in '60

Before matriculating at this institution of higher learning, this writer had seen one sample of Villanova. This sample was something that would impress a twelve year old boy. It was the 1952 edition of the V. U. football team. It ran my local idols, the University of Kentucky, almost out of Stoll Field in Lexington, Kentucky. When it was all over and the last U. of K. player had been helped off the field, the scoreboard read: Visitors—36; Home—6.

Needless to say I was impressed. I had always heard that Eastern football was of the powder-puff variety. Yet, these powder puffs had run, passed, and blocked a good Kentucky club into unconditional submission.

Fond Hope

Since that day in '52 I have seen the Wildcat gridders get their lumps more often than not. Yet that day long ago still remains in my memory. Associated with that memory was a fond hope that I should once again see the Wildcats rise to national prominence with a good football team.

My hopes were given a great boost, when two of the participants in the debacle of '52 returned to Villanova, as coaches. The two are Alex Bell (head coach) and Gene Filipski (backfield coach).

Bell was then an end coach here. Since his graduation from V. U. in 1938, when he was an end on an undefeated Cat eleven, Alex Bell has coached at several colleges and high schools, Harvard being his last stop.

12 Yards Per Carry

Filipski was the elusive, hard charging halfback who continually found or made holes in the Kentucky line. In that game he averaged 12 yards per carry. He was named an "All American" at the end of the season. Later he played in both the National and Canadian Football Leagues.

It was my fortune to have an interview with these gentlemen last week. The following paragraphs are my impressions mixed with some of theirs.

"Al," as his fellow coaches call him, faces a formidable assignment. He must remodel last year's (1-9) team. Then, once he refinishes the team, he must make sure the paint is dry enough to face the torrents that will be unlashed against it. These torrents are such powerhouses as Army, Navy, and College of Pacific.

Bell No Miracle Man

Perhaps he can do the job. For many fans a good repatching job would be acceptable. In either case; Bell is no miracle worker. He is a serious man who understands the problem he faces. These problems are: an overall lack of team speed, lack of depth and experience in the line, a tough schedule, and a lack of spirit.

The new head mentor promised that he would be looking for some fast, lean men during the Spring practice session. He stressed that many of his interior lineman were just too heavy to move effectively. To remedy this situation he has enlisted the services of "Jumbo" Elliot, the track coach, to help out his boys in the running department.

He plans to work mainly on fundamentals and the offense during the Springtime grind. The offense he will use will be a diversified T, using the slot man, and the belly series. This will put an emphasis on passing and should open up the offense a bit.

Wanted: Spirit

The lack of spirit he referred to is natural after last year's dismal record. The spirit is important though, for it is this intangible that makes a player get himself into shape and then give his best in a game. Only time will tell if the spirit is instilled.

When queried on some of the brighter aspects of the team he talked about sophomores and ends.

He has high hopes for sophs Billy Joe and Larry Glueck. Joe is a big, powerful, hard running fullback, and Glueck, a quarterback switched to halfback, seems to be the fastest, and most elusive runner in practice. Another sophomore that had caught his eyes was fullback Lou Rettino.

He then praised the depth of the ends, saying that we should have good flankers with guys like: Sam Gruneisen, Ron Myers, Russ Frantz, Frank Brezinck, Jack Mount, and several others, all battling for starting assignments.

Langone Leading QB

The quarterback slot is in fair shape with plucky Nick Langone the leading candidate at this writing. He should be pushed however, by sophs Ted Aceto and Richie Richman. Quarterback Tom O'Rourke will probably be moved to a halfback slot.

He went through the rest of the positions analyzing the strength that he had seen so far. He then emphasized that he hadn't seen the team in action long enough to be sure of each player's capabilities.

He summed up the interview saying "I am glad to be back at Villanova. I will do the best I can to have a team that plays a decent brand of ball."

Filipski Dynmic

While Bell gives one the impression of being soft spoken, sage man, Mr. Filipski is the epitomy of action and loud commentary. On the field he rushes around barking orders, criticizing mistakes, and watching for other small flaws. In the office he was easy to talk to, although he never stopped typing while answering questions. He seems like a man who, knows his job and is anxious to do it.

He re-echoed most of Bell's sentiments particularly the part about the obesity of some of his charges. He promised to have all extra weight off of anyone who wanted to play. I have the impression that he meant that promise.

Neither coach would make any predictions for the coming season. (That sort of thing went out suddenly on the Main Line). This writer doesn't feel like sticking his head out either, but whatever happens he can always remember '52.

"Leftist" a Dangerous Term

McGill Philosopher Calls For Tolerance

By Pete McConnell

"It's foolish to close the mind to the study of Communism. In order to be intellectually opposed to Communism we must be familiar with the tenets of Communism."

So spoke Dr. Raymond Klibansky, teacher and philosopher from McGill University in Canada, who was the invited to deliver the second annual Augustinian lecture last Sunday.

Dr. Klibansky, in a special interview, clarified his strong belief in the cause of toleration of opposing beliefs.

"The Dominicans were founded to combat the infidel, and to do so, they made complete study of the beliefs of the infidel to learn his philosophy and his theology. It is senseless to merely oppose for the sake of opposing," he said.

"We must be careful about the use of the term 'leftist.' Leftism is a dangerous term. It is usually the term applied to anyone who doesn't agree with you at a particular moment. Leftism is a term which thinking people should not use," he added.

Klibansky

"If you assume the right to exclude all those who oppose your thinking, you must give others the right to exclude your thinking.

"This is one exception to this however," he said. "Those who deny this principle of toleration may themselves be excluded. Thus toleration has its limits.

"Communists who want to exclude the rights of others to their beliefs don't have the right to teach in our universities. But who are the Communists? The best way to find out and to combat them is through discussion. No movement was ever driven out by sheer force."

Dr. Klibansky added that "we must give our own philosophy a strong foundation so that we can argue. Once grounded, we should not shy away from hearing other points of view. If we try to suppress them, we make martyrs out of them."

He attended the Philosophy Congress in Poland in 1957, where philosophers from East and West met and discussed issues with a candor which amazed him.

He cautioned that we should beware of making generalities. "In Poland of today there is not the vigorous thought control as there was in Nazi Germany. Even democracy leaves much to be desired. The Russian looks at our Negro problem and says 'You are advocates of Democracy and what are you doing about it yourself'?"

The professor was able to refer to St. Thomas Aquinas on the matter of toleration.

"Thomas showed that we should not compel others to follow our own views. He says that enforced obedience is not the best.

> Be it a question of science, metaphysics, or religion, the man who says: "What is truth?" as Pilate did, is not a tolerant man, but a betrayer of the human race. There is real and genuine tolerance only when a man is firmly and absolutely convinced of a truth, or of what he holds to be a truth, and when he at the same time resognizes the right of those who deny this truth to exist, and to contradict him, and to speak their own mind, not because they are free from truth but because they seek truth in their own way.
> —Jacques Maritain

He denied that Catholic universities were generally guilty of intolerance toward hearing opposed beliefs.

"Some Catholic institutions I have seen are models of toleration. The fact that I was invited to Villanova shows a degree of toleration.

"I am more conservative than a democrat," he said. "Democracy is not enough. It is problemmatical, and Democracy is certainly open to interpretation."

Junior Week Starts Monday

From Ben Hur To The Broadwood, From The Grotto To The Guild Show

Junior Week 1960, with its activity-crammed agenda, officially opens next Monday, Mothers' Day, at 11 a.m. with Mass in the grotto, weather permitting, class president Bob Scalia announced.

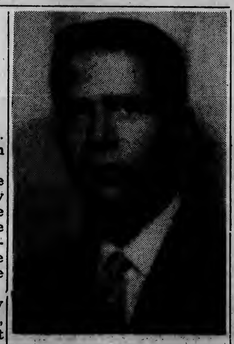
In the event of rain, the Mass to be celebrated by Rev. Robert Welsh, OSA, class moderator, will be celebrated in the Chapel. Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, President, will deliver the sermon.

Shortly before the Mass the special Junior Week edition of the VILLANOVAN, with it's "striking innovation," will be distributed to the Juniors and ther mothers.

Other Events

The remainder of the Mothers' Day agenda will consist of a dinner, perusal of the Diaper Dan exhibit, and a comedy skit by Bob DeLisa and Butch McNally.

The second innovation of Junior Week will be the "Ben-Hur" outing Tuesday night. Chairmen Jim Coroon and Kevin Flynn expect about 200 to trek to the Boyd Theatre for the 8 p.m. showing of the multi-Oscar winner.



Ray McKinley and his Glenn Miller Orchestra, along with the singing quartet, the Hi-Lo's are the headliners in Rev. Francis Kelly's Augustinian Seminary Guild variety show on Wednesday night. The Guild show, although not sponsored by the Junior Class, is, nevertheless, an integral Junior Week function.

Muff Day

Fare for Thursday will be the annual Junior-Senior Muff Day, which will feature several firsts, one of which is a Fat Man's Race. Answering the gun will be such Falstaffs as Jack Valva, Billy Paczkoskie, and George Raveling.

"Raveling's not fat, but he is over 200 pounds, so he qualifies for the race," Scalia clarified.

Another new event on the imaginative Muff Day program, conjured up by chairmen Tom Samulewicz and Dan Kelly, is a water-polo match in the Field House Pool.

McAteer Named Editor-in-Chief Of Villanovan

Henry James McAteer has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the VILLANOVAN for next year. His appointment was announced by Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, VILLANOVAN moderator, at the St. Augustine Award Dinner Dance held last Saturday.

McAteer, a junior Arts major graduated from Northeast Catholic High School in Philadelphia. He has previously served as Managing Editor, News Editor, and Feature Editor of the campus weekly.

Other Staff Members

Michael Donahue and William Speers, both two year veterans of the paper, will serve as Managing Editor and Associate Editor, respectively. Michael Keys retains his post as Format Editor.

John McAteer and Joseph Conlin will be News Editor and Feature Editor, respectively, while the Sports desk will be manned by Charles Simmonds and Daniel Grove.

Newly - appointed Business Manager is Gary Dascenzo, and Mark Bennett and Stanley Uronywicz are co-Circulation Managers. Josephine Morello and Leo Trebold will serve as co-Copy Editors.

The new staff under McAteer assumes control with next week's issue.

Began Yesterday; Sweeney Is Lead In Spring Show

Turf & Tinsel opened last night with "I Remember Mummy," which will run through May 1st in the Field House. Curtain time is at 8:30 for all performances.

This original musical comedy, under the co-direction of George H. Noake and Bette Green, features an all male cast and the music of Robert M. Whelan.

With one of the largest casts in the history of T&T, "I Remember Mummy" marks its twelfth continous appearance since the Club's revival in 1948. The original founder was Harry Stuhldreher; at the time an undergraduate of Villanova.

Payola

This year's show has as its theme the timely topic of "payola" set into an early Egyptian period. Tom Sweeney, the show's lead, portrays A. H., the wealthy owner of Mummies Inc., who finds his time consumed with problems of erecting a pyramid and deciding which one of the Nefer daughters he will choose for a wife. Joe Ruggerio, in the person of Miss Issi-Nefer, aptly provides the show with the traditional Turf & Tinsel "Siren."

Highlighting the show is a specialty act, the AFABB's (Anything For A Buck Boys)—played to the hilt by several of VU's football players.

The show flows to a climax when A. H. throws an orgy to "relax" everybody before the Miss Nile Contest.

"Turf and Tinsel is just as much a part of Villanova as the 'Wildcats' and it is growing in popularity each year due to the increasing turnout for its performances," says Sweeney, the lead. "It has all the qualities a production of this type must have. It provides lots of laughs; an opportunity to laugh at one's friends, and last but no least 'a cheap date' ".

Tickets are priced at $1.00 for students and $1.50 for adults. Wednesday night's show will be Student Night and it is reported that all the surrounding girl's colleges will be in attendance.

The moderator of Turf 'n' Tinsel is Rev. Henry Syvinski, O.S.A.

Nigerian Student Deplores South African Apartheid

By Jim Driscoll

Fabian Okon, a Nigerian Graduate student at Villanova on a history assistantship, surveys the South African racial outbreak from an African's frame of reference.

Okon, originally from eastern Nigeria, has been in this country for almost four years, but upon completion of his studies in 1961, he intends to return home. There he will probably teach on the secondary level.

Okon

"Demonstrations. and agitating are the most appropriate means of the black Africans in the present situation," says Okon.

"It's the best way for the Africans to voice their minds and to show the situation as it really exists. I believe that the day-to-day demonstration will force the Dutch to bend under the winds of nationalism."

He prefers to look forward to the solution of the strife by comoromise.

"Of course," he says, "I would not like to see them resorting to violence, because it could not possibly lead to a complete solution of the problem. The Africans, furthermore, would be at a definite disadvantage as they could not obtain proper armaments."

He questions the intentions of the new Dutch move to foster greatly increased European immigration into the Union of South Africa. He sees this as a move to replace the striking natives as workers.

"The whites are only creating more trouble for themselves," he states. "But above all other things," he says, "The apartheid is definitely the cardinal oppression."

His viewpoint is that the Africans have obtained much from the Afrikaaners, but that this segregation prevents a true accommodation of the cultures.

"It it very feasible," he warns, "that the same thing might happen in South Africa as had happened in Kenya under similar circumstances several years ago—the Mau Mau.

"Not only that," he notes, "but the whites are making a serious mistake in over-all policy that they will surely regret in the future. If the whites persist in this unrealistic and indiscreet program, they will surely force a united African front that could be avoided by the proper handling of each country.

"Africa is emerging; it is in the grip of nationalism and not merely rising up against white suppression."

Grads Present '12th Night'

The Twelfth Night, A Shakespearean Comedy, will be the next presentation of the Graduate Theatre Departmtnt.

The "eternal triangle enveloped within the traditional chaotic freedom that was allowed in Elizabethan England on the twelfth night after Christmas, is itself distorted into a farcical rectangle by the quirks of two 'wet' Englishmen, a clown and a servant girl.

In brief, the entanglement begins to crystalize as Viola, a young damsel disguised as a boy falls in love with a Count. The Count in turn loves Lady Olivia who strangly enough is in love with the masculinated Viola.

Farther complications set in when the two jolly Englishmen, mentioned above, consort with a clown and a serving girl to lead Malvolio, a pompous servant, to the belief that Olivia (who by the way loves Viola) loves him.

Thus at the height of the play Viola loves the Count, the Count loves Olivia; Oliva loves Viola; and Marvelio believes that Olivia loves him.

Mr. Bernard Coyne, director of the play, says: "It is obvious that The Twelfth Night is anything but dull. It is not only an exciting show, but is loud, fast and funny."

The show reviews May 11, with regular showings May 12-15.

McAdams Wins Augustine Award

Leonard J. McAdams, prominent staff member of the Philadelphia Inquirer, was awarded the annual St. Augustine Award for oustanding journalism last Saturday.

The award was presented by Rev. Louis A. Rongione, OSA, moderator of the VILLANOVAN, at the annual VILLANOVAN-WVIL Dinner Dance held at the Warwick Hotel.

In accepting the award, McAdams expressed the wish that he was "twenty years younger, and receiving this award. For then, I might have a chance at being in on the greatest story: Assignment Moon."

McAdams impressed his audience the need for courage and integrity in reporting the news.

Democrats Puzzle Joe Martin

Sees No TViewers For GOP Convention

"You'd have to be the seventh son of a prophet to know whom the Democrats will choose for their candidate this year."

The Law Forum, April 19, heard Representative Joseph Martin, former speaker of the House of Representatives, declare that it's nearly impossible to make this prediction.

Martin's commentary on present day politics were subordinate to his reminiscences of personal experiences as chairman of the Republican nominating conventions for so many years.

He recollected in scrapbook fashion, describing colorful acquaintances with many of the top political figures of the past fifty years. He voiced opinions on:

Gen. Douglas MacArthur. "MacArthur would have won in 1952 had be been nominated. He had tremendous popularity and gave a great speech to Congress after his dismissal. At his speech, every Republican had tears in his eyes.

Gov. Rockefeller. "I think Rockefeller would make a great president, but he won't get nominated. I don't thing he would get or would want the vice presidency."

Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. "Would Lodge take the vice presidency, on the contrary, he said he wouldn't take it. But I don't believe it. If it's forced on him he'll take it."

The Republican convention. "Unless they get up more of a show than they have now, they're not going to have people up late watching it on television."

Herbert Hoover. "He needed Massachuetts or Oklahoma to win and the leaders couldn't get the Massachusetts man they wanted. So they got Charles Curtis, a half-breed ndian, to get the large Indian vote of Oklahoma."

Wendell Willkie. "Willkie lost because France had fallen and England was in danger. The stage of fright made the Democrats win in a year when they weren't expected to win."

Generals of the army. "They never teach economics at West Point."

The convention chairman. "There are four thousand people there and every one of them is trying to trip him up. He must have character and integrity, and the people must have confidance in him."

Modern students. "Shall we have war or peace, peace or prosperity? All these questions will be decided in the next few years by today's young students and you lawyers present."

Bi-partisanship. "I like to see democrats AND Republicans active in politics, just so long as there are a few Republicans in the 14th district of Massachusetts."

The Republican convention. "How to liven it up is almost beyond me. There is only one possible candidate, and the vice presidental candidate will be whoever Nixon wants, so there will be no life in that either."

Apostolic Delegate To Bless Science Building

Archbishop Egidio Vagnozzi, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will officiate at the blessing of the cornerstone for the new Science Building on Tuesday, May 17th.

Prior to this ceremony, the Archbishop will celebrate Mass at 4:30 at the campus grotto.

Among those expected to be present will be donars to the Villanova Development Foundation, members of the Board of Lay Trustees, and University Officials. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

DeLisa Presents New Constitution

A new concept in student government was proposed to the Student Council last Wednesday by Council Vice-President Bob Delisa.

In an attempt to "secure more equal representation for the students" (DeLisa said), "and to open membership in the Council's committees to non-Council members who want to assist," the proposed Constitution and by-laws provide for unrestricted membership on committees and eliminate the principle of the "half-vote."

In keeping with established procedure, only direct questions about the proposed Constitution were permitted in the Council; discussion will be conducted at the next meeting.

Initial opposition to change was evident, especially among the "half-vote" representatives, a number of whom expressed fear that they would be "voted out of existence."

Since the meeting, DeLisa has declared that "careful reading of the proposal will undoubtedly remove the fears of some representatives. Also, next week's discussion of the Constitution will clarify many points."

This fear arose from the fact that, under the proposed Constitution, the '37 campus organizations recognized by the Dean of Student Activities would be deprived of direct, half-vote representation on the Student Council.

Instead, these societies would sit separately as a "Fraternites and Societies Organization" (F & S O), and would be subdivided into five groups according to the nature of their functions. Each of these five groups would elect one full-vote representative to the Council.

DeLisa has explained that "in this way, all organizations will retain some voice in Council affairs, and at the same time, would be able to conduct their own affairs free of direct Council control.

The F & S O would not be able to pass binding legislation, only the Council may do that; but no Council legislation affecting organizations may be passed without the approval of the F & S O. In effect, it is a system of checks and balences.

Concerning committees, DeLisa explained that, under the present Constitution, most of the committees are "Congressional," restricted to a limited number of Council members

"The new system," he said, "would allow non-Council members to serve on committees, and would allow committee chairmen to acquire sufficient active, interested personnel."

Pollock Wants Evaluation Vote

Sheldon Pollock is planning a motion to call for a general election on the question, "Are you satisfied with the Student Council on campus?"

The motion by Pollock, who is Alumni Representative on the Council, provides that the question election would be held concurrently with the general student election May 12.

"It's apparent," said Pollock, the Student Council is rapidly deteriorating into an organization existing solely for the purpose of its own existence.

"And since the Council should exist only at the express desire of the students, it is appropiate that the students be given an opportunity to decide whether the Council has merited its existence with positive action, and whether the students feel that the Council has been a proper expression of their opinions and desires.

"The students must be given the chance to decide whether they wish to continue to be represented in the present fashion.

"If the students do not so indicate," he said, "Then the Council should take it upon itself to see that such a situation does not continue to exist."

Senior Class Announces Plans For Fathers Day

Tom Labrecque, Father's Day committee chairman, announced that the third annual Father's Day will take place Saturday, May 14.

Labrecque reported that the day's activities will commence with an eleven o'clock Mass which will be celebrated by the Rev. Dante Girolami.

Highlights of the afternoon will include a Villanova varsity baseball game with Seton Hall at 2 P.M.; and at 3 P.M. the varsity swimming team will give a swimming demonstraton. Plans for other afternoon activities are underway.

Interest in the baseball game with Seton Hall should be very high as both teams will be vying for at-large berths in the NCAA.

Labrecque expressed his gratitude to his fellow committee members without whose assistance this years Fathers' Day would not be possible.

These men include: Mass and Benediction chairman, Bill Gazi; Luncheon chairman, Steve Mahle; Ticket program chairchairmen, Paul Iffland and Vince Cucuzzella; and Special Arrangements chairmen, Dick Wines and Steve Carton.

Ticket for Father's Day will go on sale, Monday, May 9, in the Pie Shoppe.

Parting Festival At Royerford, Pa.

The preliminary details of the Senior Parting Festival were released by Harry Rowe, chairman of that event.

This last social function of the Class of '60 will be held on June 4th at Lakeview Amusement Parak, Royerford, Pa. (just 40 minutes from VU).

Facilities at the park include those for swimming, boating, softball, basketball, picnicking, and rodeos. (for the more valiant).

Entertainment will last all day and there will be dancing in the evening.

Station Manager Succeeds Self As Radio Head

Daniel J. O'Mara has been renamed Manager of radio station WVIL for 1960-61. Staff heads of the radio re-elected O'Mara in a closed vote conducted last week.

Results of the election were announced at the St. Augustine Award Dinner Dance by Dr. Charles B. Smith, WVIL faculty advisor.

O'Mara, who graduated from Augustinian Academy on Staten Island in New York, is a sophomore Accounting major.

Re-organization

In a drastic re-organization move, the number of staff heads who will serve with O'Mara was reduced from 14 to four. Also, extensive plans for the complete revamping of the radio station were announced. These will be announced as the new staff formulates their details.

Charles Labus, sophomore C & F, has been appointed Program Director by O'Mara. Albert Lawler, fifth year engineer, will serve as Chief Engineer; Edmund Folsom, junior C & F is Business Manager; and Personnel Director is John Oberlies, junior Engineer. The new staff will assume control of the Station in September.

Villanova I.C.G. Travels To Harrisburg For Convention

One of the most accelerated turnabouts in the voting for a presidential candidate was witnessed at the recent I.C.G. State Convention in Harrisburg as the Villanova delegation and many others forsook favorite-sons and hastened the election of Sen. John F. Kennedy.

A most significant feature of the convention was that Vice President Nixon was not even nominated. Some schools however made a belated effort on his behalf in casting a 69 strong protest vote against Kennedy's 314.

The Villanova delegation originally backed Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia. His nominating speech was delivered by John Isselman, in what was according to many delegates the most stirring speech of the entire convention.

In another phase of the convention the Villanova delegation, once again setting the pace, thunderously approved the election of its candidate, Mary Wiest of Immaculata, for Speaker of the Assembly. Larry Ruth, Villanova chapter president, gave the nominating speech.

The election of Miss Weist was preceded by a flourish of political campaigning which attracted the interest of most of the delegates to the convention.

Six members of the Villanova chapter, under the direction of Ed McLaughlin, serenaded the delegations with praises of Miss Wiest as they registered for the convention. Following this the executive councils of each school met in special conference. The net result of this action brought about a strong alliance of the Northeast and Southeast Regions of the I.C.G., which assured the speakership for Miss Wiest.

The final action of the convention on Saturday was the voting on the planks which had been reported out of the Friday committee meetings. The Villanova delegation had at least one and in some cases two planks reported out of each of the seven committees. On the floor of the assembly, Villanova backed by other schools in the Southeast Region had all its planks passed.

Recktenwald Life Fellow

L. N. Recktenwald of the Psychology Department has been selected to Life Fellow in the International Institute of Arts and Letters.

He also recently served as Chairman of a panel on the Information Service at the national meeting of "Catholic Counselors in A.P.G.A." on April 10th at LaSalle College.

Senior Editors Finish Journalistic Year

The seniors of the 1959-60 staff officially bowed out of their collegiate journalistic careers Saturday night at the Villanovan-WVIL dinner dance.

The end for the departing eleven is not complete for as Father Rongione pointed out at the dance, they will remain active to an extent provided some solace and experience for the oncoming staff members.

News Briefs on Campus

Philosophy Lecture

Dr. Fredrick Patka will discuss "The Problem of Value and the Person" before the Philosophy club this evening.

The lecture to be delivered at 7:30 in the East Lounge of Dohgherty Hall, will be the fourth in a series concerning the "Concept of the Person."

Following the talk, to which the public is invited, will be an informal discussion at which time refreshments will be served.

Dr. Patka, Professor of Philosophy at Holy Family College and LaSalle College, is a graduate of the Gregorinian University in Rome.

History Lecture

The Department of History and Political Science will sponsor a lecture by Professor Elmer E. Schattschneider of Wesleyan University this afternoon at 4:00 P.M. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

His topic will be: "National Nominating Conventions: Significance in a Presidental Election Year.

Professor Schattschneider's publications include: "Politics, Pressures and the Tariff" (1935); "Party Government" (1940), and "Guide to the Study of Public Affairs" (1952). He was president of the American Political Science Association in 1956-57, and is presently the Foundation Professor of Government at Wesleyan and Director of Citizens' Clearing House.

Annual Navy Dance

The Villanova N.R.O.T.C. unit will hold its annual spring formal Friday evening at the Drake Hotel in Philadelphia. Dancing will be continuous from 9 till 1 to the music of Paul Judge and his orchestra. During intermissions music will be furnished by a jazz combo from the University of Pennsylvania.

The highlight of the evening will be the crowning of this year's Navy Queen. She will be the date of the Company Commander whose company has won the batallion competition.

Bedard Appointed

Dr. Bernard J. Bedard has recently been appointed Graduate School Advisor.

The office will be located on the ground floor of the C&F building and will function primarily as a complement to the Guidance office by specializing in providing the students with complete records of graduate school opportunities and requirements.

Dr. Bedard is a graduate of Notre Dame and the University of Michigan. He has been at Villanovan since 1955 and Assistant Professor of English.

Vet's Dinner Dance

The Second Annual Dinner Dance of the Veterans Club will be held on April 30 at Shilligs on Jersey's Black Horse Pike.

This will serve as the final social function of the club for this semester and as an occasion to invest the newly elected officers.

Thomas Kennedy steps into the President's office and Ed Kelly, Jim Boyle and Ed Gallagher take V.P., Secretary and Treasurer, respectively.

The Corresponding Secretary will be Bob Burke, and Jack Craig will serve as Student Council Representative.

Hold Chemistry Fair

The Chemistry department and the Chemistry club of Villanova will hold a chemistry fair in Mendel Hall this Saturday, April 30 from one to four in the afternoon.

Over 400 high school science students and their teachers from nearly fifty schools have been invited.

Small groups of visitors will be guided through the labs by chemistry majors. There will be continous 'live' demonstrations, exhibits, and films of chemical principles and apparatus in the fields of inorganic, organic, physical, analytical, and biological chemistry.

Inconsistent Parsons

If it's a futile task to ignore religion as having a place in public life in these days of a rather controversial Presidential Campaign, then it must be completely inoffensive to interject the issue of Church-State relationships into another phase of secular concern.

Certain church groups seem to be harping continuously or soon will be (if in whispers) of the significance of electing a man of a certain other religious affiliation to a certain high governmental post and speak of the evil of mixing religion with politics.

However, without the slightest hesitation for a well-needed breath, some of these enthusiastic secularists interfere in a political and public matter from the pulpits of the very edifices which are supposedly so irreconcilable to politics.

This issue is, of course, the legality of pari-mutuel gambling in fourteen of Pennsylvania's counties, an issue which by the publication of this paper, will have been resolved.

Wherever this bill is defeated (In particular, in Delaware County), the victory will be largely due to and claimed as a victory for and by the self righteous, religious scions who are working like coolies at this time, to kill it.

Yet with this "victory" for morality and mandatory clean living for the public, I doubt if even the slightest tinge of scarlet will color the cheeks of these selfsame secularists when they warn their flocks of the danger of religion and government mixed in the candidacy of a man of certain religious inclination.

Half-Vote Lobbyists

Student Council vice chairman Bob De Lisa has concocted perhaps the most far-reaching, most valuable piece of business which this year's Council has witnessed in its weary tenure—and it just may mean political injury for him, ironically enough.

It's no secret that De Lisa is a prominent figure among candidates for the chairmanship to be relinquished by Tom Hoffman in a few weeks hence, and the vote of the so-called half-votes will be obviously significant, on the basis of sheer numerical force. But presently he is strongly suggesting that these same half-votes support a revised Constitution which would reduce the influence of the half-vote by more than half.

As a matter of information, the half-votes represent various campus societies and fraternities; full votes represents the classes, generally speaking. And whereas the full-votes are usually of the conscientious, hard-working type, the half-votes are typically ornamental, with a few notable exceptions. They might be called the loyal opposition, for they usually oppose with consistent vigor.

What would be the advantage to a council shorn of half-vote power? The present full-votes can theoretically call themselves professional Student Council members; their primary interest is in Council affairs. On the other hand, the half-votes owe their allegiance and attention primarily to their respective organizations, and secondly to the Council. So, it's not surprising that their Council performance is less than inspired

Furthermore, the representation of organizations on the Council has always puzzled us. Here are what amount to special interest groups (clubs, etc.) with sometimes fewer than 20 active members, who can combine in pairs to equal the voting power of class representatives. Essentially, they are lobbyists with the voting privilege, and by the same token, gas companies should have seats in the United States Senate.

De Lisa's arrangement does not eliminate the organizations from the Council as many suspect. Rather it organizes them into functional groups which elect a single member to sit in Council instead of five. A reduced informal assembly might be able to rescue the Council from its semi-weekly parliamentary melee.

If the half-votes want to do something constructive before the year expires, they will ratify De Lisa's Constitution, or a modified version of it, and give him credit for imaginative thinking.

"Hello Mom. I got the title role in T 'n' T this week."

Counterpoint

Sunday Funnies vs. 20th Century

By PAUL VANHOOK

During the past few months, television has received criticism from every quarter. Newspapers and magazines have told the world that Charles Van Doren did not have the capacity to think but merely to perspire, that the $64,000 Challenge was really the $64,000 Chisel, and that former D. A. Burger now needs Perry Mason's help.

All this criticism has been well founded and has, in general, brought about the necessary reforms. But lately, since the quiz scandals seem to have lost their journalistic steam, there has been an attempt to attack television on a new front.

"Education," says the new line, "is a goal worthy of pursuit by any medium. Let us make it the goal of television." No one has ever asked that movies educate America; no one would expect the newspapers to do it.

Yet when radio first came out, there was a great cry for education by radio. It never worked and now its advocates have turned to television. If the public will accept education by television, fine, but the past twelve years have shown the contrary. As an example, let's take a look at Sunday afternoon, when most of the best educational programs are aired.

In the January ratings, "Small World," an informative discussion led by Edward R. Murrow, pulled a 4 while "Cannonball" a syndicated series about truck drivers, scored a 20. "Conquest", a highly regarded, extremely well produced information show, had a 5 to "Mattie's Funday Funnies" scoring of 20.

One of the most interesting shows on television, "Twentieth Century", is consistently doubled in the ratings by "Wagon Train", a high budget western. Now none of these educational programs is up against high class night time programming, and yet their showing is ridiculous.

Why?

Because people do not turn to television for education. The educational shows are there, but the public will not look at them.

As another example, let's take a look at the educational television station in Philadelphia. Here is a station that broadcasts nothing but shows to increase your knowledge. Have you ever seen a program on WHYY? Do you know anyone who has? True, this station broadcasts in the UHF band, but by adding a tuner that costs approximately 10% of the initial cost of the set you may exchange Sullivan for Shakespere or Parr for Plato, an exchange which most people would be very unwilling to make.

The loudest critics constantly cry that there are too many westerns on television. In Philadelphia, the local CBS outlet airs seven hours of westerns a week vs sixteen hours of public service programming on religion, culture, and education.

It is even possible to obtain college credits by watching some of these programs. The fact that these critics do not seem to know that such a volume of educational programs exists makes one tend to wonder about their viewing habits.

In the last five years television stations have donated well over one billion dollars in time and talent to produce public service programs and messages. This sum does not include sponsored public service shows, but rather represents the free donation of time and talent in an effort to serve the community.

It should be obvious that a very great effort is being made to provide the kind of well balanced fare that will serve all needs and all groups.

Television is primarily an entertainment medium. It has a responsibility to advance education, religion, and culture, and at the present time this responsibility is being adequately fulfilled.

The inter-departmental panel discussions, mentioned in the VILLANOVAN, are one means of bringing the gap between the fragmented, problematic world of the student and the "unity of truth" world of the University faculty.

But many other avenues might be explored. Let me instance just a few:

1) Would it not be profitable for related classes—e.g. a Business Ethics class and one in Policy Formulation—to come together, on occasion, for a joint meeting?

2) If, as Dr. Klein seemed to indicate in last Thursday's Philosophy Club meeting, a broader cultural background in the principles underlying policy formulation is imperative for our potential business and industrial leaders, might we not be advised to consider extending the required philosophy courses for C & F students to include metaphysics, rational psychology, natural theology, and the history of ancient, medieval, and modern philosophy?

3) Would it not broaden the intellectual horizons of individual students and of the University as a whole to send a few Juniors abroad each year, with the University helping to defray costs?

4) In view of the excellent seminar facilities in both the Library and Alumni House, should we not consider having an honors reading program in the Great Books, with an adaptation of the tutorial and seminar system of Cambridge and Oxford?

5) As an adjunct to the University's responsibility for transmitting a "Christian Cultural" education, could not a list be published for the students of "readings for those who are in the process of receiving a Catholic education —whose aim is to present the meaning, the richness, the depth of Catholic thought and living" (AMERICA, Sept. 8, 1945)?

It did my heart good to see that law student's letter in your last edition protesting your editorial on Arthur Miller. I've always suspected that such people exist, and now I'm sorry to learn that they do.

He attacked you for quoting from Commentary Magazine, "a publication of the American Jewish Committee." Now wasn't that a shame—quoting from a Jewish magazine?

You have my personal endorsement to quote from any magazine you choose, as long as it illustrates your point, as it suitably did. As for reading Commentary Magazine, I certainly hope Villanova education has grounded me for reading other points of view without having my faith shaken.

And he furthermore commends the Individualist, a noted periodical found scattered about the school. The only reason I subscribe to it is simple—that's just one less copy that can be sent to someone else. It seems that reactionaries are going out of fashion.

But look elsewhere for Commentary. You won't find it in the Villanova library.

Bandages For W. H. Mooring

By TONY MACKLIN

There are a number of people who shudder, wail, or become faint at the mention of the name Tennessee Williams. William H. Mooring, syndicated film reviewer for Catholic newspapers, is one of them.

In last Friday's "Standard," Mooring reviewed Williams' "The Fugitive Kind" which is presently appearing at the Randolph. Mooring gave the film no stars. But in the same column he rewarded Jerry Lewis' "Visit to a Small Planet" with one asterisk and Dick Clark's "Because They're Young" with two.

That this important critic gets more out of Jerry Lewis and Dick Clark than from Tennessee Williams is a little dismaying. We are not knocking Lewis or Clark, but we don't believe that Lewis' antics, or Clark's lack of them, give a greater "positive value" than the brooding poetry of Williams, the brilliant acting of Brando, Magnani, and Woodward, and the probing directing of Lumet.

"No Positive Value"

In his review of the Williams film, Mooring stated that "no positive value was apparent to this reviewer."

We cannot accept this pretentious statement. There was much of positive value in "The Fugitive Kind." When we went to see the show on Sunday the audience was stimulated to both thought and discussion. But perhaps the thinkers go only on Sunday.

Of course, we have to decide whether occasioning thought and feeling is of positive value. It obviously isn't to the non-thinkers.

Williams can incite thought. He explodes the cobwebs around the brain and scorches some of the fat away from the heart. Williams raises questions that need answering, and each individual in his own way around attempt to do so.

Williams also creates vivid poetry. Val Xavier (Brando) speaks of a legless bird that has to stay on its wings in the sky all its life. It sleeps on the wind, and the hawks don't catch it because they don't see it up there in the high blue sky near the sun.

Val also shows that art brings beauty and meaning to existence. This was the time when some of us must have gone for popcorn.

Lady Torrance (Magnani) delivers Williams' poem about the child who passionately throws tinsel on a fig tree when a tiny fig finally appears.

In the final scene Carol (Woodward) picks Val's snakeskin jacket out of the ashes of a horrible fire and says, "wild things leave skins behind them, they leave clean skins and teeth and white bones behind them, and these are tokens passed from one to another, so that the fugitive kind can always follow their kind."

The tame review the wild.

"The Fugitive Kind" is a cry against brutality, prejudice, and meanness. It is a call for beauty and understanding. It is poetic. Mooring was deaf to any of this.

It is true that there is a great deal of ugliness in "The Fugitive Kind," and there is ugliness in life. "Ignore it, write about nice things," the people say. We should have sugar and everything nice. Cruelty, hatred, ugliness don't exist; we just won't recognize them. Art should only portray what is pretty.

Good and Evil

But things just aren't that way. Everything isn't sunlight and roses. Take a walk out of your own backyard sometime. Get away from the fudgy entertainment that clogs the TV waves and is so apparent on the movie screens. Amidst all that agreeable froth and sponge cake an occasional thunderbolt performs a much-needed cauterization.

"The Fugitive Kind" is such a film. It is such a film. It is true that it will be too stiff a dose for the "Lassie" set. But we aren't all a world of grammar schoolers.

Williams is not our favorite playwright. We agree that he sloshes around in the garbage can too much at times, and that he is often overdone and will try anything for an effect. But the man is keeping the American theatre alive.

We are as often against him as for him, but a zero rating and the statement "no positive value" are too narrow and one-sided. We found much of positive value in "The Fugitive Kind." We felt we should say so.

It seems that Mr. Mooring should dismount from his white charger (which at times reaches hobby horse proportions) if he insists on being so faint-hearted and cloudy-skulled. Of course, it is only because his heart is throbbing so with good, clean, red, positive blood that he doesn't want the screen soiled with that crass thing called reality.

Well anyway, he probably enjoyed the cartoon.

Inconsistent Parsons

If it's a futile task to ignore religion as having a place in public life in these days of a rather controversial Presidential Campaign, then it must be completely inoffensive to interject the issue of Church-State relationships into another phase of secular concern.

Certain church groups seem to be harping continuously or soon will be (if in whispers) of the significance of electing a man of a certain other religious affiliation to a certain high governmental post and speak of the evil of mixing religion with politics.

However, without the slightest hesitation for a well-needed breath, some of these enthusiastic secularists interfere in a political and public matter from the pulpits of the very edifices which are supposedly so irreconciable to politics.

This issue is, of course, the legality of pari-mutuel gambling in fourteen of Pennsylvania's counties, an issue which by the publication of this paper, will have been resolved.

Wherever this bill is defeated (In particular, in Delaware County), the victory will be largely due to and claimed as a victory for and by the self righteous, religious scions who are working like coolies at this time, to kill it.

Yet with this "victory" for morality and mandatory clean living for the public, I doubt if even the slightest tinge of scarlet will color the cheeks of these selfsame secularists when they warn their flocks of the danger of religion and government mixed in the candidacy of a man of certain religious inclination.

Half-Vote Lobbyists

Student Council vice chairman Bob De Lisa has concocted perhaps the most far-reaching, most valuable piece of business which this year's Council has witnessed in its weary tenure—and it just may mean political injury for him, ironically enough.

It's no secret that De Lisa is a prominent figure among candidates for the chairmanship to be relinquished by Tom Hoffman in a few weeks hence, and the vote of the so-called half-votes will be obviously significant, on the basis of sheer numerical force. But presently he is strongly suggesting that these same half-votes support a revised Constitution which would reduce the influence of the half-vote by more than half.

As a matter of information, the half-votes represent various campus societies and fraternities; full votes represents the classes, generally speaking. And whereas the full-votes are usually of the conscientious, hard-working type, the half-votes are typically ornamental, with a few notable exceptions. They might be called the loyal opposition, for they usually oppose with consistent vigor.

What would be the advantage to a council shorn of half-vote power? The present full-votes can theoretically call themselves professional Student Council members; their primary interest is in Council affairs. On the other hand, the half-votes owe their allegiance and attention primarily to their respective organizations, and secondly to the Council. So, it's not surprising that their Council performance is less than inspired

Furthermore, the representation of organizations on the Council has always puzzled us. Here are what amount to special interest groups (clubs, etc.) with sometimes fewer than 20 active members, who can combine in pairs to equal the voting power of class representatives. Essentially, they are lobbyists with the voting privilege, and by the same token, gas companies should have seats in the United States Senate.

De Lisa's arrangement does not eliminate the organizations from the Council as many suspect. Rather it organizes them into functional groups which elect a single member to sit in Council instead of five. A reduced informal assembly might be able to rescue the Council from its semi-weekly parliamentary melee.

If the half-votes want to do something constructive before the year expires, they will ratify De Lisa's Constitution, or a modified version of it, and give him credit for imaginative thinking.

Counterpoint

Sunday Funnies vs. 20th Century

By PAUL VANHOOK

During the past few months, television has received criticism from every quarter. Newspapers and magazines have told the world that Charles Van Doren did not have the capacity to think but merely to perspire, that the $64,000 Challenge was really the $64,000 Chisel, and that former D. A. Burger now needs Perry Mason's help.

All this criticism has been well founded and has, in general, brought about the necessary reforms. But lately, since the quiz scandals seem to have lost their journalistic steam, there has been an attempt to attack television on a new front.

"Education," says the new line, "is a goal worthy of pursuit by any medium. Let us make it the goal of television." No one has ever asked that movies educate America; no one would expect the newspapers to do it.

Yet when radio first came out, there was a great cry for education by radio. It never worked and now its advocates have turned to television. If the public will accept education by television, fine, but the past twelve years have shown the contrary. As an example, let's take a look at Sunday afternoon, when most of the best educational programs are aired.

In the January ratings, "Small World," an informative discussion led by Edward R. Murrow, pulled a 4 while "Cannonball" a syndicated series about truck drivers, scored a 20. "Conquest", a highly regarded, extremely well produced information show, had a 5 to "Mattie's Funday Funnies" scoring of 20.

One of the most interesting shows on television, "Twentieth Century", is consistently doubled in the ratings by "Wagon Train", a high budget western. Now none of these educational programs is up against high class night time programming, and yet their showing is ridiculous.

Why?

Because people do not turn to television for education. The educational shows are there, but the public will not look at them.

As another example, let's take a look at the educational television station in Philadelphia. Here is a station that broadcasts nothing but shows to increase your knowledge. Have you ever seen a program on WHYY? Do you know anyone who has? True, this station broadcasts in the UHF band, but by adding a tuner that costs approximately 10% of the initial cost of the set you may exchange Sullivan for Shakespere or Parr for Plato, an exchange which most people would be very unwilling to make.

The loudest critics constantly cry that there are too many westerns on television. In Philadelphia, the local CBS outlet airs seven hours of westerns a week vs sixteen hours of public service programming on religion, culture, and education.

It is even possible to obtain college credits by watching some of these programs. The fact that these critics do not seem to know that such a volume of educational programs exists makes one tend to wonder about their viewing habits.

In the last five years television stations have donated well over one billion dollars in time and talent to produce public service programs and messages. This sum does not include sponsored public service shows, but rather represents the free donation of time and talent in an effort to serve the community.

It should be obvious that a very great effort is being made to provide the kind of well balanced fare that will serve all needs and all groups.

Television is primarily an entertainment medium. It has a responsibility to advance education, religion, and culture, and at the present time this responsibility is being adequately fulfilled.

The inter-departmental panel discussions, mentioned in the VILLANOVAN, are one means of bringing the gap between the fragmented, problematic world of the student and the "unity of truth" world of the University faculty.

But many other avenues might be explored. Let me instance just a few:

1) Would it not be profitable for related classes—e.g. a Business Ethics class and one in Policy Formulation—to come together, on occasion, for a joint meeting?

2) If, as Dr. Klein seemed to indicate in last Thursday's Philosophy Club meeting, a broader cultural background in the principles underlying policy formulation is imperative for our potential business and industrial leaders, might we not be advised to consider extending the required philosophy courses for C & F students to include metaphysics, rational psychology, natural theology, and the history of ancient, medieval, and modern philosophy?

3) Would it not broaden the intellectual horizons of individual students and of the University as a whole to send a few Juniors abroad each year, with the University helping to defray costs?

4) In view of the excellent seminar facilities in both the Library and Alumni House, should we not consider having an honors reading program in the Great Books, with an adaptation of the tutorial and seminar system of Cambridge and Oxford?

5) As an adjunct to the University's responsibility for transmitting a "Christian Cultural" education, could not a list be published for the students of "readings for those who are in the process of receiving a Catholic education —whose aim is to present the meaning, the richness, the depth of Catholic thought and living" (AMERICA, Sept. 8, 1945)?

Speeritualism

T'nT To Seek Fresh Material; Chessman To Seek Time Lender

By Bill Speers

Good news from that effervescent, discriminating society—Turf and Tinsel! Next year an all-out attempt will be made by the farcical group to solicit show scripts and musical material from the Villanova student body. Father Syvinski, T 'n T moderator, announced that a plan is currently under consideration that would have a substantial cash prize bestowed upon the composer of a show selected by the organization for future production.

This move by the campus clown clan accents the almost complete absence of theatrical creativeness on the part of Villanova students. We need look no further than our own back yard—Temple and Penn — to see the enthusiastic response which is met by other campus theatre groups when the student body is called upon to utilize their talents in creating a new variety show each year.

SPEERS

We will not concede that this situation is due to the quater number of students at these other schools but offer two other reasons. First, that the theory of active participation here at Villanova is replaced by one of an active nature; and second, that one must practically sweat blood in order to come up with a "good, modern musical" that is presentable in a Catholic school.

This latter cause is exemplified by an incident that occurred here just about a year ago. A junior arts major presented to T 'n T, for possible future production, an original musical that he had co-authored. The society's leaders liked the show and sent the student home for the summer with an impression that if certain revisions were made in the script, it would be given serious consideration for this year's production.

The Villanovan along with an assistant worked feverishly over the vacation to make the necessary revisions. This student informed us that he had even worked out a plan whereby his show could have been staged for much less money than the present edition of T 'n T. On his return to Villanova in September, the writer was informed that even with the revisions the show was unacceptable. Disconsolate, the student found no satisfactory reason in the show's rejection.

Last week, Father Syvinski gave three acceptable reasons for its rejection. In his opinion there were scenes that were simply too torrid for an all-male cast; the show had been previously presented in summer stock; and approval for T 'n T production was not short coming by the show's co-author.

Father Syvinski can hardly be 'blamed for judging a show by his own conscience; for his job is, indeed, a responsible one. But the fact remains, that with the co-operation of both sides an agreement could have been worked out and the University would have been honored to have a campus show performed and authored by the Villanova students.

If nothing else, we believe that this incident has revealed to Father and others interested in T 'n T, that the perennial productions staged by the society are, for the most part, "old hat" and in order to increase and maintain interest among a sophisticated and proned-to-be-inactive student body, this unique organization should be returned to the students as much as possible.

Bravo! to the T 'n T policy of 1961.

Preparations for the Junior Week edition of the VILLANOVAN are well under way and the paper should be going to press in a few days. Editor Mike Donahue has almost sacrilegiously broken tradition (or what he refers to as the Junior Week myth) by enlisting the aid of students other than juniors in composing the special publication.

In fact, all classes except freshmen are represented in the make-up of this annual momual. Editor Donohue also has spared no expense in obtaining the best V.U. has to offer in the field of art. For he employed and concerted the efforts of five—count them —five pencil virtuosos to supply the numerous illustrations in the issue.

Annotator Donohue also has "busted" his boast that he would establish no new time record in man hours worked on the issue. For while he undoubtedly will be spared of laboring 66 consecutive hours in the final countdown, after all is said and done, a check on overall work-hours should give him an excellent chance for a new record.

Records aside, however, Mike is sincerely gratified at the cooperation offered by the junior class and has installed a striking innovation in Junior Week VILLANOVAN 1960, which will not be revealed until the day of publication.

Que sera, sera? This time next week we should know. To paraphrase the bard, the question is whether 'tis nobler in the mind to have Caryl Chessman executed in peace, or to take arms against a sea of "injustice" waged upon this man.

In 1921, Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, known troublemakers, were convicted of murdering a factory paymaster in Braintree Maine. Because of world-wide protests that the two men were convicted on inconclusive evidence, appeal after appeal inhumanly lengthened their execution for six years. They were finally electrocuted in 1927.

Like these two men, Chessman has been duly tried and convicted by a judge and jury. The jury, simple by virtue of their verdict, had no reasonable doubt of his guilt. Yet here it is twelve years later, and the world protesteth the injustice to this man. Injustice, to a man who has borrowed twelve years to prove his innocence, yet has failed in every attempt.

Only the misguided pleas of sanctimonious citizens and the cowardice of politicians has saved this psuedo-intellectual, psuedo-literary genius from the hot seat. Injustice? What about something a litt'e less noble like the plight of our American negro, or the government's flagrant treatment, through the years, of our American Indian.

But if ol' Caryl is once again reprieved at the eleventh hour, and is ultimately released from prison, we think it would only be red-blooded of him to call personally on every citizen and politician who has braved, so valiantly, his cause. Only if he does call on these people, they would do well to follow this piece of advice from the musical-comedy, "Oklahoma!"

"Don't treat him like a louse; make him welcome in your house—But be sure that you lock up your wife and daughter."

Next Monday night Jim Elliott will celebrate his 25th year as track coach at Villanova. These 25 years have brought national prominence to Villanova's track team and fame to the coach. Jumbo Elliott is rated by many as the best track coach in the nation. In 1958, he was named "Coach of the Year" by Track and Field News.

If a coach's skill can be realized by the number of winners he has coached, then few can be rated with Jim Elliott. Since 1956 his teams have won 7 major national championships. They have also placed second 4 times, and third once. He has coached 15 All-Americans and 5 of his charges have performed in the Olympic games.

Coaching a relay team is perhaps the greatest challenge facing a track coach. He must find four men who work like one machine, and decide just where each part of that machine works best. Elliott's continued success in this event further demonstrates his ability as a coach. On Saturday, the Mile relay team will strive for Villanova's sixth straight win in that event in the Penn Relays.

In the mind of assistant coach, Jim Tuppeny, there is no finer coach anywhere. Of Elliott Tuppeny states, "Mr. Elliott is the most practical coach in the country." He defines a practical coach as one who "sticks to the basic fundamentals." Mr. T thinks that Jumbo has a great philosophy in that he realizes that mental readiness is just as important as physical readiness.

ELLIOTT

Here again demonstrates just how good a coach he is, as he continually gets top performance out of his charges.

His teams have never wanted for the 'big win'. No matter how great the odds facing them, they have come through. "Cinderella teams" are no rarity at Villanova. Elliott gives his boys the feeling that they can't lose, no matter how many sports writers think otherwise, and so his teams are forever coming through with "surprise" victories.

Jumbo realizes that a peak can be held for only a short time. He has continually found the time for this peak at the most opportune moment for Villanova.

Elliott, a father of 4, was the son of a track star, and was a star performer for Villanova himself. During his college days, he was rated as one of the nation's top middle distance men.

He was also a top notch golfers, and captained the Villanova team in '34' and '35'. Still a very good amateur golfer, he coaches Villanova's highly rated golf team.

Elliott is a great athlete and a highly esteemed coach. He is also a loyal Villanovan, and a man who, in the words of his assistant, has done more for his school than anyone else.

In a word, Congratulations, Jumbo, on your many achievements . . . . and thanks.

Boss Choice Tops The Saints For Intramural Pin Title

by Philip Valente, Jr.

The Boss-Choice team, captained by Jack Reina, gave a repeat performance, on April 6th, of "how to win a bowling title". The victim of the assault was the Saints squad led by Vic Richell. The Boss-Choice team made it short and sweet by sweeping two straight games.

The match was not one of the best bowled by either team but it was just enough for the Boss-Choice to retain the title. Boss-Choice gave away 71 pins but picked them up to win going away. Individual team effort was led by Nick Silveri who rolled 176 and 178 for a 354 series and Captain Jack Reina who rolled 157 and 192 for a 349 series. The other team members, Jerry Snopkowski, Joe Carroll and Joe Petrecca rolled their usual steady game.

No one for the loosers rolled his average and this is the reason the Boss-Choice team won so easily. Bill Seigal was the only member of the Saint squad to roll above his season average. The other members, Ron Hoyt, Vic Richell, Paul Teuffer and Bob Bohny rolled under there season averages.

The Saints finished second to Boss-Choice during the regular season campaign, (they finished one game behind the champs). Boss-Choice again led them to finish second in the playoffs.

Semi-Finals

Four teams qualified for the semi-finals of the mural keglet championships. The teams were The Saints, Tappers, Straight-Shooters, and Boss-Choice. The first game of the semi-finals matched The Saints against the Tappers. The Saints lost the first game but won the next two to eliminate the Tappers. A great team effort on the part of the Saints earned them a chance in the finals. John McCarthy, of the Tappers bowled 518 for a 140 average. John Capone, also of the Tappers, had an outstanding season average but didn't fare too well in the playoffs.

The second game of the semi-finals matched the Straight-Shooters against the Boss-Choice team. The Straight-Shooters won the first game by 150 pins but the Boss-Choice team roared back in the next two games to clinch a shot at the finals. Boss-Choice was paced by a hot Joe Carrol (160-202-207) who had 563 for a 190 average and was high man in the series. Captain Jack Reina (520 for a 173 average) and Nick Silveri (515 for a 172 average) also played prominent rolls in the victory. The high game of the series, 215 was bowled by Jack Reina. High man for the loosers was Ralph "Cat-man" Catanese. Ralph Ascoli (155 average) and Joe Cicci (152 average) of the Strainght-Shooters also gave commendable performances but it just wasn't enough to restrain the powerful Boss-Choice team.

The 1959 Boss-Choice championship team, which was led by Dick Famigletti, wasn't a title contender through most of the season but when the pressure was on their true ability came

Returning Champions

San Jose State, making its first appearance in the East, is seen as the team to beat in both the 440 and 880 yard sprint medleys. The other foursome to watch for are: Michigan State in the two mile; Duke in the four-mile and distance medley; Yale, Manhattan, and Michigan in the sprints, and Winston-Salem Teachers in the shuttle hurdle relay.

Out On A Limb

(Editor's Note)—The Villanovan's new co-sports, editors, Bud Simmonds and Dan Grove are going to stick their necks out immediately. The two would-be prognosticators attempt to show their cognizance in predicting the main events in the Penn Relay Carnival.

Predictions

College Relays

440 Relay—San Jose State; Williams and Pointer too much.
880 Relay—Villanova; all-around strength better than San Jose stars.
1 Mile Relay—Villanova; Jumbo's silver anniversary present.
2 Mile Relay—Michigan State; Willie Atterbury and Company the class.

lindivdual College Events

100 yard dash—Vance Robinson; longshot in a good field.
120 yard high hurdles—Francis Robinson; the "chalk" of the field.
Shotput—Joe Marchiony; Manhattan strong man too strong.
Broad Jump—Les Bird; Buckley injured.
High Jump—Some kid named Thomas.

Special Olympic Events

100 meters—Ray Norton; against a great field.
200 meters—Ed Collymore; ex-Cat returns to friendly fields.
800 meters—Tom Murphy: with a gold medal in his eye.
100 meter high hurdles—Hayes Jones; world's record-holder must be choice.
400 meter high hurdles—Josh Culbreath; local "old man" makes good.
Pole Vault—Don Bragg; ho-hum.
Broad Jump—Greg Bell; over Bo Roberson in a great duel.
Hop, Step and Jump—Bill Sharpe; Ira is rusty.

"Jumbo" Seeks 6th Mile Relay Win

Wildcats Face Stiff Field In Penn Carnival

by Bud Simmonds

The vaunted Villanova mile relay team has its work cut out for it when it will seek its sixth straight one-mile relay championship of America at the Penn Relay Carnival to be held at Franklin Field, April 29-30.

The Cats will really have to prove their mettle in this one since Morgan State, the team that edged Villanova for the one-mile relay title at Quantico on April 16, is also entered in the same event.

Morgan State has been runner-up to Villanova in every indoor race this past season and will be out to break the Cats' streak. Along with the speedy Baltimore team, Michigan, Manhattan and Central Michigan will also be serving up some stiff competition for the Cats.

Cats' Conquerors To Compete

Central Michigan is a newcomer to the Carnival, and a recent surprise conqueror of Villanova in the indoors at Chicago. This team has three holdovers from the same unit that won the college one-mile relay at the Drake Relays last year.

Obviously, this would be a real test for the Cats if it were just for the talent of the opposition alone but to add to their troubles, relayer Bob Raemore suffered an injury at Quantico after pacing the half-mile relay team to victory. Also an injury to hurdler Bob Coffill again at Quantico looms two big question marks to the plans of coach Jim Elliott.

Soph's Frank Budd and Bob Raemore shown above are two of the relayers "Jumbo Elliott" is counting on in the 880 and mile relays.

However, these ailings do not seem to be too serious since both men ran in the Queens-Iona Relays and appear to be in top form for the upcoming competition at Franklin Field. In the all-important mile relay, it is probable that Jumbo will enter the ever-reliable juniors, Nick DeAngelis and Joe Manion, Raemore and Otis Drayton.

The coach has great expectations for Drayton, whom he is calling upon to follow in the footsteps of the late, great Charlie Jenkins and Ed Collymore as anchormen in this event. A real "wolf" on the cinders, Otie's broad shoulders seem strong enough to take on the responsibility since at the Queens-Iona meet he ran a sizzling .47 flat in his leg to lead the Villanova quartet to victory.

Another event in which coach Elliott expresses optimism is the 880 yard relay. In this one, the same mile relay team is entered with the exception of Frank Budd replacing Bob Raemore. A surprise entry in the Relays is basketball ace, Hubie White. White, who just turned out for the team two weeks ago, will be entered in the hop, step, and jump. He already holds the Villanova record in the event with 47 feet 6 inches.

Sentimental Value

To the Villanova track fan, it will seem unusual not to see the figure of Ed Collymore pacing his team to victory. However, the former Wildcat star, now in the Marines at Quantico, will run in a special 200 meter sprint event. He will compete with such outstanding Olympic hopefuls as Ray Norton, the number one sprinter in the world, American 220 yard record-holder, Dave Sime, and sensational speedsters the like of Bill Woodhouse and Bobby Morrow, the former Olympic champion.

Those in attendance will be watching Collymore since he has always risen to the occasion at the Carnival: As a sophomore he ran the opening leg on the winning mile relay team and anchored the last two Wildcat one-mile relay championship of America titles. He also ran the opening leg on the sprint medley championship teams and the quarter-mile leg on three winning Wildcat foursomes in the distance medley event.

This being an Olympic year the Carnival is staging competitions for post-college men in fourteen events. This has been done in cooperation with the U.

Mahan Men Beat Temple; Lose Anthony

Rightfielder Ed Monahan is shown advancing to third base against Scranton. Third base coach Lee Parry looks on.

By Denis Cardone

Unfortunately, the most significant occurrence of the young Villanova baseball season is the fractured collar-bone of captain Fred Anthony.

The Wildcat shortstop's importance to the squad, batting .482, leading the team in total bases, r.b.i.'s, and walks, outweighs the headline-snatching no-hit games, 7 game winning streaks, and 5 team home runs.

Anthony suffered his injury in Monday's victorious 9-3 encounter with the previously undefeated Telple Owls. The win got Villanova back on the right track after being derailed by Army last Saturday, 3-2.

Success apparently spoiled the "nine" as the journey to Princeton Tuesday exposed them to a 13-2 shellacking.

Lee Parry made his first start, breaking the Kreutzer-Fidalgo monopoly. Parry was wild as he and relievers Ed Paprota and Tom Paristavec walked 17 Tigers.

Dave Douglas held the Wildcats to seven hits, 3 by catcher Al Wiegand.

Ken Murray and Mike Devine had the big blows for the Tigers, who dumped the Wildcats drawing the record to eight wins and two losses.

The Temple game shaped up as the "big game" for the Cats. The Owls had bowled over 11 straight opponents. Anthony, handling the team for Coach Mahan, who was at his father's funeral, started ultra-successful sophomore, Phil Fidalgo.

Toeing the mound against Fidalgo was Don Flynn, Temple's right-handed ace.

Early Deficit

The first inning looked disastrous for the Wildcats as Temple had the bases loaded with none out. Fidalgo escaped with only one run scoring, this on a misfired double-play attempt.

Temple's lead held up until the bottom of the third when pitcher Fidalgo led off with a lined double that bounced over the right field fence.

Following an infield out, Ed Monahan drove a 350 foot blast into left-center for a stand-up two bagger.

390 Foot Homer

It was Klinc's turn again in the fifth as he let go with a line drive over the letf-centerfield fence for his second homer of the year, making the score, 3-1.

Meanwhile, Phil Fidalgo was muting the Owl bats, rolling up 10 strikeouts. The lefty tired in the 8th, allowing Temple to score twice.

Fidalgo wasn't letting his pitching chores detract from his plate duty as he cracked out a double and a single for 2 RBI's.

Paul Borian, Don Melega, and Klinc led the 17 hit attack with 3 hits apiece.

First No-Hitter

The big thrill of the season was supplied by sophomore lefty Fidalgo's no-hit performance against Scranton.

There will be few no-hit games like Fidalgo's as hardly anyone seemed aware of the imminent event. The deception lie in Fidalgo's walking the first two batters, spoiling the appearance, so to speak.

The lefty spoiled the plate appearances of the next 27 batters, mowing down 14 by the strikeout route.

Batting heroes were Phil Fidalgo who lined a ball over the rightfield fence and Fred Anthony, going 3 for 4, including a double and a triple.

The sophomore lefty may be getting the headlines (deservedly so), but junior Frank Kreutzer has been humming the ball right smartly.

Kreutzer, who was third in the nation in strikeouts last year (12.7 p.g.), has important victories over Lafayette (6-5) 11 strikeouts, Vermont (4-3 11 strikeouts, and La Salle (13-5) 13 strikeouts.

NCAA and City Series

Every collegiate nine has an ultimate, i.e. the NCAA tournament.

The biggest step toward a berth was taken in the 9-6 victory over Penn State during the Easter vacation.

Lefty Fidalgo started as every pitcher would like to, striking out 13 out of the first 15 batters.

The Wildcat victory was especially savored. Besides being a perennial powerhouse, Penn State threw their ace Jim Arnen who pitched in the College World Series last year.

An awesome 6 run rally by the Wildcats, highlighted by homers by Bob Klinck and Fred Anthony, cinched the victory.

Another aim of the campus nine is the City Series title. The Wildcats won it last year and with victories over LaLSalle and Temple stand on top of the current standings.

The third Series match will be at St. Joe's Saturday.

Next Monday night, May 2nd, "Jumbo" Jim Elliott, Villanova's well known track coach will be honored on his silver anniversary at Villanova. The event will be held at the Overbrook Country Club. The guest speaker will be Pete Carlesimo the athletic director of the University of Scranton. Tickets can be purchased from Joe Chase, publicity director.

Festivities - Our Way Of Thanking Mom

by JACK McATEER

Today, Mothers, is your day. We of the Junior Class sincerely welcome you to Villanova. This year you will be our guests for the most elaborate Mother's Day Villanova has ever witnessed.

It is appropriate that your day, Mom, is the first and foremost in our Junior Week activities. The day has been planned for you by co-chairmen Bill Cassin and Jim Strazzella. Together, they have spent untold hours to make your day a most memorable occasion.

The day will begin with a High Mass celebrated by Father Welsh, class moderator, at 11:00 a.m. in the Grotto. Before Mass, you will be presented with a corsage and program as mementos of this day.

Father Klekotka To Speak

Adding to the intrinsic beauty of the Mass, the Villanova Singers will sing Jan Mull's beautiful "Missa Impromptu." The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of Villanova University. In the event of rain, Mass will be said by Father Welsh in the Field House.

After Mass, you will participate in the dedication of the class memorial. This year there will be a break with a long established Villanova tradition. Instead of the traditional class tree, the Class of '61 will dedicate a bench with a suitably engraved plaque.

The site chosen for the location of the bench will be some undetermined spot in the general vicinity of the Grotto.

Immediately following the dedication ceremonies, you will travel to the Field House for luncheon. Tom Brown and Bud Hogarty, co-chairmen of the luncheon, have engaged the services of Smythe Caterers for preparing a delicious dinner for you and your son.

Entertainment In the Field House

The favors at the luncheon will be silver card trays aptly engraved for remembrance of the day.

At 2:45, also in the Field House, entertainment will be provided for your enjoyment. The Villanova Singers, the Junior Nurses, and Lou Martucci at the piano will be the featured performers.

As a special feature, Bob Delisa and Butch McNally will offer what promises to be a very amusing comedy skit. This will be the second year Bob will be appearing before a Mother's Day audience.

Later in the afternoon, you are in for a treat when the winner of the Diaper-Dan contest is announced. As in years past, the contest has proved to be one of the highlights of Mother's Day. After the winner is announced, all the photos, along with the winner's trophy, will be on display in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall. You will be able to chuckle at your own Diaper-Dan as you file past the photos of the little tikes of the Junior Class.

Benediction in the Grotto

From Dougherty Hall, you will travel once again to the Grotto for Benediction.

There Father Welsh will conduct the service which will bring to a close what we hope will have been a most memorable day for you.

Paul O'Rourke and Bob Bohn dispense Mother's Day tickets in the Pie Shoppe.

Editorial

Junior week, 1960, is underway. Class president Bob Scalia has flaunted tradition by scheduling activities for every day of the week in order to make this the most pleasurable Junior Week ever.

In keeping with Scalia's precedent-setting, colorful program, the VILLANOVAN has scrapped its traditional black and white format on four pages of his edition in favor of Milori BLUE.

Our impressive cover was designed by format editor Mike Keys while Latin scholar Bill Speers who doubled as executive editor came up with the imaginative headlines, (These men are sophomores. Another tradition shattered.)

In addition to the editors and the by-lined contributors, others who lent their efforts to produce the paper include Frank Matunis, Mike Pastore, Teke O'Grady, Charley Cooper, and Barbara Watson.

Art work was handled by art editor Jose Conlin, Thom Sweeney, and Tom Donohue. Tom Wolf, outgoing VILLANOVAN editor-in-chief served as an editorial consultant.

Junior Week Has Its Dangers Mates Work Like Texas Rangers

By VINCE KIRK

If originality is an art, then to be eccentric is to be artistic. And what is more eccentric than a book without its pages or, better yet, beer without its bottle? Again, what is more eccentric than accrediting a great number of individuals for a job well done in this ten inch column? Ridiculous! But artistic.

If I say "The Junior Prom committee men are John Livezey, Paul Gallagher, Bill Friend, Butch McNally, Paul Fitzpatrick, Frank Contey, Ronald Bullatta, John Gatti, Frank Finnegan, David O'Connor, Joan Flood, Angel Colasanto, Jim Palsir, Thomas Raymond . . . ," if I say this, not only will someone rewrite this column, but no idea of the energy sacrificed by these people will be conveyed to you.

No Piffle This

I could say "Swell job, well done," or be most eccentric and say "It's fantab," but present attitudes nurse indifference to all forms of Pious Platitudinous Piffle.

On the other hand, I might mention the changes that hard work brought about in the members of, let's say, the Mothers' Day committee. It's been said, for example, that Jim Strazella and Bill Cassin have resigned from the status of Junior and now claim to be Seniors.

John Dreis and Frank Demaio can be heard muttering something to the effect "What is the stars? That's the question. What is the stars?" Jack McDonnel and Harry Mitchell have developed an alergy to diapers, and the effects upon Tom Brown, Bud Hogarty, Bob Delisa, Butch McNally, Jim Rhodes, Joyce Collins, Joan Connolly, Bob Bohn, Paul O'Rourke, Felix Petrillo are no less serious.

Artistic? If it's eccentric, it is. For this small column leaves me no other choice, sad to say.

I could go on like this, waxing prolix and dropping names at the drop of a pica. Instead leave me end this laudatory brief by saying to all those unsung members of Junior week committees who do all their work behind the scenes, your yeoman work may go acknowledged but it will not go unappreciated.

We Salute Our Best Girls on Moms' Day

Dear Mothers:

This is the day! To be more exact this is YOUR day, which we have set aside to honor you in our small way. We do this because, to you mother, we owe the very fact of our existance. Without you, we would not be here at Villanova, or even in this world. How can we repay this debt of gratitude and love which we owe you? The answer is simple. We cannot! If we live to be 80 or 180 or 280 the answer would still be the same. We cannot possibly give back to you in this lifetime all that you have given us.

But today—Mother's Day—is the start of the repayment of this endless debt of love. As I said before, it cannot possibly be repaid in this world, but I promise to you, that today will be the beginning of a lifetime of daily prayers for you, and in this way it will not only be during this lifetime, but during the next that we will be repaying you.

The chairmen for Mother's Day have done an excellent job of making this day successful, and on behalf of my classmates and myself may I extend to you my sincerest thanks for coming to visit with us and I hope you will have a wonderful day.

Very truly yours
Bob Scalia

Variety Show Stars Hi-Lo's, Miller B'nd

By PAT FOLEY

On Wednesday May 4, the Augustinian Saminary Guild will present its annual variety show. As in the past, attempts have been made to secure the best talent available. This year however, the Guild has outdone itself. Supported by several smaller acts, the Glenn Miller Orchestra under the direction of Ray McKinley together with the Hi-Lo's, will make their presence felt in the Field House. For the older generation this type of show will bring back memories of the days when big dance bands were joined with other acts to present a lively stage show at the Paramount in New York or the Earle in Phila.

Fifteen years after Major Glenn Miller met his death over the English Channel, the orchestra which bears his name and trademark is drawing packed houses at ballrooms and colleges all over the country. As a trombonist, Miller was never more than passable but his arranging abilities were excellent. He began his career in 1925 with Boyd Senter in Denver. During the next ten years he played and arranged for Ben Pollack, Red Nicols, Victor Young, the Dorsey Brothers, and Ray Noble.

Their Own Magic

Success with his own band did not come until the summer of 1939 and from that time to the present the Miller name has carried its own particular brand of magic. In 1942, although over age, Miller enlisted in the Army Air Forces. On June 1, 1944, he was sent overseas with his band to help morale. His drummer was Sgt. Ray McKinley.

After the war McKinley formed his own band, and while attaining modest success in the years that followed, never came to the wide spread acceptance that he has achieved as the leader of the Miller band.

The Miller-McKinley aggregate was formed in 1956 and immediately found acclaim. The result is a splendid group that has something for everyone in the audience. Ray's humor is not evident only in vocals of such McKinley standards as "Down the Road Apiece," "He Was the Best President We Ever Had," etc., but in his verbal comments as well.

Lennie Hambro steps from his lead sax chair to present progressive jazz interpretations in his fluid style. The band maintains however, the tradition that is associated with the Miller name: infectuous, sometimes exciting, sometimes haunting, but always enjoyable.

The Hi-Los

The other main attraction, the Hi-Lo's, have been delighting audiences since October of 1953. The idea of the group was conceived by Gene Puerling, the leader, arranger, and emcee. He sang with various groups including those of Gordon Jenkins and Lex Baxter before starting the Hi-Lo's.

Clark Burroughs is the personable young man whose high range is characteristic of the group. He attended Loyola and Los Angeles City College and worked with the Roger Wagner choral and Billy May's Encores.

Bob Strassen is an old friend of Puerling and has a considerable bit of choir work to his credit.

Finally, there is Bob Morse the comic of the group. Bob attended U.C.L.A., the Chouinard School of Art, and Westlake College.

Columbia Artists

The Hi-Lo's have recorded for Trend, Starlight, and currently for Columbia. They have a fresh approach to their material and maintain true pitch despite their complicated arrangements.

They are easy to distinguish because the two Bobs are Hi physically. Gene and Clark are Lo physically. Clark is a Hi vocally and the rest are Lo vocally or are the rest Hi vocally and Clark is a Lo vocally. Anyway, why not come and find out?

Maltby Orchestra To Play For Gala 'Soirée Parisienne'

By TOM RAYMOND

Friday night the Class of 1961 presents Soiree Parisienne, an evening in Paris, with music supplied by Richard Maltby and his orchestra. For the Promenade, the Field House will become a beautiful Parisienne garden.

As you and your guests arrive for the evening, you will find that the lobby has become the aris Airport. Upon checking your luggage (coats), an evening o ffun and pleasure will be in store for you. Couples may dance down the paths o fthe park, admiring the beautiful, decorated fountain in the center. In front, towering over the evening's festivities, is the famous La Tour Eiffel.

When taking time out to greet your classmates and your guests, you might choose to relax at one of the famous Parisinne sidewalk cafes. If you want refreshments, the Blue Room will present itself as an old French wine celler.

Responsible for the decorations are Paul Gallagher and Bill Freinr, ably assisted by Frank Santillo, Jack McDonnell, Bruce Borsert, Jack Boyle, Kevin Driscoll, John O'Donnell, John Daly, Bill Atlee, Jim Palsir, Pat Cawunder, Mary Chapman, Marty Davis, Alice Burlington, Agnes Leitz, Betty Giammarino, Jay Stevens, Joan Connolly, Jim Lynch, Joyce Collins, Doug Murray, Mary Pat O'Neill, Juanita Jeffers, Jack Baron, and Jay Wendt.

The favors for the Prom, which will remain a secret until that evening, were prepared by Joan Flood and Angel Co.asanto, assisted by Mary Chapman, Joan Collins, Eileen Greyson and Mary Coldura.

Programs, which will be in scroll form, were designed by Tom Raymond.

Girl Proves Pressing Problem —180 Lbs.

By BOB DELISA

Friday, May 6th.
Dear Diary

What a nite! Forgive me if i'm not writing legibly, a little woozy, but after what I went through today I needed shome eshcape from the realities o fmy real shelf and to expose my inner ego.

It all started this morning when I got up. I guess I didn't really get up—I sort of fell out. I could have sworn that the floor disappeared. I stumbled through the day with one eye half closed from this tremendous lump on my forehead.

At seven o'clock I started to get dressed for the Cocktail party—I'm late—I shave quickly—you guessed it—I'm a walking blood bank. And who's the only guy at Villanova who shines his formal shoes while wearing a dinner jacket? right again. I kept my hand on my shoulder all night and you could hardly notice the smudge—but now I can't move my arm! I tear from the dorm into the rain—of course I slip, then continue running scraping the mud off my leg, only to find a big hole framing a bruised knee. I finally arrive at my date's tenement, looking like a "Send this boy to Camp" poster. I figured that my luck finally changed, cause the doll who answered the door was gorgeous. She was medium height, she was well built, she was charming, she was sweet, she was my date's mother! I was ushered into the living room where I sat cold and shivering. Then the grand entrance—my date—I was still cold and shivering. I wanted to get sick or run or something but I could only smile sheepishly. She smiled in return—that was her first mistake. Her open mouth exposed this one great white tooth. The others weren't discernable as they were sheltered by braces. By this time I couldn't look at much more as my eyes were beginning to fill with tears of despair. As we exit I very suavely pull the knob off of the door. Her old man was very pleasant about it though. I think he was glad to just get rid of his daughter for one evening.

We skipped the cocktail party for obvious resons and throughout the entire dance I tried to avoid her. But she kept grabbing me with this tremendous paw and she didn't let me lead her in even one dance. Oh, to escape, escape. I finally escaped all right—so far that I can't remember what happened the rest of the evening. Well, to bed now in hopes that the night will heal and tomorrow will be more gentle. Right now, I'm still cold and shivering.

Saturday, May 7th.
Dear Diary,

Well Diary, it's finally over. Junior Week of 1960 has become history, and I remain in the present; a black and blue relic of a most memorable week. I had to skip a picnic in the afternoon so that I could work on getting a date for the dinner dance. One of the priests on campus had a niece who said she would break her present date in order to go with me. Great—paydirt.

I picked her up at seven thirty. She was a doll. She was petite, vivacious, and sweet. And she could jerk and press 180 pounds without even flinching. This girl was so well developed that she had muscles on her upper lip.

We got to the dinner dance a bit late and there were no tables available. However, this situation was quickly remedied when my pocket size Charles Atlas threatened to tear some guy's sleeve off his blood supyly unless he and his date moved. They did and we began to eat. This girl was one of those back slapping, stomach punching, bon-vivants. She certainly kept me alert all night.

She was real agile too! After she spilled a Martini on my mashed potatoes, she proceeded to put all of the fatfrom her roast beef on my plate. She didn't like a crowded plate she said, and who was I to argue? After dinner she decided to show us how she could whip a tablecloth from under a pile of dishes on the table and leave the dishes completely intact. Well, after I picked up the largest pieces and paid a somewhat perturbed waiter, we decided to dance. Could this girl dance? I don't know, could she? Every time she stepped on my foot she would sweetly smile and apologize. All I could offer as an answer was a meek "Oh, that's all right I only use the bottoms."

Well, after the parties et al. we finally began the journey home. Being in the disposition that I was, we were stopped by a cop. I was speeding, I I was wrong, the cop told me I was wrong, my date called him a "flat-footed liar." He didn't answer, he couldn't answer, she had her pocketbook half way down his throat! She was magnificent—(she was an idiot.)

So now diary, I'm praying for classes to begin on Monday so that I can once again assume a proper role in life.

Ab Ovo Ad Summa Cum Laude Quod Matris

By MEL SCHWARTZ

Twenty years ago, on a cold dark night, a baby was born. His mother wrapped up this strapping infant in a six-foot Villanova muffler. For his little feet, she purchased a pair of 19?? Villanova booties. Obviously, only a Delta Pi Mu pin was suitable to fasten the traditional "three-corners." Mom then took her Brownie box camera and proceeded to sneak up on Baby to snatch incriminatory, and sometimes embarassing, photographs. These were to be used in the future for the annual "Diaper Dan" contest.

As he grew older, he was becoming more familiar with certain "facts", and was allowed certain privileges. He fell heir to a fraternity mug which was, of course, used for milk. Mom got special waterproof bookcovers, with pictures of wildcats and things on them, to protect his twelve volume edition of "My Book House."

A "V" Decal

For his fourth birthday, his mother promised a big "V" decal for his kiddie car, so that his would be like all the other cars. However, things being as they were, the state police made his remove it . . . a safety factor. Yes, Mom saw to it that her Junior was destined to be a Villanova junior in 1960.

Mom saw to a lot of other things, too. She burped, fed, clothed, spanked, guided and loved this promising college grad. She was always good for money, and proficient in securing the cars keys from Pop.

Well, time has passed. Here we are in college, smarter, happier, and poorer. Junior is towering over Mom by a good foot. He has more hair on his chest now than he had on his head then. But he's still Mom's baby.

All these thoughts are subjects for reminiscence this day. Junior feels his dependence on his mother most strongly now, not so because the Prom is Friday night and it cost money, but because if it weren't for Mom, he wouldn't be going. No matter what he does or where he goes, he has only his Mom to thank.

Food Not So Bad

And Mother has seen the campus. She is given the opportunity to partake of typical cafeteria food, the same by which we are honored daily. Here she learns that those articles which print "Are College Cafeterias Poisoning Our Youth", are hokum.

Mom is glad to find that students don't really cross Lancaster Pike in the middle of the block, and trample the hedge and march up the front lawn.

After a typical "ten-minute" jaunt from Mendel Hall to the C&F building, she gladly consents to the purchase of a triple-gear English-built bike, with the excuse that it's cheaper than shoe leather in the long run. And the professors are really nice, just as Junior writes home in his letters.

Mom Is Queen

Above all else, Mom is proud of her son. She is queen in Junior's eyes and knows that a part of her is destined to graduate and to contribute to the ranks of the employed. She is aware that above this material progression, he is strengthening his foundation in his Faith, so that when the Golden Gates are opened, he too can enter, summa cum laude.

These are Mother's thoughts as she socializes on this Mother's Day, the first day of Junior Week. Beneath all this festivity, Mom is esteemed and held in honor for making this entire week, year, life, possible.

This, then, is our tribute to Mother. Welcome, Mom, to Villanova University; enjoy your stay here as we do!

Descartes' Theory Hoax; Capone, Individualism Prove Existence

by BOB BOHN

It was Albert Camus who once so acutely and metaphysically suggested, "I rebel, tnerefore, I am." He had reached the goal of every ambitious, thinking, corrupted man; he had completed the quest for the Holy Grail; he had found his god. No longer would he be forced to drown himself in the flood of organization man. He could shuck his tan raincoat with the regulation plaid lining and dirty collar. He would no longer be required to cheer at the mere whisper of Dizzy Gillespie's name or even think of Tony Mart's. He could now throw his head back in defiance if he was suddenly discovered in possession of a copy of Plato's Dialogues. He had risen above the hovel of humanity—he had assumed an individuality.

Now is the time of year for plaudit, the instant of recognition, the hint of regret. In conjunction with the season, it is my assigned purpose to unveil the individuals of this institution, to disclose their secrets, to spread scandal. . . . Dick Normile once applied for a license in the Merchant Marine service; seems he permanently won on ocean going vessel from nearby Rosemont Pond . . . Ron Graczyk spent his formative years in developing a durable set of muscles—he is now reported to posses a somewhat enviable frame . . . Ken Philla is able to attain his professional training during the summer at a nearby Jersey shore where he is employed as a refuse collector . . . Joe Fulmer, a licensed beautician at own tonsorial parlor upon graduation . . . Jim Caroon is busily engaged in the collection of antique statues—he began the assemblage with a classic the age of 14, plans to open his very example of a pard lackey . . . Dick Kiely once starred in summer stock—he made a short-term appearance as one of the Troubles that emerged from Pandora's box in a play of that name . . . Jerry Carlin, who is right corner post man on the third string drill team must lose 40 lbs. before embarking for his summer vacation at Camp Quantico, home for wayward boys—good luck Jerry . . . Bill Hogan has proof that he once wore his hair in shoulder length, cork-screw curls—he keeps the remains, trimmed only three years ago, in a shoebox on his shelf . . . Dick Calhoun attributes his recent success as Santa Claus to the extensive training and prescribed diet accorded him at Brownies . . . Gus Susnjara, who achieved track fame by once running the mile in the promising time of 30 minutes, 27.8 seconds, has since retired and can now be found holding down the right wing of Wally's renovated Forrest Bar . . . at the age of twelve, Bill Boufford was expelled from the organized Boy Scouts—it seems that Willy once pushed the scoutmaster into the creek . . . Joe DelGuercio once won an official Arthur Murray dance contest at the age of 15; he was later asked to appear on the Ed Sullivan show but spurned all offers of a professional career in deference to the study of Spanish (flamenco dancers are paid quite well) . . . Paul O'Rourke, who once made a living as a Bert's Beach Boy, is well known in crew circles as the man who beat Jack Kelly—it has been reported, however, that it was not Jack Kelly who was beaten, but rather our own Frank Kelly—It is further rumored that O'Rourke was discreetly using a Johnson 25hp outboard motor . . . Tom Samulewicz owes his reputation as a deceptive ballplayer to the fact that during the Drexel game he wore his jersey on backwards—the Drexel players didn't know if he was coming or going—(nice game Tom) . . . Tim McNamar once attempted to establish a reputation in the crime world by hijacking a railroad boxcar—he failed upon the discovery that the boxcar contained only a shipment from Anheuser-Busch . . . John Hamilton once won a log-rolling contest at the age of 10—the feat was even more remarkable in that the contest took place in a Girl Scout camp (he was quoted as saying "no girl ever rolled me") Jack McAteer spends his summers digging graves at a local cemetery—Jack was always rather down to earth . . . Mike Donahue wrote his first literary offering at the age of 4—the article first appeared in the Child's Book of Garden Verses . . . Dave Grennon won a baby beauty contest at the age of 10 months—the prize was a free lifetime diaper service . . . Bill Cassin is known as the terror of Larchmont Bay—it is reported that he once rammed a police launch with his supercharged Chris Craft—the action was received unfavorably by the police whose launch unfortunately (but promptly) sunk . . . Mike Tighe was once retained for questioning by the police in Venezuela—he was suspected of smuggling rum, but it was later discovered that he was only smuggling cigarettes, diamonds and Vitalis hair oil . . . It is believed that John Oberlies organized his very first rally at the age of 5 days—the occasion was a protest strike against the use of male nurses in the hospital nursery

Normile

And the list rolls on like the creeping mist across a foul swamp (how poetic). But like all good things in this world of illusions, mortality and self-appointed individualists, this attempted expose must fade as does the morning fog before the rising sun. Al Capone was correct in asserting that there is no such thing as a bad boy; not even if he has succeded in establishing his individuality.

Steering Committee Aids Class Officers

by DOUG MURRAY

At the inception of our Junior Year the class Stering Committee was selected by our Officers. It is composed of 32 members, representing each of the three schools, Engineering, Arts, and C&F. The members chosen by letters, which they wrote to the class officers, telling why they wished to serve on the Steering Committee and stating what ideas they had concerning class activities for the coming year. On the basis of these letters and previous interest in class functions, the Committee was chosen.

Opinion Group

The reason for this committee is to enable the Officers to get the opinion of what is believed to be a cross-section of the class, concerning the various problems and decisions which arise during the course of the year. Without the Steering Committee it would be entirely up to the officers to handle these problems and decisions by themselves, with only a very limited idea of what the body of the class thinks in regard to some particular subject.

In the past a class steering committee was known to come about under the spoils system and therefore function very inefficiently, it at all. However, this year the Officers of our class decided to select the committee on the basis of interest and willingness to work and as a result, a very efficient, willing, and conscientious committee was developed. Meetings are held monthly or whenever some issue arises which the Officers wish to bring to the attention of the Committee. Attendance at these meetings is compulsory and absences can be excused only by writing a note to Bob Scalia, stating your reason for absence.

Bon Vivants and Connoisseurs of '61 Meet in Never-Land of '81

by BILL FREIND

SCENE: A fashionable metropoliton restaurant.

TIME: May 1, 1981.

"Good evening, Mister Friend."

"Good evening, Pierre. May I have a table for two please? Mrs. Friend will join me a little later.

"I think I can find you a table sir, although we're extremely crowded tonight. Villanova's class of 1961 is holding a reunion here.

"Class of 1961? Say that's my class.

"Really, sir? Well then I guess you recognize that distinguished looking gentleman at the bar."

"Certainly. That's John McGarry. He's up for an Academy Award for his part in "Mickey Mouse Goes To The Moon." Tell me is he still as big a lover as ever?"

"Yes, sir. He's been engaged 11 times and has been deeply in love with every one of his fiancees."

"Same old Jack. Isn't that Lenny Clune over there? I heard something about him being one of the liquor magnates in the country."

"He owns twenty liquor stores, sir, and is so independently wealthy that he spends most of his time training for the national shuffleboard championships."

"Pierre, that looks like Bud Simmomds talking to Jim McAteer over at that table."

"Yes sir, Mr. McAteer is editor-in-chief of that New York Times. Mr. Simmonds is his sports editor and plans to leave tomorrow to cover the international tiddlywinks championships in Greece.

"That group looks like a Who's Who of our sports stars. There's Nick DeAngelis, Tom Samuelewicz, Dave Severance, and Jim Huggard. What are they doing now?"

"Mr. DeAngelis is one of the top physicists in the country. Mr. Samuelewicz is working on a basketball book entitled "Outside Shooting Made Easy." Mr. Huggard is playing AAU ball, living off his old age pension and will go on retirement after this year. Mr. Severance is assistant coach of the Villanova basketball team and will eventually become head coach since his father plans to retire in 1994."

"There's ensign Bill Boufford. He's had a tough run of luck. He'd be Admiral by now if it weren't for that accident."

"What accident, sir:"

"Didn't you read about that? It was during that storm last year. He was C.O. on the Missouri when it went off course. He still might make admiral

Boufford

McAteer

if he finds a way to get out of the Volga River."

"That is a shame, Sir. It is almost as tragic as the mistake that Mr. Redmond made."

"Do you mean Bob Redmond? What happened"?

"Well, sir, he became head of the biggest floral agency in the country and was hired to handle the arrangements for Fabian's wedding. By some ghastly mistake the wrong flowers were delivered to the wedding and the church was decorated with wreaths proclaiming 'Congratulations Elvis'."

"It's just good that he didn't send the wreath to Jack McAteer's establishment. In his business something like Redmond's faux pass would be catastrophic.

"Why, so, Pierre? What's Jack doing these days? He's still digging graves, is he?

"No, you're close, though. He's now the proposterous undertaking in Wilmington."

"There's Jim Hooker. I can still remember when he campaigned for more recognition of the C&F school. What's he doing now"?

"He's head of the English Department at Princeton University, Sir."

"There's Senator Jim Rhodes expounding on his bill to curb the power of the Supreme Court."

"Pardon me sir, but it looks like a discussion is getting a little too vociferous over in that corner. Do you know those two gentlemen"?

"Yes I think I know the cause of their row. When two syndicated drama critics like Tom Quigley and Stan Gogi start discussing shows, there's bound to be a little steam let off."

"Well, sir, the matter seems to be well in hand now, thanks to the pacifying efforts of that dark-haired gentleman."

"Why that's Bob DeLisa. He always had a way of settling things with a minimum of effort. What business is he in now, Pierre"?

"He is currently handling a campaign for better relations between Jack Paar and Walter Winchell."

"Who's the fellow with the long beard and the fez"?

"That's George Matey, sir. He just published his latest book, "Beat, Peat, Man I'm Beat" and with the profits from his last book, he plans to move Greenwich Village to Fort Lauderdale."

"There's a group of nurses. There's Mary Colura, Joyce Collins, Joann Connelly, and Mary Chapman. They've had a funny career. They worked as nurses for two years but decided to go into business for themselves."

"Really, sir. What did they do, start a hospital"?

"No. They started a funeral parlor. You know this is really something, Pierre."

"I think I'll skip dinner and see the boys. I often wondered what became of the classmates. Did you go to college, Pierre"?

"Yes sir, as a matter of fact I graduated from Villanova in 1961, also."

"No. But I don't remember any Pierre."

"Oh, that's not my real name. I changed it when I became a maitre d'. My real name is Gus Susnjara."

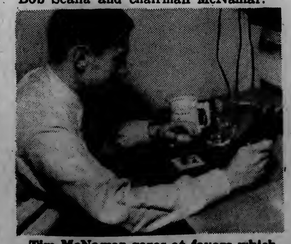
Dinner Dance, at Broadwood To Feature Innovation: Favors

by LOU RETACCO

The culminating event of all the junior week activities is the annual dinner dance, this year to be held on Saturday, May 7th. This year's dance is under the competent guidance of chairman Tim McNamar.

The Broadwood Hotel at Broad and Vine Sts. in Philadelphia has been selected as the site for the dance and the reception will begin at 6:00 p.m.

Music for the formal event will be provided by the twelve piece Sylvan Herman Orchestra. The conductor of this prominent society orchestra died over the Christmas Holidays but Tim was assured that the original members of the group will be present at the dance.



Favors This Year

An original innovation at this year's dance will be the distribution of "favors", viz; specially designed glass trays modeled on the ones used at the Rogers and Hammerstein "Poor Richard's Dinner." These unique souvenirs will provide a useful momento for the evening's festivities.

Dinner will be served at 7:00 p.m., followed by dancing until 1:00 a.m. The price of the tickets will be the usual $11.50 per couple.

For the gourmets in the class the menu will consist of chilled melon anipasta, old fashioned vegetable soup followed by the main course of roast young tom turkey, dressing, gravy, government inspected cranbersy sauce, whipped potatoes, rolls, butter, and coffee will of course also be provided.

Short succint speeches will be delivered by the Reverend John A. Kiekotka, O.S.A. and by class president Bob Scalia and chairman McNamar.

Tim McNamar gazes at favors which will be distributed at the dinner/dance Saturday night.

Assisting Tim in his efforts to organize the dance were Marty Davis, Mary Chapman and Joe Del Guercio in charge of the programs for the dance, Dan Walsh who aided in the acquiring of the band, and Dick Keane who was in charge of publicity and tickets.

Photographs at the dance will be furnished by the Arthur Davis Studio of New York City. A special price of $4.50 will provide two 5 by 7 color pictures and also two wallet size photos.

All advance information infers that this will be a very successful dance and an evening of pleasure is assured to all those who attend.

Fogaroli, DeMascio, Boundas Lead Class

by TED BOUNDAS

Another Junior Week has come to Villanova, and for the Class of 1961 this event also signifies the near completion of three full academic years. During these three years the class has developed many academic leaders, but because it is impossible to list them all we have chosen those men who are highest in their respective fields of major endeavor over the last three years.

B.S. Degree

The highest ranking Junior pursuing a B.S. degree is Joseph Diaco who is a Biology (Pre-Med) major. Diaco graduated from Central High School in Philadelphia, and was the high man in his class. For this he received a scholarship from the Philadelphia Board of Education. Not only is he active in his studies, but he is also a member of Lambda Kappa Delta.

The other high men in their respective departments working toward a B.S. degree are:

John Judson, Chemistry; Joseph Terrazini, Education; Joseph Remy, Math.; Nick DeAngelis, Physics; and Robert Kerr, Social Studies.

A.B. Degree

The two highest Juniors working for their A.B. degree are Michael Wesley in straight Arts, and Theodore A. Boundas majoring in Political Science.

Michael Wesley comes from Rochester N. Y. where he graduated from the Aquinas Institute with honors. He has a four year partial scholarship from Villanova. He is also very active in extracurricular activities. He is one of the editors of the LYNX; active in the Spanish Club, Sanctuary Society, and the Opera Classica Society. He plans upon graduation to continue his studies in France.

Theodore Boundas who comes from Chicago is an Augustinian product of St. Rita's High School. He also holds a four year partial scholarship from Villanova, and a scholarship from the city of Chicago. His major outside activity is Foreign Policy Editor of the BUSINESS WHIRL magazine.

Commerce and Finance

The highest man in the Commerce and Finance division is Salvatore Di Mascio an Accounting major. He graduated from Bishop Neuman High School in Philadelphia, and has a four year scholarship from the Knitgoods Workers Union Local 190. He is also a Member of the Accounting Society, and the Gamma Phi honor society.

The other high men in Commerce and Finance in their respective departments are:

Thomas Doran, Finance; Francis McKay, I.A.; James Palsir, Marketing; and James Capobianco, Pre-Law.

Engineering

The highest man in the Engineering division is Richard Fogaroli a Chemical Engineering major.

The other high men in their respective divisions are: John Hampton, C.E.; Ralph Esposito, E.E.; and Robert Fink, M.E.

Villiput is Port of Gullible's Travels

by GEORGE MATEY

Life is ruled by chance. In my case, because of a typographical error on the part of CEEB, I was told by those who assumed intellectual and moral authority over me that I should not limit myself to the tameness of my homeland, but should go in search of adventure and knowledge, and therefort be of service to my country.

Protest from me notwithstanding, on the appropriate day I was expelled, bag and baggage, from what I then regarded as civilization, onto the cruel unknown concrete seas in a vehicle commanded by what I once thought of as my dearest family. After a journey of many weary hours, we approached a strange land; I was expectorated from the womb of the vehicle and left to fend for myself, as the vehicle sans me returned for the dangerous journey homeward. I looked around me at the strange nature of the land, surveyed my situation as best as I could, and experienced considerable, understandable dread.

However, it was not long before I was confronted with creatures apparently resembling myself generally, but of course possessing those minute characteristics peculiar to individuality. Circulating throughout the maze of these apparently confused creatures, of which I now considered myself one, I noticed an abundance of animals apparently inferior to us, whose dominant features seemed to consist of a whiteness about the head and a very noticable set of vocal cords. These white hatted (so to speak) animals seemed to be performing many services for us, such as herding us together, providing an adequate adrenalin flow for us creatures by constantly scaring us, and by making threatening gestures accompanied by r a s p i n g gutteral sounds. A pity, thought I, that these excellent animals are incapable of all but the most primitive communication with us. Upon my inquiry as to how these animals should be addressed, I was told that they were in the habit of being called bmocs, and that we creatures who were resident on the island thought so highly of these wonderful animals that the land itself was called Villabmoc, meaning "House of bmoc" in the native language.

The bmocs, I was soon to learn had a leader, a verbose and nervous animal, who was to be addressed by us creatures as Fiorello Pangloss, in order to distinguish him from the rest of the bmocs; since he was alternately called either Fiorello or Pangloss by the other bmocs, I shall henceforth refer to him as Pangloss, as that sound is closer to my native Anglo-Saxon and its very pronunciation made me less homesick. Whenever Pangloss appeared, it was customary to express our appreciation of his services and those of his subservients by yelling "Villabmoc isthe bestof allposs iblevillas." I was surprised to learn that I could pick up the language quickly.

Except for the white-clothed cranium and the prominant vocal cords, the appearance of the bmocs was much like that of myself, except they possessed a uniform covering of fur somewhat resembling the tweed cloth of my homeland. They were usually very anxious to please, and their cute habit of begging money likened them somewhat to the bellhops and squirrels of home; when I expressed this latter resemblance to a fellow creature, I was told that all such thoughts were considered sacrilegious, and that I would be severely punished if Pangloss were to hear of them.

Villabmoc itself was a densely populated island in the concrete seas, lying somewhat to the southwest of that farthest outpost of civilization, New York. There was, I soon learned, another island close by, called Philadelphiabmoc, to which the bmoc was native and where a great number of them lived in a wild state. Whenever it was decided that new bmocs were needed to serve us, an expedition of bmocs, accompanied by a creature like myself for bait, set out on the dangerous and indelicate journey for the purpose of capturing and taming new servants.

Because I have a penchant for languages, I was soon able to communicate freely with the bmocs, and my proficiency was so noticed that I was invited by several of them to met their leader Pangloss. Upon being introduced, I immediately prostrated myself and uttered an affectionate litany of purring bmoc sounds, thus endearing myself to Pangloss. In fact, we became such good friends that I was soon as much repected and obeyed by the bmoc as he was himself, much to the jealousy of my fellow creatures.

Pangloss became so fond of me that by the mere reciting of "Villabmoc isthe bestof allposs iblevillas", I was able on many occasions to coax from him much information about the bmoc way of life and thought. Because of this, I was soon able to fruitfully visit the four stables where bmocs were kept, called Kel-lees, Th-oombs, Laycees and Shee-han. Once, after a tour of these stables with Pangloss, in a spirit of unusual camaraderie (he seemed affected by the odor) he offered to take me to a secret island, which no one except a bmoc had visited for thousands of furlongs (one furlong equals 1½ months of our time). I consented to go.

Rosebmoc, as the island was called, was inhabited solely by female creatures who had had the misfortune, like myself, to stray upon an unknown land, courtesy of CEEB. Upon our arrival, many of the inhabitants immediately rushed up began to paw Pangloss, chanting all the while "bmoc, bmoc, bmoc, etc.". These were soon brought under control by blackguards sporting huge knotted whips, who were employees of the bmocs, no doubt. The inhabitants greatly resembled the Italian and Irish creatures of my homeland, but these all invariably spoke the bmoc language, and with an English accent no less! In the presence of Pangloss, I was completely ignored, but whenever he had confidential business (the nature of which I was never to learn) with one of the inhabitants, I was left alone and was the subject of much ridicule and laughter at the hands of the inhabitants and blackguards. Upon the return of Pangloss, however, order was restored by his well placed kicks, but I was nevertheless relieved when he indicated that we must leave.

It was with great astonishment one morning that while bathing in a fountain, I saw in the reflection of myself that patches of tweedy bmoc fur were beginning to sprout at random over my face, and in the next few days I was alarmed at the rapid growth of the fur over the rest of my body. This I attributed to a too close association with the bmocs, something to which my fellow creatures were not subject. Since I regarded the bodily change with horror, I knew that I must sever my relationship with Villabmoc, notwithstanding my deep attachment to and regard for it. I explained my situation to Pangloss who, although he was deeply hurt and surprised, promised to aid me in my return to my homeland; I had often told him stories of my home, and he had become almost as fond of it as I.

As a service, Pangloss had several of the bmocs construct a vehicle with which I could take leave on the concrete seas, and arranged a pious Expulsion Ceremony, attended by all creatures and bmocs, at which I was told that I was never to return and that it was only through the extreme leniency of Pangloss that I was not deprived of my mind, as had been all previous creatures who had wished to leave. I thanked all for their services to me and especially Pangloss, and then I took tearful leave of Villabmoc.

The fumes were favorable and I was soon able to locate the main stream of traffic traveling in the direction of my homeland. With the passing of a few hours upon the sea, the tweedy bmoc fur began to disappear, and it was totally gone when I once again embraced the beloved soil of the country where I was born. I immediately secured my position there by contacting the nearest CEEB office and pointing out their error on my transcript, so that I was never again to be the possessor of a combination of numbers potent enough to warrant my departure from civilization.

Upon arrival in Villabmoc Gullible was accosted by " . . . white-hatted (so to speak) animals . . . "

Scalia, Bathgate, Vaughey, Cassetta Have Shown True Class Leadership

by JIM HOOKER

The Junior class is composed of 785 students. As can be expected, these students have interests which run from medicine to sports.

Who are the four students who have blended these interests, and what is their background?

Scalia

Bob Scalia, who is twenty-one years of age, is a resident of Garden City, Long Island, and a graduate of Chaminade High School in Mineola, N.Y. Bob, an I. A. major in the C. & F school is our class president. Bob's leadership abilities date back to his high school days, where he played freshman football and basketball, and over a four year period was constantly associated with many and Sunday extra-curricular activities.

In his three years at Villanova, Bob has either been head of or associated with every major function our class has been privileged to put on. He was Vice-President of the Sophomore Class, head of the publicity committee for the Soph Cotillion, and in charge of Muff Day. Aside from these jobs, he found time to enlist in S. A. M., work on the orientation committee, and play in various i n t r a m u r a l sports. He has planned, and very successfully run, the Orphan's Outing and party, and turned over some $500 to the O r p h a n ' s Scholarship Fund, which was made at the Charity Ball.

Bathgate

Next is the Vice-President, Larry Bathgate. Larry is 21, a resident of Farmingdale, and a graduate of Lakewood High School, both in New Jersey. His high school days are studded with such achievements as freshmen and varsity football, sports editor of the school paper, and numerous work on various committees and organizations.

Since his freshman year here at Villanova, Larry has been an active participant in class elections, D. P. E., the Accounting Society, and intramurals, and has still found time to maintain a 3.00 cumulative average, and is thereby a qualifying member of Gamma Phi, the C & F Honor Society.

Vaughey

Our class treasurer, Niel Vaughey, also has a background filled with accomplishments. Neil, whose home is in Long Island, New York, spent his high school days at Chaminade as class treasurer, and was also associated with the cheerleaders, the sanctuary society, and the sodality. At Villanova he has the distinction of being the only class officer ever to repeat in an office.

Cassetta

Last, but certainly not least is Nick Cassetta, our class secretary. Nick, an Arts major here at school, is a graduate of Wilber H. Lynch Senior High School, which is located in his hometown of Amsterdam, New York. His high school career is filled with such honors as President of his Senior Class, President of the Student Council, and the Literary Editor of the Yearbook. With such a background, Nick was sure to be on the activity list here at school, and he wasted no time in joining the Knights of Columbus in his freshman year. Since then he has been constantly in or associated with various class functions.

Larry Bathgate at the Orphans' Outing.

by PAUL O'ROURKE

It was a great epoch, that hot, humid summer of 1957. We didn't have a care in the world. High school and "Peter prep" days were behind us and all we could think about was college and being collegiate. Finally, September came and we, thirteen-hundred strong, traveled to Villanova. For some it was only a short twenty-minute ride but for others like Tim McNamar of Oklahoma, it was quite a trip. What would be the start of a sunny and prosperous four years, started with a damp, miserable rainy day.

Our sophomore advisers, as the hand book called them, did not add to our pleasure. J. J. Sullivan and Jack Keagon, among others, seemed very hostile and unfriendly. They urged us to stand in the rain and walk in the mud since this was Villanova muck.

Jerry Carlin thought a white hat was being friendly when he was asked to state where he was from. The quick reply of Brooklyn made the new "pussycat" the first patron of the Soph Cotillion. It was a hard four days of orientation, learning the Alma Mater, march of the Wildcats and dressing as a campus clown, but it was part of going to college.

After we completed our "indoctrination" and Baylor beat the 'Cats 6-0, we entered the classrooms. This was the real purpose of college and we had to learn to hit the books. We discovered no-doze pills, the library and black coffee, all wonderful assets to scholars. Speaking about coffee, we also became acquainted with the Pie Shoppe and the role it plays in perfecting the Villanova student. In the cozy, atmosphere of shouting people, milk-shakes grinding, cigarette-smoking and monstrous athletes (Gene O'Pella) we were able to discuss the finer points of academic life.

Discussions would always begin with Math., Latin, or Economics, and end with girls. In Pie Shoppe 101 we learned that pulchritudinous fillies were close at hand either at Rosemont, Cabrini, I. C., or Harcum. This was one aspect of college life in which we wanted much homework.

The first year quickly sped past. We visited Boston and came home dejected. Mud was in evidence again but it was Boston dirt this time, as the 'Cats lost 23-p0. We also experienced feeling much like Tennessee Williams since, after our class hit Beantown, Villanova was banned from Boston.

Our first student trip was fun, though. Some of us will never forget Kevin Driscoll's quail hunting in the mountains of Leeds, N. Y. the night before the game, and none of us will forget the thunderous voice of Pat Nicholson, Mr. Villanova. Then came winter with a fair "whistle" ball team, our first look at the Big Five, and our daily walks between John Barry and Bel-Air in which we sometimes wondered if our hero, Ron Delany, could make class on time. The Commerce students, also during our first year, asked for a refund in tuition since they felt that they were going to night school. There was also the fire at Bel-Air Hall in our frosh year which gave impetus to the building of the new, swank C & F School. Late in the spring, the Class of '61 also got their first view of politics as they were buried with such leaflets as: "Felix," "Bob and Chet," and "Vote Blue and White." We elected Bob DeLisa president and Bob Scalia vice-president for our sophomore year.

Nert Fall we were the White-Hats and open season on frosh was declaerd by Bob DeLisa. Most of the O. C. men needed accounting paper to check all our donations for the Sophomore Cotillion which was to be lavish. It was a wonderful Fall. "Graz" led the 'Cats on to a 6-4 season in football, we visited West Point and outcheered the Cadets and had the greatest Sophomore Cotillion ever. No one will ever forget dancing to the music of Howard Lanin and no sooner was he finished playing then Al Massey and the Villanovans were blasting out "Dixie" which chairman Bob Queen loved.

We must also look back at the West Point trip. Every loyal Wildcat traveled with his 45 point underdog team to meet Pete Dawkins and the number two team in the country. The final, as we saw it, was Dawkins 20, Army 6, and Villanova 0. The team, minus full-time work of several players, had won a moral victory and now we headed for the Big City to meet Mr. Corby, etc. There was singing and toasting everywhere in the Sheraton and even Vince Kuberski was learning the Alma Mater. Then it was back to the old grind.

Winter of Sophomore year passed with stiff exams and a potentially great basketball team. Joe Ryan was the guy whom you loved in the Garden and hated in the Palestra especially against the Hawks.) But Mr. Severance consoled us after each loss and said, "wait 'till Hubie comes up."

We were also coming up. Up the Pike we came from Thumbs to Kelly's. The Class of '61 were just about upper classmen now and we had our new blazers with distinctive buttons to prove it.

The spring came with picnics, boat races, frat parties and more politics. This time the Bobs merely changed positions. One went from V. P. of '61 while the other went from Pres. of '61 to V. P. of the Student Council. The class was in good hands and we were headed for Junior year with the pink slips to purchase our rings.

Upper classmen days came and we now felt older. We started wearing our rings in October, and everyone was now majoring in a special course. Responsibility was on our shoulders now. The football team wasn't "the best I ever had" type on the field but we looked forward to the previously mentioned Hubie. This was also the fall when we had a permenent seat in Kelly's (Quinns) and thought more seriously about marriage. It was the autumn of another West Point trip and more of those Monday morning blues.

The university in our junior year greeted a new President, Rev. John A. Klekotka O.S.A., who urged students on toward greater academic achievements, in our school's ever advancing educational policy. To emphasize his directives a new Science building costing $4½ million was started.

Winter came with "the best team in 24 years" but we still failed to beat the Hawks. The Hubie we have mentioned came forward to show us his great potential. He proved he was of All-American caliber expecially in the N.I.T. where the 'Cats were beaten on T.V. by a tough Utah State Club. Also one of our class mates, Tom Samulewicz received the Chuck Drizin Award as the most inspirational ballplayer.

Now here we are at Junior Week with 2½ years behind us. We are just about ready to reach the last plateau and the questions are getting harder. Sometimes we wish this testing thing was another Charley van Doren deal but the answers just aren't given to us. But, when we look back at the plateaus and goals we reached and look ahead to higher things, I don't think anyone would dissavate now and settle for the Cadillac.

Lady Fortune holds the scales of life, we can see that the value of our college days would have the gilted edge over any Cadillac, or other worldly goods. The members of '61 have really been fortunate.

Trip Chairmen Expect 200 For Ben-Hur Outing

by BRIAN FARRELL

Tomorrow night will mark the induction of a new event in the already substantial Junior Week program. For the first time the juniors will make a class sponsored trip to Philadelphia.

Co-chairmen Jim Coroon and Kevin Flynn announced that approximately two hundred juniors are expected to be present at the Boyd Theatre at Nineteenth and Chestnut Sts. for the 8:00 p.m. showing of the multi-Oscar winning movie, Ben Hur.

Reduced price tickets of $1.60 were made available to all juniors. Ticket sales opened in the Pie Shoppe on April 21st accompanied by an energetic advertising campaign initiated by Flynn and Coroon.

Transportation to Philadelphia is left up to each individual as it is felt to be impractical to plan on group transportation considering the easily accessible transportation facilities to Philadelphia.

Coroon cited the untiring efforts of Flynn and class president Bob Scalia in planning and carrying out the details to assure the success of the event.

Class Moderator Also Assistant Arts School Dean

by GERRY GELINAS and DICK TERRY

One of the most important persons connected with the Junior Class is the class moderator, Reverend Robert J. Welsh, O.S.A.

A f t e r finishing his undergraduate carter at Villanova in 1943, F a t h e r continued his studies at the Augustinian College and Catholic University of America.

In this past year, Father Welsh was appointed Assistant to the Dean of Arts and Sciences. He is also an Assistant Professor of Religion.

Commenting on his recent appointment, Father Welsh said, "I find it very interesting. I never realized the tremendous complexities of the University nor that there were so many varied courses offered by the Arts and Sciences Department."

Father Welsh's duties as Assistant Dean are not specific, however his timt is well spent caring for some of the many problems o fthe office.

In regard to Junior Week, and Mother's Day is a most worthwhile activity." He is greatly in favor of it and thinks it merits the attendance of all mothers of the members of the Junior Class. Further Welsh thought that the Diaper Dan Contest is ridiculous, which, he said, is what it is meant to be.

Speaking of the Junior Class, Father Welsh said, "the Juniors have fine men in the class. I think that the members who have been active in the various activities, such as the Student ouncil and the Orientation Committee have done an effective job."

Father went on to say that he hoped the Juniors would do their share in providing leadership and good example for the student body next year.

Muff Day A Rough Day; Brings Out Beast In Us

BY JIM PHILLIPS

Harken! Fellow Animals!

Now's the time to renew old grudges, to make new enemies, to sharpen dulled fingernails on tough flesh, to collect teeth and commit generally frowned upon acts of physical assault and mental anguish upon your brother students. Yes! It's Muff Day once again. Muff Day is a time for setting aside the books and instead taping ankles, padding ribs and paying your Blue Cross bill.

As a sepcial pre-contest warm-up free instructions on successful intimidation of the judges will be sponsored by all those frustrated athletes who didn't make the team because—"the coach didn't like me!"

But now back to more serious matters and a rundown of the events.

If you're not inclined to be the violent type you can enter the water polo event and drown somebody rather easily and effortlessly. There should be plenty of guys in this contest who can't swim.

However, if you'd rather use some specialized talent, such as jamming fingers, tripping ankles in the air, or cutting out a fellow's legs as he goes up for a shot or a rebound then definitely your place is in the basketball game.

Softball Anyone?

And for those fiends who exult in hearing bones crack as they take out an innocent second baseman trying for a double play or thrive on smashing a line drive into somebody's teeth, there's also softball.

And then for the weak of heart and gentle of nature there are two events custom made to your liking. First, there is tennis. However, as the traffic may be a little conjested at the start, the recommended practice is to trip a few of the entrants on the homestretch and push the others on the curves. This will greatly reduce the crowded conditions on the track and enable you to waltz home easily.

Two More

There are two more events that you late arrivers and undecided moose can still enter.

The first is the tug of war. This is heartily recommended for those fellows who think the other contests would be a little too strenuous for them. It's also good practice for prospective owners of Mastiffs and Doberman Pinschers who want to get the feel of what it's like to have a leash in their hands and their faithful dogs straining vigorously to chase some mongrel or cat halfway through the city.

And last but not least is the "touch" football game. Where else can you see or, see the blood and watch the intricate maneuvers of the two opposing lines. Ah yes! It's spring and the touch football game is the last surviving element of winter still fighting for its place in the sun—and man, what a battle.

The Rules

Now for those men of iron who wish to enter the events, the following is a list of the events, the time they will take place, and the points awarded for each event. The rules for combat are:

1. One referee from the junior and senior classes for each event.
2. No varsity athlete may participate in a sport in which he has a scholarship or in which he participates as a varsity member.
3. No spiked shoes for track (sneaks only).

Our boys moved up in fifty-nine,
Huggard, Driscoll, were doing fine,
no national ranking team but wait,
'till sixty and they might be great.

It started back in fifty-eight,
our freshman team had won twelve straight,
the sharpest plays were used to score,
sometimes a hundred points or more;

And then it came the golden year,
we're number nine it would appear.
with nineteen wins earned tourney bid, made radio, T.V., yes we did;

And what about the future men?
they'll still be here to play again,
Seniors of course they will become,
But look what's this we're number one!

'61 Success Story Hinges On '61 Class

By BUD SIMMONDS

The Villanova success story scheduled to open for the coming season features starring roles for the present Juniors. The theme for the story is championships and the goals are packed stands and glory for the Wildcats.

The setting for the action will be Villanova Stadium, the Field House, and the Palestra, with some scenes of major importance occurring at various athletic stadii, halls, and a certain Square Garden.

With members of the Class of '61 leading the way to these goals, the high caliber of Wildcat competition will be displayed to sports fans far and wide.

Bell Counts On Juniors

On every stage of the Blue and White sports scene, the "class" of the Class of 1961 will head the pursuit of athletic laurels in the coming season.

On the gridiron, rookie coach Alex Bell is depending on members of the Class of '61 to be major actors in VU's return to football prominence in 1960. Larry Sopko and Joe Luzzi are veterans who have proven their mettle and ability for tough line play. In the backfield, Billy Paczkoskie's blocking and power and Walt Sroka's speed and agility are expected to be high spots in a rough and rugged Wildcat offense.

On the court, many experienced and expert Juniors make up the nucleus of a team which sets its sights on an even more successful year than last. The team will be guided to the heights by co-captains Dick Kaminski and Jim Huggard of the Class of '61. With important depth in the back and front court supplied by Juniors, an all-star group from the freshman team, and a certain sophomore, the basketeers have good reasons for optimism in '61. When one remembers last year's tie for the Big Five championship, the NIT bid, and the Cats' 9th place ranking in the country, it looks like the sky's the limit in '61.

On the diamond, the Wildcats are pointing to Eastern supremacy and the NCAA playoffs this year and next. The '61ers are vital cogs in the 'Nova baseball machine contributing four starters and added strength in the pitching department and the reserves.

Thinclads Have High Hopes

On the boards or on the cinders, the Wildcats have high hopes for success. In track, the Juniors are represented by quality rather than quantity. This quality is headed by Nick DeAngelis and Joe Manion who are already experienced veterans of championship Wildcat relay teams. What with the loss of only a handful of Seniors and the majority of point-getters coming back, the 1961 season is anticipated to be one of the greatest in Blue and White history.

On thewaterfront, the Villanova mermen look for a season packed with potential. The Juniors make their presence felt in the medleys as well as individually in the freestyle, the breaststroke, and the butterfly events.

It is evident, therefore that in every field of athletic endeavor at Villanova, the Class of 1961 will assume the leader's role in carrying the Blue and White banner to victory in the coming year.

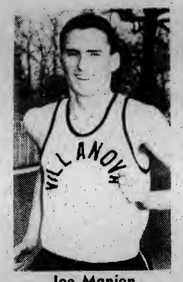
On the court, many experienced and expert Juniors make up the nucleus of a team which sets its sights on an even more successful year than last. The team will be guided to the heights by co-captains Dick Kaminski and Jim Huggard of the Class of '61. With important depth in the back and front court supplied by Juniors, an all-star group from the freshman team, and a certain sophomore, the basketeers have good reasons for optimism in '61. When one remembers last year's tie for the Big Five championship, the NIT bid, and the Cats' 9th place ranking in the country, it looks like the sky's the limit in '61.

On the diamond, the Wildcats are pointing to Eastern supremacy and the NCAA playoffs this year and next. The '61ers are vital cogs in the 'Nova baseball machine contributing four starters and added strength in the pitching department and the reserves.

Thinclads Have High Hopes

On the boards or on the cinders, the Wildcats have high hopes for success. In track, the Juniors are represented by quality rather than quantity. This quality is headed by Nick DeAngelis and Joe Manion who are already experienced veterans of championship Wildcat relay teams. What with the loss of only a handful of Seniors and the majority of point-getters coming back, the 1961 season is anticipated to be one of the greatest in Blue and White history.



On thewaterfront, the Villanova mermen look for a season packed with potential. The Juniors make their presence felt in the medleys as well as individually in the freestyle, the breaststroke, and the butterfly events.

It is evident, therefore that in every field of athletic endeavor at Villanova, the Class of 1961 will assume the leader's role in carrying the Blue and White banner to victory in the coming year.

This is the interior of a voting machine such as will be used in tomorrow's elections. Above is the red handle which opens and closes the curtain, and registers the votes. At center are the rows of candidates' names; each row topped with selection levers.

Voting Machines To Be Used At Polls In Student Elections

Voting machines will be used for the first time in Villanova student elections tomorrow as the undergraduate electorate chooses its class officers and representatives to Student Council. The elections will be held from 9:30 until 3:30 in Alumni Gym.

Herb Lettau and Denis Cardone, Election Board officials, have stated that each student must present his matriculation card in order to operate the machine. Cardone added that each division (Arts, Eng., and C&F) of the Sophomore and Junior Classes will have its own voting machine. The election committee was also able to obtain two machines for use by the Freshmen.

Machines for Nurses

All frosh nurses will use the voting machines in casting their vote. Sophomore and Junior nurses will cast their ballots in the Student Activities Office on the second floor of Dougherty Hall.

To operate the voting machines do as follows: Upon entering the booth move the red handle to the right. This will close the curtain. Then make your selection by pushing down on the lever above the candidate's name. To register vote and open curtain, move red handle to left.

The rules against write-in votes, proxy voting, and double voting will be strictly enforced, according to Lettau. Any infraction of election rules may disqualify the voter.

Cardone emphasized that all candidates must file their financial reports with the Election Board before noon tomorrow. Failure to do so may render the candidates ineligible.

Each candidate may use his own public address system during the ten minute break between classes. Lettau says that "private" broadcasting during the activities period has been ruled out.

Campaign Regulations

Campaigning in front of Alumni will be prohibited within a ten-foot square area of the entrance to the polls. In regards to posters and signs, the Election Board has ruled that the results of the election will not be announced until they have been removed.

The names on the ballot will appear in the order in which the candidates were nominated. No party names will be allowed to appear on the ballot, according to Cardone.

Spahn Appointed Belle Air Editor; Delivery In 2 Wks.

Michael Spahn, junior Political Science major, has been appointed Editor-in-Chief of the 1961 Belle Air. The appointment was announced by Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, OSA, yearbook moderator.

Concurrently, Mr. Thomas A. Linahan of the Math department was announced as Belle Air moderator for the coming year.

Spahn has already begun work on the 1961 annual, having scheduled the photographing of senior portraits during this week. In discussing Spahn's appointment, current editor Tom Peretti expressed great confidence in the new editor and his staff.

"As this year's Sports Editor, Mike has demonstrated that he possesses all the requirements of an excellent yearbook editor," Peretti declared. He went on to express his thanks to his own staff. "The 1960 Belle Air should be ready for distribution in about two weeks. This early date is chiefly due to the efforts of the staff.

"The many unique and unusual features of this Belle Air, which I feel will distinguish it as one of the finest ever published, were for the most part devised and effected by the staff, and the entire University has reason to be appreciative."

Shakespearian Comedy Preview Tonight At 8:30

William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night", the third and final school year production by the Graduate Theatre Department, will open on Thursday, May 12, in the Vasey Hall auditorium. A preview will be presented on Wednesday, May 11. All performances will start at 8:30 p.m.

The comedy will be the first Shakespearian play to be presented at Villanova since Belle Masque's production of "Taming of the Shrew", three years ago.

Mr. Bernard A. Coyne, the show's director stated that he has especially staged the play for a modern audience while retaining the original Shakespearian spirit.

"I have cut certain scenes that tend to dull the play and eliminated most of the archaic words from the original script," he explained. He also reported that he had deleted two characterizations in order to maintain a fast-moving pace throughout the show's entirety.

Shakespeare Universal

The director went on to say that he does not believe that he is "sticking his neck out" in presenting a Shakespearian play at Villanova. "Villanova has a great potential for the enjoyment of the Bard", Coyne related. "And after all, Shakespeare is universal. Most people have the tendency to undersell the playwright when actually as far as Shakespeare's plays go, what is good for some is good for all."

The director also decries the negative thinking of many people who think of Shakespeare as strictly for the intellectual. "In his own time and on down through the years the Bard's plays have been performed before royalty and riffraff alike. What is good, doesn't necessarily have too be dull," he said.

When asked whether he thought the last ten years have been a period of rise or depression of Shakespeare, Coyne pointed out the emergence of the many Shakespearian Festivals throughout Canada and the United States as proof that a retrospection and revival of the Bard has taken place dispite the impact of the modern and ultra-modern forms of stage entertainment.

"In fact," he stressed, whether people are aware of it or not, Shakespeare is the most produced playwright at this time."

Constitution Is Defeated, Boycott Staged By Reps

In a session marked by heated oratory, chilly surroundings, and empty chairs, the Student Council defeated Vice-Chairman Bob DeLisa's proposed Constitution last Monday night.

The focal point of the proposed document, and the point which saw the measure defeated, would have reduced the Council from 62 to approximately 36 members, by eliminating a larger part of the half-vote contingent.

This would have been effected by establishing a "Fraternities and Societies Organization" — comprising the various groups now represented by the half-vote bloc in Council — whose representatives on the Council would number one-sixth of the F & S O. These delegates would have full votes.

32 "Ayes" Needed

In order for DeLisa's motion to be passed, it was necessary for two-thirds of the entire Council membership to ratify it. This would have required 32 "ayes."

As it was, when the time came for the Council to vote on the F & S O article, there were only 33 votes (46 members) present. When results of the roll call vote were tabulated, the motion had received 23 affirmative votes, nine short of the required 32. There were ten dissenters, and Steve Carton abstained.

17 Half-Votes Out

Of these 19, 17 were half-votes. In addition, many of the delegates were represented by alternates. "This doesn't present a very flattering picture of Student Council interest," DeLisa remarked disgustedly.

Many hot words were traded before the actual vote was taken. Bill Vincent, Treasurer, and Tom Moakley led the opposition. The latter contended that the proposal had been drawn up too hastily and represented the efforts of "only a half-dozen or so people."

In rebuttal, Bob Murphy, last year's Council Chairman, conceded that the document was the work of only a handful of men, but added that he saw no reason why this should militate against the formulators.

He further added that he thought "a year is sufficient time to come up with a new Constitution."

Move to Table

At this point, Moakley moved to table the whole Constitution. He was reminded by Joe Remy, however, that the Council had, at the outset of the session, agreed to vote on the Constitution point by point, and not in toto.

After ten minutes of heated discussion, among Remy, Vincent, and Parliamentarian Bill Henry, Chairman Tom Hoffman ruled that Moakley's motion was out of order.

Finally, Joe Remy succeeded in having the Constitution returned to the Ways and Means Committee, from which the Constitutional Revision Committee intends to have it released to the Council in September.

Apostolic Delegate To Bless Science Building

Archbishop Egidio Vagnozzi, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will officiate at the blessing of the cornerstone for the new Science Building on Tuesday, May 17th.

Prior to this ceremony, the Archbishop will celebrate Mass at 4:30 at the campus grotto.

Among those expected to be present will be donars to the Villanova Development Foundation, members of the Board of Lay Trustees, and University Officials. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Lame Duck-ism

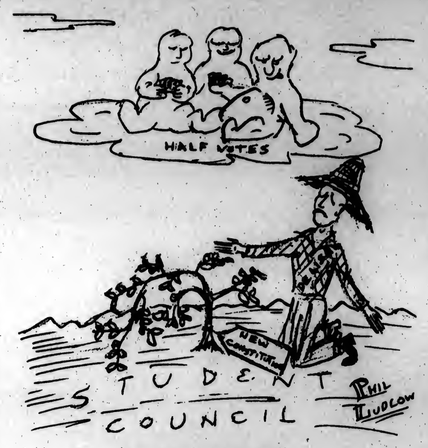
The Student Council, meeting in special session last Monday evening, accompanied absolutely nothing. It took three hours to do this. Amidst a nonsensical display of juvenile antagonism and a parlimentary debacle, a determined and vocal minority succeeded in discarding, at least until next September, the so-called "new Constitution."

Tempers flared,heated words flew, Robert's Rules of Order and the dictates of common courtesy were totally disregarded as the dedicated obstructionists proceeded to dismantle a motion which could have reorganized the Student Council and revitalized the concept of student government at Villanova.

That the motion was discarded is secondary in importance. Even the most dogged supporters of the proposed Constitution admitted that the document was not infallible. Every member of the Constitutional Revision Committee appeared ready to accept suggestions regarding the improvement of the motion.

The significant fact in the situation was the manner in which the defeat was effected: nineteen representatives indicated their respect for their constituents and for the workings of student government by staying away entirely from Monday's session. Many other delegates were absent, and were represented by alternates who, even if their interest equalled that of the duly elected member, displayed an understandable lack of experience in coping with a chaotic situation.

The result was, of course, that the meeting rapidly deteriorated into a three-hour-long parliamentary monstrosity which only returned the proposed Constitution to the Ways and Means Committee, from which Constitutional supporters intend to resurrect it in September.



Tomorrow is election day on campus, and the representatives who will be voted onto the Council already have their work cut out for them: somehow, they must reconstruct the strong student government which existed through most of this academic year—a forceful theory which was temporarily entombed on Monday evening by a conglomeration of self-styled BMOC's, in reality a clique of "lame ducks" who apparently feel that the only way in which they can bolster their rapidly-diminishing status on campus is by discarding a proposal which, besides being supported by many prominent Council members, has the backing of Chairman Tom Hoffman, and former Chairmen Bob Murphy and Pat Nicholson (under whom the present Constitution was effected).

It would seem that this proposal, one of the most imaginative and progressive advanced this year, is entitled to at least the same fair and reasonable consideration which was afforded to so many of the asinine motions introduced by these same "lame ducks" during the course of the year.

Candidates Note

Traditionally, at election time, The VILLANOVAN offers to publish brief resumes of all candidates' qualifications; traditionally, most candidates reject the offer; and traditionally, The VILLANOVAN then chooses to forget the whole thing.

Before it is forgotten this time, however, we extend apologies to the 25 interested candidates who were deprived of an opportunity for publicity through the disinterest of most of their colleagues; and wish them well in the election.

PRAYING FOR RAIN

Discrimination In Cape Colony

by Joe Conlin

If the current journalistic trend of the Philadelphia papers is indicative of the national temperament, and it seems logical that this is so, then the news writers of America are guilty of a violation of one of their own cardinal principles.

That is, that news articles should be completely objective and unbiased, expressing no slant or editorial opinion. Although the Evening Bulletin and Philadelphia Inquirer, as well as the other local daily, have not explicitly stated that "this is good" and "this is bad" on their news pages, they have, nevertheless, been slanting their articles.

Subtle Stand

This stand has been taken in the most subtle way, by the use of words which are opinionated and biased, where cut and dried descriptive words are called for by journalistic objectivity.

This abusive variation of "subliminal advertising" on news pages is best exhibited and seen at its most subjective in the reporting on the recent demonstrations in the Cape Colony of South Africa.

It seems apparent that there is only one side that one can conscientiously and morally take in the controversy, for there is no excuse for depriving people of their supposedly undisputed rights.

However, if the newspapers wish to comment on this they should be doing it on the editorial page.

False Impression

Instead, by referring in their news articles to the "whites" and the "Africans" our journalists give the impression that the so-called "whites" are usurpers of the so-called "Africans" land.

The dictionary defines the noun "Africans" as "a native of Africa". This concept is wholly ignored by the news services. The white people in the Cape Colony, for the most part, have roots through several generations, some, even for several hundred years.

If those in our own country, descended from immigrants of late 19th century or early 20th century are Americans, then certainly those white people in the Cape Colony deserve the title they claim, that of Africans.

Discrimination

The treatment of the Negro natives as the Africans, and of the white natives as simply. "whites", is untrue, unjust, and discriminatory. It subliminally creates the image that one of the opposing groups is where it doesn't belong.

In addition, the name "white" has a derogatory connotation. A fitting simile could be seen if the Little Rock and other segregation disputes were described in terms of Americans and Negroes.

As this would hardly pass without an uproar from certain sanctimonious pressure groups, so also should the nomenclature used in the present reports be protested and revised.

If the Negro Africans deserve their rights, so also do the White Africans. They should not be regarded as being where they do not belong. Cape Colony is their country as well as it should be that of the Negro Africans.

Letter to the Editor

An Exclamation

To the Editor:

Spring is a fantastic season, for it signifies a rebirth as the dull, bleak whiteness suddenly emerges into a sparkling array of color. We all seem to be lifted from the doldrums and revitalized. My "winter" as Chairman has been weary and trying; soon this mantle of student government will be passed to another with all the problems that accompany it.

Possibly, the EStudent Council of 1959-1960 has been one of the best, because it has demonstrated the tremendous abilities of the array of personalities assembled on the Council this year.

I wish to thank the members of the Council for the fine jobs that they have done.

To the rest of my officers I express my deep thanks for their valuable assistance throughout the entire year: to Bob DeLisa, Vice-Chairman, for his general helping out and for his heading up the Constitutional Revision Committee, to Jim Hooker, Secretary, who did a very commendable job in undertaking such a difficult position, and especially to our Treasurer, Bill Vincent, for his diligent work and new ideas. Many of the projects incorporated into this year's program were first conceived by Bill.

Ken Kraemer did a very fine job as Executive Vice President of Education and worked very closely with Neil Drislane, Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, in working with Fr. Gildea on the Student-Faculty Committee. The Academic Affairs Committee gained new heights as they became the most active and important committee on the Council, due to Neil's constant leadership.

After showing his abilities as F & S Committee Chairman, Jack King assumed the position of Executive Vice President of Student Government and quite adequately filled this position. Thanks also go to:

Bill Henry, who served as Parliamentarian on a Council so lacking in parliamentary knowledge.

To the three presidents, Ray Rafferty, Bob Scalia, and Tom Wall, who aptly showed that their respective classes made good selections, as they all demonstrated their leadership this year on the Council.

To Steve Carton, who served as a very efficient and thorough F & S Committee Chairman.

To John Wojciehowicz and Len Carnaghi, who were selected as Co-Chairmen of next year's Parents Day, due to their activeness and interest.

To Eileen Greyson, who exemplified the spirit of helpfulness so prevalent in the Nursing Division by doing groundwork on the Fine Arts course and the Student Council Forum.

To John Oberlies and John Valva, who did a spectacular job of lifting the Villanova spirit despite a 1 and 9 season.

To John Driscoll and Bob Benson who were Chairmen of the first annual Student Council Dance.

To Tom Natal for his untiring efforts to provide the finest movies for some type of entertainment for the residents. The establishment of this program by Tom has opened an entire new field for the Student Council to explore.

To Tony Godwin who did a very fine job as Chairman of the Student Union and Special Problems Committee.

To Herb Lettau, the fiery little man who did the impossible—obtained voting machines—and to Denis Cardone, Ron McGary who assisted Herb on the Elections Board.

To Tom Raymond who did a very laudable job as our Publicity Director.

Also to Dick Wilder, Tom Brown, Harry Siegfeldt, Joe Remy, John Castano, and Ed Scott who were helping out in one way or another.

Finally, to our moderator, Father Dante Girolami, for his assistance and moral support on countless occasions.

TOM HOFFMAN
Student Council Chairman

Haverford and Bryn Mawr Students Pan VU Car-Calls

by Bill Speers

The following letter dated April 27 and addressed to the Editor of the (Villanova) College Newspaper has been forwarded to us:

To the Editor:

It is a shame that a few thoughtless students can ruin the reputation of an entire college.

SPEERS

The Haverford and Bryn Mawr students have been picketing Woolworth's on the Main Line for the past two weeks. And a day has not yet gone by with at least half a dozen shouts of complete distaste from passing Villanova cars. Such "enthusiasm" appears to be unique to your institution. And such a lack of respect for the beliefs of others is not very becoming. It is a shame that a few thoughtless students can ruin the reputation of an entire college.

Respectfully,
Michael Spring '63
John Carroll '63

On the hunch that there may have been a newsworthy story behind the picketing action of the students from these two schools, we interviewed about a half dozen of the protesters when they initiated their campaign.

After walking, while speaking with them, in their picket lines we concluded that these men and women are downright sincere and selfless in their action. They told us that although they had begun their protest rather late in the school year and exam pressure was closing in, the distressing, yet undiscouraging part of their campaign against Woolworth's refusal to sit negroes at their southern lunch-counters has been the disrespect and intolerence demonstrated by students, young people, and whites in general.

A rather sophisticated and rapid-speaking Bryn Mawr student told us that her and her associates have had to put up with egg-throwing, pamphlet-stealing and cat-calls ever since the beginning of their protest.

Surely, the average student at Bryn Mawr and Haverford, maintaining the social standing typical of these two institutions, isn't used to, nor does he cherish, being treated like street-living dogs. They have nothing to gain by their action but an inner satisfaction at having upholding their principles and voicing their protest against their own race.

Fine Arts Course To Be Given In Fall

"A Fine Arts course will be added to the University curriculum next semester," announced Ken Kraemer, Student Council Vice President of Academic Affairs.

The course, which Kraemer and his committee have long sought, will be taught by Dr. George Rodan of South Norwalk, Conn. Dr. Rodan possesses a Ph.D. in Art and Christian Archeology.

Kraemer emphasized that the addition of the course to the curriculum is the result of extensive planning and effort on the part of the Academic Affairs Committee and Rev. Joseph Gildea, O.S.A. A student-faculty board consisting of Fr. Gildea, Mr. Edward Murray, Mr. Raymond Cummings, Kraemer, Eileen Greyson, Neil Drislane, and Tom Hoffman, tentatively planned the course on the basis of research done by Miss Greyson.

Assisted By Poll

A poll was taken in certain senior classes, and results indicated that a Fine Arts course would be favorably received by the students. Father Gildea then secured Dr. Rodan to teach the course, which will concern itself at first with Art and Music.

"If the class is well attended next year, its subject matter will be expanded to include other aspects of the Fine Arts field," Kraemer declared.

He further stated that, initially, the course would be a two semester elective and would be open to all students.

Pre-Law Society Plans Semi-Yearly Magazine

The "Pre-Law Journal" a new campus publication will be distributed and sold here starting Friday, May 20.

Joseph Ouellette, senior pre-law major and editor-in-chief of the periodical, which is sponsored by the Pre-Law Society, stated that the "Journal" is an attempt to explore the many avenues of law operation. "We also hope to stimulate members of the Society into observing the many fields of law activity," he said.

Ouellette reported that he, along with his staff, solicited articles earlier this year for the publication and that first, second and third place prizes for the best stories submitted.

Francis Brennan's commentary on International Law won first prize and he was awarded a desk set. Second place and a silver-plated pen and pencil set went to John DePaul and John McCloskey for their report on "Preparation For Law School". Jim Rhodes' "Interpretation of the Constitution" capped the third prize, a silver cuff link and tie clasp set.

A V.U. First

The winners were chosen by the faculty members of the Pre-Law department. The six semi-finalists will also have their articles published.

"It should be noted," editor Ouellette explained, "that this will be the first time an undertaking of such scope has been undertaken by any one campus organization. You can also say," he continued, "that if this first issue goes over big with the student body, the 'Journal' will be printed semi-yearly."

Ouellette also announced that notifications of the time and place of distributions will be tacked on the campus bulletin boards. He reported that the issue will be distributed free to all Pre-Law Society and will be sold to the rest of the student body for a nominal fee.

Mr. Richard Ruane, moderator of the publication, expressed his contentment and optimism at the event of this new Villanova publication.

Sport Events, Dinner Father's Day Features

ACES Panel Meets With C&F Seniors

Villanova's Commerce and Finance School acted as host for the third annual meeting of Americans For The Competitive Enterprise Svstem on April 26.

The ACES delegation discussed local national and international business topics with a large group of C&F seniors.

The panel of executives consisted of Dr. F. O. Haas, President, Rohm & Haas Company; Svdney E. Longmaid, President, Estenbrook Pen Company; John A. Diemand, Jr., Vice President, Insurance Company of North America; Vincent P. McDevitt, Vice President and general counsel, Philadelphia Electric Company, and Chaniella Philadelphia Bar Association; and Robert R. Titus, President, Synthane Corporation.

Mastromatto Is Philos. Club Prexy

Joseph Mastromatto has recently been elected president of the Philosophy Club for the term 1960-61.

Fellow junior philosophy majors Louis Retacco and Tim McNamar were chosen as the new treasurer and student council representative, respectively. The newly elected secretary is sophomore arts major Mark Quinn and junior physics major Frank McCormick will serve as next year's Vice-president.

Lectures Planned

Faculty members of the organization are: Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., ex-officio moderator; Dr. Donald A. Gallagher, executive moderator; and Dr. Robert S. O'Shea assistant moderator.

"Next year we intend to have a two part lecture series," Mastromatto reported. "The first semester's program will deal with the thought of four of the world's greatest writers: Homer, Virgil, Dante, and Shakespeare."

NFCCS Commission

"During the second semester," he continued, "we shall study philosophy through science. That is, we will deal with such concepts as time, eternity, creation and annihilation and scientific evidence of the existence of God.

Mastromatto also announced that the philosophy club has received an unofficial commission from the middle atlantic states branch of the National Federation of Catholic Colleges to hold lectures in co-operation with twelve other area colleges.

In the Spotlite

by Bud Simmonds

In this week's column, The VILLANOVAN takes pride in pointing to one of its own, the departing sports editor, Jim Murray. Jim has been a valuable member of the sports staff of the paper for the past two years and is presently serving in the capacity of baseball manager, a post he has capably held for three years.

Murray

The personable senior from Westbrook Park, Pa., came to Villanova from West Catholic High School, where he graduated in 1956. During his days at the university, Jim has also served as a member of the Spanish Club, The Lynx, and is the treasurer of the Beta Gamma Debating Society.

An avid Wildcat fan, Jim is well-known to the athletes and coaches not only as an expert chronicler of their individual talents and team contests, but also as an intimate friend. As an example of his loyalty to Villanova, Jim has made every student trip out of town to follow the athletic endeavors of the 'Cats during his undergraduate days at V.U.

Perpetual Motion

Whether it is table-hopping in the Pie Shoppe, on the way to one or another club meeting, or ducking in and out of The Villanovan office, Jim seems to be in perpetual motion. No slacker socially, the loquacious Mr. Murray has been known to attend a dance or two and has a few mixers to his credit as well.

Imagination Lauded

Journalistically, Jim's many innovations have added color to the sports page in the past year. This imaginative work was evidenced by interesting scouting reports, provocative feature articles, and a special basketball preview issue which was received with great accolades.

The reason for this bright outlook on the sports page is seen in Jim's earnest desire to give the Villanova athletes the good publicity which they really deserve.

Sports Fixture

A highlight of Jim's tenure as sports editor occurred at the opening of basketball season when he presented the first annual Chuck Drizin Award for scholarship, soirit, and sportsmanship to George Emma of the Class of '59.

For Jim, the best thing that could happen at the present is for Villanova's baseball team to represent the East in the NCAA baseball championships at Omaha, Nebraska in June.

Although not an active participant in Wildcat athletics, in his own way Jim has been a vital fixture on the sports scene and has contributed a great deal to it by ardent support to the teams, dedicated writing, and a true loyalty to the school.

Linksmen Win 5 of 6 Matches As Connelly And Cahill Star

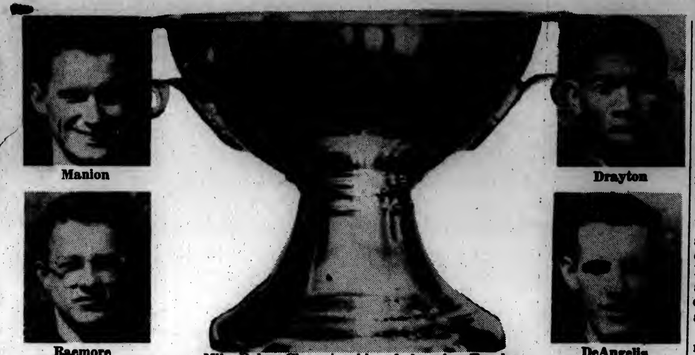
by Bill Circone

A talent laden Villanova golf team packed with power and potential is now the possessor of a 5-1 record.

Displaying their best, the 'Cats opened against local rival LaSalle. The 'Cats proved too much for the Explorers and demolished them 6 to 0 on the Aranomink Golf Course. Marty Connelly, Villanova co-captain, was low man in the opener, winning 5 and 4. Sophomore Dick Thomas fired a fine 78 with co-captain Jim Cahill close on his heels wth a 79.

Highlighting the Penn State match was the brilliant shooting of Connelly, who established a school record, while the Mainliners were being humbled in a 6-1 loss. The match was decided on the 21st hole where Connelly shot a birdie 3 to end with a winning 68. The other ace, Cahill, was shooting an excellent 73, but on the 19th hole after a sudden death play off. Junior Dave Doyle, the only other veteran, lost on the 18th hole while finishing with a solid 78.

With the indispensable absence felt but not missed and using 3 alternates, the 'Cats roared to a blazing finish to annihilate Temple 13½ to 4½. Low man for the day was Senior alternate, Frank Laevey with his season's best of 79.



For their third triumph of the young season Villanova swamped, outclassed, outshot and overmatched Gettysburg to the tune of 5 to 1 last Monday.

Tri-Match Win

In a great tri-match with West Chester and Muhlenberg, Villanova once more displayed their aggresiveness and fine shooting by emerging victorious. The 'Cats shut out Muhlenberg, 6 to 0, and defeated West Chester 5½ to ½ to make it a clean sweep for the afternoon.

Last Wednesday the V. U. linksmen routed Seton Hall 8-1. They were led by Dave Doyle (75) and Jim Cahill (77).

Mile Relay Championship of America Trophy

Relayers Win #6 At Penn Carnival

As the announcer bawled out, "The winner, Villanova Freshmen, setting a new carnival record for the freshman mile relay in the time of 3:16.1."

Ron Delaney said in his Irish brogue, "That makes it eight in a row for Villanova." This occurred during the 1959 Penn Relays. So far Delany has been a good prophet. Number six was chalked up less than two weeks ago.

On Saturday, April 30th, two recruits from last year's freshman team, a refugee from the two mile relay team, and a holdover from last year's Carnival champions defied the sportswriters, tradition, and several other good mile relay teams to win the Mile Relay Championship of America in 3:12.2.

The recruits, bespectacled Bob Raemore and Otis Paul Drayton, ran the last two legs of the race in the splendid times of 47.8 and 47.4 respectively. The two mercury-footed sophs increased a two-yard lead to twelve as they pulled away from the field.

DeAngelis Regains Lead

The refugee, Nick DeAngelis, ran the second leg of the race. He erased a small lead held by Manhattan, and streaked through his quarter in another great time, 47.7.

The holdover, junior Joe Manion, a converted sprinter, ran the opening leg of the race. He kept the team within very close distance of the leader. Although his time of 49.3 appears slow compared to the others, it must be considered that he had to start from a standstill while the others were running in their start.

In the pre-race prediction inserted into the program, six sportswriters and a guy called "Consensus" picked Morgan State to whip the Cats. Three of the other "experts" chose Villanova. Their prediction was based on the fact that Villanova had no established "wolf" for the anchor lap. That was before Saturday. After his 47.4 stint, coupled with the 47 flat he ran at Quantico, Drayton has to be Jumbo's "wolf."

Morgan Tough Outdoors

The competition was formidable. Morgan State, the victim of the Cats' eight furlong crew several times indoor, had improved since moving outdoors. They served notice to the track world by beating the Elliott men by seven yards at the Quantico Relays. Manhattan, always a threat had improved outdoors. Yale and Michigan who had each won two relay events already during the Carnival were definite threats.

However, when the gun signaled the lead-off men to spring off their starting blocks Manion forged into an early lead, then relinquished it to Manhattan and Morgan State by a couple of yards. The baton went to DeAngelis who roared around the first turn like a hurricane looking for something to destroy. He got the lead back, and from there on in it was Raemore increasing the lead and Drayton holding it against Morgan State's Nick Ellis.

880 Team in Lead

In the 880 relay the Wildcat team of Manion, Drayton, Raemore, and Budd took third place behind San Jose and Michigan. Villanova appeared to have the race won when Frank Budd, running on heart alone, reaggravated a pulled muscle in the last seventy yards.

Other Wildcat placers were Leon Pras in the 120 yard high hurdles behind Carl Brown of Winston-Salem and hirsute Bill Johnson of Maryland. Angelo Sivieri ran third in the college section of the 3000 meter Steeplechase. Jerry Domini, the soph shot putter, topped 50 feet for the second straight meet. He finished fifth.

In The Groove — by Dan Grove

It Happens Every Spring

Every spring for the past six years Villanova's mile relay team has commuted to Franklin Field, put on a short show, (the shorter the better) and then returned to the Main Line with another trophy. The trophy signifies the Mile Relay Championship of America.

This is very nice for Villanova fans, but what about the rest of the track world? They are becoming frustrated. Year after year sportswriters pick someone else to take the coveted title. In 1957 Texas decided to break Villanova's two year old monopoly. They brought along an anchorman named Eddie Southern just in case. Manhattan had a fair city team that year, helped along by Tom Murphy. As usual Morgan State, the perennial bridesmaid, was there. The end was in sight for Villanova, track "experts" claimed. Elliott countered with Olympians Delany and Jenkins, plus a sophomore named Collymore. When the Sunday paper went to press, it was Villanova by two yards over Texas and Morgan State, with Manhattan a close fourth.

The following year Jenkins was gone and Morgan State was due to win. A sophomore named Nick Ellis was their answer to success. Morgan State did win; for three quarters of a mile, that is. Collymore turned a ten yard deficit into a fifteen yard win. His lap was timed in 46 seconds and Villanova as a team broke their old record with a 3:11.8 clocking.

Last year it was the same story. Delany and Sydnor were gone and Morgan State, Manhattan, S.M.U., and Pitt all figured to cut the 'Cats out. Charley Stead denied them all. He captured the lead in the third leg running the fastest quarter of his life, 46.7. Collymore again outdistanced Ellis in a race that left the crowd limp.

This year's race is now history, also. Again the 'Cats went to the post as underdogs and pulled off the upset. Again Nick Ellis ran the anchor leg for Morgan State and again he saw the back of the white jersey. This time it was a new group who triumphed. Not one member graduates.

What is the answer to this dominance? Is it the uniform that makes the team great, that makes them turn in dazzling performances in the big show? The pin stripes of the Yankees, and the devil's red and blue of Calumet Farms is supposed to have this effect. Is it the man that stands behind the uniform, Jim Elliott, that "psyches" these four man teams into victory after victory? Maybe it's a combination of both. I am not sure. I only know, it happens every spring.

Where was the Hawk?

In a meet last Thursday, Villanova's powerful track team "edged" St. Joseph's College of Philadelphia 95-31 at the Stadium.

Leading the onslaught against the hapless Hawks were sophomores Leon Pras, Angelo Sivieri, and Otie Drayton. These men accomplished double wins in the low and high hurdles, the one and two-mile run, and the 100 and 220 yard dashes. Despite sunny skies the absence of a certain fair-weathered, feathered fan was significant.

'Cat Nine Beats LaSalle In Extra Innings 6-5

By JIM MURRAY

Since the walkathon at Princeton the Villanova baseball team has put together a four game winning streak.

The 'Cats have downed Seton Hall 7-4, St. Joe's 13-0, West Chester 4-2, and LaSalle 6-5 in a twelve inning thriller. Junior, Frank Kreutzer and soph, Phil Fidalgo have supplied the left-handed one two punch in winning two games each. What is more impressive is both lefties have gone the route in their wins.

Most recently the 'Cats beat the LaSalle Exporers at LaSalle. This was the second victory over LaSalle this season but the games were a lot different. In the first Villanova bombed LaSalle 13-5 but it took twelve innings of hustle to nip them 6-5.

Connie Newman started for the LaSalle nine, and was greeted by thirdbaseman Danny Renn's titanic blast to right center for a home run. LaSalle came right back and scored two runs in their half of the first when Ed O'Mara and Joe Tropea, who both singled, scored on errors.

Wiegand Walks

Al Wiegand started the fourth with a walk, moved to third when Newman tried to turn Tom Griffiths pop up bunt into a double play, but threw the ball wide of first. Don Melega smashed a double to center to score Wiegand. Melega moved to third on a passed ball and scored when Joe Cramer reached first on a high throw by Ed Rybacki, LaSalle's third sacker.

LaSalle tied the score in the fourth. Ed Rybacki scored on a infield hit by Newman that was questioned by everyone but the first base ump and the LaSalle nine.

Monahan Magnificent

Ed Monahan started the seventh with a line shot to center for a single. He stole second and scored when Bob Klinck reached second on error by Bob Egizio who threw over the first baseman's head.

Klinck scored on Al Weigand's smash to second and Villanova led 5-3. LaSalle got one in the eighth to make it 5-4 in the ninth.

Villanova failed to score in the ninth, Connie Newman (who did everything but coach,) lined a short to right that Monahan touched with his gloves and kept from going all the way. This left Newman on second, the next man popped up to third. With one out, pinch hitter Joe Ambrose scorched a ball over the third base sack and Newman scored and Ambrose had a ground rule double. (He had taken all four bases 'till Coach Art Mahon reminded the ump of the ground rule).

The next two innings were scoreless.

In the top of the twelth Ed Monahan blasted a triple to left and second when Al Wiegand sacrificed to right. Ed O'Mara got on in the twelth for LaSalle but was thrown out by Wiegand as he tried to steal second. This game leaves Villanova with perfect record in City Series to play to date 4-0.

Firing Frank

Against West Chester at home the 'Cats had again the pleasure of winning their second game. Earlier the wildcats came out on top 4-1 and this game followed the same pattern in a 4-2 deul. Frank Kreutzer's brilliant hurling was helped by Bobby (Home Run) Klinck's fifth homer of the season. Paul Borian and Ed Monahan the left handed, hard hitting outfield duo also drove in runs.

In a game with St. Joe's Philip (Alou) Fidalgo stole the spotlite from the hitting Wildcats by setting down 16 Hawks on strikeouts. He scattered five hits and drove in two runs himself.

Unlucky Hawk

Danny Renn made his debut at third this game and cracked four hits in six trips to the plate. When the game was over the 'Cats had 13 hits, 13 runs and most unluckily didn't even see the Hawk.

On a muddy field the Wildcats met the Seton Hall Pirates and came out on top 7-4.

Behind the eight hit hurling of Frank Kreutzer the 'Cats smashed out fifteen safeties.

Bobby "Babe" Klinck

The big guns: Bobby Klinck who hit two homers, Al Wiegand one, and special mention to Bill Platco who hit a four bagger that traveled the length of New Jersey. Shortstop Don Melega had three hits, and centerfielder Joe Cramer had a pair of lined singles.

These four games are typical of the baseball team's hustle and ability to win the Big Ones this year. There have been a lot of wins and the seasons not over yet.

'Cats Bats . . . Don Melega has shifted to shortstop in place of irreplaceable Fred Anthony who has shifted his .482 batting average to the hall of fame . . . Despite the play Joe Cramer got on his error in the Army game, he had two hits and is the best glove man on the team. He made" a catch in the Penn State game that defies description . . .

Intramural track meet, Thursday, May 12th, at 3:30 P.M. at the Stadium. Events: 100 yd. dash; 220 yd. dash; 440 yd. run; 880 yd. run; one-mile relay; shot put; and high jump.

Entry forms are available in Room 112 Alumni Hall. Entries close at 4:00 P.M., Wednesday, May 11th.

NO LATE ENTRIES.

SEVEN-YEAR TRACK STRING COMES TO END

Bathgate, McMonagle, Manahan Elected To Top Student Offices

Larry Bathgate, Jim McMonagle, and Pete Manahan were designated by the classes of 1961, 1962, 1963, respectively to fill the offices of class presidents in formal class elections held last Thursday.

Bob DeLisa, Tom Wall, and Bob Benson were nominated unopposed for the positions of chairman, vice-chairman, and secretary in formal student council nominations last Thursday night.

The absence of opposition to these "nominees" means that DeLisa, presently council vice-chairman, will assume the chairmanship. Wall, currently sophomore class president, will take over DeLisa's old job, and Benson, at present sophomore C&F day-hop representative, will be the secretary for the 1960-61 academic year.

Treasurer To Be Elected

The only council officer to be elected at tomorrow evening's final council session will be the treasurer. Nominees for the post are Jim Hooker, present council secretary, and Dick Wilder, Semper Fidelis representative. Jack Valva, junior C&F resident representative was also nominated but chose to withdraw last Friday.

Highlights of the class elections included a complete sweep by the "Voice of Unity" party of the class of 1963 and the election of two members of the basketball team to high class offices.

The only office not attained by the "V of U" party was the vice-presidency. Manahan, Dick Santo, Bob Mairone, Jim Howley, and Joe Tate carried the Unity ticket to Victory.

Tate, day-hop representative to council also polled the most votes cast for any one office, 362. Next highest was Tom Samulewicz, who garnered 351 in copping the vice-presidency of the class of 1961.

Cagers

"Sam", along with Jim McMonagle, junior class prexy, are members of coach Al Severance's basketball unit.

It was in McMonagle's class that the narrowest margins of victory were posted, elections co-chairmen Herb Lettau and Denny Cardone disclosed.

Mike Pastore defeated John Sweeney by a scant 7 votes to win the vice-presidential office.

In the election for secretary in the same class. Joe Noel edged Rich Lennon by 8 votes, 249-237.

The slimmest margin of victory, though, was tallied by Frank Greek in Arts day-hop representative contest of the class of '62, 95-92.

The Winners

Here is the complete list of winning candidates: Class of 1961—President, Larry Bathgate; Vice-president, Tom Samulewicz; Secretary, Butch McNally; Treasurer, Dave Grenon; Alumni representative, Bob Scalia; Resident representatives: Arts, Jim Strazzella; C&F, Dick Delaney; Engr., John Oberlies; Day-hop representatives:

Guest Lecturer To Discuss Twain

Dr. James R. Vitelli will deliver a special lecture entitled "Mark Twain, an Innocent Abroad" tomorrow at 3:30 in 110 C&F.

Dr. Vitelli, professor of English at Lafayette College will, on this fiftieth anniversary of the year of Twain's death, investigate the dichotomy that was Mark Twain.

The man who for too long had heard that European culture was superior to American, ventured to see for himself.

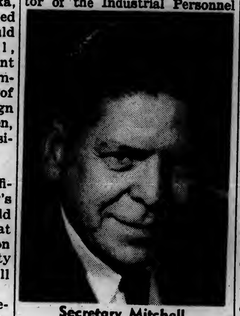
With honest candor, if at times brash or ignorant, he wrote home his fifty-nine letters to the newspapers in California and New York, doubting the authenticity of relics, joking about Biblical characters, mocking the reverent guides—all aimed at debunking the popular conception of Europe.

But underneath the levity and the scorn lurked Twain the believer, Twain the impressed, Twain the follower. This self-proclaimed amateur, inspecting the treasures of museums and art galleries, had found a charm and beauty wholly missing in his former life, and it was this charm and beauty to which he returned in the more than a dozen future trips to Europe that he made before his death.

He could still pose as the amateur from the West, but he was hooked and knew it.

Secretary Mitchell To Speak At Commencement Exercises

Honorable James P. Mitchell, United States Secretary of Labor, will deliver the main address to Villanova's graduates at Commencement Exercises on June 6.



Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President, announced that Honorary Degrees would be conferred upon Mitchell, William F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Company and a former chairman of the Villanova's Fund campaign and Dr. James P. Quindlen, prominent Philadelphia physician and university alumnus.

118th Commencement

The exercises, which will officially close the university's 118th academic year will be held in the campus Field House at 11 a.m. An academic procession of faculty members, University officials and the graduates will precede the exercises.

Nearly 700 students will receive degrees during the ceremonies which will be presided over by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Augustinian Provincial and Chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees.

A native of Little Silver, N. J., Secretary Mitchell was appointed to his labor post in October of 1953. He had previously served the government as director of the Industrial Personnel Division of the War Department and Assistant Secretary of the Army in charge of Manpower and Reserve Officer's affairs among other positions.

Secretary Mitchell

Mitchell was appointed to his present Cabinet post as Secretary of Labor by President Eisenhower on October 9, 1953. In this position he is chief labor advisor to the President and the coordinator of all labor activities of the Federal Government.

Directs Labor Department

He is responsible for the overall direction of the Department of Labor and for the enforcement of various labor laws administered by it. In addition to his regular duties, he chairs the Inter-Departmental Committee on Migratory Labor and the President's Distinguished Civilian Service Awards Board, and serves as Vice Chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts.

Secretary Mitchell is a member of the Cabinet Committee on Price Stability for Economic Growth, the President's Committee on Employment of the Physically Handicapped, and the Board of Directors of the American Red Cross.

Apostolic Delegate to Officiate at Science Bldg. Corner Stone Blessing

Archbishop Egidio Vagnozzi, Papal Delegate to the United States will officiate at ceremonies to be held this afternoon in connection with the blessing of the cornerstone of the new Science Building at 4:30 p.m.

The ceremonies will begin with a Mass of Thanksgiving to be celebrated by Archbishop Vagnozzi at the Grotto of Our Mother of Good Counsel. The blessing and laying of the cornerstone will fol'ow the Mass.

Archbishop Vagnozzi

This will be Archbishop Vagnozzi's first visit to the Philadelphia area since his appointment last year by Pope John to succeed Amleto Cardinal Cicognani, former Papal Delegate, now in Rome.

Rev. Daniel P. Falvey OSA Director of Villanova's Development Fund, has stated that the new Science Building is designed to meet the complex challenge of the Atomic age and will be equipped to handle the most specialized research problems and to offer maximum space for the university's enlarged enrollment of students in the basic sciences.

Two Wings

The building, composed of two wings linked with a bridge of classrooms above the first floor, will house a planetarium, observation terrace, and telescope of the Astronomy Department.

A "hot" laboratory for the study of radioactive materials will be located on the ground floor, equipped with a sub-critical nuclear reactor.

Reception and Dinner

A private reception and dinner for guests attending the blessing of the cornerstone will be held at 6:00 p.m. in the Field House. The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon OSA, Chairman of Villanova's Board of Trustees and Augustinian Provincial will speak during the dinner.

K. of C. Initiation

Robert O'Shea, Grand Knight of the Fr. Ludwig O.S.A. Council of the Knights of Columbus, has announced that the third degree will be conferred on Sunday, May 22nd, at 1:00 p.m. at the Flaherty Council in Glenside.

O'Shea added that any prospective candidates for the Knights may make arrangements to receive the first and second degrees at other Councils during the summer.

O'Shea stated that any student desiring information on the third degree should contact him in the Philosophy office.

Largest LYNX Is Due Tomorrow—Has Striking Cover

The largest issue of the LYNX ever published will be on sale tomorrow throughout the Villanova campus.

Frank Murtha, editor-in-chief of the student literary magazine said the issue will top both in size and content, any previous issue of the LYNX since its initiation twelve years ago.

"This semester's issue will also contain two other important firsts", Murtha stated. "The initial tri-color cover will be seen as well as a new LYNX seal, especially designed for the magazine and intended to be a permanant fixture."

Much Material Cut

The senior English major, who himself is readying a soon to be released novel, related that in contrast to past years more material than could be printed was submitted. "Many fine stories and poems had to be cut at the last moment because of space limitations", said the literary bellwether.

Outstanding graduating writers who appear in this latest issue are F. Anthony Macklin, J. R. Merikangas, and the Brooklyn-born editor himself. Murtha also made special mention of Donald Murphy, Brian Vachon, and David Cutts as outstanding contributors throughout the year, who are appearing in the new issue.

The editor reported that the LYNX can be purchased in the Pie Shoppe throughout the week for $.25 or in his own room, 215 Sheehan.

An Appraisal

Regardless of all the good or bad that has been thought, said, and written about Student Council 1959-60, one thing is certain—it has been an archetype of Villanova student government.

This is not to say that it has been the ideal which all subsequent Councils should emulate, nor has it been an example of a typical, mediocre student organization, striving for nothing more than average. Student Council 1959-60 is simply an excellent example of what can be expected of a given group of people united for a given purpose.

This year's Council lacked the exciting newness of Pat Nicholson's Council of two years ago—the Council by which the present Constitution was initiated. It also lacked the "can-it-succeed?" mystery of Bob Murphy's Council of last year.

Tom Hoffman's Council this year has operated under an established Constitution, with personnel whose collegiate environment has been predominantly pro-student government. It has not had to fight for its life or prove its theoretical value. Its big problem has been to prove its practical value—to show that it is more than an entertaining ornament.

To a certain extent, Student Council 1959-60 has succeeded in solving its problem. A core of active, determined workers quickly made itself heard. Because of its interest, this core can be forgiven the petty egotisms and jealousies which so often erupted into momentary melees on the Council floor. However, the fringe of cloddish do-nothings and perennial obstructionists ought not be forgiven for their impeding of progress.

Further, this year's Council has to its credit a number of worthwhile programs such at the Treasury, the Fine Arts Course, and the forum program. However, it has also considered any number of matters which were inconsequential, pointless, and for the most part, downright foolish.

We might suggest that Student Council 1960-61, which meets in its second joint session tomorrow evening, review the record of its predecessors. It is a record to be proud of, but not too proud of. It proves that things can be done, but indicates that this potential was not always actualized. It shows that students can work together for the good of themselves and of the University, but gives evidence that they did not always choose to do so.

We might also suggest that, in reviewing the record, the new Council make a mental note to attempt to bring to reality "Big Thinking," "A Respected Student Council," and other hackneyed phrases.

Counterpoint

Council Conservatives Can Constitution

By BILL SPEERS

Student Council 1959-60 has dropped the ball. The present Council might have retired as one of the finest in recent years. Instead it readies itself for an ungraceful, and for some members, a bitter exit.

With all the moaning that has been emitted by the anti-administration members that Mendel Hall will hear none of their progressive proposals, at the eleventh hour they turned out to be their own worst enemy.

The shame of it all is that, up to this point, the present Council, with all its faults, had been a fine one. With the acquisition of a Student Council treasury, the re-initiation of its Fine Arts course in the curriculum, and the movie program to its credit, a climactic atmosphere had been created. The climax was never realized.

Never Realized

It was never realized because some members (and they know who they are) thought it more expedient to place their own selfishness and pride above the general good of the Council and ultimately of the entire student body.

With all its faults, one would have to be blind not to see the long-time-coming advantages of the new defeated constitution prepared by vice-chairman Bob DeLisa and his associates.

Let's face it, the one big enemy of Villanova's Student Council in the past has not been the student body nor the administration as alleged on innumerable occasions by the Council buck-passers. The real enemy of Council in the past and present under the old constitution is itself.

Council Too Unwieldy

Like the multi-headed dragon cartooned in this paper some weeks back, the Council is too big, too cumbersome, too inflexible. Oft times it has been unable to control its own actions. The student government organ should and must be reduced by almost half.

Its awesomeness alone must have, at many times, frightened the non-Council member and put the administration on its guard against any sudden and drastic move by the gargantua.

One of the most interesting revelations coming out of heated debate on the new constitution was the pre-vote of the bill by three of the most experienced and most respected names in Villanova student government—Tom Hoffman, present chairman of the Council, Bob Murphy, last year's chairman, and the legendary Pat Nicholson, former chairman and initiator of the present constitution.

Ironing Out Needed

Each of these three men agreed that the constitution, as it stood, needed ironing out, but they saw that "hashing out" of the bill by the Council and its eventual adoption, would provide Villanova with a streamlined, functioning student governing body. It is difficult to effectively hash a motion out when one-third of the body boycotts the meeting because their only protest was that their organization would suffer or that they had had no active part in drawing up the bills.

The constitution is now back in the committee and it will probably be brought back in congress next September. To the returning members of the Council and the newly elected ones, we appeal that they carefully inspect the new Constitution and not be led by self-styled conservatives who would save the old constitution for posterity, while the old constitution's initiator would have it scrapped anyway.

Death, Loneliness Prevail In Campus Author's Works

by JIM McATEER

"Don't they know I want to be alone?"

Thus concludes the spring issue of The LYNX, Villanova's literary magazine, which goes on sale today. We might say that, with these words, The LYNX begins as well. For the dominant theme in this issue is also the traditional one: the loneliness of life, the aloneness of the sensitive person.

In reading the magazine, we were struck, again and again, page after page, with the pessimistic atmosphere. Later, running through the table of contents, we were startled by the sheer numerical preponderance of creations in a negative vein.

Short Stories: all concluding in a death of one sort or another. Perhaps the most enjoyable is Anthony Macklin's "Nightmare of Birds and Dogs," a work which relies for its power on vivid description and condensed impact.

J. L. McDonald, William Speers, and Donald Murphy, on the other hand, all devote some portion of their stories to a stream-of-consciousness defense of their feelings, a technique which we recognize as popular among today's writers, but one which we contend is not essential to a well-written story. In many instances in The LYNX, we feel another technique might have proved more effective.

Frank Murtha and Frank McCormick rely heavily on colloquial language as a medium of expression. This provides a pleasant change from the extensive narratives of the other stories.

From the reader's point of view, the most notable, enjoyable characteristics of the short stories is their attractive phraseology and smooth style. The selection of a perfect adjective, or the interpolation of an ideal descriptive passage, is always a pleasure for the reader to experience. Even the stream-of-consciousness, a style prone to roughness, never becomes too obscure to be enjoyable.

Poetry and More Poetry: both objective and subjective, emphasize the theme of the magazine. A sampling of the titles—"Tears," "Dry Patterns," "Nightfall"—indicate this emphasis.

Common to all the poetry is its intensely personal nature. A few of the poems left us with the impression that we had torn through the authors' skins and were seeing empty souls struggling to find an anchorage.

LYNX Editors Murtha (l.) and Macklin (r.)

Others, chiefly the objective poems, created an image of cold, scoffing commentators observing life: We must add, howerevr, that the mental images created, although negative, were pleasurable, and at times beautiful, in their blackness.

It should be mentioned that poetry editor Jim Merikangas has a section devoted to his works. This provides a selection of three poems, each approaching the basic loneliness from a different aspect. Also, imitations of Lewis Carroll and Horace, by Bruce Sturm and Eugene D'Aquili, respectively, issue warnings—the former ironically humorous, the latter sententiously stern—against complacency in life.

Special mention is due to two breaths of warmth in an otherwise chilly atmosphere. Niam Salfiti, a native of the Middle East, contributes an essay on the joys of Easter in the Holy Land, and David Cutts, in a vignette, illustrates how love can pierce the cold of winter.

Vignettes: except for Cutts', extend and expand the loneliness and death which pervade the entire LYNX. Carlo Lovechio's "Executioner" is a unique twist from beginning to end, Gary Susnjara's "Of Love and Hate" is ironic and pathetic, Joe Conlin's "One Life" is brutal and harsh.

This issue of the LYNX is particularly notable for two things: it is an exceptionally large magazine—apparently the production rate of Villanova's authors has increased, a happy sign. Also, as we have said a number of the works display a beauty of phrase and smoothness of style approaching the professional. Our single adverse criticism must be in the form of a question: Don't any of Villanova's writers remember how to smile?

African Clarifies Problem

Hits Natives' Role As Society's Prop

by FABIAN E. OKON

Both in the Union of South Africa and elsewhere in Africa much has been said, much has been written about the "Native Problem". The African has too often been presented to the non-African world as a problem and, at the extreme, as a burden. Given the geographical and social juxtaposition and economic interdependence of African and White in South Africa, this is clearly a lop-sided depiction of the South African scene.

A few passing remarks on the Native Problem may be in order. Perhaps there was a time when the African was a problem to the White man in South Africa. I refer to the African people's initial reluctance to abandon their time-honoured way of life for the unknown trials and tribulations of the 17th and 18th Century Western way of life. Recall that the Western way of life of that epoch was, in contrast to their own, in an unprecedented state of flux, commotion and confusion attendant on the commercial, industrial, religious, political and social revolutions which then convulsed Europe.

Out of Joint

Europe was out of joint, and many of the White settlers who came to South Africa were discarded limbs of the European civic body which had been dismembered by the protestant reformation and other upheavals. Those who came for religious sanctuary brought with them unresolved European religious conflicts and schisms; while their brothers were scouring the coasts of Africa for African men and women, boys and girls to be sold as slaves in the New World.

If the Africans were initially a problem, it was because they refused to be reduced to cheap hewers of stone in mines and quarries, or drawers of water in the white man's plantations and mansions in South Africa. They were being called upon to lay foundations and props in Africa for a civilization they did not understand; and what is worse, a civilization which neither understood them nor was psychologically flexible enough to accommodate them as human.

Once A Problem

Perhaps they were a problem, a drag to the wheels of the white man's progress in exploiting African resources. But that was mainly during the first century of white settlement. During the last two centuries the Africans have reluctantly but surely responded to the white man's call towards the Western way of life in South Africa. And since the beginning of the present century, their response has been accelerating. The South African social clock has been moving very fast—perhaps too fast for the South African whites' psychological balance, or, what is more, their political balance. Today they are panicking and there are frantic efforts to turn the clock back to a more reassuring hour. Today it is no longer the African but the White man who is a drag on the country's progress.

More than any other area on the surface of the globe, Africa has been the theatre of colonialist exploitation. There is no part of Africa which did not suffer the experience of having its peoples and territories torn off to satisfy the ambitions of this same colonialism.

Long Travail Together

After the African and the White man have travailed together for nearly 300 years in developing the country into the most economically advanced and further rapidly advancing country in Africa; after the African has made the reluctant sacrifice of the wholesomeness of the traditional community, clan and family; the reluctant sacrifice of field and flock, the reluctant sacrifice of the fresh and healthy air of the country-side for the stifling sickening dust and fumes of mine and factory; after the African and the White man have travelled together for almost 300 years-albeit at disproportionate paces—in the direction of Western civilization—yes, after all these, the White man turns round to the African and says: "Look, our journey has been a mistake. You and I cannot do it togther. You'd better leave me. You'd better go back home. You are taking the bread out of my mouth".

The African rejoinder to the suggestion is incontrovertible: "But the road has fallen in behind us, and my home is broken up. How can I go home now?"

We can at once see that South Africa is in a dilemma. But societal dilemmas are never static.

Group Differences

All differences between South African groups are regarded as absolute and timeless. The preservation of racial differences becomes something of a sacred duty. These differences must not be merged and obliterated in an integrated democracy. White and African must move apart lest they undo what God has done. The man-made cultural differences too must be preserved—each group by another. The numerical disproportion of 4 to 1 between African and White is also utilized in constructing the apartheid ideology. The former Director of the South African State Information Office declared in 1950:

"We Nationalists believe that we must maintain White supremacy for all time. A policy of partnership must lead to Black domination . . . We want the Bantu back in the reserves . . . We cannot have independent Bantu States to threaten white South Africa."

The Prime Minister endorsed this declaration when he stated: "We will give them more and more self-governing powers in their own areas gradually and slowly . . . (But) in their own areas they will always have to stand under the guardianship and domination of the White man in South Africa."

Apartheid Shameless

Apartheid therefore emerges in the final analysis, as a shameless and fradulent technique of white domination in South Africa.

The people are exposed each day to tortures, to terrorism, to vengeance, to the blindest and cruelest of summary executions which remind us of the darkest epochs of African history.

It is, therefore, in a totalitarian society that the Africans have been fated to strive for their emancipation; it is in a totalitarian society that they must seek to realize for themselves those values that now animate the free-world; it is here that they must consumate the transformation from the old to the integration of the new—amidst excruciating derivations. Their backs are bent, but not broken; their heads bloody, but unbowed. Their outcry is "Liberty in our time."

We stand for international peace and security in conformity with the United Nations Charter. This will enable us to assert our own African personality and to develop according to our own way of life, our own customs, traditions and cultures. We therefore abhor and vehemently denounce any attempt by one group of people to impose their own form of government or political ideology upon other people against their will.

FABIAN E. OKON, a graduate student at Villanova's History Department, is of African blood. Born in Nigeria, he was sent to the United States at the instigation of h's bishop, in order that he might advance his education to the point of being able to assume a position in the higher educational system of his homeland.

Here is Africa's problem: the native culture and custom has been uprooted by the more powerful, but not necessarily superior, Western civilizat'on. How is the proper balance to be restored, as it should be?

Seniors Plan Royersford Blast; Festival Tickets Now On Sale

The Senior Parting Festival will be held on June 4 at the Lakeview Amusement Park, Royersford, Pa. The activities, beginning at 2:00 p.m., will include swimming, boating picnicking, softball, baseball, and rodeos. Informal attire will be the rule of the day.

Tickets for the affair can be purchased in the Pie Shoppe and C&F Cafeteria. All tickets must be purchased by May 20. The price is $5.00 per couple.

Harry Rowe and Tom Moakley, co-chairmen, have stated that this year's Parting Festival promises to provide the class of '60 with more than an adequate opportunity to "put the lid on" the four years spent at Villanova.

Rowe stated that the highlight of the afternoon will be a Jazz Festival featuring the Dixieland Banjoliers, the Villanovans, and the "T" Tones from Rosemont.

The afternoon festivities will be concluded by a buffet dinner. The co-chairmen have also arranged for the seniors to dance to the music of Lou Dennison that evening.

Chemistry Exhibit

The Villanova Chemical Society was host to students and faculty members from Philadelphia and area high schools at the Annual Chemistry Fair. The Fair was held on Saturday, April 30, between one and five p.m.

The more than two hundred people who attended were taken on a tour of the different chemistry labs where they viewed exhibits and demonstrations which ranged from complicated instruments to the "hydrogen bomb." The tour also included a visit to the Villanova Observatory.

Ed Zehler, president of the Society and coordinator for the event, stated that the Fair was very successful and that preparations are underway to make next year's even better.

Law School Visitation

The Villanova Law School held its second annual "Day of Visitation" on Friday, May 8, to allow the members of the School's Board of Counsultors an inspection of the Law School in operation.

The twenty-five lawyers and judges who comprise the Board visited classes and discussed matters of curriculum and school activities such as the Moot Courts and the Student Bar Association.

After their inspection of the School, the visitors were guests of the University at a reception in Garey Hall.

Friday evening, the School of Law held its Seventh Annual Dinner in the dining area of the C&F Building.

The Honorable Charles E. Clark, the featured speaker, addressed the guests on "New Vistas for Young Lawyers." Among those in attendance were the Honorable Horace Stern and the Honorable Charles Alvin Jones, the former and the present Chief Justices of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court respectively.

Nurses Initiate Panel

Nursing Rounds, a new panel designed to answer nursing problems, will be held by the Villanova Division of Nursing in C & F Auditorium on Thursday, May 19, at 1:30. The forum, consisting of seniors, juniors, and sophomores, will discuss problems of students in specific clinical situations.

The subject of discussion will be "Identifving the Nursing Needs of a Patient with Esophageal Varices." Miss Phyllis Taylor, a sophomore student on affiliation at Fitzgerald-Mercy Hospital, will present the problem.

The program was initiated by Miss T. Christian, a faculty member who will serve as moderator. Its purpose is to meet the needs of the student nurse at Villanova. This is the first panel of its kind here.

Summer Registration

Pre-registration for Summer Day Students will be held Wednesday, May 18, through Friday, May 20. All students must pick up authorization forms from their respective deans.

Registration for Summer Evening Courses will be held Tuesday, May 31, from 7 to 10 p.m. Classes will begin June 1.

Club Holds Dinner

The annual dinner dance of the Philosophy Club will be held Thursday evening May 19, in the Bryn Mawr Deanery on the Bryn Mawr College campus.

Joe Mastromatto, president of the Philosophy Club, has stated that the tickets for the affair are priced at $3.00 and can still be obtained from him or through the Philosophy Office.

Trackmen Drop 1st Dual Meet In 7 Yrs. To Mature Marines

Star-Studded Quantico Squad Down Wildcats 84-47; Records Set

By DAN GROVE

Villanova's sophomore-studded track team went down to their first dual meet defeat in seven years last Friday at the hands of the best track team this writer has ever seen—the Quantico Marines. The final score was 84-47.

An enthusiastic crowd of several hundred was treated to a tremendous afternoon of track and field. The meet was highlighted by several records and near records.

Quantico, whose roster reads like a list of past IC4A champions, won eleven events. Ed Collymore, ex-VU standout shattered the track record for the 440 yard run by turning in an excellent 47.7. Bob Raemore was right with Collymore at the tape and finished in another record breaking time of 47.8. Joe Manion tied the old mark with 47.9.

Budd Nips Drayton

In the most exciting event of the day, Frank Budd snapped the inches in front of teammate Otie Drayton in the time of 9.7. for the 100 yard dash.

Drayton and Budd showed that the 'Cats will be tough in both sprints come IC4A time 10 days hence, by finishing first and third in the 220. Sandwiched IC4A champ, Ed Collymore. The time was a natty 20.8. natty 20.8.

Steady Leon Pras captured the 120 high hurdles for the 'Cats other win.

Quantico's showed great strength in the field events. Al Cantellos world record holder, heaved the javelin 250'9".

In the mile ex-IC4A champ Pete Close won easily in 4:11.4. Pole vaulters Mel Schwarz and Dave Tork each cleared 14'6".

Hubie the Key

Strictly on face value though the hardest defeat to take was the loss in the broad jump. Marine Bill Latting's 23' 5" was good enough for 5 points. Outdoor indoor IC4A champ John Buckley placed third with a disappointing of 21' 10½". However, Buck did not jump off his takeoff foot since it was still tender from a recent injury. Furthermore, he had only returned to practice two days before the meet. With the IC4As only 10 days away Buckley has a lot of hard practice to do if he hopes to take his third outdoor crown in a row.

There were two encouraging features, though, in the broad jump. Kent Lydic took second with a leap of 22' 3" and part-time thinclad Hubie White leaped 21' 3" despite the fact he took off a foot behind the board.

White also leaped 6' 3" in the high jump to capture second place. If the versatile sophomore decides to become a full-time trackman his potential points in the high jump and hop, step and jump could be the shot in the arm the Wildcats need to put them over the top in the IC4A's next week.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED

Sophomore Otie Drayton eases up just before he breaks tape in the 220 yard run in the Quantico meet last Friday. Lt. Ed Collymore, ex-Wildcat IC4A sprint king, finished two yards back of Drayton.

IN THE SPORTLITE — by JOHN DUFFY

Mr. T: Man Behind The Scenes

This week the Sportlite focuses on Jim Tuppeny. Tuppeny a mild and affable fellow is the assistant track coach at Villanova, a position he has held since 1953. Mr. T is the type of person who would fill the bill as the ideal big brother. His personable smile and quiet voice gives people a feeling of confidence in him.

When a promising pole vaulter by the name of Bragg entered VU in 1913 Mr. Tuppeny, a field event expert, was asked to help develop Bragg. Their is no need to mention the fact that Bragg can pole vault, which speaks very well for Tuppeny as a coach.

Bragg Mr. T's Protege

Tuppeny's greatest satisfaction as a coach came in the '59 Inquirer Meet when Bragg broke the world pole vault record. When he was asked about Bragg's chance in the Olympics at Rome this summer Tuppeny said, "Don's chances are good providing God gives him his health. He would have won easily the last time had he been healthy."

A few other athletes of note note that Tuppeny has developed are Phil Reavis and Charlie Stead.

When it comes to field events Tuppeny was no slouch himself. He tore up the Catholic league while he was at West Catholic in the city. He graduated from West in 1943. After three years in the Navy during the war Tuppeny entered La Salle College. At LaSalle he distinguished himself by winning the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate Pole Vault Championship three times, Middle Atlantic A.A.U. pole vault championship from '48 to '50 ,and he was the Middle Atlantic A.A.U. high hurdles title holder in 1947.

Captained LaSalle

Still another honor came Mr. T's, way when he was captain of the LaSalle Track Team in 1950. He was the first person to captain a LaSalle championship team. It won the Middle Atlantic Intercollegiate track crown.

Freddie Likes 'Cats Charley Picks Yale For IC4A Crown

by MIKE DONAHUE

The following conversation was overheard in the Pie Shoppe Monday. The disputants were those two widely renowned C&F'ers, Charley and Freddy.

Looking slightly bewildered at the unfamiliar surroundings, Freddy urbanely commented, "Nice fresco on the partition isn't it, Charley?"

"Fresco? That's a mural, Freddy."

"Well, whatever it is, I think it's appropriate in that it depicts athletes n various athletic poses. You know Villanova must be the greatest all-around Catholic sports college in the country. A basketball team that reaches the quarterfinals of the NIT, a baseball team that will probably make the district finals of the NCAA tournament, a sophomore studded track team that wins the IC4A indoor crown, and is going to win the outdoor IC4A's here next week. All this and a football team, too.

"I don't like to disillusion you, Freddie, but Yale's going to take the IC4A's."

"Yale? Just because Jim Stack ran a 47 flat quarter last Saturday and they have a raft of good half-milers doesn't mean they're a shoo-in."

"Yeah, but that's not all, Fred. They have a good miler in Ed Slwwik, a formidable weight man in Mike Pule, and a pair of sprinters, Steve Snyder and Dave Bain who might give Otie and Budd a hard time."

"Give them a hard time? Get serious Charlie. Did you see the Quantico meet Friday? Budd nipped Otie in the 100 and then Drayton come back to win the 220 in a cakewalk."

"Cakewalk? The picture I saw showed him beating Collymore by a mere two or three yards."

"Yeah, but he had him all the way. At 50 yards Colly was dead last, a good seven yards behind Drayton."

"O.K. I'll concede you the fact that we look good in the sprint, But don't forget we'll probably have to count Buckley out in the broad jump."

"Yeah, I'll admit Buck didn't look too great Friday. But remember he was jumping off his left foot."

"So?"

"He usually hits the boards with his right foot. But he had to go off his left Friday since his right ankle was still weak."

"You think he'll be ready by next week?"

"Hmm . . . Let's talk about the mile?"

'How about the mile?"

"Sivieri ran a 4:16.9 against LaSalle. If he does it again he might get us a third place. Then there's Raemore and Manion in the 440, Patty and Nicky in the half, and of course the mile relayers anchored by Otie (the wolf) Drayton."

"You know something you've overlooked, Freddy, my boy?"

"Whazzat, Charley?"

"Penn State and Manhattan."

"No sweat. Plenty of depth but no blue ribbon boys."

"I'll still take Yale with 34 points."

"Nice guy. My pick's the 'Cats with 35 and a new track record for the mile relay."

"Let's get back to our element."

"Might as well, can't dance."

Exeunt.

Olive Runs 2:00.1 Half In Intramural Track Meet

by HANK SCHULTZ

The end of another year is at hand at Villanova, and with it, the end of another year of intramurals. This year has seen many exciting contests, and Ed Geisz, director of intramurals, states that all in all, it has been a very successful year.

In the fall, there was the yearly Soph-Frosh Muff Day. After a very exciting day and a few outbursts of lenthusiasm, the Sophs were named the victors.

Touch football also had a strong place in the fall's program. For a while, weather held up the final game, but it was finally played, and the Old Men were named champs.

Soccer Introduced

Following football came the perennial favorite, basketball, and a new sport, soccer. The soccer league had only six teams but from the amount of spectators at each game, Ed Geisz confidently predicts more competition next year.

Basketball again proved to be the number one sport on the intramural calendar. For four months, the different teams kept the courts at Alumni and the Field House busy. After all the scores were in, and an exciting play-off was held, the Horse Aces had captured the crown.

By this time, spring had come, and many students took their gloves out of moth balls for the action ahead. The season proved to be very successful, though short, and on Monday of this week, the finals got underway. Jim Moran hopes to announce the winners by the end of next week. This announcement will bring the intramurals to an end.

Bob Samango broke the old shot-put record of 37' 3" with a heave of 42' 6", and Bob Olive won the half-mile with a time of 2:01.8, breaking the old mark by :14.4.

Double Winners

The double winners were Don Deutsch in the 100 and 220 dashes, and Rick Fittin in the 40 and high jump. Deutch's times were 11.2 and 25.5, while Fitten put in a 1:04.0 time and then proceeded to clear the bar at 5' 6". In the high jump, he was tied by Bob Doyle.

Other winners were John Lucey with a 5:05.9 mile run, and a Frosh team of Oliver, Kelly, Horin, and Fitten, who ran the mile relay in 3:57.6. With the exception of Doyle, a Soph, all the winners were Frosh.

Science Building Named Mendel Hall

Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Provincial, has declared that the new science building will be known as Mendel Hall.

"The new building has been named to honor Gregor Johann Mendel, the humble but imaginative priest, the Augustinian, who made such important discoveries in the study of heredity," Father Donnellon declared at the reception held after the cornerstone of the building was laid last Tuesday. No new name for the present Mendel Hall was mentioned.

Papal Delegate Officiates

Most Rev. Egidio Vagnozzi, Papal Delegate to the United States, officiated at the seremonies, which began with a Mass of Thanksgiving celebrated at the Grotto of Our Mother of Good Counsel.

Following the Mass, the cornerstone was dedicated, after which Archbishop Vagnozzi decared that a building of the magnitude of the new Mendel Hall acts as an expression of faith in the affinity and harmony of science and religion. He also expressed the hope that Villanova may prosper and remain one of the leading institutions of higher learning in the United States.

Most Rev. Egidio Vagnozzi, Apostole Delegate to the U. S., concludes Mass of Thanksgiving and proceeds to bless Science Building cornerstone.

Mastrangelo To Be '60 Valedictorian

Villanova will conduct its 118th commencement exercises on Monday, June 6 at 11 a.m. in the Field House. At that time approximately 700 seniors will receive their degrees.

The Valedictorian for the graduation will be Michael Mastrangelo, a Biology major in the Arts and Science division. Mr. Mastrangelo will graduate summa cum laude. Other seniors receiving highest honors in their respective divisions are: Joseph F. Schanne in Engineering and Peter Farrell and Charles Carroll in Commerce and Finance.

Tickets for admission to the ceremonies will not be issued as in former years. The seats in the Field House will be available on a first come first serve basis.

The academic procession of faculty members, University officials and the graduates will enter the Field House at 10:30. The Very Rev. James A. Donnellon O.S.A. Augustinian Provincial, will preside over the ceremonies. The Honorable James P. Mitchell, United States Secretary of Labor, will deliver the main address to the graduates.

Honorary Degrees will be conferred upon Mitchell, William F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Company and a former chairman of the Villanova Fund Campaign, Dr. James P. Quindlen, prominent Philadelphia physician and university alumnus, and G. B. Harrison, prominent english scholar.

The actual preparations for commencement excerises will get underway on Saturday, June 4, with the distribution of caps and gowns in Vasey Hall. On Sunday, June 5, a Baccalaureate Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. in the Field House. Following the Mass, a breakfast for the seniors will be served in Dougherty Hall.

Mr. Mitchell, guest speaker at the exercises on Monday is a native of Little Silver, N.J. Secretary Mitchell was appointed to his labor post in October of 1953. At present he is responsible for the over-all direction of the Department of Labor and for the enforcement of various labor laws administered by it.

DeLisa Acclaimed Head Of Next Year's Council

Bob DeLisa was acclaimed President of the Student Body and Chairman of the Student Council at the second joint session of the Council, held last Wednesday evening.

Also elected to Council offices were Tom Wall, acclaimed Vice-Chairman, Jim Hooker, who was elected Treasurer over Dick Wilder, C&F representative, and Bob Benson, unanimously elected Secretary.

DeLisa, Wall, and Benson had been single nominees for their respective offices. The former two were installed by acclamation of the Council. A single dissent from Brian Scully, engineering rep, prevented Benson's acclamation; but when the name was submitted to regular voice vote, no objections were heard.

Also elected were 15 of the new Council members to the Student Senate. The meeting was concluded with remarks by retiring Chairman Tom Hoffman and Council Moderator Rev. Dante Girolami, OSA.

AAUP Senior Awards

Four seniors, one from each undergraduate school, are receiving the annual award of the American Association of University Professors, Villanova Chapter.

They are: Thomas A. Hoffman, science major; William F. Coyle, economics major; Thomas J. Breslin, mechanical engineering; and Genevieve M. Bartol, nursing.

The award was instituted three years ago to recognize excellence combined with outstanding qualities of character and leadership. As originally established, it was given to one graduate only. This year, however, a decision was made to increase the number of recipients to honor each division of the university.

Presentation of the award, in the form of a key suitably inscribed, is being made at a luncheon this week, attended by officers of the local AAUP Chapter and members of the award committee. Professor John G. Stephenson of the Law School is the president of the Villanova Chapter for 1960-61.

Kirk, Wesley Are New LYNX Editors

Vincent Kirk, junior Math major, and J. Michael Wesley, junior Arts, will serve as next year's LYNX co-Editors, according to Dr. John S. Phillipson, co-moderator of the campus literary magazine.

Frank Martha, current editor, whose 80-page literary magazine appeared last week, declared that "both Vince and Mike have indicated tremendous interest and ability in their association with the LYNX this past year. I am certain that they will work together to produce one of the finest publications on campus next year."

Kirk has served as exchange editor this year, and Wesley has been copy editor. The new editors immediately announced embryonic plans for next year's magazine.

Wesley declared that "We will not necessarily strive for large issues during the coming year. We intend to emphasize the quality of the material we publish, and to limit the number of pages in our issues, if necessary, to maintain the quality."

Kirk stated that "Anyone who can offer any suggestion as to how the LYNX might improve itself next year is strongly urged to communicate with the editors in the Publication Office in Dougherty Hall. We are very much interested in attracting the participation of as many people as possible in the production of next year's LYNX."

Logue's Book Gets Plaudits

"The Great Debate On Charter Reform: A Proposal To Strengthen the United Nations", a book by Villanova's Professor John Logue, has recently been published by the Fordham University Press.

Logue, who is a member of the History and Political Science Department, has received favorable comments on his book from such notables as Senator John F. Kennedy, Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, Chester Bowles, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Hans J. Morgenthau, director of the Center for the Study of American Foreign and Military Policy.

In the publication, Logue analyzes the arguments for and against strengthening the United Nations, and examines the conflicting political philosophies which the different proposals imply.

The Federalist Newsletter, organ of the United World Federalists, describes the book as "brilliant".

Jack Schmidt Gains Chem. Club Award

Jack Schmidt, Villanova's highest-ranking senior chemistry major, was awarded the American Chemical Award at a recent meeting of the Chemistry Club.

John Hauser and Joseph Riemar, also seniors, received the American Institute of Chemists' Award and the Merck Index Award, respectively, at the same meeting.

Also honored were John Judson, the highest-ranking junior, who received the junior Merck Index Award, and James O'Brian and Christopher Uzelmeier, the top freshmen, who received the Chemical Rubber Handbook Award.

Medieval Scholar Appointed To V.U.

Dr. Donald A. Gallagher, vice-chairman of the Philosophy Department, announced the appointment, to Villanova, of Dr. Wolfgang Kluxen as visiting professor for 1960-61.

Dr. Gallagher stated that the visiting professor is well-known in European circles for his scholarship in the field of medieval studies and in particular, medieval philosophy.

For the next two semesters, Kluxen will conduct courses in the history of philosophy, Saint Thomas, and contemporary European philosophy.

Gallagher also reported the appointment of Professor John Tich of Xavier University, Cincinnati, Ohio, as a regular member of the philosophy staff. Tich has studied philosophy and classics at Marquette University, Notre Dame University, and the University of Chicago.

He will serve here as assistant professor of philosophy.

A Farewell

The VILLANOVAN takes this opportunity to publicly commend and thank anyone and everyone connected with the most successful academic year, 1959-1960, and to extend best wishes to all graduates of the Class of 1960.

A Rebuttal

Retiring Student Council Chairman Tom Hoffman, in his public evaluation of the Student Council and its relationship with the University at large, which was delivered before the second joint Council session last Wednesday evening, made certain direct references to this newspaper; references which we feel should be elucidated for the benefit of those individuals who were witness td them, and of the student body as represented by those witnesses.

Mr. Hoffman said, in effect, that this newspaper had, on occasion, assumed a more or less critical stand against the Council. He expressed the opinion that this criticism was unfair and unjustified, and then urged his listeners not to believe a word of what they read.

The VILLANOVAN bases its objections to those statements on three points: first, Mr. Hoffman qualified his remarks in private, after the meeting. We contend that this qualification should be made as public as the original statements. However, since the qualification was of a personal nature, we feel it is not our place to comment on it as such, and prefer to allow Mr. Hoffman complete freedom to conclude the matter as he sees fit.

Second, The VILLANOVAN was not the only campus organization which made public statements which could be construed as indicating opinion independent of approved Student Council opinion. We are not happy about such remarks as Mr. Hoffman's, which we feel were patently unjustified, but we are quite immune to their "sting," possibly because Mr. Hoffman is by no means the only party who has taken exception to VILLANOVAN opinion during the past year. We feel, however, that in the interest of the "justice" which he so ardently advances, he should have placed his criticism in proper perspective before his audience by comparing our stand with the stand taken by other campus groups, both public and private.

Third, the nature of Mr. Hoffman's audience should be considered. Perhaps he does not fully realize the unique position he holds by virtue of his office. His audience last Wednesday, besides being the official representative of the entire student body, was composed of individuals who, in view of the vigor with which they sought their present positions, might be expected to desire to emulate the former Chairman as closely as possible.

Further, they are, for the most part, completely inexperienced at being publicly exhibited through the pages of this newspaper. Therefore, it is quite possible that they may erroneously assume that Mr. Hoffman's was the accepted and approved manner of dealing with The VILLANOVAN.

The VILLANOVAN has always done its best to maintain complete objectivity in allotting space to publicize the various events upon which Council members depend for their political life. We admit, however, that absolute impartiality may have occasionally been overlooked in the past through an error in human judgement; and we trust, therefore, that no stumbling-blocks will be placed in the path of our judgment by a belligerent attitude, either in public or in private, on the part of anyone who is in any way associated with The VILLANOVAN.

Father Gildea Explains Confusion

by JIM McATEER

"The present system is certainly not makeshift; you can be sure that it has been given considerable thought, and that a 'post-mortem' will be held to determine its value."

So declared Rev. Joseph Gildea, OSA, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, in reply to comment and criticism of the current schedule which spreads final examinations over a 15-day period, and has necessitated the scheduling of make-up examinations in the evenings, on Ascension Thursday and on Saturday.

Grotesque Conflicts

In discussing the situation with Father Gildea, this writer brought up the fact that some students have had as many as five examinations scheduled on the same day; that, until last Friday, many teachers of undergraduates had no idea when their final exam was to be given; and that there were numerous complaints from teachers who, as yet, could see no reasonable way to arrange make-up tests for those students who were prevented from taking the regularly-scheduled test because of conflicts.

The affable administrator expressed his concern at the difficulty, but pointed out that "dates and times for examinations are arranged by the deans. All this office does is assign rooms in which the exams are to be conducted."

However, as the official ultimately in charge of all academic affairs, Father Gildea consented to try to explain the reason for the apparent confusion.

Not Utopia

"In the first place," he said, "this is not Utopia. There has always been difficulty in scheduling this sort of thing; there always will be." He gave an example: Many engineers take courses in Industrial Administration to prepare them for management in business. Dean J. Stanley Morehouse of the Engineering school, for instance, selects a day for all engineers' elective exams, at which time all engineers with an I.A. elective will be tested. Meanwhile, Rev. Joseph Bartley, OSA, Commerce and Finance Dean, has scheduled I.A. exams in such a way as to provide for the smoothest possible functioning of his division. "Naturally, neither Father Bartley nor Dean Morehouse can always arrange his plans to fit the others, so conflicts result.

"Secondly, it was ridiculous to conclude an examination period on, say June 4, and expect teachers to have all seniors' records available in time for a June 6 graduation." Therefore, he declared, senior exams were advanced a week, in order to allow teachers a reasonable amount of time to close their books and report grades to the recorder. "We felt it was unfair to keep a senior up in the air until graduation morning as to whether or not he would actually graduate," Father stated.

Overlapping

What about the resulting overlapping of senior and undergraduate exam schedules, which, in particular, affects juniors who have selected senior courses? "Well, this overlapping exists chiefly in the Liberal Arts school," Father replied. He went on to explain that most other courses, such as Nursing, Engineering, Science, and C&F, require a definite, step-by-step procedure, each semester's work being based upon the preceding semester's work. Consequently, few juniors, other than Arts majors, are affected by overlapping and resultant conflicts.

"As for those who are affected, a definite procedure has been set up whereby it falls upon the teacher to reconcile conflicts by scheduling a make-up exam."

Will the system continue? "At this time it is hard to say," Father Gildea stated. "It will probably be in effect next year, because the Academic Calendar for 1960-61 has already been published." The future of the system depends on the conclusions reached at a "post-mortem" conference which will be held during the summer. There, the various deans and other officials concerned will be asked their opinion of the new system, and the results will determine its value and practicality.

The biggest event of next year will undoubtedly be the opening of the new science building. Lost in all that eventual exhilaration and chest-puffing will be the, then forgotten, corner stone laying which took place last week.

We don't think the event should completely die without complimenting all those involved who assisted in making the event a success. We thought the exercise particularly effective in its combination of pomp and simplicity.

The Mass celebrated in the grotto by the apostolic delegate along with the fine choral assistence of the Villanova Singers and the official presence of two bishops and Father Donnellon (Augustinian Provincial) lent the function a mark of ecclesiastical dignity and permanence.

The only aspect that may have cast a discerning shadow over the affair was the note of incongruity brought about when the apostolic delegate was forced to pass among the straw-hatted band members in order to reach the building. For some reason those lids just didn't go.

Dinner Dance Co-Chairmen Named by Larry Bathgate

Bob Redmond and Nick Cassetta have been named co-chairmen for the class of 1961's senior Dinner Dance.

This announcement was made by newly-elected class president, Larry Bathgate at a class meeting held last Thursday.

Redmond, day-hop Arts, ran for senior day-hop representative to Student Council and was co-chairman of the Junior Prom.

Cassetta, resident Arts, was chairman for the Junior Ring breakfast and is presently secretary of the class.

"These men were chosen because we felt that they've shown a real interest in class affairs along with a willingness to work," Bathgate explained.

Steering Committee

Bathgate also revealed the identity of the 57 members of the senior class steering committee. They were selected by Bathgate, vice-president Tom Samulewicz, secretary Butch McNally, and treasurer Dave Grenon from a list of 150 names.

Also Tony Intrieri, Dick Keeley, Dan Kelly, Al. Attention baseball fans! Revenge is sweet.

The Villanova baseball team has met the St. Joseph College of Philadelphia baseball team. Result: Villanova 29 runs, 30 hits, and 35 strikeouts, while the Hawks had 1 run and 8 hits.

The most recent encounter ended 16-1 with lefty Frank Kreutzer shooting down 21 Hawks via the strikeout route.

The game needs no revival since the statistics tell the story with them getting only three hits off Kreutzer.

In a game with Navy last week, the 'Cats dropped a close one by 4-2, rather they gave a game to Navy by 4-2. Navy's four unearned runs while Phil Fidalgo pitched a brilliant game. He struck out twelve Middies and allowed only five hits.

All-American hurler Chuck Davis held the 'Cats to seven safeties but their two runs were earned.

In a game on Fathers' day, Seton Hall took revenge on an earlier 7-4 setback by the 'Cats to win 16-13. Yes, 16-13, was the score and the 'Cats had the winning run at the plate on the final out.

In their second meeting with Temple Owls, the 'Cats came out on top. The margin was a 4-3, count in a contrast to the first 9-3 runaway.

Monahan continued his victory over the Owl hurler Don Flynn when he smashed a ground rule double over the 400 ft. centerfield fence, to drive in the first Villanova tally. The game settled down to a 3-1 contest when Temple pushed across two runs in the ninth.

Phil Fidalgo relieved his fellow lefty and got credit for the win when the 'Cats scored the winning run in the eleventh.

IC4A's Start Here Friday

Friday and Saturday the 84th IC4A Track and Field Championships will be held at the Villanova Stadium. Forty-eight schools will be represented in this Olympic Year Classic.

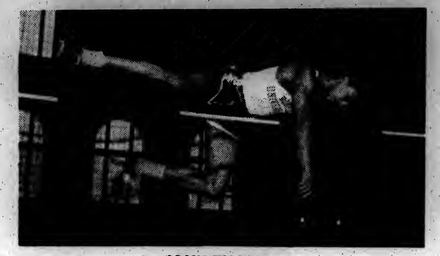
Among these forty-eight teams will be the defending outdoor champion Penn State, the indoor champion and host Villanova, four-time outdoor champion Manhattan, and the strong Yale team.

This year's meet will be highlighted by four new events to be held in conjunction with the Olympic Development Standards. These events are: the hop, step and jump; the 3000 meter steeplechase; the 440 yard hurdles; and the 3 mile run.

Six Champs Return

Returning are six of last year's individual champions. Bobby Brown of Penn State, last year's 100 yard dash winner and Penn Relay champion, will be here along with his teammate Dick Engelbrink, last year's winner over the two mile route.

Villanova's John Buckley, outdoor broad jump champion for the past two years, will be back to defend his crown, even though his right ankle has been injured. Hurdler Bill Johnson of Maryland will try to stave off the assault of the other top hurdlers in the 120 yard highs. His fellow thinclad from College Park, Bjorn Anderson, will try to push to his second straight pole vault crown. The other returning champ is John Lawlor of Boston University, IC4A record holder in the 16 pound hammer throw.



The scramble for top team and individual honors should produce some terrific competition. The fields in the sprints and middle distance running events are especially outstanding.

Good Field in Sprints

In the 100 and 220 yard dashes, Villanova's Paul Drayton and Frank Budd; Manhattan's John Fernandes; Maryland's Jonas Spiegal; Penn State's Bobby Brown; Steve Snyder of Yale and Mel Barnwell of Pitt will provide most of the excitement.

The 440 yard run will feature Jim Stack of Yale (47.0); Bob Raemore, Villanova (47.8); Dick Edmunds of Princeton (46.9) and a host of other stars.

There is only one event in which the competition for first place will not be keen. That is the high jump, with John Thomas standing tall against the rest of the field.

Wildcat Linksmen Humiliate Hawks After Loss To Penn

Still displaying their tremendous power and aggressive play the 'Cats linksmen have been somewhat tamed in their last few outings, but show promise of returning to their past peak performances.

Traveling to Princeton, who showed little hospitality, the 'Cats returned home nursing a 5 to 2 defeat. Highlighting the match was Jay Cahill's excellent form in vanquishing the Intercollegiate runnerup by one stroke. Al Bilder also won his match from a contender for national honors.

Rebounding, the 'Cats humbled St. Joseph's 16 to 2. Leading the 'Cats in this rampage were co-captains Cahill and Connelly, both shooting 75's and winning their respective matches. The entire team in this tremendous display of power and form, shot in the high 70's.

Slowing the pace down a little, Villanova met its match and match it was. The flashy contingent from the Mainline was no competition for the Penn men, who were 2nd in the Eastern Intercollegiates. The 'Cats were refuted 7 to 0 with the aces of V. U. unable to break the ice.

The boys hastily made reparation as they sent a tough Georgetown squad to defeat 4 to 3. This was quite an accomplishment in so far as Georgetown was 5th in the FIC, Cahill, Bilder, Doyle, and Mazzie all won their matches handily.

The injury-riddled 'Cats took on rival LaSalle and suffered defeat, losing 10 to 8. Cahill scored 3 points with a blazing 76. Connelly shot a solid 80 but was beaten, while Doyle lost on the 18th hole by a half point.

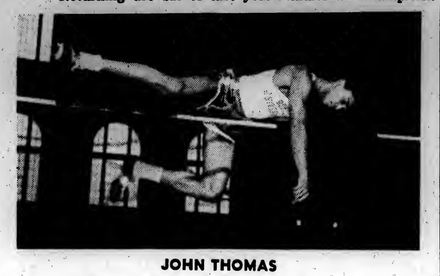
Hurdler Bill Johnson of Maryland will try to stave off the assault of the other top hurdlers in the 120 yard highs. His fellow thinclad from College Park, Bjorn Anderson, will try to push to his second straight pole vault crown. The other returning champ is John Lawlor of Boston University, IC4A record holder in the 16 pound hammer throw.



The scramble for top team and individual honors should produce some terrific competition. The fields in the sprints and middle distance running events are especially outstanding.

Good Field in Sprints

In the 100 and 220 yard dashes, Villanova's Paul Drayton and Frank Budd; Manhattan's John Fernandez; Maryland's Jonas Spiegal; Penn State's Bobby Brown; Steve Snyder of Yale and Mel Barnwell of Pitt will provide most of the excitement.

The 440 yard run will feature Jim Stack of Yale (47.0); Bob Raemore, Villanova (47.8); Dick Edmunds of Princeton (46.9) and a host of other stars.

There is only one event in which the competition for first place will not be keen. That is the high jump, with John Thomas standing tall against the rest of the field.

Wildcat Linksmen Humiliate Hawks After Loss To Penn

Still displaying their tremendous power and aggressive play the 'Cats linksmen have been somewhat tamed in their last few outings, but show promise of returning to their past peak performances.

Traveling to Princeton, who showed little hospitality, the 'Cats returned home nursing a 5 to 2 defeat. Highlighting the match was Jay Cahill's excellent form in vanquishing the Intercollegiate runnerup by one stroke. Al Bilder also won his match from a contender for national honors.

Rebounding, the 'Cats humbled St. Joseph's 16 to 2. Leading the 'Cats in this rampage were co-captains Cahill and Connelly, both shooting 75's and winning their respective matches. The entire team in this tremendous display of power and form, shot in the high 70's.

Slowing the pace down a little, Villanova met its match and match it was. The flashy contingent from the Mainline was no competition for the Penn men, who were 2nd in the Eastern Intercollegiates. The 'Cats were refuted 7 to 0 with the aces of V. U. unable to break the ice.

The boys hastily made reparation as they sent a tough Georgetown squad to defeat 4 to 3. This was quite an accomplishment in so far as Georgetown was 5th in the FIC, Cahill, Bilder, Doyle, and Mazzie all won their matches handily.

The injury-riddled 'Cats took on rival LaSalle and suffered defeat, losing 10 to 8. Cahill scored 3 points with a blazing 76. Connelly shot a solid 80 but was beaten, while Doyle lost on the 18th hole by a half point.

Mahan Men To Play St. John's In Cooperstown

The NCAA baseball selection committee selected Villanova (14-4) for a bid in the regional playoffs.

The Wildcats, who are undefeated in City Series competition (6-0), have only two games left before they enter the playoffs.

Villanova will meet St. John's in the first game, while Colgate meets Hofstra in the second game of the playoffs, to be held on Friday and Saturday at Coopertown, New York.

Series in Omaha

The winners of the first games will meet in a championship round the following evening. The champions of District II will then go to Omaha, Nebraska, to participate in the college World Series.

Coach Art Mahan's baseball 'Cats have been to the regionals on four previous occasions, only to reach the final round without making the trip to Omaha. Most recently, in 1958, the 'Cats were nipped 2-1 by New York University at Connie Mack Stadium.

Coach's 15 Years

In Art Mahan, the Wildcats have a most competent and most exacting coach. Having spent about 15 years in major and minor league baseball, he not only knows the game, but he knows how to transmit his knowledge to the players.

The difference in the good pitchers becoming great pitchers, the fair hitters becoming sluggers, and the fielders being a polished unit is the net result of Art Mahan's coaching.

Lest we forget the players, let's make special mention of captain Fred Anthony. Fred was taken out of action with a broken collarbone in the first Temple game. This game was a big step toward the tournament when the Wildcats stopped the Owls' 11-game winning streak.

Spirit Plus

The spirit Freddy passed out to the team in this game, as well as in the first nine he played in, is an intangible asset in evaluating the team's success. He hit .484; that helped, too.

Moving around the infield, first-string catcher Al Wiegand is a big reason for the 'Cats success. Only a 19-year-old sophomore, Al has moved his 6-1, 200 pound frame behind the plate with great ability.

Platco Lethal

At first base, slender Bill Platco guards the sack for the 'Cats. With little experience in his first year at first base, Billy has improved with every game. His lethal bat has been pounding out hits all season, and Bill is currently hitting around .400. Bill is a junior.

The second baseman, Bobby (Rabbit) Klinck, is a man of distinction. At the keystone spot, Bobby moves with the quickness of a rabbit. Also a .400 hitter, the affable senior has been hitting home runs like they were singles.

Don Melaga, who started the season at third and moved to short when Anthony was injured, is a study in contrast. Don is the real Perry Como of the team, a real showman, completely relaxed.

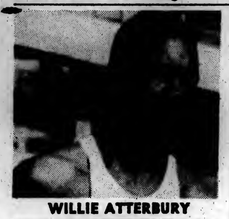
At third base, Don McGinley and Danny Renn shared the job. Don, a junior from the NIT basketball 'Cats filled in well at Princeton and Seton Hall. Danny inserted at the first St. Joe game, slammed out four hits and hasn't left third since. The hustling sophomore is hitting and fielding like a big leaguer.

In the vast new outfield at Villanova, Joe Cramer, Ed Monahan, Paul Borian, Tom Griffith, and ack Fahey have found their home.

The two lefties, Borian and Monahan, are tremendous threats with their bats. Making that threat good, Big Paul had six rbi's in the LaSalle game, while Eddie Monahan's big game came against Temple when he banged out two doubles and a single off their big right-hander, Don Flynn.

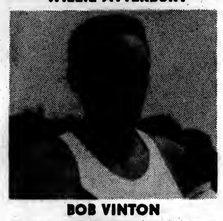
Tom Griffith and Jack Fahey are the right-handed combo that makes the 'Cats outfield feared by left-handed pitchers.

Joe Cramer, the centerfielder, is known for his winning base hits, catches, and smile.



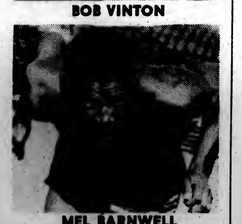
Big Bench

The team's bench, consisting of players like Andy Meade, Lee Parry, Sam Gruneisen, Bob Queen, Ed Paprota, Tom Pristanec, Tom Hannifan, and Frank Stranic, play the unsung part of the team victories. Without the bench there is no team.



The best is saved 'til last, that being the two left-handed pitchers, Frank Kreutzer (6-1), and Phil Fidalgo (8-2).

Phillip (Alou) Fidalgo might be the greatest soph hurler in the history of Villanova. His 108 strikeouts in 75 innings and .227 earned run average for the season is amazing. His high game was St. Joe's, when he fanned 16 Hawks.



Junior Frank Kreutzer put 21 Hawks down when he beat St. Joe's via the strikeout route. Frank struck out 103 and has a .279 earned run average for the season is equally amazing for 78 innings pitched.

Vol. 35—No. 25 VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. AUGUST 1, 1960

Dr. Henry J. Rofinot, associate professor of history, addresses an audience in the newly initiated "Christian Tradition" lecture series. Dr. Harold Hartman and Dr. Charles Bruderle listen.

Lecture Series On Christian Tradition Is Initiated At VU

By Sr. Mary Rosalima, C.S.F.N.

To explore the Christian implications of scholarly research, a five-day lecture series marked the third week of the current Summer Session.

Under the direction of the Villanova University Library and with the cooperation of the Faculty Library Committee, the program with a welcome address, Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Ped. D., Dean of the Graduate School, stated the aim of the series. Reflecting on Christian Tradition, Father Rongione defined it as the Theocentric, Christo-centric culture springing from Divine Revelation and having its source in oral and written tradition.

Father Rongione presented the Keynote Speaker, Rev. Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., Vice President for Academic Affairs at Villanova University.

Father Gildea traced the significance of the Christian Tradition through Christian Humanism of past ages. St. Augustine, stated Father Gildea, is associated with the initial formal evidences of it more directly than any other figure in past history.

He may be credited thus because he, more than any one else, binds the classical past and the mystical present into one, final, complete entity.

Learning Ante-Dates Universities

Reflecting on the status of the university within the Christian Tradition, Father Gildea noted that learning, as such, ante-dates the rise of universities as formal centers of learning. It is the university, however, that is especially equipped to think truthfully in assessing values and pursuing knowledge.

The university is an association of masters and scholars and its all important function is to be the center of creative thinking. It is for the university to know and use the thoughts of others to stimulate thinking in all.

Although tradition or culture is a heritage, noted Father Gildea, man plays a most important part in its development. The culture of the Western World is a synthesis of two ancient cultures, Christianity and Judaism.

Its inception was the handing down of life from above and its total span encompasses all the ages of man's existence. Man, however, should view this heritage not as a passive process of "handing down" but as the active process of enriching and propagating to which he should contribute.

Program Is First of Many

Planned as the first of an annual series, this year's program emphasized the Humanities. Future programs will include Natural Sciences and Social Sciences

"Suburban Report" Calls For Strengthened County Unity

By Sr. Mary Louis, O.S.F.

John Logue of Villanova's Political Science Department has made a study of the pressing problems facing suburb dwellers.

His findings have been written up in "Suburban Report" This is a study just published by the Communities Research Institute of the Villanova Law School.

Focusing his attention on the strengthening of countywide civic organizations, Logue interviewed some forty civic and governmental leaders in Bucks, Chester, Delaware and Montgomery Counties.

Some of those interviewed felt that the too parochial viewpoint of many suburbanites could be corrected by amending the state constitution in such a way that the county would have stronger government and thus create a greater interest in how the county powers are being used.

Abolish 'Main Line'

Other hurdles to be vaulted are the use of the term, "Main Line" to identify residents of the various counties, widespread lack of information, and suburban geography.

Remedies suggested are the identifying of a citizen as a member of Montgomery or Chester or specific other county rather than the use of the vague statement that he lives on the Main Line. Basic information in county government and administration should be made easily available to the general public.

Logue has a model to offer for a countywide civic organization. He stresses that the material for popular education and leader education be shortened, simplified, popularized and made more available. County board of directors should be widely representative both geographically and occupationally. Problems discussed should be specific as well as general. Conflicting views should be welcomed.

So that there will not be the all-work-no-play aspect Logue suggested annual dinners, bimonthly meetings, open to all, which should consist of question and answer periods and refreshments and also "Go See" tours to familiarize people with their own county.

Logue philosophically voices his belief that Americans have the talent for organization which will induce them to preserve and enhance the character of Philadelphia's lovely suburbs.

250 To Receive Diplomas At 43rd Summer Graduation

By Sr. M. John Helene, O.P.

Saturday, August 6th, will mark the 43rd Graduation of the summer session.

Commencement exercises will begin at 11:00 a.m. with the formal academic procession at 10:30 a.m. This procession will begin in front of Vasey Hall and then proceed to the Field House.

Approximately 250 students will receive degrees from various departments.

The guest speaker for this occasion will be Archbishop-Bishop Celestine J. Damiano, Bishop of Camden.

Speaking in the name of all the graduates will be Jean Michlot, a graduate student from the Theatre Department.

Honorary degrees will be conferred upon Bishop Damiano; Rev. Philip C. Niehaus, Assistant Dean, School of Education Duquesne University; Miss Genevieve Blatt, Secretary of Internal Affairs for the State of Pennsylvania and Walter B. Gibbons, prominent Phialdelphia attorney and a member of the Board of Consultors of Villanova's law school.

Dunkirk Native

The Most Rev. Celestine J. Damiano, a native of Dunkirk, N. Y. 48 years of age, was appointed Archbishop-Bishop of Camden last February after serving seven years as Apostolic Delegate to the Union of South Africa.

BISHOP DAMIANO
. . . to speak

Archbishop Damiano, ordained in Rome, December 21, 1935, served as an assistant and pastor in parishes of the Buffalo diocese before going to Rome in 1947 where he was assigned to the Congregation of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith. In December, 1952, Pope Pius XII elevated him to the titular Archbishop of Nicopolis, in Epiro, Greece, and appointed him Apostolic Delegate to South Africa.

Archbishop Damiano was consecrated in St. Joseph's Cathedral Buffalo, on February 11, 1953 by Bishop Joseph A. Burke of Buffalo. John Cardinal O'Hara (then Archbishop O'Hara) was a co-consecrator. Bishop Fulton J. Sheen gave the sermon.

From Duquesne

Father Niehaus was born on September 4, 1920 in Pittsburg, Pa. He attended St. Mary's School in Sharpsburg, Pa. and Holy Ghost College, Cornwells Heights. Father has received the following degrees: B.A. from St. Mary's, Norwalk, Conn., B.D. from St. Mary's Seminary and an M.Ed. from Duquesne University. In 1952 he was appointed Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Duquesne University. The following year Father was appointed Assistant Dean of the School of Education, which position he still holds today.

Genevieve Blatt was born in East Brady, Clarion County, and also attended the public school there. She is a graduate of the Sacred Heart High School in Pittsburg and the University of Pittsburg where she earned B.A. and M.A. degrees, majoring in Political Science and an LL.B. degree as a graduate of the University of Pittsburg School of Law. She was admitted to the practice of Law in 1938.

In 1954 she was elected Secretary of Internal Affairs and has been the first woman to serve in this position since the office was created in 1873.

Prominant Lawyer

Mr. Gibbons was born in Coatesville, Pa., on December 19, 1894. He attended parochial schools in Pa., St. Louis, and Cincinnati. His secondary education was obtained in Woodward High School, Cincinnati, Ohio. In 1917 he received his LL.B. from Temple University School of Law and in 1945 he received his LL.D. February 27, 1917 marked the day on which he was admitted to the Bar. He is a member in the Philadelphia and American Bar Associations, the International Law Association, the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and many others.

Since 1944 he has been a member of the Board of Governance of the Supreme Court of Pa. and since 1957 he is the Chief standing Master of the Pa. Bar. At present he is a member of the Board of Consultors for Villanova University School of Law and Misericordia Hospital.

After the presentation and conferring of degrees by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., the graduates will terminate the commencement exercise with the true "Villanova Spirit" in the loyal rendition of the Alma Mater.

Time For Work and Play

By Mother M. E. Brown, R.S.C.

MISS M. DOROTHY BOYLE, Dean of Women, again placed at the disposal of the nun summer students a large quantity and variety of recreational equipment. Tennis, croquet, golf and even pinochle were provided for, if you wish! She also very kindly arranged for the Sisters to use the swimming pool in the Field House certain days and hours. Other periods were to accomodate other groups.

PROFESSOR BRUDERLE arranged a series of Friday afternoon motion pictures for the student nuns. The series was so attractive that even in the dim light, we think we discerned a sprinkling of our august Professors, God bless them. How relaxed they seemed and how welcome they were, as we enjoyed the splendid film "House of Seven Hawks" on July 15th.

In the series were "The Nun's Story" and "The F.B.I. Story", each drawing large and interested audiences. The last named attracted a record crowd. It so well depicted the magnificent work being done for our personal and national safety by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover and his corps of courageous investigators.

THE MODERN GIRL—potential nun or potential Mrs. John Doe—has many latent as well as visible gifts. Some of these might fit her to follow in the footsteps of St. Joan of Arc, should the need arise. Even seasoned nuns may develop latent gifts—a sure aim is to the fore. M/Sgt. John J. Reilly, U.S.M.C., has seen to it, with a fine program.

To visit with Rifle Range in Commodore Barry Hall at just the correct day and hour, is a heartening bit of education. Visitors agree that some of our Sisters undoubtedly come from families whose records include a long line of expert marksmanship trophy winners . . . . Thank you, Sgt. Reilly.

DR. ROBERT S. O'SHEA of the Department of Philosophy has once again given the summer students an opportunity to share in one of his delightful hobbies. An invitation to OPERA CLASSICA, in the air-cooled East Lounge of Dougherty Hall was gratefully accepted by many, each Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.

On July 5th, Dr. O'Shea inaugurated the 1960 program, and spoke at some length on his favorite theory, suggesting that musical sound is the medium best fitted for the perfect expression of art. Selections to accompany this explanatory word, ranged from a solo "Exultet" from the Easter Vigil service, and an exquisite choice, through other numbers using voice and one instrument, larger numbers of each, organ and symphony.

Compositions used to illustrate the theme included Bach, Beethoven and Handel. Some melodies from modern jazz were on the list. Dr. O'Shea suggests them to be true music, since they have caught and really interpreted the life and spirit of their time.

Some eyebrows were raised —but the program was provocative and wholly relaxing. What was it Pythagoras said with regard to the 'music of the spheres'? This all-too short hour concluded with a very agreeable choice from "My Fair Lady".

We agree with one young lad who attended: Dr. O'Shea is a dedicated man".

Sisters Form Student Council To Assist And To Advise Miss Boyle

Members Now Planning Fete

By Sr. Eleanor Patricia, O.P.

For the past four years Miss Boyle, Dean of Women, has created in a large measure the genuine spirit of friendliness which all the Sisters enjoy on campus. During the summer session every convenience has been placed at their disposal and they may participate in various recreational activities. This desirable blending of study with relaxation did not come about by chance.

In her charming way, Miss Boyle suggested to the Sisters the organization of a Student Council. Since she was responsible for their well being, she felt that the Sisters themselves ought to form an advisory board. The needs of all the Sisters could be handled in this way.

The members of Student Council are chosen from various communities. Superiors of larger communities appoint one member to represent that particular group. Members from smaller communities are selected at random from the room list. Nearly every community at some time will have a member on Student Council.

Help Solve Problems

The assistance of the Council members has alleviated the enormous responsibility of the

DEAN BOYLE
. . . lauds council

Dean. At their weekly meetings they bring to Miss Boyle's attention any problems that arise concerning the dormitory buildings and they offer suggestions that will be for the common good. Each member is also given a master key for the rooms on her floor. How often that has saved a Sister from a sorry plight! Notices placed on the bulletin boards is part of the work of the Council members.

According to Miss Boyle, the Student Council is an enthusiastic and cooperative group. They are now planning the party for the close of summer school. Committee projects include refreshments, games, entertainment, music and dancing. Could anyone forget that gala evening last year? This year promises even greater relaxation and enjoyment.

This teamwork, inspired by Miss Boyle's ingenuity, accounts for the serenity that permeates the University Campus.

Gordon Burlingame Named VU 1960-61 Fund Drive Head

Gordon M. Burlingame, prominent Philadelphia area Insurance executive, has been named Chairman of Villanova University's 1960-61 Fund Drive, it was announced by the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., Directoor of the Villanova Development Foundation.

Buringame, who is President

CHAIRMAN BURLINGAME assumes post

of the Title Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania, succeeds J. Griffith Boardman, who directed the university fund drive for the past two years .

Villanova began its twenty year development campaign in 1954 and is seeking to raise twenty one million dollars to offset a tremendous building program which has seen the campus nearly triple in size. Latest addition is a four million dollar Science and Research Building presently under construction.

A group of prominent area citizens, known as the Board of Lay Trustees, is aiding Villanova in its quest for funds. Each year, one of the group which numbers more than 200, assumes the chairmanship of the drive. Burlingame was named by the Board's Executive Committee during a meeting recently.

Hails From N. Y.

Previous drive chairman were James A. Farley, former Postmaster General of the United States; the late Edwin K. Daly, former President of the Horn and Hardart Corporation; William F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Co.; John A. Murphy, Philadelphia Broker and Mr. Boardman.

Burlingame is a native of New York City but has been a resident of Bryn Mawr for more than fifty years. He is one of the Main Line's most active and outstanding citizens. Burlingame is a graduate of Lower Merion High School and Lehigh University and undertook specialized study at Pennsylvania and Drexel.

Villanova's new fund chairman became associated with the Bryn Mawr Trust Co. in 1925 and in 1937 was appointed Vice President, a Director and Title Officer of the Bank. He held that position until he was named President and Director of the Title Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania in 1954.

Burlingame is Chairman of the Montgomery County Planning Commission and former President of the Bryn Mawr Business Association. He is past President of the Pennsylania Title Association, Past President of the Philadelphia Mortgage Bankers Association and a former Director of the American League Baseball Club of Philadelphia.

In assuming the post of 1960-61 fund chairman for Villanova, Burlingame also becomes head of the Executive Committee of the Lay Trustees whose members include: R. G. Rincliffe, President of the Philadelphia Electric Co.; Edward J. Caughlin, President of the American Insulation Co.; Albert Nesbitt, President of John Nesbitt, Inc. and Alfred Laupheimer, President of the General Warehouse Co.

I.C.G. Awakens Student To Hidden Political Thought

By John McAteer

With the great interest in politics in the United States, it is a comforting fact that there is a statewide student organization devoted to intellegent political thought. The organization is known as the Intercolloegiate Conference on Government.

The Villanova chapter of the I.C.G. is one of the most active of the approximately fifty chapters in the Conference. During the past year, Villanova was the scene of a model national presidential nominating convention.

Although the proceedings of these conventions were conducted in a manner akin to the national conventions of the major political parties, they lacked one thing—The hullabaloo and ballyhoo demonstrated by the Democrats at Los Angeles and demonstrated by the Republicans at Chicago. After watching the Democratic convention it is difficult to believe that the delegates are in a sense entrusted with determining the destiny of this nation. Consider that the ideas and the model platform worked out by students at the I.C.G. Harrisburg convention will remain in a filing cabinet, while the ideas of the "serious and mature" delegates at Los Angeles may determine the future of the free world.

This is a deplorable state of affairs when one considers the high stakes which are involved. Serious thinking students can hardly condone the behavior of many leaders of the major political parties. Thirty or forty years ago the threat of world destruction was seldom if ever discussed because few people believed that man was capable of destroying himself. Today this threat is a part of our everyday conversation. And yet with a threat of such magnitude ever present, our leaders so often act imprudently.

In recent months students in Turkey and Korea brought about the downfall of dictatorial regimes, and Japan witnessed the radical and undesirable activities of the Zengakuren. It seems apparent that students in different areas of the world are becoming increasingly interested in how their governments are operated. But most of the time they can only express themselves by rioting. There are no efficient student organizations in these countries which can serve as a vehicle for students to voice their opinions in an intelligent and conservative manner.

In the United States, however, there already exists an organization, the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, which acting as a foundation in Pennsylvania could and should be the forerunner of a nation-wide conference of college students. Then the political ideas of students could be put into realities instead of wastebaskets.

Seminarians Smear Students; Sisters Staring Thru Sights

By Tom Natal

Retreating from fiction to fact, I should like to bring the story back to the summer softball. These poor, depressed young men fielded a softball team and on successive Thursday afternoons were trampled, belittled, and chased back into the "Mendel broom closets", victims of the seminarians successive 12-2 are now giving athletic scholarships to the seminarians.

Naturally, with all the recreational activities available to them the nurses had to get into the act and play softball, also. These twilight games served as the mainstay of morale on campus; for never have so many laughed so heartily at such foolery.

The teams were divided with a number of girls on each side and the men had to bat opposite their normal batting position. Also, to even up the sides more so, the men received only two strikes instead of the usual three. Needless to say these games were enjoyable and hilariously funny to both players and spectators alike.

On alternate evenings, however, the "Twilight Fish Feeding League", served the fish in "Mendel Pond" with bits of delicate morsals from the kitchens of Dougherty Hall.

The Intramural Bridge champions ships turned out to be a great success since none of the participants are on speaking terms.

Thus they proceeded, counting the weeks, days, and hours until at last they could leave the campus to journey to their homes for a well-deserved rest from the tedious job of finding activities to keep them busy.

Here they would stay, bragging about the wonderful time they had at Villanova's summer school, until it is once again time to return to good ol' V.U.

In Greewich Village they tell the story of the nun who was standing on the corner of the street waiting to cross through the heavy traffic, when a beatnik appeared and offered to help the good sister across the street.

Courses For Graduate School Are Increased 20% Over Last Year

More than seven hundred and fifty students, distributed among fifteen major programs, are enrolled in the Graduate School for the Summer session. Education, History and English have the largest registrations, together representing about forty percent of the total.

The combined program for the Summer Session includes one hundred and thirty one courses for a total of three hundred semester hours, distributed among eighteen departments and staffed by a faculty of ninety-nine, of whom twenty one are Religious..

Most of the teaching staff are identified with both the undergraduate and graduate programs. The number of graduate courses offered has increased about twenty percent over the Summer Session of 1959.

Cancelled Stamps Help Missionaries Carry On Their Laborious Work

By Sr. Mary Christine, O.S.F.

Vast expansion in foreign mission fields has been the result of the cancelled stamp drive at St. Mary's Hall. Large metal boxes, oriental in tone, hold conspicuous places in all the buildings. They serve as reminders to save stamps. They also tell a story. This campaign arose out of a need.

Bishop Pulgar, O.S.A., from his diocese in South America, wrote about his missionary journeys in small, inadequate boats along dangerous rivers. He was in need of a safe vessel. A motorboat would enable him to complete his pastoral duties in shorter time. This news reached the Augustinian houses of study.

Eager philosophers at Villanova and the theologians at Washington took up the cause to help the bishop realize his dream. They sent out appeals requesting big and small donations of foreign and domestic stamps. Catalogs were scanned for names of dealers.

In a short time the list of customers grew. Requests to St. Mary's Hall for enormous quantities of stamps proved that the project was worthwhile. Thus, in the late 1940's, the Augustinian Mission Stamp Department had its beginning.

Success Achieved

The response was gratifying from all directions. Not least among these were the members of the Office Staff. Their cooperation has been a tremendous boon to the support of the missions.

With the spirit characteristic of parochial schools, the Sisters exerted great influence among the youth. The money received from stamps collected by school children mounts higher every year. Young missionaries at heart represent the power behind a great banking house.

St. Mary's Hall often resembles a thriving beehive of activity. Sorting, counting and packaging of stamps—an education in itself—adds many hours of enjoyment to the life of the philosophers.

Priests laboring in Japan and South America offer daily prayers for those who help them. Through the stamp department their work will continue to spread the faith and redound to the glory of the Church in foreign lands.

Doubts, Question Marks Face Coach Bell In First Season

Lack of seasoned performers is the major problem facing Villanova's new coach Alex Bell. With only eight seniors on the entire squad Bell's tentative starting lineup lists four sophomores, five juniors and only two seniors.

Sophomores, Billy Joe, Larry Glueck and Lou Rettino have gained starting assignments in the backfield along with junior quarterback Nick Langone, the only signal caller who saw action in 1959. Senior Billy Paczkoskie, slowed by injuries during the past two years, is listed as the number two fullback and is the only senior listed on the first three units in the backfield.

Along the line there is more experience to be found, but several listed for starting roles may be moved out during the course of the season. Right end Mike DeLone is the only newcomer on the first squad. Seniors Larry Sopko and Joe Luzzi, regulars last season at the guard positions, will retain their left and right posts respectively.

The remainder of the forward wall will be composed of juniors. All saw service in their first season of play in 1959 in either starting roles toward the end of the campaign or as early reserved. But they all have borne up well under competition.

How well the young backfield reacts to varsity play during the first two games with Marquette and Navy, both on the road, will have a definite bearing on the overall 1960 picture as Coach Alex Bell begins his new career at Villanova.

among other areas of study. The total interest of this and all succeeding programs is focused on scholarship and research as related to Christian philosophy and Christian moral ethics.

Because the University feels the need for integrating the various disciplines within the frame work of Christian culture to emphasize and make more tangible the inherent values of academic offering, it has determined to continue the venture on a greater scale. Next summer other area colleges will be invited, thereby extending the range of the audience.

Tentative at present is the posibility of stimulating the interest of other universities. This would result in wider participation in planning themes. Villanova, however, would remain the center for the actual conferences. Also pending official approval is the publication of the first lecture series.

Theme Offers Several Aspects

In developing the general theme from several specific aspects, the lectures offered a study of the University Scholar and The Christian Tradition, Professor John I. McEnerney, Villanova University; Medieval Studies and the Patristic Tradition, Professor D. W. Robertson, Jr., Princeton University; American Philosophical Thought and The Christian Tradition, Professor Donald A. Gallagher, Villanova University; Contemporary American History and Its Social Direction, Professor Henry L. Rofinot, Villanova University; and Heaven Versus Utopia: Concepts of The Moral Order in Dickens, George Eliot, and Hardy, Professor James O. Bailey, University of North Carolina.

Serving as chairman for successive sessions were Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A.; Dr. Charles W. Bernardin, English department; Rev. Robert P. Russell, O.S.A., Philosophy department; Dr. Harold F. Hartman, History and Political Science department; and Dr. Edward McGrath, English department.

Discussion leaders were Dr. John I. McEnerney, and Rev. John E. Bresnahan, O.S.A., Department of Classics; Dr. James F. Anderson, Philosophy department; Professor Charles P. Bruderle, History and Political Science department; and Rev. John J. McShea, O.S.A., English department.

Time For Work and Play

By Mother M. E. Brown, R.S.C.

MISS M. DOROTHY BOYLE, Dean of Women, again placed at the disposal of the nun summer students a large quantity and variety of recreational equipment. Tennis, croquet, golf and even pinochle were provided for, if you wish! She also very kindly arranged for the Sisters to use the swimming pool in the Field House certain days and hours. Other periods were to accomodate other groups.

PROFESSOR BRUDERLE arranged a series of Friday afternoon motion pictures for the student nuns. The series was so attractive that even in the dim light, we think we discerned a sprinkling of our august Professors, God bless them. How relaxed they seemed and how welcome they were, as we enjoyed the splendid film "House of Seven Hawks" on July 15th.

In the series were "The Nun's Story" and "The F.B.I. Story", each drawing large and interested audiences. The last named attracted a record crowd. It so well depicted the magnificent work being done for our personal and national safety by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover and his corps of courageous investigators.

THE MODERN GIRL—potential nun or potential Mrs. John Doe—has many latent as well as visible gifts. Some of these might fit her to follow in the footsteps of St. Joan of Arc, should the need arise. Even seasoned nuns may develop latent gifts—a sure aim is to the fore. M/Sgt. John J. Reilly, U.S.M.C., has seen to it, with a fine program.

To visit with Rifle Range in Commodore Barry Hall at just the correct day and hour, is a heartening bit of education. Visitors agree that some of our Sisters undoubtedly come from families whose records include a long line of expert marksmanship trophy winners . . . Thank you, Sgt. Reilly.

DR. ROBERT S. O'SHEA of the Department of Philosophy has once again given the summer students an opportunity to share in one of his delightful hobbies. An invitation to OPERA CLASSICA, in the air-cooled East Lounge of Dougherty Hall was gratefully accepted by many, each Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.

On July 5th, Dr. O'Shea inaugurated the 1960 program, and spoke at some length on his favorite theory, suggesting that musical sound is the medium best fitted for the perfect expression of art. Selections to accompany this explanatory word, ranged from a solo "Exultet" from the Easter Vigil service, and an exquisite choice, through other numbers using voice and one instrument, larger numbers of each, organ and symphony.

Compositions used to illustrate the theme included Bach, Beethoven and Handel. Some melodies from modern jazz were on the list. Dr. O'Shea suggests them to be true music, since they have caught and really interpreted the life and spirit of their time.

Some eyebrows were raised —but the program was provocative and wholly relaxing. What was it Pythagoras said with regard to the 'music of the spheres'? This all-too short hour concluded with a very agreeable choice from "My Fair Lady".

We agree with one young lad who attended: Dr. O'Shea is a dedicated man".

Sisters Form Student Council To Assist And To Advise Miss Boyle

Members Now Planning Fete

By Sr. Eleanor Patricia, O.P.

For the past four years Miss Boyle, Dean of Women, has created in a large measure the genuine spirit of friendliness which all the Sisters enjoy on campus. During the summer session every convenience has been placed at their disposal and they may participate in various recreational activities. This desirable blending of study with relaxation did not come about by chance.

In her charming way, Miss Boyle suggested to the Sisters the organization of a Student Council. Since she was responsible for their well being, she felt that the Sisters themselves ought to form an advisory board. The needs of all the Sisters could be handled in this way.

The members of Student Council are chosen from various communities. Superiors of larger communities appoint one member to represent that particular group. Members from smaller communities are selected at random from the room list. Nearly every community at some time will have a member on Student Council.

Help Solve Problems

The assistance of the Council members has alleviated the enormous responsibility of the

DEAN BOYLE

Dean. At their weekly meetings they bring to Miss Boyle's attention any problems that arise concerning the dormitory buildings and they offer suggestions that will be for the common good. Each member is also given a master key for the rooms on her floor. How often that has saved a Sister from a sorry plight! Notices placed on the bulletin boards is part of the work of the Council members.

According to Miss Boyle, the Student Council is an enthusiastic and cooperative group. They are now planning the party for the close of summer school. Committee projects include refreshments, games, entertainment, music and dancing. Could anyone forget that gala evening last year? This year promises even greater relaxation and enjoyment.

This teamwork, inspired by Miss Boyle's ingenuity, accounts for the serenity that permeates the University Campus.

Gordon Burlingame Named VU 1960-61 Fund Drive Head

Gordon M. Burlingame, prominent Philadelphia area Insurance executive, has been named Chairman of Villanova University's 1960-61 Fund Drive, it was announced by the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., Directoor of the Villanova Development Foundation.

of the Title Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania, succeeds J. Griffith Boardman, who directed the university fund drive for the past two years .

Villanova began its twenty year development campaign in 1954 and is seeking to raise twenty one million dollars to offset a tremendous building program which has seen the campus nearly triple in size. Latest addition is a four million dollar Science and Research Building presently under construction.

A group of prominent area citizens, known as the Board of Lay Trustees, is aiding Villanova in its quest for funds. Each year, one of the group which numbers more than 200, assumes the chairmanship of the drive. Burlingame was named by the Board's Executive Committee during a meeting recently.

Hails From N. Y.

Previous drive chairman were James A. Farley, former Postmaster General of the United States; the late Edwin K. Daly, former President of the Horn and Hardart Corporation; William F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Co.; John A. Murphy, Philadelphia Broker and Mr. Boardman.

Burlingame is a native of New York City but has been a resident of Bryn Mawr for more than fifty years. He is one of the Main Line's most active and outstanding citizens. Burlingame is a graduate of Lower Merion High School and Lehigh University and undertook specialized study at Pennsylvania and Drexel.

Villanova's new fund chairman became associated with the Bryn Mawr Trust Co. in 1925 and in 1937 was appointed Vice President, a Director and Title Officer of the Bank. He held that position until he was named President and Director of the Title Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania in 1954.

Burlingame is Chairman of the Montgomery County Planning Commission and former President of the Bryn Mawr Business Association. He is past President of the Pennsylania Title Association, Past President of the Philadelphia Mortgage Bankers Association and a former Director of the American League Baseball Club of Philadelphia.

In assuming the post of 1960-61 fund chairman for Villanova, Burlingame also becomes head of the Executive Committee of the Lay Trustees whose members include: R. G. Rincliffe, President of the Philadelphia Electric Co.; Edward J. Caughlin, President of the American Insulation Co.; Albert Nesbitt, President of John Nesbitt, Inc. and Alfred Laupheimer, President of the General Warehouse Co.

I.C.G. Awakens Student To Hidden Political Thought

By John McAteer

With the great interest in politics in the United States, it is a comforting fact that there is a statewide student organization devoted to intellegent political thought. The organization is known as the Intercolloegiate Conference on Government.

The Villanova chapter of the I.C.G. is one of the most active of the approximately fifty chapters in the Conference. During the past year, Villanova was the scene of a model national presidential nominating convention.

Although the proceedings of these conventions were conducted in a manner akin to the national conventions of the major political parties, they lacked one thing—The hullabaloo and ballyhoo demonstrated by the Democrats at Los Angeles and demonstrated by the Republicans at Chicago. After watching the Democratic convention it is difficult to believe that the delegates are in a sense entrusted with determining the destiny of this nation. Consider that the ideas and the model platform worked out by students at the I.C.G. Harrisburg convention will remain in a filing cabinet, while the ideas of the "serious and mature" delegates at Los Angeles may determine the future of the free world.

This is a deplorable state of affairs when one considers the high stakes which are involved. Serious thinking students can hardly condone the behavior of many leaders of the major political parties. Thirty or forty years ago the threat of world destruction was seldom if ever discussed because few people believed that man was capable of destroying himself. Today this threat is a part of our everyday conversation. And yet with a threat of such magnitude ever present, our leaders so often act imprudently.

In recent months students in Turkey and Korea brought about the downfall of dictatorial regimes, and Japan witnessed the radical and undesirable activities of the Zengakuren. It seems apparent that students in different areas of the world are becoming increasingly interested in how their governments are operated. But most of the time they can only express themselves by rioting. There are no efficient student organizations in these countries which can serve as a vehicle for students to voice their opinions in an intelligent and conservative manner.

In the United States, however, there already exists an organization, the Intercollegiate Conference on Government, which acting as a foundation in Pennsylvania could and should be the forerunner of a nation-wide conference of college students. Then the political ideas of students could be put into realities instead of wastebaskets.

Seminarians Smear Students; Sisters Staring Thru Sights

By Tom Natal

Retreating from fiction to fact, I should like to bring the story back to the summer softball. These poor, depressed young men fielded a softball team and on successive Thursday afternoons were trampled, belittled, and chased back into the "Mendel broom closets", victims of the seminarians successive 12-2 are now giving athletic scholarships to the seminarians.

Naturally, with all the recreational activities available to them the nurses had to get into the act and play softball, also. These twilight games served as the mainstay of morale on campus; for never have so many laughed so heartily at such foolery.

The teams were divided with a number of girls on each side and the men had to bat opposite their normal batting position. Also, to even up the sides more so, the men received only two strikes instead of the usual three. Needless to say these games were enjoyable and hilariously funny to both players and spectators alike.

On alternate evenings, however, the "Twilight Fish Feeding League", served the fish in "Mendel Pond" with bits of delicate morsals from the kitchens of Dougherty Hall.

The Intramural Bridge championships turned out to be a great success since none of the participants are on speaking terms.

Thus they proceeded, counting the weeks, days, and hours until at last they could leave the campus to journey to their homes for a well-deserved rest from the tedious job of finding activities to keep them busy.

Here they would stay, bragging about the wonderful time they had at Villanova's summer school, until it is once again time to return to good ol' V.U.

In Greewich Village they tell the story of the nun who was standing on the corner of the street waiting to cross through the heavy traffic, when a beatnik appeared and offered to help the good sister across the street. Upon reaching the other side of the street the sister thanked the beatnik kindly and he promptly responded, "Don't mention it, mam' any friend of Zorro's is a friend of mine".

Courses For Graduate School Are Increased 20% Over Last Year

More than seven hundred and fifty students, distributed among fifteen major programs, are enrolled in the Graduate School for the Summer session. Education, History and English have the largest registrations, together representing about forty percent of the total.

The combined program for the Summer Session includes one hundred and thirty one courses for a total of three hundred semester hours, distributed among eighteen departments and staffed by a faculty of ninety-nine, of whom twenty one are Religious..

Most of the teaching staff are identified with both the undergraduate and graduate programs. The number of graduate courses offered has increased about twenty percent over the Summer Session of 1959.

Cancelled Stamps Help Missionaries Carry On Their Laborious Work

By Sr. Mary Christine, O.S.F.

Vast expansion in foreign mission fields has been the result of the cancelled stamp drive at St. Mary's Hall. Large metal boxes, oriental in tone, hold conspicuous places in all the buildings. They serve as reminders to save stamps. They also tell a story. This campaign arose out of a need.

Bishop Pulgar, O.S.A., from his diocese in South America, wrote about his missionary journeys in small, inadequate boats along dangerous rivers. He was in need of a safe vessel. A motorboat would enable him to complete his pastoral duties in shorter time. This news reached the Augustinian houses of study.

Eager philosophers at Villanova and the theologians at Washington took up the cause to help the bishop realize his dream. They sent out appeals requesting big and small donations of foreign and domestic stamps. Catalogs were scanned for names of dealers.

LABORARE EST ORARE

Whenever St. Joseph worked in his shop
The little children often stopped
To ask the how, what and why
Of every tool young eyes spied.
drove nails in wood
And then, just as soon as he could
Very gently he turned aside,
A crude cross was raised on high!
Sweet Mary would comfort his lone, aching heart
God knows their loved Family ne'er could part!
And as they stood musing, a fair, winsome Youth
Their Jesus, came in to gladden them both.

THE MISTERS K

He crawls from stank-like, shiny depths
To view the dismal bleakness of the frozen steppes.
His heart, if heart it be, is lifeless stone,
Inert, within a bulky format grown.
Abysmal creature, man or beast
With boarish sockets searched; then misery, pain unleashed
What symbol in his fisted hand?
A sicklelmallet shadow palls the weary land.
From Lenin's tomb to Basil's height,
Death's offspring climbs and banner waves of maddening might!
His promised "peace", and millions die
The peace of death in answer to his battle cry — "Peace"!
For this is Mr. K .
Midst Solomon's reefs, in waters deep,
To courage born is he; a rendezvous to keep.
His stalwart heart to faith he yields;
Unflinching steel in war; a passionate peace it wields.
A hope he brings! a myth or man?
Who ensuing months relentlessly will scan
Horizons . . . . . valley, mountain, plain.
No heart too lowly, nor hand worn, for him to gain.
From Boston's streets to world renown,
A leader stands who will these fearful spectres down
With sharp-edged sword of simple cry
For hands, for hearts, for all . . . soul-searing sacrifice!
This, too, is Mister K.

The one He hoped to find,
Who was lost on life's big highway,
Oh the rest? He left behind.

In His arms so truly kind,
Loving, caring, smiling,
On the soul He now calls "mine".

LET THEM GO

Laugh and sing,
Let go each thing;
Unkind words and untold sorrows,
Cast them to unknown tomorrows.
The hurt, the hard regret,
Let it go—and just forget;
Take each cross that comes your way,
Pick it up just for the day.
Laugh when trials prevail,
Sing to God your every tale;
Let them go—its worth the try,
Upward, heavenward up to the sky.

REFLECTIONS
(A dedication)

Perhaps you have seen myriad stars that shine.
Traversing the high vaulted blue,
But I have seen mirrored in deep-souled eyes
Quiet power that in me Love renews.
Perhaps you have heard from a masters hand
Sweet, harmonious notes of a flute,
But I have heard hushed, unspoken words
Stir in my soul sound waves of Truth.
Perhaps you have known the victor's fame.
And captured a well earned prize,
But I have known calm, gentle strength
Fill my heart in Beauty's guise.
Perhaps you have felt in a brief dream of youth
Mightier than a king in his palace,
But I have felt daily, a sweet abiding force. Lift my Life's love —gilded chalice.

ODE TO A PIECE OF CHALK

With ink so white and strokes so neat,
You start the day with slate your feat,
From depths of darkness, chalk, you take,
Thy humble markings and scholars make.
Each speak of Shakespeare, each dot a Twain,
Even the Calculus is not in vain,
With fleeting brillance through eons many,
Come Charlemagne, Richard and was-a-penny,
With power blazing, gas laws crumble,
The vector and flow-no matchtumble,
Watch out Pablov, Freud and friends,
Thomas Aquinas make no amends,
Schweitzer, Einstein, take your place,
Mister chalk sets the pace.
Nothing, save God, can be thy match,
But to thy ode there's just one catch,
Along about evening glories melt,
With one broad sweep of deadfelt.

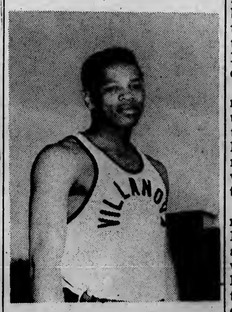
Villanova's Frank Budd Gets U.S. Olympic Team Berth

At the Olympic Track and Field trials held July 1-2 at Palo Alto, California, Frank Budd became the 7th undergraduate from Villanova to make the Olympic squad since the games started earlier this century.



Frank is twenty-one years old and hails from Asbury Park, New Jersey. He is entering his junior year at Villanova. During his stay at Asbury Park High School, he was the top sprinter in the state for two years. Besides being a top track star in high school, Frank was a member of both the football and basketball squads. In football he was an All State 3rd team halfback.

An interesting fact is that Frank had more football scholarships offered to him than track scholarships. Besides being an outstanding athlete in high school, Budd was elected captain of both the basketball and track squads. As if this wasn't enough, Frank played organized baseball during the summer.

Suffered Leg Injury

During the track season which ended with Frank's success at Palo Alto, he had his share of ups and downs. After becoming champion on the indoor bands on January 7, 1960, he suffered a leg injury and was sidelined from competition until he returned to become the IC4A indoor 60 yd. champion in March, 1960.

During the outdoor season Budd ran the 100 yd. and 200 yard dashes and was a member of both the 440 and 880 yd. relay teams. While competing in the Penn Relays held in April, he pulled a muscle during the 880 relay heat but finished the race. This injury hampered him throughout April. In the IC4A outdoor championships at Villanova in May, Frank finished second in the 100 yd. dash and 3rd in the 220 yd. dash to help Villanova win the team title.

SPRINTER BUDD
. . . off to Rome

During the NCAA meet, Budd did not place due to bad starts, but he came back in the AAU Meet to place 4th in the 100 meters to qualify for the Olympic trials. When in Palo Alto Budd placed second to Ray Norton of San Jose State, in the 100 meter dash with a time of 10.4 seconds.

The next step in Frank's career is the Olympics, which will be held in Rome during the latter part of August. Following the Olympics, Budd plans to tour Europe with the squad until the opening of the fall session.

Of interest to many was the naming of two Villanova graduates, both of the class of 1957, to the Olympic squad. They are Don Bragg, who set the world record of 15'9¾" in the pole vault and Alex Breckenridge in the Marathon.

Harmony among Nations is a main theme of the Olympics. Every nation is elegible to send amateur athletes to these games which are held every four years. Besides track and field events, there are many other sporting events in which competition takes place. The chances of the United States to dethrone Russia as overall team champion are hopeful but are slim, due to the strength of the women athletes of Russia.

We wish Frank Budd, Bragg, Breckenridge and all United States athletes the best of luck in Rome and we hope Frank can bring home a medal for the United States and Villanova.

This phenomena is currently taking place on the Vasey Hall stage, where the Villanova "summer Stock" is presenting three one-act comedies.

Performances, which opened yesterday, will close tomorrow. Curtain time for the comedies both tonight and tomorrow is 7:30 p.m.

The program opens with "A Sunday Morning", a warm, delightful, smiling type of humorous reminiscence which features Kathleen Harvey as Donna Laura; Joanne Capek as Petra; Michael Tanney as Don Gonzalo; and Paul Buckley as Juanito.

All-Male Cast

The inimitable style of George Kaufman is displayed in the comedy of manners, "Still Alarm." The all-male cast consists of Dick Tichenor as Ed; Thomas McCoy as Bob; Michael Tanney as the bellboy; and Paul Buckley and Owen Klein as the 1st and 2nd firemen, respectively.

"A Phoenix Too Frequent", the final offering, displays Christopher Fry's well-known talent for poetic language, coupled in this play with clever comic action.

The Roman characters are portrayed by Gilda Spurio as Doto, the slave girl; Sue Ahrold as Dynamene, Doto's mistress; and Dick McIntyre as the Roman legionnaire.

All three plays are directed by Bernard Coyne of the Theatre Department. George Herman, a new member of the faculty designed and executed the set with the assistance of Owen Klein of the Graduate School in Theatre.

Members of the Theatre Arts Workshop for High School Students who helped construct the sets are: Barbara Boughner, Judy Kimmes, Cherly Kryka, Jackie Lohan, Ann O'Donnell, Rose Whelan.

Technical director is George Herman.

Penna. State Police Present Rodeo Aug. 15

The Pennsylvania State Police Rodeo and Riding Exhibition will be held at Villanova University Stadium, Villanova, Pennsylvania. On August 15, 1960 (Rain date 8/16/60)

Two shows will be presented, the afternoon show at 2:00 p.m. and the evening performance at 7:00 p.m. D.S.T.

These shows are free to the public and consist of daring horsemanship, precision and fancy drills, dare-devil motorcycle riding, trained police dogs, pistol shooting and numerous other spectacular feats of entertainment to thrill the spectators during the two hour show.

All participants in the show are active State Police Troopers who put on this exhibition to give the public an idea of the background, training and skills of the members of the State Police Organization.

Hoffa Defense Lawyer Opens Law Forum Tonight At 8:30

Edward Bennet Williams, defense attorney for such controversial figures as underworld overlord Frank Costello, former Teamster boss Dave Beck, the late Senator Joseph McCarthy, and the ill-reputed Jimmy Hoffa, will be guest speaker at the Villanova Law Forum which opens its sixth year tonight at 8:30 in the university law building.

Williams will be the first of a series of prominent lawyers, civic leaders, legislators, and statesmen who are scheduled to speak during six sessions.

The Forum, which last year was honored by the Valley Forge Freedoms Foundation, for its contribution to our society, has sought to present the law in its broadest public dimensions. During past years the Forum has heard a Southern editor plead the cause of states' rights and a leading anti-segregationist attorney talk about civil rights.

Also a proposed constitution for the Teamsters' Union was discussed and the subject of wire-tapping heatedly debated. International Law, prison administration, and the Supreme Court were other outstanding topics.

Defended "Confidential"

A graduate of Holy Cross College and Georgetown University, the 40-year-old Williams soared to the top of his profession during the fifties when he successfully defended the most unpopular cases of the day. Among his triumphs are the first libel suit ever won against columnist Drew Pearson and the cancellation of a Post Office ban on Confidential magazine.

"I try law cases", Williams has stated in explaining his questionable clientele, "I'm not interested in my clients philosophies or in the fact that they may be socially obnoxious. They come to me for council and I provide it within the limits of integrity. After all the sixth amendment in the Bill of Rights does not read: "Every accused person is entitled to council except Frank Costello and Jimmy Hoffa."

Called down many times for "prostituting" his professional ability, Williams has had to defend himself on many occasions. "I don't care who a man is, or how unorthodox his actions are", states the attorney, "if he's in need of defense that's what I'm here for. I'm not trying to win a pooularity contest. Guilt in court is not a moral concept and a defense lawyer is not asked to make moral judgements."

He puts this responsibility squarely on the shoulders of the court and jury.

Admires Hoffa

While not particularly friendly with Hoffa, Williams has a great respect for the teamster leader. "Jimmy Hoffa is certainly one of the most dynamic men I have ever encountered. But in my business you are dealing with people at a time in their lives when they are in deep trouble. This brings out the best in them."

Williams is proud of his election to the board of directors of the American Civil Liberties Union but contends that the defense of liberty has lost its prestige. "The defense of property pays off better in dollars and cents so we lawyers have become a profession of business negotiators and handholders."

The Hartford, Connecticut native is a pioneer in the field of law clinics, one of which he has developed in New York City. "I conceived of the clinic idea much as a medical clinic," Williams explains. "We have specialists there in labor, tax, criminal and international law. If our diagnosis is wrong it becomes a matter of public record. If a doctor's diagnosis is wrong you don't usually know about it."

Williams Feared

"He is the most feared man by the Department of Justice," Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York has declared. After obtaining an acquittal of Powell on two counts of tax evasion and having raised sufficient doubt about a third to have it dismissed says of Williams: "By virtue of his ability he will bring back, the old American concept—Innocent until proven guilty."

A summa cum laude graduate of Holy Cross, and professor of law at Georgetown University, Lawyer Williams views his life's work philosophically. "In a courtroom as everywhere else the majestic vengeance of god is at work," he believes, "if we fail, there will be a better justice."

A campus calendar will be published by the Public Information Office for the week of October 3-9.

Those student organizations desiring publicity in the calendar must have al lcorresponding information into the Public Information Office, second floor of Dougherty Hall, by 5:00 p.m. Thursday, September 29.

President Reveals New Study of Expansion Plans

"Because of Villanova's expansion in the past few years, and the impending growth of college-age population, a serious re-study of future expansion plans will have to be made. We hope to be able to undertake the sudy this year."

So declared the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, OSA, University President, in revealing the progress that could be expected this year at Villanova. He emphasized that he "hoped" to undertake the study, because the University's Board of Trustees has not yet met to approve the action. However, he stated that he was quite certain that the Board would give its approval.

At times they were vociferous. At times they were docile. The temper of the newly matriculated Class of 1964, during registration week, depended on the whims of the "white hats", who kept the frosh in tow by resorting to quasi-military tactics.

Father Klekotka pointed out that the new Science Building, the exterior of which is almost completely built, represents one of the major stages in the University's 20-year expansion program, now in its sixth year.

In addition, extensive renovations have been effected throughout the campus. The interiors of the residence houses at the west end of the campus have been remodelled, a Modern Language Laboratory has been installed in Vasey Hall, the Field House sports a new floor, and the Stadium is being refaced in brick.

These interior renovations are complemented by exterior improvements—the resurfacing of a number of paths, the addition of fencing in a number of locations, and the "reforestation" program: dozens of trees and shrubs which were planted about the campus last spring.

"Boom" Taxes Facilities

Father President indicated that completion of the Science Building, to be named Mendel Hall, will remain as the immediate goal of the expansion program. He added however, that the original expansion study, which was begun in 1952, could not forsee the recent "boom" which has greatly taxed Villanova's facilities.

"There is a rather immediate need of a larger Chapel, graduate residences, maintenance quarters, a theatre, an extension to the Library, and other things," Father Klekotka declared. The re-study of plans undoubtedly include consideration of these matters. "In addition," he continued, "there is the matter of off-campus residents. Of course, it would be most desirable to have all residents actually living on the campus. This naturally means that a great deal of additional dormitory space would be needed."

New Seminary Planned

Other than the Science Building, the only building to be erected in the immediate future is a new seminary. This will be located directly across Spring Mill Road from Garey Hall, the Law School. St. Mary's Hall, the present seminary building, and St. Rita's Hall, the present seminarians' residence, are taxed to the utmost, Father President stated. The new seminary will release these buildings for use by the University proper.

"Villanova's tremendous progress during the past eight or ten years points up our great need for assistance from outside sources," the President said. "Tuition and fees, as high as

Largest Frosh Class Ever Matriculates At Villanova

The largest freshman class in the history of Villanova was admitted Wednesday as the 118th academic year of the University opened with a five-day-long registration period last week.

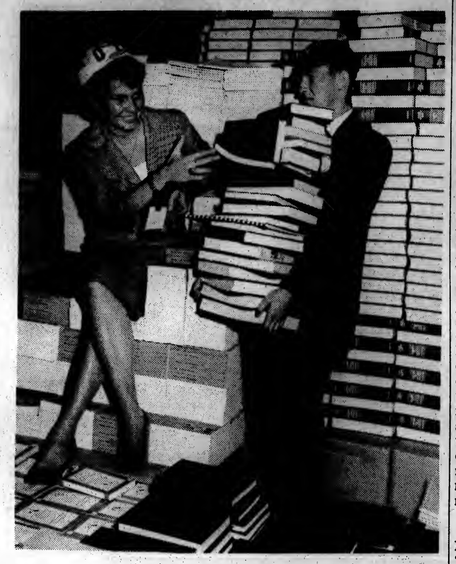
Approximately 1300 "frosh," including 48 nurses and three female engineers, as well as several hundred new students in the Part Time and Graduate divisions, swelled the total enrollment to well over 7,000 students.

The Rev. Francis X. Smith, O.S.A., Director of Admissions, who released the approximate exact figures would be announced as soon as his office completes tabulation and correlation of registration data.

Registration

Last week was entirely devoted to the registration process. The 1960-61 academic year opened officially last Monday, with Mass being celebrated in the Field House by the Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President.

Following the Mass, and an address of welcome by Father Klekotka, all students attended opening classes. 43 new faculty members alleviated possible crowding of classrooms.



With the commencement of classes, studies replaced the rigors of orientation as the freshmen's major consideration. The orientation period will not be concluded, however, until MUFF Day, October 5.

Losing "Regs"

On MUFF Day, the "Frosh" have the opportunity of disposing of their traditional "regs" by an athletic victory over the sophomores. Last year, as freshmen, the present sophomore class was defeated by a score of 110 to 80.

Should the freshmen fail to win the MUFF Day contests, they will be required to continue wearing "regs" for a longer period.

Freshman At . . . Work?

Pity the struggling freshman. That's what comely "white hat" Kathy Cox is doing. It appears as though the frosh would prefer assistance.

P&W Opens 'Hooker Junction'

The newly built P&W station located on Ithan Avenue opposite the Field House was completed over the summer months.

Responsible for this convience on the eastern end of the campus is Jim Hooker, commuter, treasurer o fthe Student Council.

Hooker, head of the unofficial Dav-hop Committee which is dedicated to exhibiting loyalty and spirit among non-resident students, felt that a station was urgently needed to accomodate the increased enrollment.

Early last spring he began communicating with the Red Arrow people, who run the P&W line, urging them to hasten plans for rebuilding the delapidated station which had there, unused.

The P&W, acting on statistics indicating a large enough increase in enrollment to warrant a new station, complied with Hooker's request.

Frosh Nurses See 'Haute Couture' In Fashion Show Here

Fashions follow many paths, and one step of the journey fell upon Villanova soil, where it was proved conclusively that knickers are no longer part of the "old fashioned" heap.

The scene was the East Lounge, last Thursday afternoon. The occasion was the Nursing Sorority's initial, kick-off-in-the-right-direction, campaign for freshmen nurses, featuring, naturally enough, the experienced sophomore nurses.

After a preliminary speech by Marian Wagner, co-ed "White-Hat," Miss E'aine Sheridan of Helen Caro Shoppe assumed the controls and literally peppered her audience with brain-washing commentary on the importance of 'haute couture' on the campus. "Knickers have been swept from boys' to ladies' closets," she pronounced, and proceeded to illustrate her statement by displaying an interesting assortment of Helen Caro creations, as modelled by the sophomore nurses .

Figures Staggering

Although the figure qoted by Miss Sheridan as the price of 'haute coutre' was staggering to a masculine imagination, the frosh nurses received them in a most scholarly manner. After the show, however, everyone enjoyed the solace of cookies, punch, and ice cream.

Business, too, was combined with pleasure, for El'een Greyson, President of Pi Theta Chi, and Miss Wagner did introduce Mrs. Isabel Schrum, the new Dean of Nursing, the Nursing faculty, and the officers of the sorority . All this and a full explanation of the symbolism of the nurses' uniform. Good luck, girls!

NAVY CAPTAIN BOYLE

A Renegade Jesuit

Captain J. E. Boyle Named Chairman Of V. U. Naval Unit

Captain John E. Boyle, USN, has been appointed commanding officer of Villanova's naval installation. He succeeds Captain John Higgins, USN, who commanded the installation for the past four years.

Captain Boyle's immediate reaction to his appointment was that he is "delighted with the facilities the kind Augustinians have made avai'able to a renegade Jesuit." The Captain was graduated from Boston College with a B.S. in Chemistry in 1940.

He expressed his intention to reciprocate the kindness by making available to all students advice on the many programs availab'e for discharging military obligations. He will also lend moral support to the NROTC Drill Team, which he expects will maintain the championship status it achieved in past years.

NROTC Hosts Contest

The Captain noted that Villanova's Drill Team will host a drill competition among 15 colleges located in New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania area. This event will take place on November 12.

Captain Boyle comes to Villanova from Washington, D. C., where he served on the Evaluation force which tests new equipment, and as Chief of Naval Operations in the Washington area. Previously, he had seen service both in the Korean conflict, when he commanded the Japanese task force; and in World War II, when he served in sea mine warfare.

Count Villan Dies; Spirit Committee Joy At Frosh Enthusiasm

Count Villan V is dead.

The docile wildcat, mascot of Villanova athletic teams for the last few years succumed to an undisclosed disease several weeks ago at the Norristown zoo.

"We probably won't be able to get a replacement 'till spring, either," lamented Butch McNally, co-chairman of the Spirit Committee.

On the brighter side of the picture, McNally pointed to the success of last week's sendoff rallies.

Last Thursday, on the patio adjoining Dougherty Hall, McNally introduced head football coach Alex Bell, team captain Joe Luzzi, and about twenty members of the squad to a substantial group of vociferous freshmen clustered about the two walks and the university thruway.

Bell was visibly impressed with the froshs' noisy enthusiasm.

After the rally the white hats herded the initiated into Vasey Hall auditorium.

Following the usual vituperative display of freshman bellicosity, McNally and Joe Tate presented a variety program capped by a screening of the popu'ar motion picture, "Pal Joey."

On Friday morning the Spirit Committee incited what McNally termed "a spirited rally," featuring the freshman residents and a Lower Merion firetruck. This combination produced a rousing sendoff for the 54 members of the Villanova football entourage about to embark for Milwaukee and the Marquette game.

McNally was pleased with the enthusiasm generated at the rally by the frosh.

"They weren't too happy about the early hour but they still made plenty of noise. I just hope they're as gung-ho tonite at the Navy sendoff."

McNally added that at the present only one thing is certain about the committee's agenda of upcoming events: "There will be a rally prior to each game."

Tell Us More

In a talk to a class in college, a professor of Religion stated that there are 756 sins. He was swamped with requests for lists by students who thought they were missing out on something.

Language Lab To Open New Vistas In Studies Of Speech

A Modern Language Laboratory, designed to vastly increase students' conversational opportunity in foreign languages, has been installed at Villanova.

The laboratory ,which is located on the second floor of Vasey Hall, is designed to "establish a closer contact between the student and the language being studied," according to Dr. E. Stack, newly-apoointed Chairman of the Modern Languages Dept.

Dr. Stack, who planned the laboratory, stated that under the convention language study system, a teacher can devote only about five minutes per week to each student. Under the new system, which features dual-track tape recorders, a student receives over an hour of practice each week.

Sound-proof Booths

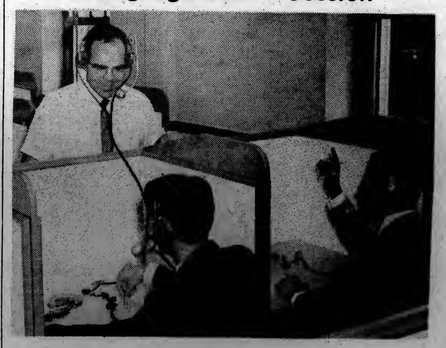
The laboratory, which is lothirty sound-proof booths. Each booth is equipped with a combination microphone - earphone and a dual-track tape recorder. A selection of tapes is available to the student, who will select one suggested by the teacher, or one which he himself desires to practice, at the beginning of each period.

This tape will be played on the recorder in the student's booth, at a convenient speed. The student, wearing the earphone-microphone combination, will hear a question in the language he is studying. Then will come a pause, during which he will answer the question.

Correct Answer

Next, the student will hear the question answered correctly, both as to grammar and pronunciation, after which he will repeat the correct answer. With this process completed, the student can then re-play the entire question-answer series, listening to himself and noting where he has made mistakes. He may then erase one track of the tape, on which he has recorded his answers. The other track, containing the questions and correct answers, is not erasable. The student may repeat each question-answer series until he has mastered it..

Master Console



Every booth is connected to a master monitoring console. Here, the teacher may switch at will into any booth and listen to the student. Unless the teacher makes a comment on the lesson to the student, the latter will not realize he is being overheard. This is to insure that each student will maintain his best effort at all times.

Dr. Stack revealed that the laboratory plans had been submitted by him last March, and that construction was begun immediately after the close of the last academic year in June. Over ten miles of wiring is required to link together the complete facilities of the lab.

Students Should Report

Students are requested to report to the lab as soon as possible to choose the time they wish to spend in the lab each week. Dr. Stack suggested that the preferred times are those just before the conventional language lecture. The lab lessons run for approximately 25 minutes, or half the regular class period. There are three lab sessions per week. At this time, only French and Spanish lessons will be given in the lab.

Language Lab In Session

Dr. E. Stack, chairman of the Modern Language Department, explains facilities of new Language Lab to interested students. Lab is located on the second floor of Vasey Hall.

Science Building as it appeared last year contrasts sharply with its present, almost-complete state.

Science Building Nears Midpoint Of Construction

Four million dollars represent the investment being spent on Villanova's new Science Building now under construction on land between the Library and the Naval Science Building. The new building will bear the name of Mendel Hall, the present name of the Science, Administration and Dormitory building at the west end of the campus.

Frank Dubler, job coordinator for Villanova, promises that the building will be finished by the spring of '61. He further adds that some classrooms will be available by summer school and that total occupancy can begin next fall.

The building will be equipped to handle highly specialized research, and to accommodate an enlarged science enrollment. Approximately forty per cent of this year's freshman class are enrolled in the Arts and Science Division—the largest number to date. Many of these students will begin c'asses in the new building by September of '61.

The concrete frame of the new air conditioned building will be partly sheathed with stonework to match the other campus buildings and partly with aluminum window walls formed of glass and panels of alberne stone.

Dubler stated that at the present time most of the windows are in place and the stone work will be finished next month.

The building, composed of two wings linked with a bridge of classrooms above the first floor, will house a planetarium, observation terrace and telescope of the Astronomy Department. There will also be an automatically controlled greenhouse for the use of science students.

A "hot laboratory" for the study of radioactive materia's wi'l be located on the ground floor, equipped with a sub-critical nuclear reactor.

The Science Department Chiefs have already outlined their tentative programs in research which will be made possible with the addition of more space and facilities in the building.

New and advanced courses will be made available to both graduate and undergraduate students. The Physics Department alone will be able to offer advanced courses in optics, modern physics, electronics and magnetism. There will be three general physics labs instead of one, the present number.

The research made possible in the new building will be gratly extended over any research program that might exist at the present time. The building is designed for work in physics, chemistry, biology, mathematics and astronomy.

The research groups will work in special research rooms, and in the event of a business contract as the result of research, the work will be removed to project rooms, since such companies usually require security.

The Biology Department will be located on the ground floor and first floor with a science Museum. The second and third floors will house the Chemistry Department.

The telescope in the observation terrace will protrude through a sliding roof, as opposed to the turret type mounting of the old scope.

The largest single installation in the building will be an extensive system of refrigeration. The entire place will be air conditioned. Dubler commented that the refrigeration system is completed as well as the heating system which will be turned on in early November.

Portrette

Pistelli Is O. C. Head

Don Pistilli, a well-known personality to the sophomore class and rapidly becoming an equally well-known personality to the freshman class through his leadership of the Orientation Committee, has shown himself to be one of the outstanding students of Villanova.

WHITEHAT PISTELLI

Furnished With Thrill

Don, a graduate of Ambler High School in Ambler, Pa., is a finance major who was elected vice-president of the sophomore class, and new serves as its president. When asked how he felt about being chosen class president, he said, "The feeling I have now regarding my position as president will never be equalled, no matter what I may accomplish for the rest of my life."

Since the Sophomore Class President is, ex-officio, co-chairman of the Orientation Committee, Don has assumed the added duty of directing freshman orientation with his co-chairman, Student Council Vice-Chairman Tom Well.

"One of my greatest thril's here at Villanova was becoming co-chairman of the Orientation Committee," he declared. "I realize that is is a very responsible position. We 'white-hats' may have seemed a little callous to the freshmen, and a litt'e inconsiderate of them at times, but I think that they rea'ize how important it is that they become properly acquainted with Villanova. I have nothing but the greatest respect and admiration for their spirit and enthusiasm."

Don added that the job of orienting the largest class ever to enroll in the University wou'd have been impossible, had it not been for the help of the members of the Orientation Committee. "They have done a tremendous job, a wonderful job," he stated. He emphasized his gratitude to Rick Sonta, Marty Whalen, Joe Tate, Jim Howley, Jim O'Brien, Rocky Guidice, and Csuck Butler for their help in heading the various sub-committees of the Orientation Committee.

'Autumn Mist' Is The Theme For Tonight's Council Dance

The fall social season will be initiated tomorrow evening in the Field House by the annual Student Council Dance, "Autumn Mist". Music will be furnished by Eddie Bigham and his orchestra.

The dance, from nine to one, will constitute the principal source of revenue for the new Student Council Treasury, according to Bob Benson and Bill Friend, co-chairmen. Benson pointed out that the University Administration will match, dollar for dollar, the profits realized from the dance, and that this sum will be deposited in the Treasury, to be used by the Council to finance future student activities.

Tickets On Sale

Freind stated that tickets are on sale for $3.00 in the Pie Shoppe and C&F Cafeteria. They may also be purchased from any Student Council member.

The co-chairmen emphasized that the dance has been in preparation since early in the summer. The goal of the dance committee, as stated by Benson, was "to make this initial ball the best of the entire year." The first step in attaining this goal, he said, was the signing of the Bigham group.

Bigham himself was once associated with Fred Waring, and has also served as occompanist to Martha Raye, the comedienne. His orchestra has been termed "one of the fastest-rising stars in the musical galaxy," according to Freind.

Gordon Burlingame Named '60-61 V.U. Fund Drive Head

Gordon M. Burlingame, prominent Philadelphia area Insurance executive, has been named Chairman of Villanova University's 1960-61 Fund Drive, it was announced by the Rev. Daniel P. Fa'vey, O.S.A., Director of Foundation.

Burlingame, who is President of the Title Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania, succeeds J. Griffith Boardman, who directed the university fund drive for the past two years.

Campaign Begun In 1954

Villanova began its twenty year development campaign in 1954 and is seeking to raise twenty one million dollars to offset a tremendous building program which has seen the campus nearly triple in size. Latest addition is a four million dollar Science and Research Building presently under construction.

A group of prominent area citizens, known as the Board of Lay Trustees, is aiding Villanova in its quest for funds. Each year, one of the group which numbers more than 200, assumes the chairmanship of the drive. Burlingame was named by the Board's Executive Committee during a meeting recently.

Hails from N. Y.

Previous drive chairmen were James A. Farley, former Postmaster General of the United States; the late Edwin K. Daly, former President of the Horn and Hardart Corporation; Willim F. Kelly, President of the First Pennsylvania Banking and Trust Co.; John A. Murphy, Philadelphia Broker and Mr. Boardman.

Burlingame is a native of New York City but has been a resident of Bryn Mawr for more than fifty years. He is one of the Main Line's most active and outstanding citizens. Buringame is a graduate of Lower Merion High School and Lehigh University and undertook specialized study at Pennsylvania and Drexel.

Villanova's new fund chairman became associated with the Bryn Mawr Trust Co. in 1925 and in 1937 was appointed Vice President, a Director and Title Officer of the Bank. He held that position until he was named President and Director of the Ttle Insurance Corporation of Pennsylvania in 1954.

Holds Many Offices

Burlingame is Chairman of the Montgomery County Planning Commission and former President of the Bryn Mawr Business Association. He is past President of the Pennsylvania Title Association, Past President of the Philadelphia Mortgage Bankers Association and a former Director of the American League Baseball Club of Philadelphia.

In assuming the post of 1960-61 fund chairman for Villanova, Burlingame also becomes head of the Executive Committee of the Lay Trustees whose members include: R. G. Rincliffe, President of the Philadelphia Electric Co.; Edward J. Caughlin, President of the American Insulation Co.; Albert Nesbitt, President of John Nesbitt, Inc. and Alfred Laupheimer, President of the General Warehouse Co.

An Evaluation

By this time, you freshmen have been most thoroughly welcomed to Villanova, and it would be superfluous for The VILLANOVAN to enlarge on that welcome, beyond assuring you that we concur in every sincere sentiment expressed.

In a more practical vein, it seems most important that you be provided with a sort of roadmap to the future. For this purpose, we can suggest nothing more significant than the lead news story appearing on the front page of this newspaper. Behind the comparative coldness of objective reporting lies one of the most dramatic developments in Villanova's recent history. It is not too extreme to say that, most probably, you will not hear of any event of equal importance during your four-year sojourn here.

The proposed restudy of the University's expansion program means, in effect, that the present rate of progress will be considerably accelerated. The University's Trustees have found that advancement proceeds geometrically: the faster the progress, the more pressing the need for even greater progress.

No doubt you arrived at Villanova impressed by its physical expanse. When the present seniors arrived, three years ago, Sheehan and Sullivan Halls had just opened, the C & F Building was little more than a hole in the ground, and there was one clear, continuous tract from the rear of Mendel Hall to the railroad station.

The magnitude of such rapid development dwindles upon realization of the fact that, only en years go only Mendel and Vasey Halls served as classroom buildings, and only Fedigan, Ausin, and the three residences in the southwest corner of the campus served as dormitories. Students dined in cramped quarters in Mendel Hall, and the Library was stuck off in some other corner.

Aside from mere physical expansion is the mater of spiritual and intellectual growth. Despite emergency measures, there is no adequate location for the religious exercises demanded by a population as large as Villanova"s. As Father President declared, a new and much larger Chapel is a vital need, and development plans assure that it will be provided.

A number of new departments of study have been added to the curriculum recently. Only last year the Student Council took the initiative, recently. Only last year the Student Council took the initiativ, requested and obtained, the establishment of a Fine Arts course. During the summer, an electronic marvel was installed in Vasey Hall to facilitate the study of modern languages. Graduate, Part Time, and Summer schools have burgeoned to the point where entire buildings will have to be set aside for their exclusive use. Provisions for this, too, are made.

The tremendous popularity of extra-curriculur activities threatens to overwhelm Dougherty Hall, the Student Union Building, and emphasizes the need for projects such as the proposed theatre. Increased participation in intramural sports taxes facilities as more and more ground is occupied by construction. Remedies for these problems, however, are in the offing.

If hearing of this expansion impresses you freshmen at all, consider how it affects those who have been associated with Villanova for years, and sometimes for decades. And now it is announced tthat the dizzy pace will increase.

Perhaps some institutions would feel that they were adequately performing their duty by studying their circumstances, establishing a goal, and working toward it. Villanova University's Board of Trustees apparently does not believe that this is sufficient. The Trustees remain cognizant of their circumstances, they recognize the need ti alter plans to accomodate the changing demands of society, and they remain willing to make ever-increasing sacrifices to attain their desired end.

The beneficiaries of this action can only express gratitude for faithful adherence to an impressive aim: that of "building men for a better tomorrow."

Letters

Greetings to the Freshmen Class

Welcome to Villanova University! This September some 1200 men and women embark upon a new career as Villanova students. The sights and sounds of Collegiate life, so different from your accustomed mode of schooling in the past years, perhaps serve at first only to bewilder and confust. So many new faces, new courses, new methods of teaching, can be for a while disturbing to themost stable person. But they are all part o fthe Great adventure of higher education. The word adventure connotes bold, exciting, extraordinary experiences. Learning will indeed provide such experience and I urge each freshman entering Villanova this year to seek out and find the thrill and the excitement of higher learning. In the case of the intrepid explorer of the Arctic wastes, or the rugged climber of the Himalayan peaks, there can be no thrill of accomplishment unless the adventure is prepared for by a strenuous program of self-discipline to tune up the proper muscles. So there can be no thrill of learning, no intellectual excitement, unless there is study, development of the muscles of the brain, serious thought. I ask you today at the beginning of your college careers to put forth that effort, dig in to the books, consult with your professors. Wha you do in the next four years at Villanova will have an effect on the rest of your everlasting lives. Please make sure that it's going to have a good effect. God bless you, Villanovans!

Sincerely yours,

John A. Klekotka, O.S.A.

Fellow Villanovans,

Your Student Council is now beginning what is probably its most active programming in recent years. We of the Student Council of Villanova feel that we can serve you best only if you, as students, show a strong positive interest in Student Government. We are striving his year to weave the Student Body and Student Government into a more closely knit unit.

It is therefore our privilege to extend to you, and especially the freshmen, a sincere invitation to attend all Student Council Meetings which are held every other week in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

In the coming weeks I hope that you will meet with your class, fraternity, society, or club representatives and relate your opinions and ideas to them so that we, as a group, might discuss and utilize them. You might also use the Student Council suggestion box in Dougherty Hall. However you may choose to do it, please participate and share in your Student Government. Americanism Made Myth By Religious Issue

"The noble statements and platitudes written about the United States are all myths. They are nothing more than the sloppy sentiments of overaged and adealistic historians." The previous statement sounds rather ridiculous and unfair to most Americans. But it is more than possible that similar statements will be expressed if the Presidential campaign, now in progress, degenerates into a mud-slinging religious fracas.

If Kennedy should lose the coming election solely because of his religious affiliation, what widespread effect may it have on the future of this country? The scars of '28 healed very slowly—some haven't yet. If in '60 we witness another '28, how long will it take for the scars to heal?

Outspoken Protestants

At a time when the necessity of national unity is a must, many so-called Americans are beating the drums of disaster prefacing acquiescence to the Pope should a Catholic be elected to the Presidency. Even many intelligent non-Catholic clergymen such as Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, author of "The Power of Positive Thinking," and Dr. Daniel Poling, editor of the Christian Herald, had their names associated with an article which questioned a Catholic President's ability to withstand prssur from th Caholic hierarchy in matters of foreign police.

Tsese men, who are wo of the mo.t widely known churchmen among non-Catholics, can not be excused for their blind ignorance regarding the idea of separation of church and state.

It seems ironic that some Protestant clergymen who constantly claim that Catholics are attempting to units church and state inject their own political views into their sermons. Most Baptist clergymen, particularly in the South (where hospitality ranks second to illiteracy, are against Kennedy for no other reason than his Catholicism.

Protestant Intelligentsia

A comforting fact, however, is the opinions expressed by such Protestant intelligentsia as Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr and Dr. John C. Bennett. Both of these men concurred that religious opposition to Kennedy is based on prejudice.

As a group, the anti-Kennedy forces who use religious bigotry as their rallying point are few in number. But the followers they attract can be many by the time election day arrives. A concerted effort to stop Kennedy by these tactics may be successful. Only time will tell.

Of course Kennedy may be beaten at the polls because of his youth, his inexperience, his supposed socialistic leanings as manifested in the Democratic Platform, or a multitude of other reasons. Any reason except religion can justify his political defeat in the American tradition. But if he falls short of his goal because of religious bigotry, a terrible blow will be dealt the American concept of liberty and justice.

THE LEO GOODREAU STORY:

The Birth of A Tradition

LEO GOODREAU . .
Scholar, Athlete
Gentleman

THE GOODREAU Memorial Plaque still remains at the entrance to the stadium, in tribute to the player who died on the gridiron.

Editor's Note: This story is a reprint of the article written by Bill Jones that appeared in the January 1, 1956 issue of the VILLANOVAN. The facts that were used for that story were taken from the December 5, 1950 VILLANOVAN from an article written by Robert J. Quinn. It is reprinted here in order to acquaint all freshmen with the name and tradition of Leo Goodreau for whom the Stadium is named, and to whom this newspaper is dedicated.

Villanova University has produced many outstanding men throughout its years of Catholic education. Among these men some have been brilliant students, some excellent athletes and other superior gentlemen. But perhaps one of the finest men ever to enter Villanova, a humble composition of each of these qualities, never graduated. The man today is a shining memory to those of the faculty who have been at Villanova since 1930, and to the present undergraduates, merely a simple name on a tarnished plaque. This man, to whom the VILLANOVAN is respectfully dedicated, is Leo Goodreau, a scholar, an athlete, and most of all, a gentleman.

Merely a Name

To most of the students at Villanova, Leo Goodreau is merely a name that decorates the stadium and appears in the VILLANOVAN every week, but he is far more than that.

In 1927 the Villanova Stadium was erected and dedicated. The entire Villanova student body attended this ceremony. One of these students was a freshman who was destined to die on that field within one short year. The story of Leo Goodreau is in reality inspiration, an inspiration to all Villanovans.

Football

Leo was an All-New England interscholastic quarterback in high school and became a prominent name on the Villanova campus. He joined the ranks of freshmen football players and due to his hard, fast, clean and aggressive play was immediately tagged as a future star and a sure bet to take over the first string quarterback slot on the varsity the next fall.

In his first game for the Villanova frosh, he scored the first touchdown to be recorded in the new stadium, a touchdown which opened the season and the stadium with a triumph. Little did Leo realize that in the space of a few short years this field would be named Goodreau Stadium.

Baseball Too

Although he was the finest football player that Villanova had seen in quite some time, this was not his best sport. Despite his skill as a quarterback, Leo showed as much if not more proficiency as a catcher on the baseball team. His coach, Charles A. McGeehan, predicted that he easily had a major league career before him if he wanted it. He was truly a great athlete.

Leo, deeply engaged in athletics, nevertheless had an abundance of time for social activity. He was instrumental in conducting the freshman dance in the spring of 1928. Under his leadership and determination the dance became the most successful in the history of the class. In appreciation for his fine effort, the class elected him to the position of Secretary shortly before the scholastic year terminated.

Revived Spirit

He was also instrumental in reviving Villanova's fraternities which were practically non-existent. Meetings were seldom held and little was accomplished when they were. He revived the Epsilon Phi Theta Fraternity into one of the most active social clubs on the campus. In order to remain in the campus picture the frats were forced to rejuvenate and the school spirit flourished as it never had before. Leo had solidly proven that a lack of spirit had no place on the Villanova campus.

Despite this unusually heavy schedule, Leo maintained a scholastic average which placed him in the upper half of his class. His coach, Harry Stuhldreher, figured on him as potential All-American on the gridiron and a shining light in the Villanova football picture. It was a sure thing. But he was never given the chance to show his All-American calibre to the rest of the sports world, for the Lord had other and far greater plans for Leo J. Goodreau.

On the field Leo never gave up digging, and ironically this hustle cost him his life.

One early September afternoon he was calling offensive signals for the varsity against the frosh in a grueling scrimmage held in preparation for Villanova's game. The frosh lined up determined to prove their mettle against a larger and more experienced varsity. As the ball was snapped to a halfback, Leo, who besides being a triple threat on offense was a demon on defense, bolted forward leading the interference. The frosh line charged. There was a quick pile-up. It was Leo Goodreau's last play.

His Last Play

When the players unpiled, Leo was lying quite still, face down on the turf. As he slowly came to, his face was contorted with pain. A teammate tried to help the stricken player to his feet and he shrieked with pain. His back had been brutally broken.

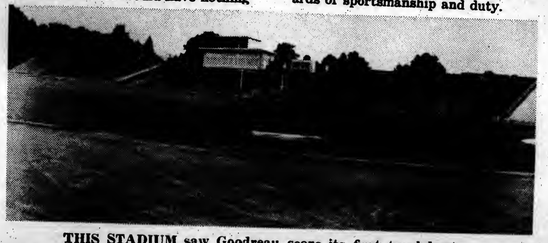
He was given no chance of survival by the specialists called in on the case. He was almost completely paralyzed. His back was broken a'right, but his spirit was hardly dented. No longer was he fighting for his school, he was fighting for his life. He refused to give up. He insisted on hearing all the football scores that grim Saturday; his wish was not denied. He assured everyone that someday he would be back in the Villanova "line-up." But Leo underesthmated himself, for he was soon to participate in a far more rewarding "line-up."

Undefeated Season

When it was recognized that he was not going to pull through, there was talk of postponing the entire football schedule, but Leo would have nothing to do with this idea. He movingly complained that it was not only unfair to the team which had worked so hard for so long, but even unfair to himself.

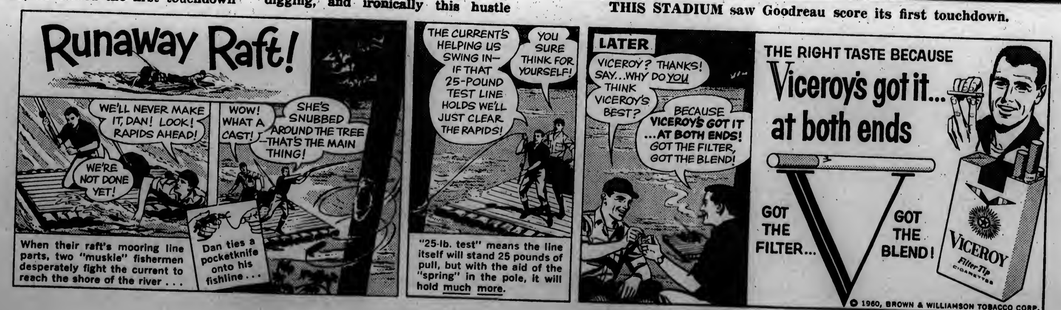
It is merely an anti-climax to state that the Villanova football team, inspired by this tough plucky youth swept on to an undefeated season, crushing all opposition.

The Last Spark



But soon the fight became too much, even for Leo Goodreau. He confided to his coach, Harry Stuhldreher, "I've given the best that is in me, I'm tired out, I can't hold out much longer." Death was near. He was given the Last Rites and soon lapsed into a coma. While in this coma, he began to call football signals and continued until early Tuesday afternoon, just four short days after his gridiron play, the spark of life in Leo Goodeau flickered out.

A Sad Scene



Father O'Leary who was present at the time of the death had this description: "It was a beautiful but sad scene. Outside were teammates and classmates, and inside priests and doctors. To the last Leo maintained that same staunchness of heart which marked him on the football field."

At the funeral in Villanova's College Chapel, the casket was carried by his former teammates. The entire student body was present at the Solemn High funeral Mass.

Surely the spirit of Leo J. Goodreau lingers in the halls and on the playing fields of Villanova, a spirit which is to those who know his story, an ever present inspiration to higher standards of sportsmanship and duty.

THIS STADIUM saw Goodreau score its first touchdown.

An Evaluation

By this time, you freshmen have been most thoroughly welcomed to Villanova, and it would be superfluous for The VILLANOVAN to enlarge on that welcome, beyond assuring you that we concur in every sincere sentiment expressed.

In a more practical vein, it seems most important that you be provided with a sort of roadmap to the future. For this purpose, we can suggest nothing more significant than the lead news story appearing on the front page of this newspaper. Behind the comparative coldness of objective reporting lies one of the most dramatic developments in Villanova's recent history. It is not too extreme to say that, most probably, you will not hear of any event of equal importance during your four-year sojourn here.

The proposed restudy of the University's expansion program means, in effect, that the present rate of progress will be considerably accelerated. The University's Trustees have found that advancement proceeds geometrically: the faster the progress, the more pressing the need for even greater progress.

No doubt you arrived at Villanova impressed by its physical expanse. When the present seniors arrived, three years ago, Sheehan and Sullivan Halls had just opened, the C & F Building was little more than a hole in the ground, and there was one clear, continuous tract from the rear of Mendel Hall to the railroad station.

The magnitude of such rapid development dwindles upon realization of the fact that, only en years go only Mendel and Vasey Halls served as classroom buildings, and only Fedigan, Ausin, and the three residences in the southwest corner of the campus served as dormitories. Students dined in cramped quarters in Mendel Hall, and the Library was stuck off in some other corner.

Aside from mere physical expansion is the mater of spiritual and intellectual growth. Despite emergency measures, there is no adequate location for the religious exercises demanded by a population as large as Villanova"s. As Father President declared, a new and much larger Chapel is a vital need, and development plans assure that it will be provided.

A number of new departments of study have been added to the curriculum recently. Only last year the Student Council took the initiative, recently. Only last year the Student Council took the initiativ, requested and obtained, the establishment of a Fine Arts course. During the summer, an electronic marvel was installed in Vasey Hall to facilitate the study of modern languages. Graduate, Part Time, and Summer schools have burgeoned to the point where entire buildings will have to be set aside for their exclusive use. Provisions for this, too, are made.

...rmendous popularity of extra-curricular activities threatens to overwhelm Dougherty Hall, the Student Union Building, and emphasizes the need for projects such as a ...ed theatre. Increased participation in intramural sports taxes facilities as ... ground is occupied by conjectural studies for these problems, however, is ...offling.

... of this expansion impresses ... at all, consider how it affects ... been associated with Villa... and sometimes for decades, ... announced tthat the dizzy pace ...

... some institutions would feel that ... were adequately performing their duties ... studying their circumstances, establishing a goal, and working toward it. Villanova University's Board of Trustees apparently does not believe that this is sufficient. The Trustees remain cognizant of their circumstances, they recognize the need to adapt plans to accomodate the changing demands of society, and they remain willing to make ever-increasing sacrifices to promote their desired end.

The beneficiaries of this action can only express gratitude for faithful adherence to an instructive aim: that of "building men for a better tomorrow."

Letters

Greetings to the Freshmen Class

Welcome to Villanova University! This September some 1200 men and women embark upon a new career as Villanova students. The sights and sounds of Collegiate life, so different from your accustomed mode of schooling in the past years, perhaps serve at first only to bewilder and confust. So many new faces, new courses, new methods of teaching, can be for a while disturbing to themost stable person. But they are all part o fthe Great adventure of higher education. The word adventure connotes bold, exciting, extraordinary experiences. Learning will indeed provide such experience and I urge each freshman entering Villanova this year to seek out and find the thrill and the excitement of higher learning. In the case of the intrepid explorer of the Arctic wastes, or the rugged climber of the Himalayan peaks, there can be no thrill of accomplishment unless the adventure is prepared for by a strenuous program of self-discipline to tune up the proper muscles. So there can be no thrill of learning, no intellectual excitement, unless there is study, development of the muscles of the brain, serious thought. I ask you today at the beginning of your college careers to put forth that effort, dig in to the books, consult with your professors. Wha you do in the next four years at Villanova will have an effect on the rest of your everlasting lives. Please make sure that it's going to have a good effect. God bless you, Villanovans!

Sincerely yours,

John A. Klekotka, O.S.A.

Fellow Villanovans,

Your Student Council is now beginning what is probably its most active programming in recent years. We of the Student Council of Villanova feel that we can serve you best only if you, as students, show a strong positive interest in Student Government. We are striving his year to weave the Student Body and Student Government into a more closely knit unit.

It is therefore our privilege to extend to you, and especially the freshmen, a sincere invitation to attend all Student Council Meetings which are held every other week in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

In the coming weeks I hope that you will meet with your class, fraternity, society, or club representatives and relate your opinions and ideas to them so that we, as a group, might discuss and utilize them. You might also use the Student Council suggestion box in Dougherty Hall. However you may choose to do it, please participate and share in your Student Government. It will only be as strong as you choose to make it.

With every good wish for a successful academic year, I remain

The Nihilist By Joe Conlin

Simian-Like White Hats Dooming Orientation Week

It is the custom in a newspaper such as the VILLANOVAN to address columns of this sort to a general audience of readers, an organization, a class, or the entire student body.

This column, being the first of the school year, properly is an immediate violation of that axiom. For this inspired bit of journalism is addressed to a relatively microscopic faction of the freshman class, that faction of freshmen with an intelligence quotient somewhat above that of the average adolescent lemming.

Thus, as the makeup of the class of 1964 is doubtlessly greatly similar to uncountable preceding classes, it can be conjectured that there are perhaps ten or twelve, perhaps even fifteen, of this rare alert breed. To this poor group, destined to suffer much in the next four years, I offer an apology, beg an indulgence, and offer an explanation in regard to the farcial, imbecilic, and asine execution of Orientation Week by the much ridiculed, so-called "White Hats."

This is the case at Villanova. By far the overwhelming bulk of the student body is lacking in intelligence to the extent of premature senility.

It is only fair, democratic, and "American" I am sure the supra-lemmings of the freshman class will agree, that the majority of any given society or institution dominate the cultural, social, and intellectual temper of said institution.

This is the case at Villanova. By far the overwhelming bulk of the student body is lacking in intelligence to the extent of premature senility. The antics of the simian-like "O.C's" is only one, the first, to be sure, but nevertheless only one of many such ordeals yet to be borne.

Fortunately, signs are appearing already, indicating that Orientation Week, as we know it, with all its quasi-traditions, will soon be a dim memory of the past. Already it is rumored rather reliably that Good Counsel Hall, 'in toto,' has discarded its "regs," and is openly flaunting White Hat power.

If this promising sign is a precedent of the ultimate failure of the "Orientation" system, then in the near future, perhaps White Hat effort might be directed in healthier channels in introducing freshmen to Villanova.

When Wes Roberts was nearing the end of his senior year at San Jose State College, he was looking for a job with a wide open future. He found it when he joined Pacific Telephone in San Francisco.

Here's how Wes tells it: "I remember one of my first jobs. The boss said, 'Wes, I want you to work out a plan showing where we'll need new field operating centers to keep up with Northern California's growth over the next 10 years.' I didn't know whether I was more happy or scared."

Wes didn't tell us (but his boss did) that he handled the report like a pro. And today, as a division supervisor, he's holding down a key telephone job.

Wes Roberts' story is not unique in the Bell Telephone Companies. The telephone business is growing fast—and men are needed who can grow just as fast.

Introducing "Column For The 'Men'"

By Joe Zawacki

(1) Philadelphia is the fourth largest city in the country.

(2) The average college youth's spending money is limited.

From these two seemingly unrelated statements is born the concept and basis of this column and the format for the coming months. It is intended to be an entertainment guide for the mature college student who wishes to get the most out of his fun money. Since, as mentioned above, his money is generally limited, it is our hope that we can point out some of the highlights of the coming season in movies, theater, jazz, and the arts in general for your ultimate benefit.

The title of this column comes naturally because it is "'ROUND MIDNIGHT" that the men are separated from the boys in their tastes for what constitutes a good time. The boys will always be found nursing a dime beer at one of the local emporium but the young man wishing to mature gradually in these formative years will be fund discussing the movie, play, or jazz concert that he has just seen.

Philly is our beat and, like any big city, it has its good and bad points. The bad ones are easy to find; just ask any of the swamp-dwellers from the across the river. For the good points, we hope that you will get in the habit of turning to this column. In the ensuing weeks, there will be found a list at the end of column with the highlights of the coming week. But for now, let's look at the big city and what it has to offer us. One hundred and thirty-four movie theaters advertise in the local papers, fifteen of which are considered first run. There are eight art theaters in the larger number and since eighty percent of the exceptional films during the year pass through here, much of our movie time will be spent in these theaters.

There are five legitimate theaters where Broadway-bound plays iron out their kinks before departing for our New York suburb. Since plays tend to be expensive, it will take a very good one to attract our attention. Jazz lovers have no problems in this area as Philly abounds in this art form in both quantity and quality. Besides the usual showplaces, there are the numerous concerts given at the Academy of Music. Restaurants with quality food and reasonable prices are always worth a mention here and are not hard to find.

Athletically, Philadelphia has the distinction of being the only city in the land to field five major college "goonball" teams. These whistling exhibitiins are played in Penn's Palestra whose chief claim to fame is its annually terrible schedule which more often harms than helps our teams. Down the street at Convention Hall, the Pro version of Hugh Brown's favorite sport can be found. With these two establishments so close together, outsiders are often fooled into thinking that they are near a whistle factory.

Around the corner in Franklin Field, the Eagles open their season Sunday against Cleveland and next month, the Arena will again host the Ramblers Hockey Six. These minor sports should keep the fans quiet till the Spring when the Phils try again.

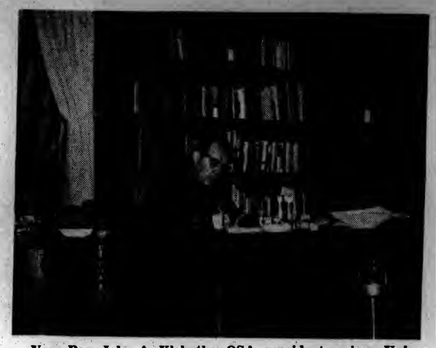
I.C.G. Awakening Student Interest In Timely Problems

With the great interest in politics in the United States, it is a comforting fact that there is a statewide student organization devoted to intelligent political thought. The organization is known as the Intercollegiate [illegible]

The Villanova chapter of the I.C.G. is one of the most active of the approximately fifty chapters in the Conference. During the past year, Villanova was the scene of a model national presidential nominating convention.

Although the proceedings of these conventions were conducted in a manner akin to the national conventions of the major political parties, they lacked one thing—The hullabaloo and ballyhoo demonstrated by the Democrats at Los Angeles and demonstrated by the Republicans at Chicago. After watching the Democratic convention it is difficult to believe that the delegates are in a sense entrusted with determining the destiny of this nation. Consider that the ideas and the model platform worked out by students at the I.C.G. Harrisburg convention will remain in a filing cabinet, while the ideas of the "serious and mature" delegates at Los Angeles may determine the future of the free world.



This is a deplorable state of affairs when one considers the high stakes which are involved. Serious thinking students can hardly condone the behavior of many leaders of the major political parties. Thirty or forty years ago the threat of world destruction was seldom if ever discussed because few people believed that man was capable of destroying himself. Today this threat is a part of our everyday conversation. And yet with a threat of such magnitude ever present, our leaders so often act imprudently.

In recent months students in Turkey and Korea brought about the downfall of dictatorial regimes, and Japan witnessed the radical and undesirable activities of the Zengakuren. It seems apparent that students in different areas of the world are becoming increasingly interested in how their governments are operated. But most of the time they can only express themselves by rioting. There are no efficient student organizations in these countries which can serve as a vehicle for students to voice their opinions in an intelligent and conservative manner.

In the United States, however, there already exists an organization, the Intercollegiate conference on Government, which acting as a foundation in Pennsylvania could and should be the forerunner of a nation-wide conference o fcollege students. Then the political ideas of students could be put into realities instead of wastebaskets.

". . . The success of any enterprise depends in great measure upon the degree to which it draws upon the knowledge and creative ability of those who are engaged in it. Suggestion systems are effective mechanisms for tapping this potential. These systems exemplify our respect for the individual and his ideas, and demonstrate our faith in the ability of each citizen to contribute to the progress of the national community . . ."

President Reveals Expansion Plans

they may seem, do not ever cover the total cost of an education. Therefore, there is a continuing need to expand fund-raising activities to obtain the needed assistance. Of course, we are most grateful to our many friends and associates on the Development fund, and to the great numbers of people not directly associated with the University, who have lent us their co-operation and assistance. Because of them, the fund-raising outlook is most optimistic."

Rev. J. J. Hanson Is Dead; Oldest Priest At V. U.

The Rev. James J. Hasson, O.S.A., oldest member of the Province of St. Thomas of Villanova, died suddenly in the Monastery on September 8. Father Hasson, 80 years old, had formerly served as pastor of St. Thomas of Villanova Church, and St. Denis Church, Merwood.

More recently, Father Hasson had been retired from active religious work, but as late as last spring, he was participating in campus life to the point where he wrote an interesting contrast between present-day college life and life at Villanova half a century ago. This appeared as an article in The VILLANOVAN.

Born In Ireland

Father Hasson was born May 11, 1880, in County Donegal, Ireland. He came to the United States at an early age, and attended Cathedral School in Philadelphia, and Villanova College. He entered the Augustinian Novitiate in 1901, and was ordained in 1906 by Bishop Edmond Prendergast.

Following his ordination, Father Hasson was appointed pastor assigned to St. Augustine's College, Havana, Cuba. Later he served in parishes in Massachusetts and New York. He also taught at Augustinian Academy, Staten Island, N. Y.

First Villanova Pastor

In 1916, he was appointed first resident pastor of St. Thomas of Villanova Church, in Rosemont. Later, he was named rector of St. Denis Church, Merwood. In 1925, he became a trustee of Villanova.

Father Hasson's later service included establishments in the Bronx and Staten Island, N. Y.; Detroit, Mich.; and Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. In 1950 he was assigned to the Villanova Monastery, where he remained until his death.

Solemn Requim Mass was celebrated on September 18 by the Very Rev. James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., Provincial. Burial was in the community cemetery beside the Chapel.

Champagne Tea Will Aid Fund Drive For Rea Library

A champagne tea and fashion show, to benefit Villanova's Rea Memorial Library, will be held on October 9 in the C & F Cafeteria.

Original funds for the Library, popularly known as the "C & F Library," were donated by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Rea, Main Line residents, in memory of their late son, Robert W. Rea, Jr., for whom the library is named.

Although the library is less than one year old, the need to increase its facilities is already apparent. A committee of prominent Philadelphia - area women was formed during the summer to plan the champagne tea an dfashion show as one means of procuring funds for the library's expansion.

Invitations have already been distributed for the event, which will run from 4 to 7 p.m. Students of the Moore Institute of Art in Philadelphia will model fashions which they designed and produced themselves.

Meet Your Villanova Administration

REV. JOHN A. KLEKOTKA—An electrical engineering graduate, Class of '35, Father went on to study at Catholic University, University of Pennsylvania, and Penn State University. A native of Philadelphia, he was assigned to Villanova in 1942. In 1944 he became moderator of the VILLANOVAN and in 1956 was appointed as Villanova Chaplin. Father was made Director of Admissions in 1957, and finally President of the University in 1959. His office is located in the southwest corner of Mendel Hall on the first floor.

REV. JOSEPH W. KEMME, O.S.A.—The office of Vice President for Student Affairs concerns itself with matters of spiritual, intellectual, and disciplinary significance. Father is a graduate of the Class of '38 and appointed to ulty in 1942. He earned a M.S. in mathematics at Catholic University and in 1953 was named University Chaplain. Three years later he became Vice President.

REV. JOSEPH J. GILDEA, O.S.A.—As the Vice President for Academic Affairs, Father is in direct supervision of the scholastic framework of the campus. A V.U. graduate of the Class of '39, father was a member of the faculty here from 1940 to 1946. After 13 years at Merrimack College, he returned to Villanova last year. Father has a M.A. from Catholic University and a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania.

REV. JOHN J. CURRAN, O.S.A.—Father's charge is the maintaining of all university incomes and expeditures. Because of the rapid growth of Villanova in the last decade, financial resources have become of the utmost importance. It is up to Father, whose office is located directly across from the business office in the first floor of Mendel, to handle both the minor everyday problems and the complex long-range ones.

REV. GEORGE J. McLAUGHLIN, O.S.A.—A graduate of the Class of '36, Father began teaching at Villanova in 1947, in the Commerce and Finance School. He received an M.A. from Catholic University in 1940. As Dean of Men, is it Father's job to see that on campus and off-campus residents observe certain rules and regulations instituted by the university. His office is located on the second floor of Mendel Hall.

MISS M. DOROTHY BOYLE—As Dean of Women, Miss Boyle's charge is the female counterpart of Father McLaughlin's. She possesses a B.S. in Nursing Education from V.U. and a M.S. from the University of Pennsylvania in Education. Before coming to Villanova she served in the Navy Nurse Corps, and taught at the Bryn Mawr Hospital School of Nursing, Bryn Mawr College, and Immaculata College.

REV. DANTE L. GIROLAMI O.S.A.—Father is a graduate of the Class of '38 and received a M.S. in mathematics in 1942 from Catholic University. As Dean of Student Activities, Father is the immediate overseer of all student Activities, Father is the immediate overseer of all student extra-curricular functions. He also serves as the moderator of the Student Council the most important student group on campus.

REV. NORBERT W. WHITLEY, O.S.A.—In his capacity as University Chaplain, Father comes into closer personal contact with the students then any other member of the administration. the administration. A Class of '37 graduate, Father has attended Gregorian University in Rome and earned a lectorate in Sacred Theology at Catholic University in 1941. Prior to his appointment here in 1957, Father was Master of professed clerics at Augustinian College, Washington, D. C.

THE HUNGRY YOUNG MEN . . .

by Bud Simmonds

After last Saturday's 23-13 loss to Marquette, there was no great display of shock by the Villanova student body. There was no great disappointment that the young 'Cats took it on the chin in their first contest. There were, however, mixed feelings of cynicism and optimism prevalent aroound the campus.

The cynicism, although not altogether excusable, has been conditioned through past experiences with past Villanova football teams, and is not as yet aimed directly at the present edition. As a result of too many disappointments and too few bright spots, the Villanova student and fan has come to accept the fall campaign as the bitter equalizer of the sweet success of basketball, track, and baseball seasons.

Now this sardonic attitude has been present for a while at V.U., and one game, a losing one at that, is not going to alleviate the situation in one quick stroke. It will take quite a bit of doing to wash away the sour taste of the apathetic '59 campaign, which in pre-season polls was anticipated as "The Year" for the Wildcats.

At this point, the column is beginning to sound like a short discourse on the recent history of Villanova football spirit. This is not the purpose of the writer. In contrast, there is a flicker of optimism being shown. This ray of hope has been produced by the "new look" of the Villanova football situation. This look can be summed up as "hungry."

This hunger is creating a fresh desire that was sorely missing during the dreary 1959 season. The Marquette game was a good example of the new spirit.

The overanxiousness of a young team was evident at times Saturday night by way of costly fumbles and ill-timed penalties. But these mistakes are to be expected of a hustling, green ball club. They will be lessened by time and the experience of a few games.

On the brighter side, the contest showed that a balanced offensive backfield unit has finally arrived at Villanova, instead of the usual one or two workhorse backs. The solid ground game was a tasty appetizer for future grid battles.

An alert and more effective defense was displayed, but the typical Villanova lack of depth behind the capable first unit hurt the 'Cats as the game wore on. This shortcoming and counterballanced by the sharper cohesion in the offensive attack in the second half.

All these things are characteristic of a young team, as was already mentioned, but an observer can see that the horses are there, if not the depth. These horses just need grooming. This grooming will take time, but the team's hunger to make good and its confidence in its ability can conquer this element.

The trust of the students, however, is another matter. The feeling of the undergraduates (barring freshmen, who arrive on the Main Line with a natural pride in their football team and their school) needs an uplifting, but the students here are so accustomed to letdowns that they are hesitant about allowing their hopes to groow too high. What it levels down to is that they want to be shown.

The 1960 Wildcats gridders could be the ones to show them. This team and its coaches have the ability, if not the smoothness as yet, of a good team. With the backing and appreciation of a loyal student body, the club could rise to the occasion this year as well as those to come.

As a sidelight, Navy a few years ago under Eddie Erdelatz had "a team named desire." Maybe Villanova under Alex Bell has one of its own.

THE PLEDGE YOU SAVE MAY BE YOUR OWN

Today's column is directed at those young female undergraduates who have recently pledged sororities and are worried, poor lambs, that they won't make good. Following is a list of simple instructions which, if faithfully observed, will positively guarantee that you will be a mad success as a sorority girl.

First, let us take up the matter of housemothers. The housemother is your friend, your guide, your mentor. You must treat her with respect. When you wish to speak to her, address her as "Mother Sigafoos" or "Ma'am." In no circumstances must you say, "Hey, fat lady."

Second, let us discuss laundry. Never hang your wash on the front porch of the sorority house. This is unsightly and shows a want of breeding. Use the Chapter Room.

Third, meals. Always remember that planning and preparing meals for a houseful of healthy girls is no simple task. Your cook goes to a great deal of trouble to make your menu varied and nourishing. The least you can do is show your appreciation. Don't just devour your food; praise it. Exclaim with delight, "What delicious pork jowls!" or "What a yummy soup bone!" or "What scrumptious fish heads!" or "What clear water!"

Fourth, clothing. Never forget that your appearance reflects not just on yourself but on the whole house. It was well enough before you joined a sorority to lounge around campus in your old middy blouse and gym bloomers, but now you must take great pains to dress in a manner which excites admiring comments from all who observe you. A few years ago, for example, there was a Chi Omega named Camille Ataturk at the University of Iowa who brought gobs of glory to all her sorors. Camille hit on the ingenious notion of suiting her garb to the class she was attending. For instance, to English Lit she wore a buskin and jerkin. To German she wore lederhosen and carried a stein of pilsener. To Econ she wore 120 yards of ticker tape. Her shiningest hour came one day when she dressed as a white mouse for Psych Lab. Not only her Chi Omega sisters, but the entire student body went into deep mourning when she was killed by the janitor's cat.

Finally, let us take up the most important topic of all. I refer, of course, to dating.

As we have seen, the way you dress reflects on your sorority, but the men you date reflect even more. Be absolutely certain that your date is an acceptable fellow. Don't beat about the bush; ask him point-blank, "Are you an acceptable fellow?" Unless he replies, "Yeah, hey," send him packing.

But don't just take his word that he is acceptable. Inspect him closely. Are his fingernails clean? Is his black leather jacket freshly oiled? Is his ukelele in tune? Does he carry public liability insurance? And, most significant of all, does he smoke Marlboros?

If he's a Marlboro man, you know he has taste and discernment, wit and wisdom, character and sapience, decency and warmth, presence and poise, talent and grit, filter and flavor, soft pack and flip-top box. You will be proud of him, your sorority will be proud of him, the makers of Marlboro will be proud of him, and I will be paid for this column.

Take this course on television for credit

Your school is now offering full academic credit for participation in Modern Algebra, a television course offered weekday mornings* on Continental Classroom. To obtain credit, undergraduates are required to view the program three days a week; teachers desiring graduate credit—five days a week. Prerequisites: high school algebra and geometry. Contact the Registrar on your campus for enrollment details. The teachers are Dr. John L. Kelley of the University of California at Berkeley, and Dr. Julius H. Hlavaty of DeWitt Clinton High School of New York City. The textbook, written especially for this course, is Dr. Kelley's "Modern Algebra," published by D. Van Nostrand, Inc. You may also enroll in Continental Classroom's Modern Chemistry — Monday through Friday*. Produced by the National Broadcasting Company in association with the Conference Board of the Mathematical Sciences and Learning Resources Institute.

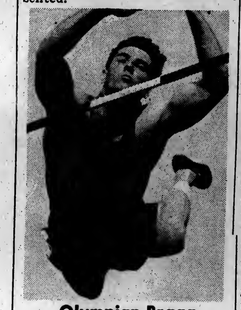
Olympic Heritage Here

by Dan Grove

Villanova has a great Olympic tradition. Incoming freshmen either know this already, or will soon become aware of it. Alumni and undergrads brag about it.



Ever since one Jim O'Connell of Villanova competed in the Olympic broad jump in 1904, the Wildcat track team has been well represented in the summer classic.

In the 1948 Games in London, two Villanovans competed. They were Cummings Clancy, a discus thrower, and George Guida, a 400 meter runner. Guida made the finals, but didn't place.

Banner Year

The banner year was 1956, the place, Melbourne, Australia. Four Wildcats "made the boat." Ron Delaney stole the show from John Landy and the rest of a great 1500 meter field. Charlie Jenkins surprised everyone by besting his teammates in the 400 meters, and by running a leg on the winning 1600 meter relay team. Oh yes, a sawed-off high jumper named Phil Reavis came in sixth. He jumped nine inches over his own height to do this.

The Roman Holiday of 1960 was tainted by upsets, disputes, and unfounded news stories about the behavior of Uncle Sam's minions. Nevertheless, Villanova was again well represented.

Olympian Bragg

Don Bragg took the pole vault as expected, running the total number of gold medals won by Villanova athletes to four. Alex Breckinridge, an ex-distance man here, came in 30th in the marathon, an event for which he had never trained, before this year.

This long synopsis of past and present greatness leads to the story of the only Villanova undergraduate who went to Rome. This is the story of Frank Budd.

During the Penn Relays, I saw the Who's Who of American sprintdom—Norton, Sime, Morrow, Woodhouse, Collymore, Murchinson, and company.

Norton looked like he could outrun Don Campbell's "Bluebird" in a short drag. Sime and the rest were also very impressive. Frank Budd pulled up lame in the 440 relay.

To the Coast

In June, Jim Elliot took Budd, Otis Drayton, John Dante, Leon Praz, and John Buckley to the West Coast for the major meets leading up to the Olympic trials.

Budd and Drayton qualified for the trials in the 100 and 200 meters, respectively. Drayton tied for third with Dave Sime in his heat but did not make the finals because his time was too slow. A tough break for Otie, because he was just getting back into top shape after suffering a muscle pull in the IC4A's.

The story was different with Frank Budd. Frank finished fourth in the AAU meet and had the confidence that a sprinter needs. He had been brought along slowly, and was now at his peak. The rest is history: he finished a close second to Ray Norton and was on the road to Rome.

On To Rome

Like Hannibal, the American athletes crossed the Alps, but only after a gruelling exhibition in Switzerland. Unlike Hannibal, they failed to conquer Rome, especially the sprinters. They did not conquer, but they did manage to qualify three men for the finals in each sprint, a fact that is hardly a failure.

Budd finished fifth in the 100 meters, quite an accomplishment for anyone, especially a boy who was given about a 1000-1 chance to make the team.

Budd also ran on the ill-fated 400 meter relay team that was disqualified after winning the finals. The disqualification came after officials ruled that Ray Norton accepted the baton from Budd outside of the passing zone.

Scapegoat Needed

Naturally, the press and some coaches looked for a scapegoat. Norton and Budd were alternately blamed. SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, with its usual excathedra, end-of-argument aplomb, placed the blame squarely on Budd's shoulders.

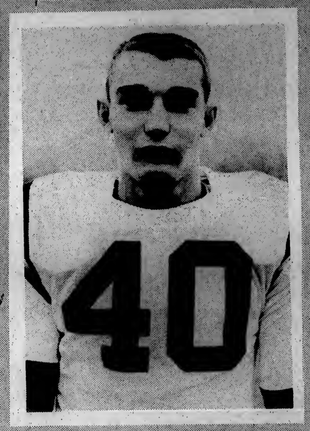
I hate to re-open this rather delicate subject, but I feel that something must be said for both men. It has been said that Budd slowed down and told Norton to wait. I do not know how he could have slowed down much, since he had a lead and the whole team broke the world's record. Norton himself was admittedly depressed over his two sixth place finishes. He anticipated Budd, and jumped the gun; because of his lane position, everyone was going by him, so naturally he was impatient. He tried to slow down, but barely stepped out of the twenty yard zone. (Most coaches say that a man should stop dead if he hasn't accepted the baton after 15 yards).

Coaches To Blame

If any blame is to be placed, it should be on the coaches. The relay team was not picked until shortly before the qualifying rounds. Therefore, they could not practice together under their coach. The ultimate winner, Germany, had practiced together for nine months.

In a final analysis, I think Budd and Norton have both suffered enough, by not getting their richly-deserved gold medal. Neither is to blame. Anyone who practices as hard as these two men have, do certainly deserve more respect than they have been shown by the supercilious press corps whose only strains of combat seem to be a calloused backside and an impotent pen.

I say congratulations to anyone who has developed himself to such a degree to be of Olympic calibre.



* * * * *

NOTE: Despite rumor to the contrary Frank Budd is not going to play football at V.U. This was confirmed by Budd himself last night.

Gruesome Twosome

Pictured below is Larry Glueck, a sophomore HB that caught four and threw one completed pass against Marquette. Glueck also picked up some nice gains running.

'Cat Eleven Roars Back In 3d Stanza But Loses 23-13

Villanova's much - maligned Wildcats travelled to the town of ten-cent draughts last weekend and returned with an expected defeat. The victor, Marquette, the score, 23-13.

The 'Cats were beaten but not humiliated, outscored but not outgained. They showed things that promise to be interesting once they are developed. For instance, they came back after being down by two touchdowns at halftime. There was no defeatist attitude in evidence as plucky Nick Langone engineered two sustained drives capped by Lou Rettino's pair of touchdown plunges. Of such gritty stuff are winning teams made.

In fifteen minutes the Marquette partisan crowd stopped gloating and started wondering if Dick Dunkel could be wrong. The score was 14-13 and the 'Cats looked in control.

Then the Beerlanders received their biggest boon since the invention of the can. It was a bungled-up punt attempt or an attempt to attempt a punt. The result—a safety against Villanova which made the score, 16-13.

The point spread did not matter, but the momentum was lost. Hope was still high, but waning. Langone's pass was intercepted with eight minutes, and Marquette's last touchdown was rather anti-climatic.

Surprising was the V.U. pass defense which throttled a supposedly potent Marquette's pass attack. The secondary led by Tom O'Rourke was instrumental in holding the Warriors to 59 yards via the air route.

Another surprise was the play of the interior line.

Joe Luzzi, Al Calligaris, Rege Magness, Tom Kepner, and Jack Weed. They opened up good holes for Reetino, Russo, and Glueck. Also they held the inside thrusts of the speedy Marquette backfield.

The ends were run successfully by MU, too successfully. In so doing, the Warriors unveiled a sophomore sideline scurrier, Mike Theisen, who looked like a future All-American until he turned his ankle early in the second half. Not coincidentally the Warrior ground attack sputtered to a virtual stop after Theisen repaired to the bench.

Lack of depth can be pointed to as the reason Theisen's gambolings were effected so easily and so often. The 'Cats flankers' ranks were thinned by the defection of a good looking prospect, Mike Delone. Myers and Sam Gruneisen could not go the full sixty minutes at top speed.

Gruneisen, who was supposed to be the best receiver on the squad, did not get a chance at one pass.

Larry Glueck took up the slack by grabbing four aerials.

Nick Langone called a good steady game mixing up coach Bell's slot T offense as well as the Marquette defense.

The punting was tremendous compared to last year's twenty-nine yard average, two of these punts going dead inside the five-yard line.

The second string was inadequate; the ends were turned too easily and too much pressure was put on the secondary. Still even though inexperience raised its foamy head in the second half, the young 'Cats played colorful football.

The Bell boys' second "breather" takes them to Annapolis tomorrow. The prognosticators say that it will be a long bus ride home for the 'Cats. If the winning attitude and spirit displayed in the Marquette game can be parlayed into points, mayhaps Bell's boys will be whistling "Anchors Awry" as they speed up Route 40 Saturday night.

Murals Underway

All team entries for the intramural touch football league must be submitted before next Monday at 5:30 p.m.

"Entry blanks can be picked up now," Ed Geisz, intramural athletic director disclosed. "League play starts Wednesday, September 28."

Geisz also disclosed that the annual intramural swimming and diving championships will be held next Tuesday in the Field House pool at 4:00 p.m.

Entries are now being accepted in Geisz' office adjacent to the pool, Geisz said.

The master entry list of all announced participants is also posted in the pool office.

Spirited Bell Team Tries To Scuttle Navy Saturday

The Villanova Wildcats travel to Annapolis Saturday to do battle with a Naval Academy team that whipped Boston College 22 to 7 last Saturday. By most consensus of opinion this should be the year for the "Philadelphia - anchored" Middies.

Navy is led by stellar left halfback Joe Bellino, who is a candidate for All-American honors. Add to Bellino the Middie captain Joe Matalavage, and you have one of the most devastating inside, outside combinations since Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard at Army.

Seven Regulars Return

Navy Coach Wayne Hardin, now in his second year, has his own wide-open version of the "T" pretty well installed, and now he can sit back and watch it work. Hardin has seven regulars returning, plus an excellent group of sophomores coming up.

The returning Middie regulars include end Frank Dattilo, tackle Dan Erchul, guards Doug Falconer and John Hewitt, center Frank Visted, and the aforementioned Bellino and Matalavage. John Hewitt, the starting right guard, has lost his position to Vern Van Sydorn, a sophomore, but an injury may limit Von Sydorn's participation in Saturday's game.

Quarterback Replacements

Navy's main problem appears to be that of finding suitable replacements for their quarterbacks Joe Tranchini and Jim Mexfield. Harry Dietz, a 162-pound senior who stands 5-8, was the starter as of last Saturday. Dietz has never played varsity football, although he was the quarterback on Navy's 150-pound football team last year.

Coach Hardin doesn't seem overly concerned about Dietz's small size. "Size doesn't worry me after having worked with George Welsh and Eddie LeBaron. Dietz is doing a creditable job. He handles the ball well, passes well, and has a good head on his shoulders."

Spooner Injured

The other Middie quarterback is Hal Spooner, who was number three behind Tranchini and Mexfield last year. Spooner apparently had the edge on Dietz until he was sidelined by an injured ankle. He is still limping and his timing is off on passing.

The fourth starter in the Navy backfield is the right halfback, John Richard. To go along with this backfield, Navy has two strong lines and should make the situation uncomfortable for their opposition.

Seventh In Series

Saturday's game is the seventh in a series which started back in 1908. Navy leads the series 5-1. Villanova's lone victory came in 1909, when they triumphed 11-6. The last Villanova-Navy game was played at Annapolis in 1946 and Navy pulled out a thriller, 7-0. That game was marred by tragedy, as the Wildcat mascot, Count Villan, died of a sunstroke. The biggest margin of victory was in the war-torn year of 1917, when the Navy sailed into our Wildcats 80-3.

W. Chester Returns . . . For Rugby Game

Mr. Francis Coghlan of the History Dept., an official of the Villanova Rugby Club, has announced the opening of Rugby practice season. He also issued an invitaton to all students "for whom Rugby is still a mystery, to observe the practice sessions, or to try out for the team."

He explained, however, that students already participating in other University sports are not eligible for the Rugby team. The Club wishes to attract only those who do not have the time for, or interest in, other sports.

Practice Season Beginning

Mr. Coghlan further stated that the main Rugby playing season occurs in the spring, between March 15 and May 15, and tha tthe fall session currently getting under way amounts to a practice or training period. He expressed the hope of arranging practice or training period. He expressed the hope of arranging practice sessions with other clubs, and announced that the Westchester Rugby Club of New York has tentatively agreed to visit Villanova on Saturday, September 24, for a practice scrimmage.

Mr. Coghlan also expressed the Club's gratitude to the Rev. Dante Girolami, OSA. Dean of Student Activities, and to the Rev. John Dunne, OSA, and Mr. Edward Geisz, both of the Intramural Dept.

DeLisa Tells Student Council To Do Job or Risk Dismissal

Variety marked the agenda of the semester's initial Student Council meeting on Wednesday as Congress members discussed topics ranging from Administration to the Villanovan.

Bob DeLisa, Chairman of the Student Council, began the meeting by stating his policy for Council members. Those who fail to work will be subject to public obstracism, according to DeLisa. "Let us know if you can't do your job, or we'll let you know," he said. Later he added, "If you feel I'm not doing my job, don't hesitate to tell me. I'd rather have that than have it said behind my back."

DeLisa declared that his action is directed toward the achievement of "a smooth, quick-running student government . . . which will try to cut red tape." He stated that he didn't expect any trouble from the administration.

The chairman requested that the student body have faith in their representatives, who are "not trying to pull anything over on the student." He then added that what he really desires is to bring student government closer to the student body.

NFCCS Report

A report on the NFCCS convention was made by Gene Felch. The expenses of Felch, Dave Dovle, and Bob DeLisa, Villanova's delegates, were paid by the Council treasury. Each of the three delegates distinguished himself at the convention. "For this reason," says Felch, "Villanova will play a big part in the future of NFCCS."

DeLisa reminded listeners that a requisite of membership in NFCCS is the payment of dues which amount to fifty cents for each student. He said that the Council would pay regional dues of $300. No one seemed to be sure, however, who would pay the $1500 national dues.

Felch's report was followed by a period of questioning in which representatives wanted to know what Villanova stands to gain from active membership in NFCCS. "You don't know it," Felch confided, "but you have felt the benefits, and you will." He added that these benefits existed in the set-up of VU's student government.

Common Fallacy

A financial report made by Jim Hooker stated that the treasury contained $1300 before NFCCS expenses, and would probably be close to $2000 after the Student Council Dance according to all indications. He set forth a budget of $2000 for the coming year, but mentioned that a balance was provided for in the budget.

Hooker announced that among several proposed programs of the Council, four have been approved by the administration. These are: a student government library, a Who's Who banquet, a mixer program, and the purchase of a movie projector. "All that is needed is the money," said Hooker.

A question was raised: "What happened to the $1000 the administration was supposed to give us this September?" DeLisa answered that this was a fallacy. "We all misunderstood," he said. "The administration promised to match the money we made up to $1000." It was further stated the offer has been repeated this year.

Villanovan Withdraws

During the course of the meeting, a letter of resignation from the Council was read by DeLisa. The letter indicated that the Villanovan found it necessary to withdraw temporarily. The only reaction registered was in the form of a question regarding re-entry to the Council. DeLisa said that the newspaper would not have to apply as a new member when it returns.

Rev. Dante Girolami, O.S.A., Council Moderator, made several remarks at the close of the meeting. "The spirit in the student body is very, very good," he said. "We have the best start ever."

Forum Hears Williams' Plan For "Peace Through Law"

by William Speers

In a dramatic 75-minute talk highlighted by a call for world peace through law, Edward Bennet Williams opened the first session of the Villanova Law Forum last Friday night with a six-challenge program.

The controversial Williams, noted as a present-day Clarence Darrow, told the overflowing audience that the time had come "to offer a peace program as positive, as dynamic, and as resolute as Marxism, (embracing) certain concepts for a world system of law."

Williams, who has in the past decade defended some of the most unpopular figures in the country, including Dave Beck, Jimmy Hoffa, the late Senator Joseph McCarthy and Frank Costello, entitled his address "Challenges for Change."

Issues Six Challenges

He directed six challenges to the Forum which, besides "peace through law," included the abolition of capital punishment; the re-evaluation and equalizing of the civic and criminal methods of prosecution, the cleaning up of court case backlogs, the revamping of present system and rules of our congressional hearings and the only negative one—the retaining of Canon 35 in the Code of Ethics which restricts television cameras from the court room.

"We lawyers have become noted as the bastions of the status quo", Williams opened as he compared his profession with the constantly revolutionized medical profession. "The time has come when we must open the windows and vent the rooms with new ideas", shouted the attorney as he prefaced his speech.

Defense Attorney Williams

Hits Capital Punishment

He stated in his first challenge that the Caryl Chessman case called for a new look at capital punishment. He quoted a woman who was recently being reviewed for jury duty in Washington, who, when asked if she had any scruples about capital punishment, answered: "Yes, if it is not too severe."

Using this statement as a spring board, Williams blasted the society which retains capital punishment on the condition that the "method" does not offend our sense of esthetics. "No, we no longer use the rack and screw, or burning at the stake, or the guillotine for these ways offend our esthetics. We now execute by gas or electricity."

He then went on to explode the theory of the deterrential effect of the death penalty when he stated that nine states who have abolished capital punishment have reported a decided decrease in their murder rate.

Death Outmoded

"Also in 1953", he expounded," out of 7000 crimes committed, punishable by death, only 62 received the ultimate sentence." This point he said was introduced to prove that his theory that capital punishment has become obsolete and that we must "now relegate the gas chamber, electric chair, and gallows to the museum as outmoded forms of injustice."

In his second challenge, Williams sounded a call for the revision of court rules concerning pre-trial questioning of witnesses. "The civic side of the court, unlike the criminal side, is not permitted pre-disposition of a case", the attorney explained. Judges all over the land have contended if this were not the case, the prosecutor would go into court without a leg to stand on. This, ladies and gentlemen, is not a one way street." Williams illustrated his point when he declared that in the last five years 90% of 32,000 defendants were convicted by state prosecutors. He tagged this a gross injustice and made a plea for reform.

Crowded Courts

His third challenge was a familiar one to Philadelphia and other large cities in the U. S. "In some of our larger cities, people must wait anywhere from 30 to 48 months for their trials to come up," said Williams. And he suggested the separation of liability and damage cases in court, which take up the majority of trial time, in order to take up the lag in cases pending.

In his fourth challenge, Williams dealt with a problem with which he is thoroughly acquainted—that of congressional hearings. He claimed that the investigating committees already had the answers to the questions they asked at the hearing and that the only result in calling a witness to testify, whom they know will refuse to answer on grounds of self-incrimination, is the public degradation and disgrace.

Chairman Announces Oct. 8 As Annual Parents' Day

Plans for the annual Parents Day, to be held Saturday, October 8, are now being formulated by John Wojciechowicz and Len Carnaghi, co-chairmen of the event.

"We've already sent out invitations to the parents of all students," said Wojciechowicz.

Wojciechowicz and Carnaghi

The focal event of the Parents Day agenda will be the first home football game of the season, College of the Pacific.

Wojciehowicz pointed out a change in the sale of tickets for the game. "Whereas last year the parents were told in a letter to send for tickets, this year the students will purchase tickets for both themselves and their parents.

"This will eliminate the difficulty which arose last year when parents bought tickets without consulting their sons. This resulted in separations."

The program will consist of onen house, a concert by the Villanova band and the game itself.

Game ducats will be priced at $1.50 and $3.00.

Recollection Day Cards

Admission cards for the Day of Recollection, October 6 and 7, will be available in Room 223, Mendel Hall, on October 3 and 4 it was announced by the Office of the Chaplain.

For the men students, all spiritual exercises will be held in the Field House, and for the women they will be held in the University Chapel. The Mass and conferences for the non-resident students will be held in the morning and for the resident students in the afternoon.

The Chaplain's Office also announced that Masses on First Friday, October 7, are at 6:30 a.m., 7:15 a.m., 7:45 a.m., and at 12:00 noon. Benediction will be held after the 6:30 Mass and at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Confessions will be heard on the morning of the sixth for the women, and in the afternoon for the men.

"Where 'Ya From Frosh?.."

. . . Villanova! "Proud of it?" Damn r'ght!! Rapidly becoming acclimatized to Villanova traditions, a chorus of freshmen respond to White Hats' prodding.

Joe Tate and Butch McNally, co-chairmen of the 1960-61 Spirit Comittee, recently announced their plans for the present football season, adding that this year's spirit program may well surpass those of past years. "The team itself," says McNally, "because of its exciting demonstration against Marquette, will help the committee to boost spirit to a much higher level than in previous years."

The two stated, every game will be preceded by a rally and organized send-offs and welcomes will "spirit the team to and from their away games." At each rally, the co-chairmen intend to have the coach or a member of the team speak to the student body.

"Despite many trying problems, the committee's first rally, composed largely of freshmen under the guidance of the Orientation Committee, was quite succesful," McNally said, "with reports that the cheering was heard faintly in Bryn Mawr and Wayne."

The Spirit Committee, working closely with the cheerleaders, and with the cooperation of the Villanova Marching Band, will help the student body supply the squad with ample "grandstand support" at all home contests, according to Tate.

Both the co-chairmen and the Thomas Kenny extend an invitation to all undergraduates to work directly with the committee, stating that they can use "as many as volunteer."

To fill the position of mascot, vacated by the death of the late Count Villain, the two co-chairmen have announced that in celebration of the team's victory over the Army, they will make an excursion to the Florida swamps to capture a new wildcat mascot.

The two mentioned also that many organizations working in conjunction with the Spirit Committee are aimed at the elevation of Villanova spirit, but that only cooperation from the student body will insure their success. In Tate's own words: "The only person who can raise the spirit of Villanova University is the Villanovan himself."

WCAU Airs Course By Religion Dept.

Villanova University, in cooperation with WCAU-TV, will offer a televised lecture in Catholic Theology during the current academic year. The lecture series, which will convey full college credit, was announced on September 23 by the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., president. This latest addition to the University's expansion campaign is believed to be the first course of its kind to be given over television.

Beginning on October 2, the lectures will take place every Sunday morning from 7:30 to 8:00 over WCAU (Channel 10). The half hour periods will continue for 30 consecutive weeks before the culmination of the course.

The lectures will be delivered by the Rt. Rev. Msgr. John G. McFadden of the Philadelphia Archdiocese. Although not a member of the Augustinian Order, Msgr. McFadden has been a member of the Villanova Religion Dept. For the past five years. In addition to his teaching duties, he is currently Diocesan Director of the Catholic Information Center. According to Father Klekotka, the Monsignor has long been recognized throughout the Philadelphia area for his thorough knowledge of Christian Doctrine and reputation as a gifted speaker.

Those interested in taking the two credit courses may register by mail, writing to the T.V. Registrar, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. Tuition will be the usual 22 dollars per credit hour and an additional 2 dollar registration and remision of fees are October 27 and November 1 respectively.

The announced text to be used is The Christian Life ed, F. Cunningham, Priory Press, Dubuque, Iowa, 1957.

Yearbook Editor Reveals His Plans

Mike Spahn, editor of the Belle Air, recently stated that seniors whose photos were not taken last semester may make an appointment with the senior editors in the Belle Air office on the third floor of Dougherty Hall. This also applies to seniors who wish retakes. Dates for making appointments will be posted on all bulletin boards during the month of October.

In announcing plans for this year's edition of the Belle Air, Spahn said he intends to use mood shots and numerous candid shots of student life and campus activities.

Senior history forms are now being distributed in the Pie Shoppe, at the ramp of the residents' dining hall, and at the main entrance of Mendel Hall. All forms must be returned to the Belle Air office by October 15.

Spahn added that the history forms will be edited for any inaccuracies in regards to membership in student organizations.

What's ahead for you... after you join Western Electric?

Anywhere you look—in engineering and other professional areas—the answer to that question is progress. For Western Electric is on a job of ever-increasing complexity, both as the manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System and as a part of many defense communications and missile projects.

These two assignments mean you'll find yourself in the thick of things in such fast-breaking fields as microwave radio relay, electronic switching, miniaturization and automation. You may engineer installations, plan distribution of equipment and supplies. Western also has need for field engineers, whose world-wide assignments call for working with equipment we make for the Government. The opportunities are many—and they're waiting!

You'll find that Western Electric is career-minded...and you-minded! Progress is as rapid as your own individual skills permit. We estimate that 8,000 supervisory jobs will open in the next ten years—the majority to be filled by engineers. There will be corresponding opportunities for career building within research and engineering. Western Electric maintains its own full-time, all-expenses-paid engineering training program. And our tuition refund plan also helps you move ahead in your chosen field.

Opportunities exist for electrical, mechanical, industrial, civil and chemical engineers, as well as in the physical sciences. For more information get your copy of Consider a Career at Western Electric from your Placement Officer. I.C.G. Meets, Declares Goals

The Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government will hold its initial meeting today at 10:30 in 104 Vasey Hall. Any student desiring to join is invited to attend this meeting.

The officers of the I.C.G. for this year are: John McAteer, Chairman; Bob Piccone, Vice-Chairman; Tom Gallen, Secretary-Treasurer; and Bob Gray, Student Council Representative.

In outlining his plans for the coming year McAteer stated that he hopes the Villanova Chapter will maintain the prestige at the regional and state level it gained under its Chairman of last year, Larry Ruth.

The I.C.G. will participate in all regional and state activities during the school year, according to McAteer. He added that William Rademacher will be the Parliamentarian of the Southeast Region.

The aim of the I.C.G. is to train students and instill in them the proper attitude for taking the leadership in their government. "To do this we plan to encourage the discussion of current political topics in regards to state and national problems," says McAteer.

This year the three-day I.C.G. convention in Harrisburg will focus its attention on the various governmental problems affecting the state of Pennsylvania. The convention itself will serve as a model state legislature. Much time will be spent by the Villanova Chapter in preparing bills for this convention. "It is in the preparing and the eventual debating of each bill that the member realizes the importance of knowing his subject and also the rules of Parliamentary Procedure to be able to put his point across."

Six Challenges

Constitution Suspended

He quoted Senators Everett Dirkson and Irving Ives to the effect that the sky was the limit in congressional hearings and that even the Constitution could be suspended in the interrogation of a witness at these hearings.

He denounced those who taught that these hearings are a special arm of our justice, exempt from all rules but their own, and called for a new set of "rules for the dignity of a Congressional Committee." He proposed that all evidence uncovered by Congressional Committees be turned over to the Congress as a whole to serve as a basis for legislation.

His fifth challenge defended the Canon 35 of the Code of Ethics which prohibits T.V. cameras from televising court trials. He related that the charge by television executives that T.V. was not receiving equal time with newspapers who are permitted to have reporters sit in on trials, was unfounded since the T.V. reporter can tell on the air what happened at a trial as well as the newsman who reports the story in his newspaper.

Fourth World War

The final challenge was Williams' most pointed one of all. He vividly portrayed the foolishness of war when he remarked that one fighter plane costs half a million tons of wheat; and the cost of one B-52 could build and fully equip one hospital. Then with the audience in the palm of his hands he quoted those famous words of scientist Albert Einstein to the effect that he did not know how World War III would be fought, but that the Fourth World War would be fought with stones.

He called for the abolition of the Connolly Amendment and the complete submission on the part of the U. S. to a new international court, such as the ineffective one at The Hague, and the eventual culmination in this organization of every nation in the world. For it is here and here only that we can ever hope to attain world peace, he said.

"We have been on a holiday from history", Williams concluded, "And we must now return to law. This shall be the work of all future lawyers; to carry through this, our most important challenge."

To get away from a GRIZZLY

A Comparison

At the present time the fate of the United Nations could be said to rest in the hands of Nikita Khrushchev. Not since a Soviet boycott brought about the resignation of former UN Secretary General Trygve Lie in 1953 has the UN been in such a near state of collapse.

Yesterday the Communist countries and their sycophants suffered a tremendous defeat when the steering committee voted "nyet" to a Soviet proposal to have the seating of Red China discussed at the session of the General Assembly. The committee also thwarted a Soviet attempt to discuss the Congo in the Assembly.

These two defeats are significant in the sense that Khrushchev's idea of personal diplomacy has become increasingly stagnant. Even his condemnation of Dag Hammarskjold and his desire to move the UN Headquarters from New York has met with little support.

In the short time the Russian leader has been here, he has met with four major setbacks. Whether these reversals cause a complete shift in Russia's policy of peaceful coexistence remains to be seen.

It is very likely, however that Mr. K will veer further away from his policies of peaceful competition with the capitalist countries once he evaluates his defeats in the light of his expectations for his supposed peaceful programs.

Khrushchev stated recently that the Soviet Union can exist without the United Nations. This remark was made before his proposals concerning Red China and the Congo were defeated. Quite possibly the threat enunciated by Khrushchev was intended to coerce the UN delegates to vote his way or be held responsible for the collapse of the world body. The delegates were not so shortsighted as to fall prey to Khrushchev's wishes.

The fact that they did not vote along with the communists could prompt the Russian "boss" to withdraw from the UN. This, however, is most unlikely. Even if the Soviets are beaten in every future debate, the propaganda values which they derive from being members of the world organization far outweigh the setbacks which they may receive.

Although Russia will remain in the UN come what may, their policies may take on a different tune. When Khrushchev returns to Russia, he may not maintain the prestige which he now possesses. The pro-Stalinist faction of the party might emerge once again as formulator of Soviet policy. Khrushchev and what he stands for, especially in relation to his theory of peaceful coexistence, have been beaten, but good.

Outwardly he may still appear as the unchallenged Communist leader. He is extremely popular with a majority of the Russian people. It is only natural then for the pro-Stalinist faction should it regain its former position, to keep him in the public eye. But if they do assume control, the people of the free world can expect a return to the edge of war period which was experienced under Stalin.

Counterpoint

Moratorium Suppresses Speech

by John McAteer

Of all the cherished traditions under the American system, few attract the respect paid to the first amendment of the Constitution which guarantees freedom of speech. The desire of men to speak their piece is as old as man himself. But it was not until the American Revolution that men were able to exercise this precious right to its fullest extent. Throughout our history we have exclaimed to the world, especially to countries under dictatorial regimes, that our method of government is superior to all others. Our reason for being able to say this was due to the fact that ours was a government of the people—a body politic which debated the issues freely and then voted for their candidate.

Now it appears that the Republican Party under the leadership of Richard M. Nixon would particularly deny the people the exercise of free speech. In a recent political talk Nixon called for a moratorium on speeches about U. S. shortcomings during Krushchev's visit. What Nixon is saying in effect is that his rival John F. Kennedy should stop campaigning for the presidency so long as Krushchev is in the country. One might add that any person who doubts the economic and military strength of this country should likewise remain silent. The latter statement at first appears as an illogical conclusion to draw from Mr. Nixon's original remark. Yet what other conclusion can be drawn.

Mr. Nixon is stooping very high when he asks his chief adversary to remain silent for the sake of American prestige. Nixon's entire campaign is built on the soundness of the economic and military strength of the United States. Kennedy's campaign is also centered on these same issues, but Kennedy claims that there are serious shortcomings in both our economic and military policies.

Suppose Krushchev should remain in the United Nations for the next few weeks. What then would happen to the presidential campaign now in progress if Kennedy followed Nixon's suggestion? The campaigning would cease because there would be no issues to discuss. Of course Mr. Nixon could still proclaim the glories of the Eisenhower Administration. Who would disagree with him? His opposition would be silenced. He would most likely win the election hands down.

Mr. Nixon may have set a precedent when he asked that no speeches concerning American shortcomings be delivered while the Russian leader is here. It is probably the first time a major candidate has asked another to stop campaigning.

To show how utterly ridiculous Nixon's request is, let us turn back the pages of History to the campaign of 1932. Wouldn't it have been very foolish of Herbert Hoover had he asked Franklin Roosevelt not to discuss the depression.

McGurk and the students and facilities of the Statistics Department, will conduct a systematic poll of the student body regarding several facets and issues of this campaign.

A systematic poll of the student body regarding several facets and issues of this campaign.

In contrast to previous polls of various sorts which were executed to encompass as many students as possible and thusly often produced haphazard and inconclusive results, this poll will be based on scientific, statistical principles designed to reach coherent data...

Roughly, a representative group will be selected at random from each major category on campus and be interviewed individually by Statistics students. The results will then be tabulated by the Department and analyzed by the Villanovan staff.

"What was your impression of your first days at Villanova?"
Asked of freshmen.

Frank Sauers

When I think of my first day at Villanova, I shall remember how stupid my fellow frosh looked in Regs, until I passed a mirror at home. I'll remember forever the hundreds of cards we received; matric-cards, mass attendance cards, course cards, diner club cards, etc.

I was told to hay Hi! to my fellow freshmen. I met one in Vasey Hall, said, "Hi!, fellow frosh" and was immediately punched in the nose. It was one of my teachers! All in all it's a great school,—providing your not a freshman.

Kay Uribe

Without Kathy and Marian I don't know how I would have gotten through my first three days at Villanova. I really enjoyed initiation and it helped to break the ice. I liked Villanova from the start and I hope to stay all four years.

Herb Lockyer

Villanova is a fine university. Most freshmen agree with this statement. They should agree because all of them have been fined. The I.B.M. machines which make up your schedules are highly accurate. I've only been switched from three classes, but then, this is only my first week at Villanova.

Constance Goelzer

My first impression of Villanova was a feeling of being lost in a crowd of other lost freshmen. This feeling left soon after singing "V for Villanova" in the Pie Shoppe a few times. Our White Hats also helped by guiding us around to the different meetings . The first three days of initiation helped me to feel that the coming school year would be wonderful. I was impressed by the great spirit in the school which was instilled in us at the pep rallies.

Richard Kilfeather

Being asked to write about Villanova in fifty words isn't an easy task. The thing I like best here at Villanova is the friendliness shown by the faculty and the upperclassmen to the freshmen. Try to make as many friends as you can. I have only been here a week but I can already see that if you don't you're lost.

Maggie Ryan

My first impressions of Villanova were like first impressions of any place or anyone. You see what is on the surface. At Villanova the surface is very appealing. Everyone is so friendly that it makes me, a petrified girl, lost in a bovs college, at ease. Prompted by the White Hats we were soon used to the constant embarrasment of frosh orientation. Within the three days before classes started, I cause to know that my impressions were well founded.

English Comedies Outrate Hollywood's

By Al La Mastra

What hidden quality does an English comedy possess? Is it a four million dollar budget? Can it be a million dollar publicity campaign? Could star box-office attraction be the key to the mystery? These might be the qualities possessed by the Hollywood sweat shop product; but one would never find a movie billed as a "super collossal production with an all star cast" as far as British comedy is concerned.

Since the late fifties, the British comedy films, as produced at Elstree, Pinewood, or Rank studios, has become the most serious threat to the Hollywood title of "Laugh Capital of the World." It seems a good comedy cannot be churned out of Tinseltown these days unless it has been prepublicized as the sexiest thing to hit the screens in years. Granted that such comedy may for a time prove to be quite amusing, Hollywood producers continue to ignore that this preoccupation with sexy celluloid is fast becoming stale, hackneyed and oftentimes banal.

Indeed! More and more theatre patrons are filling the local art houses these days, where "old style" slapstick and satire, as produced by the British, will guarantee to leave you rolling in the aisle; if not continually nudging your numb neighbor as a sign of total approval in viewing British escapism as originated a generation earlier by W. C. Fields, Laurel and Hardy, Charlie Chaplin, and Buster Keaton.

America's best comic product for 1960 was not "The Apartment" (a comedy?) or United Artists, Sinescope production of "Happy Anniversary;" but a hilarious compilation of clips from great silent film comedies (1912-1930) entitled "When Comedy Was King." Produced in days when a budget was meaningless and plot-lines were invented as the cameras rolled, this conglomeration of typical early Americana pried no forced laughter from viewers, as the tawdry "Pillow Talk" and distasteful "Who Was That Lady;" but moved along at the ribald pace of all the latest British imports.

The "Mouse That Roared" was not a super production but just a small, witty, satirical, very funny, fantasy-comedy about a small nation giving Uncle Sam a kick in the shins. Yet it set a trend in audience response and has brought into the limelight the artistic achievement of its stars Terry Thomas and Peter Sellers, in emanating what we ourselves were once the masters of: LAUGHTER.

Sets by Cecil Beaton and costumes and jewelry by Helen Rose do not make for box office power alone. The innocuous "Man In A Cocked Hat" proved this. Made for less than a million (a miracle by modern day Hollywood standards), it proved to be a satirical spitball. Poking clean fun at fumbling Foreign Office methods in handling a colonial incident, it bubbled with shining and pointed lines as well as some wacky scenes in the tradition of the finest slapstick.

Case for GOP

By Bob Germer

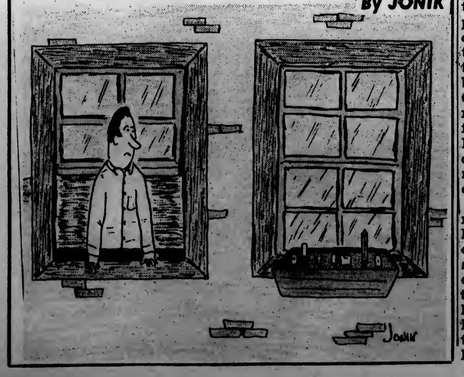
"Good Show From Democrats; Republicans For Facts"

This summer, the citizens of this country had an excellent opportunity to participate in a Presidential campaign. The TV networks did an excellent job of covering the conventions, the news mediums interpreted and analyzed the speeches without bias, and the individual had a valuable chance to be better informed than ever before. The news and television industries have been just as conscientious in covering the campaign. This writer has taken advantage of the opportunities as much as possible.

The Democratic Convention at Los Angeles seemed more concerned with putting on a good show than doing anything really constructive or facing facts with reality. They accused the United States of being behind in many areas. In particular they emphasized that the U. S. was a second place power in respect to military might. They claimed that the elderly citizens of this country weren't getting a fair deal. And finally, they promised more of everything for everybody without raising taxes.

The Republicans, on the other hand relied on facts. They showed the conditions prevalent today,—pointing with justified pride to their accomplishments, and admitting errors and shortcomings where they existed. They answered each charge of laxity or second rate with sound figures and convincing evidence. Let us look at some of the issues.

Defense: The Democrats have stated that we have fallen behind the USSR generally and especially in the field of missles. First, we have the most powerful, balanced, and advanced Navy in the world. We have a modern fleet of aircraft carriers, —moveable, elusive airfields practically invulnerable to missle attack. We have high speed cruisers with both conventional and missile armaments to support and protect the carriers. We have a fleet of modern destroyers that can ferret out the Russian subs. At least one of these "tincans" has missiles aboard. Soon, we will be christening the first nuclear powered cruiser and also a carrier. We have a fearful arsenal of intermediate range missiles capable of carrying atomic warheads into the heart of Russia. We have artillery missiles that can be moved with and fired from the best balanced air might that the world has ever seen. And, as much as the Democrats would like to forget it, this has all been done since 1952. If we are behind the Russians, whose fault is it that the Russians developed their power right from the end of World War II and we didn't get started until 1952 when the Democratic President was voted out of office?



Education and Welfare: Since President Eisenhower took office, benefits under the Social Security act have been expanded and raised. Unemployment compensation has been increased so that a man need not lose everything when he is temporarily unemployed. Classroom facilities and the number of classrooms have been greatly increased since 1952. These facilities have been expanded at a rate much greater than the Democrats dared dream in 1950. And, how many students are now in college only because Eisenhower's scholarship plan was passed?

Experience: That Richard Nixon has more experience and training in the Executive branch of the government is a matter of demonstratable fact. He has served as Vice-President of the country for eight years. In this time, he has learned many of the presidential duties by actually carrying them out on missions throughout the world. He has the respect of world leaders on both sides of the Iron Curtain. On the other hand, John Kennedy has had little experience in foreign affairs. As Thomas Dewey pointed out at the Chicago convention, Kennedy would rather forget his only major address on foreign affairs.

Religion: This reporter does not feel that the religious issue has any place in politics. However, in passing I would like to state that the Republicans have done more to silence this issue than Kennedy and the Democrats have. It seems that Kennedy has learned that by talking about not talking about something he can keep the issue alive.

"HOME SWEET HOMECOMING"

A great number of people have been asking me lately, "What is Homecoming?" but I have been so busy trying to find out why my new sports car leaks that I haven't had time to answer. I am now pleased to report that I finally discovered why my sports car leaks—I have been driving it upside down—and so I am ready today to turn my attention to Homecoming.

Let's begin with definitions. Homecoming is a weekend when old grads return to their alma maters to watch a football game, visit old classrooms and dormitories and inspect each other's bald spots.

The weekend is marked by the singing of old songs, the slapping of old backs and the frequent exchange of such greetings as "Harry, you old polecat!" or "Harry, you old porcupine!" or "Harry, you old rooster!" or "Harry, you old wombat!" As you can see, all old grads are named Harry.

It is not just old grads who behave with such liveliness during Homecoming; the faculty also comports itself with unaccustomed animation. Teachers laugh and smile and pound backs and keep shouting "Harry, you old Airedale!" This unscholarly behavior is carried on in the hope that old grads, in a transport of bonhomie will endow a new geology building.

The old grads, however, are seldom seduced. By game time on Saturday their backs are so sore, their eyeballs so eroded, their extremities so frayed, that it is impossible to get a kind word out of them, much less a new geology building.

Even the football game does not improve their tempers. "Hmmph!" they snort as the home team completes a 101-yard march to a touchdown. "Do you call that football? Why, back in my day, they'd have been over on the first down! By George, football was football in those days—not this nambypamby girls' game that passes for football today! Take a look at that bench—50 substitutes sitting there. Why, in my day, there were 11 men on a team and that was it. When you broke a leg, they slapped a piece of tape on it and you went right back in. Why, I remember the big game against State. Harry Sigafoos, our star quarterback, was killed in the third quarter. I mean, he was pronounced dead. But did that stop old Harry? Not on your tintype! Back in he went and kicked the winning drop kick in the last four seconds of play, dead as he was. Back in my day, they played football, by George!"

Everything, say the old grads, was better back in their day—everything except one. Even the most unreconstructed of the old grads has to admit that back in his day they never had a smoke like Marlboro—never a cigarette with such a lot to like—never a filter so easy drawing, a flavor so mild yet hearty, so abundant, so bountiful—never a choice of flip-top box or soft pack.

So old grads, young grads, and undergrads, why don't you settle back and have a full-flavored smoke? Try Marlboro, the filtered cigarette with the unfiltered taste, and Homecoming will be a happy occasion and the sun will shine and the air will be filled with the murmur of wings and no man's hand will be raised against you.

College Conformity, Cramming Cause Complex On Campus

The Class of '64 like that rising structure of steel and stone that in a few months will evolve into an ultra-modern science building, represents the future of Villanova; and in a way our frosh, along with every freshmen class in every college and university in our country, represent the future of America. Just, how favorable do these futures now appear?

SPEERS

During the last decade, our colleges have swelled to overwhelming numbers, and with these vast figures have come the usual problems which postscript the issue of over-population: conformity, indifference, and inevitably, moral fading.

We do not fancy ourselves as either a moralist or preacher, but would desire to take the boldness and draw upon our own personal experience at Villanova to leave the Class of '64 with two rules with which to guide themselves through their four years here. They are: (a) keep your prospective, (b) be yourself.

Hardly, statements to be inscribed on a municipal building for prosperity, nevertheless, the key to a self-satisfied stay at Villanova.

Too many students, in fact we'd say the vast majority, look upon college as the "end". You'll meet these students soon enough, if you haven't already. There the ones who are spouting off or are worried about the divine "mark." They don't care if they know a subject as long as they pass it in an exam.

Many of them don't care how they get that mark for their philosophy can be summed up in a quote taken from these pages of last year, when one of our students stated: "Anything worth having, is worth cheating for". Only they're not so sure just what is worth cheating for.

Too many of us have tee idea of A's, B's, passing, and flunking; and after graduation life's a bowl of cherries. Any college grad will sadly tell you, that it's after graduation that the real meat and potatoes work begins.

Sure, an "A" in a course could possibly give you the job over the guy with the "C", but once you have the job there are no more "tests", it's just one continuous test. If you have "it", you move ahead; if you don't, you're dropped; no pony, no cramming, not, even your "A" is any help. A college degree can be a poor consolation when you find yourself second-rate.

In being yourself, you will automatically be an individualist. True, this term is thought of today somewhat as a dirty word, for this is not the era of the rugged individualist. But then, that is the fault of each one of us and not that of the eternal catch-all—society. After all, we are society.

And as society we must find out why we are concerned more with what is being worn on campus, than what our own personal taste in clothes are: why we consider "the thing to do" more important than "what I want to do."

Only after we realize that there is no reasonable answer to these questions; and only after we resolve to tear down within ourselves this colligiate social conformity, and "be ourselves," can we hope to LIVE, to be really successful to ourselves, and not to bend the rest of our lives to this blob of nothingness called society. Do it now, while in college; for you won't have the chance once you get out. Society will devour you, while the ink on your diploma is still wet.

Certainly we all have different visions on what we would like to do upon graduation; yet we are all the same in that we all want to be the best. But aren't the best in any field the nonconformists. The ones who dare, not so much to be different, but to be themselves; the Edisons, Pasteurs, Hemingways, Frank Lloyd Wrights, Picassos, Carnegies, Fords, Salks, etc.

Study to learn for the future and conform only to your own self. You may get higher marks; they may be lower; but you'll KNOW what you learned. You may be "out" of the "group" but you'll be "in" outside of it; here you will be satisfied with yourself because you aren't a figment of society's imagination—but yourself.

The Nihilist — by jose conlin

Apoligia Pro Columna Sua

The life of a crusader is a lonely one. For the sake of righteousness and reform, many sacrifices are necessary; campus dignitaries curl their lips in his presence, faculty and administrators snicker and caper gleefully behind his back, former friends snub him in the lavatories.

Yet the crusader carries on, spine arched and feet pitted to brave the storms and ignomonies.

Well does the Nihilist know the plight of the reformer, much has he suffered and courageously has he borne the scorn of lesser beings.

At worst he has been denounced as a heinous anarchist, an embracer of chaos, an enemy of noble humanity. Even to moderate or fastidious critics, to beloved and respected colleagues, the Nihilist is a chronic pessimist, a cynical negativist, sacrificing construction for its less pleasant antonym.

Villanova Microcosm?

Singularly, the Nihilist has withstood these attacks on his integrity and chin jutting toward the holocaust, he defies his enemies to repeat their slanders.

The Nihilist is no absolute negativist, it is only for the sake of a deep burning in his bosom of passionate love for fellow man that he graciously consents to focus the foibles of his fellow students.

Far from opposing everything, the Nihilist is "pro" in many things. Take for example, motherhood and/or corn-on-the-cob. Though still on the doubtful list, sentiment accretes daily in his heart to actually back these things to the proverbial hilt, to fly their banners under the infinite blue of an Ioman sky which is yet another demi-love of his.

Yet these are but pending favorites. Can the Nihilist say that only these positivisms, these concepts which are not of primary importance to self-respecting Villanovans are the only things he favors?

What of important things? What about card playing in the C&F cafeteria; how about storm trooper uniforms for the Student Council Senate? "Villanova is concerned with the more concrete things in life," the critics say, "Youth wants to know."

The Nihilist replies boldly that he too is concerned with important things. Villanova with its environs and aspects hold first place in his mind and heart also. For him too, what else is there?

He does not condemn everything at Villanova as evil.

Does he condemn all because the cultural quotient of the average Villanova student would show up badly on Bandstand?

No! A resounding No!

To the contrary, in at least one facet, the Nihilist believes Villanova is not only equal but unchallengeably superior and expounds this fact at every opportunity.

He calls all patriots, all remnants of the abortive Spirit Committee to the fore. Make hay whilst the sun shines, etc. For it is undeniable, it is certainly that nowhere in this world, neither in Munich, nor Aix-la-Chapelle nor in Keokuk is made better than in our own beloved and cordial Pie Shoppe, a fifteen cent Cherry Coke.

Averaging three or four per day the Nihilist never tires of them. Unknown is stinginess with the tempting cherry syrup; inexhaustible is the bubbling effervescence of the never dilute Coke; startling is the size of the economical draughts; boundless is the pleasure of the gourmet, scurrying off to a dank corner to savor the bouquet.

This then in a dixie cup, is the Villanova microcosm. This then is the constructive facet of the Nihilist. Hats off, Pie Shoppe. Hats off to the finest Cherry Coke in the universe.

To the Editor:

Joe Conlin's recent attempt to insult the University was a bunch of repetitious pedantic drivel, an insult to every member of the University, and, needless to say, completely uncalled for.

I've seen better from Joe in the Villanovan, and hope that this past article is no indication of what to expect from his den in future editions.

Jittery 'Cats Fumbles Pave Way for Navy Win

The only thing that spoiled a perfect weekend for many Villanova fans who went down to Annapolis for the Navy game was the game itself. The Middies came away with the ball game by a 41-7 count, applying a crushing defeat on the young Wildcats.

After Navy's Richards returned the kickoff to the 33, All-American candidate, Joe Bellino, via end runs and rollout passes sparked the Middies down to the V.U. 12. From there, diminutive quarterback Harry Dietz connected with Larry Graham, a soph end, who made a sensational catch in the midst of a crowd of Villanova defenders. This play brought them down almost to the goal line and Bellino drove over from there, and the Navy team was ahead to stay.

However, the Wildcat was not dead yet. Upon receiving the kickoff, the Blue and White, with the help of a fifteen yard gainer by Lou Rettino and a timely pass interference penalty against Navy, gained possession on the opponent's 40 yard line. Navy held for two downs and on the third quarterback Nick Langone hit end Sam Gruneisen for a picture pretty pass combination on the Middie 27. This series of plays brought the Wildcat fans to their feet and all was sweet in Mudville. However, a holding penalty on the next series of downs killed the 'Cats chances and the Middies took over.

Joe Luzzi, Villanova Captain, listens glumly as Prsident Eisenhower sympathetically consoles him after Saturday's debacle. Joe Matalavage, Navy Captain, jubilantly awaits congratulations from Ike.

And how they took over. Three quarters, six fumbles, and thirty four points later, the Wildcats recovered somehow to score a touchdown and save face from being shutout. The fumbles, juggled punts, bobbled pitchouts, and intercepted passes were too numerous to mention but somewhere along the line it seemed to most observers that Navy was handed four of its six scores.

The Wildcats finally scored on their last play. Halfback Mike Pettine took a handoff and streaked around the right end. Fullback Billy Paczkoskie threw the initial block, a crusher which seemed to take out the entire left side of the Navy line, and the next thing that was evident to the excited twenty thousand fans, including President Eisenhower, was the Villanova scatback moving down the sidelines with a half dozen blue and gold jerseys in mad pursuit. Mike went the entire 65 yards with the Navy safety man breathing down his neck. Larry Sopko made the conversion and the 'Cats had their first and last taste of paydirt.

The game as evidenced by the score was a shambles for the 'Cats after the first quarter. It was the same old swan song for Villanova because they did look good while their first unit was fresh but when Navy's coach Wayne Hardin started putting in his reserve units the Wildcat turned into a kitten.

It just seemed that the 'Cats couldn't stem the tide of defeat as the waves of Middies rolled over them. The big guns and heavy air power of the Navy were too much and too strong for the wobbly Wildcats to do anything on a perfect-for-football Saturday afternoon.

Cross Country Team Preps for 1st Meet

Although many students may not have noticed, the cross-country team has been in practice for a few weeks now. They are ambitiously preparing for their first meet which will be on October 15th at N.Y.U. The team, along with their coach, Jim Tuppeny, are hoping to do better than in previous seasons.

Along with the N.Y.U. meet, Villanova has scheduled four additional meets this year as opposed to only a total of three in the last season. The rest of the teams include St. Joseph of Phila. The Hawks were Middle Atlantic champions last year. Also to be mentioned are St. John's of Brooklyn, which won the freshman IC4A championship, and LaSalle, which holds a victory over MAC champs St. Joseph. Finally the season will close with the IC4A cross-country meet at Vancourtland Park in New York.

Among the outstanding returnees will be number one man Angelo Sivieri, a junior and a current track favorite. Henry Neil and Bob Collins are two more lettermen who will help. The rest of the team includes: Jon Dante, who was 2nd in the IC4A 880 track championship, Jerry Hackett, who ran well in outdoor track, and Lance Hugelmeyer, who ran well at the beginning of last season but fell out of competition because of illness. Also there are two upcoming sophs, Pat Traynor and Owen Maguire.

"A good or bad season will depend on how hard the team works," says Tuppeny of the current team. He said that they are conditioning for the track team and is more concerned with getting the men in shape. But as for cross-country, the team must work much harder than previous in order to win meets. However at this writing, the coach feels more optimistic and expects much better performances than in the past.

Cease Status—Seeking

By Mike Donahue

Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom! Boom!

The cannon in Navy Memorial Stadium resounded six times last Saturday. Serving as fodder was the Villanova University football team. The cannon belched after each of the six Middie scores.

Perhaps the post TD celebrations smacked of the melodramatic? We don't think so.

The cannon looked right at home against the military backdrop of several thousand midshipmen, such facade-etched names as Guadalcanal, Iwo Jima, and Pelilieu, and a spectator seated high top the stadium who still instinctively reacts to the appelation of "General."

Down on the field, however, it was apparent that there was a visiting football team which did not look right at home. As a matter of fact it looked and behaved as it had no right to be included on its opponent's schedule. Not because it suffered through the humiliation of playing a shoddy game. Rather because it was grossly over matched.

The most irksome part about the latter observation, which can be arrived at with a minimum of insight, is that there is little or no argument raised when the statement is made. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the Villanova University football team, 1960 edition, had no business playing the U.S. Naval Academy, 1960 edition. Yet those whose task it is to draw up the schedule saw fit to schedule not one but two service academies for 1960. Mayhaps it was only the distance factor that kept them from slating the Air Force Academy.

In essaying this column it is not my aim to second guess our athletic policy makers. Perhaps they went status-seeking for the name of Villanova in football circles. This much has been achieved although we might well ask what price glory.

. . . ours not to reason why . . .'

Instead it would be wise not to entertain notions of a service opponent until at least 1965. By that time the Villanova alumni fund should be substantial enough to underwrite several more football grants-in-aid. This is not merely an academic suggestion, either. The 1961 card does not include Army or Navy (or the Air Force Academy, either.)

We suggest reorganizing our football program to bring it more in line with teams who are more our match. Schools like Marquette, Dayton, Rutgers, Holy Cross, Xavier, Detroit, VMI, VPI, College of Pacific, et alia.

Even this will necessitate a reappraisal which might well prove agonizing. For example, Detroit University, a perennial opponent, last year instituted an eighty thousand dollar scholarship fund. The Motor City people dole out 40 football scholarships per annum, or about two and a half times as many as we allot.

We realize that a jump from 17 to 40 is quite a leap. Especially considering the fact that our alumni fund, the sugar daddy for prospective footballers, is only six years old. 50% of the Villanova alumni have graduated since 1950 which means that they are raising families and hence can't assume the roles of philanthropists. Which brings us back to the only immediate solution to the problem.

Avoid a status seeker's schedule. Forget about teams like Baylor, Texas A. & M. and the aforementioned service teams. At least for the next several years.

Concentrate instead on building a winning spirit which in turn procreates a winning tradition. This year's squad has, at least in potential, a winning attitude.

It's only fair to these "hungry young men," which Alex Bell's charges are, to be offered the opportunity, by virtue of their ability alone, sans an intercessory prayer to St. Jude to win every game they play.

Needless to say, they won't do this. Few teams do. There'll be days when, if they play as ineptly as they did against Navy, that they'll be defeated by teams of their own caliber. But, just as long as it's a team of their own caliber.

Navy ace Joe Bellino is jolted off his feet by one of the few crisp tackles applied to Middie runners last Saturday. Stopping Bellino in the Villanova secondary is Nick Russo.

Can History Repeat?

Wildcats on the Road Again Aim To Shoot Down Flyers

The Villanova Football team takes to the road for the third straight time this week when it goes up against the Dayton Flyers at Dayton, Ohio. The Wildcats, after showing up well in their first two games, seem full of confidence and have the gleam of anticipated victory in their eyes.

The Dayton football story is one that parallels our own situation almost to a "T". The Flyers have a new coach in Stan Zajdel, and a new psychological outlook. "This team should be ready to experience success, because it is tired of licking its wounds, incurred by two years of defeat. They will be difficult to beat."

★ ★ ★ ★

In order to accomplish the success which Zadjel hopes for, a collection of promising sophomores, particularly in the backfield, must mature from the start, and his "60 minute men," such as tackles Bob DeMarco and Ransom Piltz, center Joe Belanick, guard Earl McFeaters, and possibly end Mike Managhan, must be at 100 per cent strength.

His line, anchored by the 230-pound DeMarco and Piltz at 255, averages out to 212. The backfield is the original "x" quantity.

The only non-sophomore starter is the right halfback, Jack Sarnell. The other halfback is Andy Timura, who will only be playing his third varsity game and already this 6' 190 pounder from Pittsburgh is being touted as the greatest back in Dayton history. The fullback is Bob Michigan, who is a real pile driver. The starting quarterback is sooh Jack Unrurferth but Pat Connor, a senior from Cleveland, plays quite a bit because of the experience angle and his passing ability.

★ ★ ★ ★

Despite this array of sophs the Flyers lost their first game to Ohio University 28-0. This year's Villanova-Dayton contest is the fifth in a series which started in 1955. The 'Cats lead in victories, three to one.

On Oct. 5, at Mendel Field, the Intramural Department will start Muff Day activities.

Day Of Recollection Masses To Be Held At 8:30 and 12:30

Villanova's Annual Day of Recollection will be held tomorrow. Services for the men students will be held in the Field House. The exercises for the women students will be held in the University Chapel.

The day students will begin their Day of Recollection with Mass at 8:30 a.m. in the Field House and the resident students will begin theirs with a Mass at 12:30 p.m. This arrangement is made necessary since many day students have to work in the afternoon.

The following day, the First Friday of October, students will be given an opportunity to receive Holy Communion and attend Mass in the University Chapel. There will be exposition of the Most Blessed Sacrament during the entire day.

Evening Mass

An innovation this year will be the celebration of an evening Mass at 5:00 p.m. on First Fridays in addition to the regularly scheduled Masses at 6:30 a.m., 7:15 a.m., 7:45 a.m., and 12:00 noon. Immediately after the evening Mass there will be Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament.

The Retreat Master for the men will be the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A. Father Driscoll is a graduate of Villanova, class of 1948. He was ordained in The National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Washington D. C. on June 5th, 1951. He holds a master's degree in philosophy from the Catholic University of America. After ordination he was stationed for a few years at Archbishop Carroll High School, Washington D. C. Later, he was assigned to teach at Merrimack College, North Andover, Mass. and spent several years there as College Chaplain. Presently, Father Driscoll is residing at Augustinian College, Washington, D. C. while completing his work on a doctorate in philosophy at the Catholic University of America.

Rev. Francis X. Kelly will direct the Day of Recollection for the women students in the University Chapel. Last year he was a Prefect in Fedigan Hall and now resides in the Monastery. He is the Director of the Augustinian Seminary Guild, an organization for the support of the Augustinian Seminaries. Father Kelly gave the Day of Recollection to the men students two years ago and has been active in retreat work for many years.

Student Given Grant

Thomas Dempsey, a mechanical engineering student from Albany, New York, has been presented an annual stipend of $700 by the General Electric Foundation. The scholarship also includes an unrestricted grant of $500 to Villanova as a cost-of-education award.

Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President, officially welcomes Capt. J. F. Boyle, USN, to Villanova at ceremonies held last week. Capt. Boyle heads Villanova's NROTC unit.

NFCCS Acpuaints Villanovans With Its Future Activities

The National Federation of Catholic College Students last Thursday acquainted Villanovans with the purpose and activities of the organization by distributing pamphlets and answering questions in Dougherty Hall. The purpose was to assist the Villanova chapter of the organization in taking a larger part in future activities.

The NFCCS pools resources to study programs of common interest on a National scale, puts its accumulated information into practical use in campus programs, and is the voice of Catholic college students in America.

Last year the Contemporary Issues Examination Division of the Federation carried on a study of Catholic higher education. The constructive criticism resulting has directly led to changes in administrative policies of several colleges.

Pluralistic Society

This year attention will be focused on the American pluralistic society, unique in the world in that three major religious groups overlooked their differences in beliefs and worked together to build a strong country. The society will give consideration to differences among the three groups which have the position and obligations of Catholics in this society.

The Secretariats Division of the NFCCS, having its seat in Washington where it has access to the State Dept. and other government information, concerns itself with social, international, student, and religious affairs. It provides accumulated information from past files to schools upon request and publishes focuses on critical isues of national importance as soon as they arise.

The federation also has a travel program in which about two hundred college students participate each year, and a College and University Relief Administration concerned with the well being of Catholic colleges in other countries.

Muff Day Action Planned By 'Diligent' Whitehatted Sophs

"Frosh, Muff Day is fast approaching. If you win legs come off. If not, you'll wear them another week." The spirit of the sophomore class was summed up by Muff Day co-chairmen Rick Santo and Jim Hawley. The activities are planned for Wednesday, October 5.

The White Hats have been working diligently for the success of the event and have included in the events a touch football game, pushball, wheelbarrow race, football throw and punt for distance, tug-o-war, and basketball foul-shooting.

In order to insure fair treatment to the freshmen, J. P. Moran and his intramural staff will referee the contests. Father Kenny will put in his annual appearance as referee of the pushball game.

The co-chairmen and the remainder of the White Hats wish the frosh the best of luck, and in their words, "may the better class, '63, win."

Foreign Students

Will all foreign students please report to the Recorder's Office, Mendel Hall, before October 15th.

Requiescant In Pace

Villanova Faculty and Students extend their sympathy to the following students on the recent death of members of their immediate families and recommend the souls of the deceased to the prayers of all Villanovans:

Father of Lawrence Pilarchik '64 Eng. Day.

Mother of Kathleen Dolphin '64 Nurs. Day.

Mother of Thomas P. Scanlon '63 CF Day.

Father of Robert Harvelin '62 Arts Res.

Concert, Football Game Highlight Parent's Day

This Saturday the Student Council, in the name of the student body, will invite Villanova's parents to visit the campus for a day dedicated to them. Co-chairmen John Wojciechowicz and Len Carnaghi have extended the invitation to the parents of each student with the hope that they will avail themselves of the opportunities of one occasion.

The activities will commence at 10:30 a.m. with an open house on campus. According to the chairmen, the purpose of this personally conducted tour will be "to acquaint the parents with many beauties of the campus and the modern, well-equipped buildings and facilities of which they have heard you speak."

Following this tour, the Villanova Band will entertain the parents with a concert in front of Dougherty Hall.

The Villanova-College of the Pacific football game will follow at 1:30 p.m.

Half-time activities will begin with an address of welcome by the President of the Student Council, Bob DeLisa.

The half-time entertainments will include precision by the NROTC Drill Team. The Villanova Marching Band will present a program dedicated especially to the parents.

The continued success of Parents' Day is the chief responsibility of the student. It is, therefore, up to each and every one to see that their deserving parents are present for this memorable day.

Parents' Committee

On Friday evening preceding the Parents' Day festivities, the first meeting of the Parents' Committee will be held in Dougherty Hall.

The comittee of thirty parents, which has been organized to represent the entire community of parents of the student body, will meet with the very Reverend John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., and other officers of the administration. They will discuss the eventual problems of the University and attempt to devise a program which will help to meet them.

Toward this end, on Saturday a check will be presented to Father Klekotka by Gordon Burlingame, President of the Parents' Committee. The check represents the total of contributions received from the parents of last year's student body.

Radio Expands Operations Call Letters Are Now WWVU

"Entirely new programming and an FM-type broadcast will be started by the radio station," announced Dan O'Mara, Station Manager of WWVU.

The programming will be extended to a longer broadcast day. From two until eleven Sunday to Friday and from nine to five on Saturday, WWVU, formerly WVIL, will expose its new agenda.

Popular music during the afternoon will be followed by a new program consisting of representatives from the neighboring girls' colleges, as well as our own co-eds. From five 'till ten there will be music to study by, followed by an hour of Jazz Suite.

Sunday's nine hours will be filled by classical music followed by big band music and Digest. Requests will be filled on Saturday morning with show tunes and recalls of popular music.

For the first time this year, disc-jockies will operate their own equipment for a more well-rounded knowledge of radio work.

WWVU will again have complete news coverage through campus station new reports and UPI wire service.

The station's offices will be remodeled this year due to its expanding operations. Dr. Charles B. Smith will again be moderator this year. The staff heads for the coming year are: Charles Labus, Program Director; Chief Engineer, Al Lowler; Business Manager, Ted Folsom; and Personnel Director, John Oberlies.

"WVIL . . . I mean, WWVU is on the air!" Radio Station Manager Dan O'Mara registers slight concern as on of his staff opens WWVU's broadcasting season.

Biochemist In Scientific Revolution

Dr. Thomas Doyne, Villanova biochemist currently working on National Science Foundation-sponsored project, tests some of the various apparatus with which he works.

"The next great scientific advance will be in the field of biochemistry, and the revolution has already started," declares Dr. Thomas H. Doyne, Villanova professor of biochemistry.

Obviously fascinated with his role in the biochemical revolution, Dr. Doyne is every bit the dedicated scientist in appearance and manner, and literally infects those in his presence with his magnetic enthusiasm.

His interest and energy in biochemistry have inspired four of his recent students to pursue graduate studies in the subject at Penn State, Dr. Doyne's own alma mater. His pride and happiness at the progress of his former students is quite apparent as he discusses them.

X-ray Defraction

Dr. Doyne's life work is the determining of the molecular structure of biochemicals by means of X-ray defraction. Biochemicals are the basic constituents of living things.

The structure of a molecule depends upon the distances between its atoms, and the angles that the bonds between the atoms form with one another.

X-ray defraction analysis involves the shining of X-ravs on a crystal of the molecule under investigation. X-rays are small enough to fit between the atoms, which affect the rays in such a way that photographic analysis of them after they pass through the crystal reveals much about the molecular structure of the crystal.

Infinitesimal Lengths

The measurements involved are extremely difficult, since the atoms are only about ten one-billionths of an inch in diameter, and 15 one-billionths of an inch apart. If calculated by hand, the mathematics involved in refining one set of measurement data would take two years. With an analogue computer, it takes eight minutes

So complex are his endeavors that Dr. Doyne must be at once a chemist, biologist, physicist, and mathematician. His colleagues refer to him as the "jack-of-all-trades."

Dr. Doyne's current project is to probe the mysteries of enzymes, the master chemicals that control every known biological process, from the comparatively simple seed growth process to the thinking processes of man.

Fantastically Complex

It has been discovered that many enzymes cannot function unless joined, or "complexed," with a metal like zinc or nickel. Enzymes are fantastically complicated chemicals of a type called proteins, but they are built of smaller units called acids.

Dr. Doyne's task is to discover the structure and function of the metallic complexes of these acids, at the present time, zinc glutamate in particular. He began these investigations while working as a Fullbright Fellow at the University of Osaka in Japan. He spent four years studying aspartic acid.

His current project, which is sponsored by the National Science Foundation, has been running fo rtwo and one half years, and is expected to be concluded in three months. Dr. Doyne says, however, that no research project can ever be truly completed, but only halted at a chosen stage.

Graduate Assistants

Concurrently with this project, Dr. Doyne is occupied with other research, sponsored by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. Assisting him in his projects are a number of students, graduate and undergraduate. One of the graduate assistants, James Purcell, declares that "through the efforts of Dr. Doyne and scientists like him, the great mysteries of life will someday be solved."

Press Conference Is Addressed By Edward J. Mowery

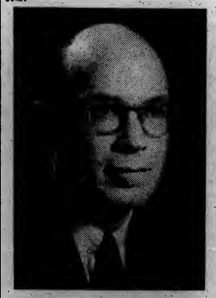
More than five thousand high school students from throughout the eastern United States convened here last Saturday for the thirteenth annual school publications conference

Students from two hundred high schools and preparatory schools within an eight state area attended the day long meeting on the Villanova campus. The Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., University Librarian was in charge of the program.

The main address was delivered by Mr. Edward J. Mowery, winner of the Pulitzer Prize in 1953 and a member of the National Press Club of Washington. Mr. Mowery has served as the editor of the Eastern News in Columbus, Ohio, the Lancaster Daily Eagle and the Lancaster Eagle Gazette. He has been a staff writer for King Features Syndicate ,for the Associated Press, and for the New York Post and New York World Telegram. He has also been a special writer for the New York Herald Tribune, the Newhouse Newspapers and was Editorial Director of the U. S. Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Juvenile Delinquency.

The students also heard lectures and participated in activities designed to assist them in their work on school newspapers, yearbooks, magazines, and other scholastic publications.

Among the other speakers who addressed the high schoolers were the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Anthony L. Ostheimer, editor of the Catholic Standard and Times; John J. Liney, cartoonist and illustrator; Leonard McAdams, of the Philadelphia Inquirer; and Carl Wolf, photographer. The school publications experts who assisted the students in thei rown particular problems were William T. Cooke, John C. Ursprung, Daniel A. Solari, and Ralph J. MacWilliams.



A dance in the Field House followed the conference and the day long meting concluded with religious exercises.

K of C Meets

The Father Ludwig O.S.A., Council of the Knights of Columbus held its first meeting of the school year last Wednesday evening. Plans for activities were discussed and applications of new members were also accepted.

Dr. Myron S. Heidingsfield Now C&F Associate Dean

Vilanova University recently announced the appointment of Doctor Myron S. Heidingsfield as Associate Dean and Professor of Marketing in the School of Commerce and Finance. Prior to his coming to Villanova University, Dr. Heidingsfield was the Manager of Market Research of the Consumer Products Division of the Radio Corporation of America.

Professor Heidingsfield

Dr. Heidingsfield was formerly Professor of Marketing and Chairman of that Department in the School of Business and Public Administration of Temple University in Philadelphia. He was also a practicing marketing research consultant to industry, and was executive vice-president of a market research firm. Moreover, he was the educational consultant to the Charles Morris Price School of Advertising of the Poor Richard Club, and was the Chairman of the Educational Council of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce.

He is a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of the national honorary society of Beta Gamma Sigma. Dr. Heidingsfield has appeared as an expert witness before the Federal Communications Commission, the Federal Trade Comission, and the Public Utilities Commission, Washington, D. C., on problems related to marketing research.

Dr. Heidingsfield was formerly on the faculty of Columbia University and the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg, Virginia.

Prof Is Dublin Lecturer

Mr. Joseph W. Ratigan, Associate Professor of English here at Villanova, has been appointed "Visiting Lecturer in Contemporary American Fiction" at the University of Dublin. During his year's leave of absence, he will study abroad for his doctorate under Professor J. J. Hogan, college registrar and widely known professor of English Literature.

Mr. Ratigan came to Villanova in 1948. He received his A.B. from the University of Notre Dame in 1938 and his M.A. from the University of Pennsylvania in 1949. This is not Mr. Ratigan's first trip to Europe, but one of many including service in England during World War II.

As co-author, it might be added, Mr. Ratigan has given our freshmen their English book, "Rendezvous."

McMonagle Reveals Plans

The initial meeting of the Junior Class Steering Committee was held last Thursday morning. "The purpose of the Steering Committee of the Class of 1962 will be to help formulate all class policy, to form a core of workers and chairmen for the various class functions, and to act as a liason between the class officers and the class proper," declared class President Jim McMonagle.

Mike Fallon, class Treasurer, first announced that the treasury remained unchanged from last year. McMonagle then stated that class rings would be delivered to the University Shop on October 20, and in consequence, the Ring Mass and Breakfast would be held on November 12.

Little Heads Comm'ttee

Rev. Thomas Kenny, O.S.A., class Moderator, will celebrate Mass, and Joe Little will head the committee planning the Ring day events. McMonagle expressed the hope of securing a b'ock of tickets for the junior class to the Detroit game, to be played in the Stadium on the afternoon of Ring day.

Dave Muir and Walt Horn were named co-chairmen of the Homecoming Float committee, which will supervise construction of a float to participate in Homecoming activities on November 5. The co-chairmen expressed the great need for volunteers on this project.

Orphan's Weekend

McMonagle also announced that Orphans' Weekend would commence with the Charity Ball on December 2, and conclude with the Orphans' Party on December 6. Junior Week will run from May 1 to May 6.

A general class meeting will be held next Thursday, October 13, at 10:30 a.m. in Vasey Hall Auditorium, to discuss these and other class activities, to form committees, and to name chairman to supervise the various events. McMonagle expressed the desire that all class members attend the meeting.

Campus News Briefs

Postgrad Office Open

"Students are encouraged to consider Graduate School early," said Dr. Bernard J. Bedard of the Postgraduate Study Office. Sophomores as well as Juniors and Seniors should be advised on postgraduate study.

The purpose of the Postgraduate Study advisor is to acquaint students with graduate school opportunities available to them under foundation, government or University auspices. Dr. Bedard gives general counseling for preparation for graduate school.

This office is not to replace the usual advisors' purposes, but is a supplementary office to be used before or after a consultation with your individual department advisor. Information on the process of application for scholarship and admission is given in the field which the student would be eligible.

Acording to Dr. Bedard, not all schools are equally strong in all areas, so one should rely on his individual department advisor to select one in the field. Scholarship applicants should take the earliest tests; application tests may be satisfactorily taken at mid-year.

The Postgraduate Study Office, opened last spring, has the catalogues of most of the colleges and universities in the country. Scholarship material is received from the various deans here on campus. The office is a clearing house for graduate schools and graduate school opportunities.

Seniors who wish information on Fulbright Grants for study overseas, see Dr. Bedard now. He may be seen by appointment any day. Catalogues are available at any time.

Largest Navy Class

The largest class in the history of the Villanova NROTC Unit has been accepted this year from among the members of the freshman class.

Of the 260 frosh who applied for admittance, twice as many as last year, 113 were accepted. The original quota was set at 80, but due to the quality of the applicants the unit received special permission to take on an additional 3 students.

IRS Commences Year

The International Relations Society of Villanova held its first meeting of the school year on Tuesday evening. Dr. Fritz Nova, moderator of the I.R.S. gave the welcoming address.

The officers for the current year are: Joe Clark, President; Tony Bateman, Vice-President; Paul Downy, Secretary-Treasurer and Bill Williams, Student Council Representative.

Clark stated that the purpose of the I.R.S. is to afford the students of Villanova the opportunity of gaining a knowledge of the practical aspect and problems of world affairs.

The plans for the coming year as outlined by Clark include prominent speakers who will discuss world affairs, group discussions, films and field trips.

Clark stressed the fact that membership in the I.R.S. is not limited to students in the Arts and Sciences Division.

Moritz Offers Jobs

The opportunity to enter public service in the federal government is again being made available to seniors, according to John Moritz, Placement Officer. The U. S. Civil Service Commission reports that the starting salaries of the positions range from $4,345 to $5,355 per year, depending on the qualifications of the applicant, he stated.

Appointments to these positions are made through the Federal Service Entrance Examination which, according to the Civil Service Comission, is being reannounced in September.

Application forms and other information about the Federal Service Entrance Examination may be obtained from the Placement Officer in Sheehan Hall basement.

The Civil Service Commission urges that all interested students take the written examination on the test dates scheduled during the first half of the academic year so that they will be in a position to consider job offers in advance of graduation.

LYNX Ask For Copy

This year's plans for the the Lynx, Villanova's semi-annual literary magazine, were announced by co-editors Mike Wesley and Vince Kirk at a staff meeting last week.

The editors indicated that they expect to be faced with the usual dilemma of lack of material. Since, in the past, only a minimum of material has been submitted by the C & F and Engineering Schools, the Lynx feels it is necessary to "remind the students that the Lynx is representative of the University as a whole and not merely the School of Liberal Arts."

Critical and Creative

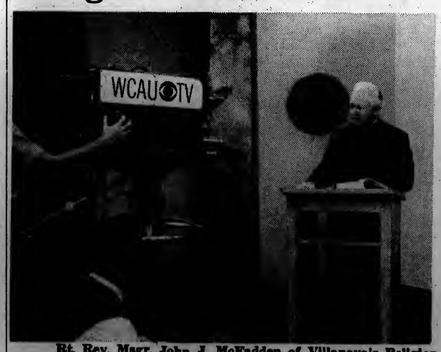
Dr. John Phillipson and Mr. James Mitchell of the English Dept., moderators, in addition to voicing the above opinion, have expressed the desire for more critical writing in the magazine.

Vince Kirk sees a definite need for classical forms of poetry evident in the past two issues. Although not opposed to the usual free verse offered, Kirk claims that "not only creative intuition but also mechanical craftsmanship must be displayed."

8,000 Management Opportunities!

That's right. There will be 8,000 supervisory jobs filled from within the Western Electric Company by college graduates in just the next ten years! How come? Because there's the kind of upward movement at Western Electric that spells executive opportunity. Young men in engineering and other professional work can choose between two paths of advancement—one within their own technical field and one within over-all management.

Your progress up-the-ladder to executive positions will be aided by a number of special programs. The annual company-wide personnel survey helps select management prospects. This ties in with planned rotational development, including transfers between Bell Companies and experience in a wide variety of fields. Western Electric maintains its own full-time graduate engineering training program, seven formal management courses, and a tuition refund plan for college study.



After joining Western Electric, you'll be planning production of a steady stream of communications products—electronic switching, carrier, microwave and missile guidance systems and components such as transistors, diodes, ferrites, etc. Every day, engineers at our manufacturing plants are working to bring new developments of our associates at Bell Telephone Laboratories into practical reality. In short, "the sky's your limit" at Western Electric.

Opportunities exist for electrical, mechanical, industrial, civil and chemical engineers, as well as physical science, liberal arts, and business majors. For more information, get your copy of Consider a Career at Western Electric from your Placement Officer. Or write College Relations, Room 6106, Western Electric Company, 195 Broadway, New York 7, N. Y. Be sure to arrange for a Western Electric interview when the Bell System team visits your campus.

Don't Vote

Almost daily, Dr. George Gallup and a horde of lesser luminaries in the field of political prognostication present the American public with the latest results of their presidential poll-taking. According to them, one of the more significant aspects of the current campaign is its "neck-and-neck" nature.

Are their appraisals accurate? And how does the closeness of the political race affect the individual voter?

The pollster' accuracy average may be said to be better than .500. The correct prediction of the outcome of Eisenhower's "soldier-hero, father image" drive was offset by 1948's pseudo-prophecy which resulted in that infamous Chicagoo TRIBUNE headline: "DEWEY WINS!"

Past performance is no basis for judging a poll-taker or opinion-dispensor, however. Only complete accuracy on the matter at hand is important. Therefore, it seems that the American voters, and especially the approximately 2000 voters among the administration, faculty, student body, and staff of Villanova University, should investigate thoroughly the issues upon which the pollsters are basing their pronouncements.

Any presidential campaign is attended by a certain degree of cloudiness, produced when a front of oratorical hot air hits the cold, high-pressure area of local, national, and international issues.

The current campaign is further befogged by a bevy of peculiarities: the "poor man's party" has nominated a millionaire, while the "party of Wall Street" has named the son of a California grocer. The South is supposedly considering the advantages of Republicanism, while the Democrats seem determined to woo and win the Farm Belt. Schisms, both public and private, abound—Kennedy versus Johnson, Truman, and Mrs. Roosevelt; Nixon versus both liberal and conservative elements in the G.O.P.—but these are apparently reconciled. The similarity of the party platforms might incline the shallow-thinking portion of the public to cast its vote on the basis of candidates' "personality."

Regardless of campaign confusion, however, the hard core of essential issues is there. It is the duty, the obligation, of the conscientious voter, particularly the voter in the collegiate atmosphere, to discover and distinguish these real issues from the miasma of complexities attending the current campaign.

And the time for an intelligent appraisal of the political situation is now, immediately. Election eve is hardly the time to begin wondering which candidate is the better. Now, as the political struggle approaches its climax, but before it has dwindled to "the morning after," the voter must decide.

Indeed, at the risk of sounding inconoclastic, we would urge: Unless you know what you are doing, Don't Vote.

A More United UN?

by George F. West

Fist-banging has replaced the antiquated parliamentary procedure in the United Nations General Assembly. So it seems to Soviet Premier Nikita Krushchev. Pounding a fist may be a better way of saving no, but pounding both fists is just going too far.

Mr. Krushchev had some very good reasons for his wild outbursts nevertheless. British Prime Minister MacMillan exposed to the General Assembly the destructive and trouble-making purposes Mr. K brought with him to the United Nations in New York. The calm Briton accused by name and leveled the blame for the failure of the recent Paris conference on Nikita's shoulders.

Above the pounding and yelling of the Russian, MacMillan stood with a cold stare and went on. Then deploring the obsolete Soviet policies on Germany, the Prime Minister mocked the useless talk of the Soviet Delegation.

What does all this shouting and pounding mean? Can it be that all Krushchev's attempts to weaken the U.N., wreck it, and take it home with him to Moscow have failed? The Russian was made a fool of and them made a fool of himself in front of the whole General Assembly, when his policies were uncovered and he was seen for the propagandist he is.

So far Mr. Krushchev has been unsuccessful in getting rid of the Secretary-General. If anything, he has advanced the popularity of Hammarskjold especially regarding the most powerful Western nations.

Another failure of Mr. K was his attempt to pick up the neutral nations. These nations have not only refused to be swayed, but have been driven farther away from the Communist orbit.

But how many more maneuvers are planned? Castro went home, will Nakita accept his invitation? Latin America, for the time at least, seems relatively secure, but what if Cuba goes from pink to red as it has been going even more rapidly with Castro's performance in New York.

Mr Eisenhower and Mr. MacMillan seem to put much faith in the United Nations. But is good faith enough to make this organization strong enough to withstand the blasts leveled at it by the Soviet Premier?

It seems that at least the English speaking countries of the Free World are starting to take a firm stand. Is this the turning point at last? The League also had men of good faith. The U.N. may have the power now to succeed where the League, because of its weakness, failed.

Ask Nikita if the United Nations has power. Was he pounding his both fists because this organization need not be feared? Perhaps it was because he saw that the United Nations could call even one of his so-called stature. He has not weakened the U.N. as planned, rather he had accidentally strengthened it through his own stupidity.

Letters To The Editors

To the Editor:

To the freshmen especially, the majority of whom, thanks to the College Boards, exemplify a much higher intelligence quota than "adolescent lemmings," I apologize for the insults directed their way by this pseudo-representative of the student body, Joe Conlin.

As a White-Hat, I am, however, indebted to Mr. Conlin for his apology rendered for our "farcical, imbecilic, and asinine" efforts in implementing freshman registration, familiarizing them with Villanova's campus, answering their inquiries, instilling University spirit, and forcing them to meet and greet fellow Villanovans.

I can certainly realize how "simian-like" it was to herd this "poor group," yet unorganized and unoriented, into an auditorium to see a movie, and how apparent my "pre-mature senility" became in subjecting them to an entertaining "Truth or Consequences."

May I compliment Mr. Conlin also on his great wisdom, being himself living proof that the undergraduates are much more experienced than the administration, one of whom, Father Girolami, stated to the Student Council, "The Orientation Committee has done a fine job of indoctrinating the freshmen, and deserves to be complimented."

I sincerely hope that by including this statement I have not subjected Father Girolami to similar criticism.

To the Editor:

The fol'owing letter was sent to me, in my capacity as Student Council Treasurer and head of the Day-Hop Relations Committee:

"On Monday, September 12, the new Villanova Stadium Passenger Stadium of the Norristown Division of our Company was opened to the public on a twenty-four hour daily basis.

"Passengers wishing to board at the Villanova Stadium stop must pull a signal cord to notify the operator of the rail car.

the student body and any personnel of the University who might be interested, and trust that the new facility will be a convenience to Villanova.

Yours very truly,

To the Editor:

Following is an item which was released to all Navy ships:

"Navy walloped Villanova 41-7 Saturday before homecoming crowd which included President Eisenhower. It was second win of season for Midshipmen as they whipped Boston College 22-7 in opener."

Needless to say, it was a rout. The President is no doubt impressed with Villanova's athletic endeavor, 1-9 for '59, 0-2 for '60. We're doing fine.

I have a suggestion, Either start building up our football team or start playing opponents such as Haverford, Swarthmore, or Bryn Mawr.

Letter to the Editor:

As a loyal Villanovan who respects lawfully given authority, I must inform you that I was appalled at Mr. Conlin's article of September 23. Webster defines Nihilism (the name of the column) as the doctrine that conditions in the social organization are so bad as to make destruction desirable for its own sake, independent of any constructive program.

There is no constructive criticism in the article. Only destruction and rebellion against Villanova and its traditions are fostered. It seems a pity to plague the student paper with the seemingly mature and sophisticated babblings of a boy. The writer apparently swoons over himself and his flamboyant language. I believe (being constructive) that we either orientate this stranger of Villanova before he graduates or show him to the gate at Ithan Avenue.

Beta Gamma Gives Chance To Learn Invaluable Skills

By Frank McCormick

This fall the country is being treated to an unprecedent series of debates between the two major candidates for the Presidency of the United States. This, more than any other current example, dramatically illustrates how often success is dependent on the ability to present effectively your ideas vocally.

This is not just true in politics, but extends to almost all fields of human endeavor. The man who can quickly analyze a problem and then persuasively present his ideas on it to an audience possesses incalcuable advantage over the man who can not. To help students acquire this invaluable ability is the purpose of Beta Gamma, Villanova University's debating society.

Students' Misconceptions

Unfortunately, a great number of students are deterred from pursuing this worthwhile activity because of a number of misconceptions they have about debating. For instance, one of the most common misbeliefs is the feeling among students that the only thing to be gotten from debating is a familiarity with the topic under discussion.

While it is true that this is a rather interesting and useful facet of debate, it is far from the most important reason for engaging in this activity. Opinions on what exactly is the main advantage to be derived from debating are probably as numerous as debaters themselves, but most would doubtless agree that basically it teaches you to think in a manner which most people have never done before.

Jugular Tendency

A good debater quickly develops what is known as "the tendency for the jugular"—that is the ability to size up a complex argument, break it down into a few simple issues, and immediately recognize the crucial ideas that will decide the debate. Once understanding where these key points lie, he organizes his argument to demonstrate clearly and logically why these basic ideas, and hence the entire case of the opponents, is fallacious. He knows that if he can succeed in doing this, he will destroy the opposition's argument wholly and completely.

In contrast, the unskilled debater is often sidetracked by unimportant issues which perhaps because of their emotional impact, absorb his attention, and hence he loses the gist of the whole argument, and the discussion degenerates into bickering over an irrelevant point which does not really decide the question at hand.

Debaters Abhor Tricks

A second objection students have to debating stems from their impression that it consists only in the learning of a number of tricks designed to fool someone into accepting your opinion.

The truth is that any good debater abhors any such tricks, usually finding it much more to his advantage to win the key points with simple logic and valid evidence. This does not, however, mean that he neglects to master the many techniques of persuasively presenting his ideas.

As a matter of fact, if he is to convince anyone to concur in his opinions, he must by necessity acquire a host of skills dealing with the actual presentation of his arguments. This talent of being able "to think on your feet' is one that can be obtained only through hard work and actual participation in debates. As an illustration of this point, almost everyone is familiar with the groping feeling we all experience when trying to express our ideas in words before a sea of critical faces for the first time.

Someth'ng To Say

At such moments the most difficult thing in the world seems to be just finding something to say for our allotted time, and the idea of making our arguments forcible and crystal clear sems to be just on the other side of an impossibilty.

A little experience quickly banishes this sensation, however, and before he knows it the debater is all too often faced with the opposite evil of becoming so enamored with his own eloquence that he could easily talk away the better part of the day, could he but find some one to listen.

Skills Difficult

It should be stressed that the skills of a good debater are not easily acquired. It takes long hours of careful practice and actual participation in debates before you overcome the multitude of mistakes which every novice makes.

Bpt all through life we are going to be constantly faced with the problem of convincing others of the worth of our ideas. If we learn the talents of debating while we are young, we can be assured that they will not soon leave us, for although they are not easily acquired, once acquired they are difficult to forget.

Schedule Revision Could Eliminate Course Conflicts

by bill speers

One of the most painful seasonal scourges of the teacher and student alike are the bi-yearly registration and the examination periods.

SPEERS

How many of us have had four or five exams scheduled for one day; or after struggling for hours with a pre-registration roster, settled for what might be an undesirable course "because I couldn't fit in anything else."

Since every year these same situations seem to prevail, perhaps a quick look at how other universities, much larger than Villanova are handling the problem, is called for.

One of the favorite ways many schools have in coping with this perennial problem, is to simply "code" each course offered at the institution, in their college catalogs.

The only probable drawback to this system is the necessity of conducting Saturday classes; but since the way things are going, in a few years Saturday classes will be commonplace anyhow, the final adoption of such a system would be a step toward the future.

In the code system, either a roman numeral or an arabic letter is used to code a course. For instance each course coded numeral I, would be offered on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 8:30; those designated II, on the same days at 9:30 and so on each hour to 2:30 or code VII.

The Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday classes would be coded from VIII-XIV at the same hours. The beauty of this plan is that it can be used, in fact, during an exam period spread over six days and that it permits the university to accommodate more students.

This is not to mention the ease with which a student may plan his schedule for the coming year, and conceivably for his entire four-year stay at school.

A serious attempt at installing this system here would doubtless require the inter-co-operation of all the divisions' deans. For in planning this system, priority in all schools would have to be given to basic and special courses.

That is, Art courses having a high attendance by accounting majors, should not be scheduled to conflict with an accounting major course; nor should a basic course like freshmen English be scheduled to conflict with a basic foreign language or science required of the same freshmen.

The adoption of such a code system would probably require intensive initial labor, but once completed it could conceivably stand, indefinitly, without revision, for both registration and examination schedules.

We readily admit that we are not versed in the art of making academic schedules and don't for a moment underestimate their complexities. Yet the system outlined above and modifications of it, are being successfully implemented in colleges throughout the country.

Their availability and facility of use by the student along with a minimum of concern by the deans, would seem to make such a change at Villanova desirable.

WHAT TO DO TILL THE PSYCHIATRIST COMES

Once upon a time at the University of Virginia there was a coed named, oddly enough, Virginia University who was handsome and kindly and intelligent and ingeniously constructed and majoring in psychology. Virginia went steady with a young man on campus named, oddly enough, Oddly Enough who was supple and fair and lithe and animated and majoring in phys ed.

Virginia and Oddly enjoyed a romance that was as idyllic as a summer day, as placid as a millpond. Never did they fight—never, never, never!—because Virginia, who was majoring in psychology, did not believe in fighting. "Fighting," she often said, "settles nothing. The scientific way is to look calmly for the cause of the friction."

So whenever she and Oddly were on the verge of a quarrel, she used to whip out a series of ink blot tests and they would discover the true underlying cause of their dispute and deal with it in an enlightened, dispassionate manner. Then, the irritant removed, their romance would resume its tranquil, serene, unruffled course.

After six months of this sedate liaison, Oddly was so bored he could spit. He loved Virginia well enough, but he also believed that people in love ought to fight now and then. "It opens the pores," he said. "And besides, it's so much fun making up afterwards."

But Virginia would not be provoked into a quarrel. One night Oddly tried very hard. "Hey," he said to her, "your nose looks like a banana, and your ears look like radar antenna, and your face looks like a pan of worms."

"My goodness, we're hostile tonight!" said Virginia cheerfully and whipped 120 Rorschach cards out of her reticule. "Come," she said, "let us examine your psychic apparatus."

Oddly tried again. "You're fat and dumb and disagreeable," he said, "and you'll be bald before you're thirty."

"Hmm," said Virginia thoughtfully and lit a cigarette. "This sounds like an anxiety neurosis with totemism, anagogic trauma, and a belt in the back."

"I hate you," said Oddly. "I hate your looks and your clothes and your toenails and your relatives and the cigarettes you smoke."

"Now, hold on, buster!" cried Virginia, her eyes crackling, her color mounting, her nostrils aflame. "Just keep a civil tongue in your stupid head when you talk about Marlboro! Nobody's knocking that filter, that flavor, that pack or flip-top box while there's breath in my body! It's a full-flavored smoke, it's a doozy, it's a dilly, it's a gas—and anybody who says a word against it gets this."

By "this" Virginia meant a series of combinations to the head and liver, which she now delivered to Oddly and turned on her heel and stormed away.

Oddly brought her down with a flying tackle. "I love you with all my heart," he said.

"And Marlboro?" said she.

"And Marlboro even more," said he.

And they kissed and plaited love knots in one another's hair and were married at Whitsuntide and smoked happily ever after.

"Dark At Top of Stairs" Stirring Drama At Fox

By Joe Zawacki

Riding the crest of popularity on the strength of his performance in the "Music Man", Robert Preston returns to the screen for the first time in nine years in the Warner Bros.-Michael Garrison production of "The Dark At The Top Of The Stairs", screen adaption of the William Inge play (opens tomorrow at the Fox).

It is an entirely different Preston from the one seen in the movies now making the rounds of the late shows. Obviously more confident now and in the position of choosing his own roles, Preston has a field day portraying Rubin Flood, the outwardly brash but winning harness salesman whose world starts to crumble when the horseless buggy forces his employers into bankruptcy.

Briefly, the story is a sermon by Inge on the emotional and financial problems of an Oklahoman family in the 1920's and the effects of these problems on the lives of the family. Rubin's lost job didn't pay much anyway and his daily greeting from wife Cora (Dorothy McGuire) consists of monetary tirades instead of a kiss. Their two children are both tied to their mother's shrewdish apron strings.

Paced Well

The job loss precipitates a violent quarrel in which Cora gets a much deserved smack and Rubin walks out. From this basic framework, Delbert Mann has paced his characters effectively and the screenplay by Harriet Frank Jr., and Irving Ravetch not only captures the flavor of Inge's original but in some instances actually improves it.

Performances are uniformly good with Preston making the most of the meatiest role. Miss McGuire does extremely well with the difficult role of the essentially warm-hearted wife who no longer enjoys relations with her husband she considers him too tight with money which he actually doesn't have . As the daughter, Shirley Knight is very warm as the shy lass whose young heart is so tragically broken with the suicide of her first love. As the suicide, Lee Kinsolving gives a gem of a performance. His Sammy Golden is a confused Jewish boy whose rejection by his mother and the bigotry of certain townsmen drive him to his death.

In supporting roles, Angela Lansbury and Eve Arden add much. Miss Arden's anti-Catholic dissertation is hilarious and a perfect example of how ignorance takes root in a person's mind. One word of caution: don't sit in the balcony of the Fox. The seats are easily the most uncomfortable in the city.

RANDOM NOTES: Through the cooperation of Messrs. Keller, de Luca, Goldenburg and Scalen, the respective managers of the Showboat, Red Hill Inn, and Pep's this reporter will be able to conduct tape-recorded interviews with various jazz artists appearing in this locale during the year. These tapes will be heard on my Jazz show on WWVU (Tuesday & Thursday, 10:00 p.m.). Appearing this week: Les McCann Trio (Showboat), Maynard Ferguson (Pep's), and for the first time in 29 years, Red Nichols (Red Hill).

Worthwhile coming events include the reissue of the classic Chaplin comedy, "Modern Times", opening October 12 at the Wayne Ave. Playhouse (4900 Wayne Ave.) Mort Sahl will appear at the Academy Of Music on Sunday, October 16 and Count Basie and Stan Kenton will give a joint concert at the same place on Monday, October 24. For the latter, there will be two shows at 8:00 and 10:00.

..The Eagles are at Franklin Field this Sunday hosting the St. Louis Cards. For the uninformed, this Cardinal team does not have Stan Musial. Everybody else does it so I'm picking the Pirates in six games, but don't ask me to bet against the Yankees. My heart and my wallet don't get along.

Case For Democrats—By Joe Massey

"Task America Faces Calls For Leadership Of Dynamic Man, Party"

In the coming election it is absolutely imperative that America elect a strong and competent leader as President. There is but one candidate and one party who possess the strength and leadership for the difficult task ahead. This combination is, of course, the Democratic Party and Senator John F. Kennedy, Let's see why.

This election should be of prime importance to college students because it is we who shall be entering the world to serve our apprenticeship for leadership within the next four years. It is our future whose insurance of fredom and well-being will be determined at the polls on November eighth.

Republicans Lack Intelligence

What have the Republicans been doing in the last seven and a half years to safeguard our welfare? In the face of the Soviet threat, which embodies such a large part of the forces shaping our foreign policy, the Eisenhower - Nixon - Hagerty administration has been noteworthy for the lack of an intelligent, positive guide to action.

Our national security is threatened because of Republican considerations of budget over defense. Our world prestige has slipped through the breakdown of a "personal diplomacy" based on mis-information and personality rather than on an informed and positively planned foreign policy.

Communism Spreads

During these years of inaction and delay we have stood by and watched the spread of Communism in Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Latin America, and most recently to Cuba, just ninety miles from our shores. We have sat helplessly by and watched Communism exploit the forces of nationalism to our determent in both neutralist and pro-western nations.

What is the reason for our failure to promote the democratic ideals we believe in? How have we managed to find ourselves in a second place position in both prestige and power? The answer is simple and obvious. The blame must be placed squarely on an administration which has attempted a foreign policy without foresight or reality.

These two areas present the gravest of all problems to the new administration. How would a Democratic President attack them? In contrast to the rosy, Republican view of Nixon that we are still in a comfortably secure and strong position, Senator Kennedy presents a realistic program designed to enable us to recover our world leadership. This program is one based on affirmative policies incorporating our democratic national purpose.

Kennedy Improves On Ike

Among the most important of the points of this program are those in which the Eisenhower-Nixon administration has failed. They include: a re-examination of our defenses and the acceleration of those systems which will best serve to deter aggression; intelligent and cogent plans for the economic development of under-developed areas of the world; recognition of the triumph of nationalism in the new states of the world and American assistance in their struggle for independence; the revitalization of NATO into more than a mere military alliance.

Despite his fourteen years in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, his Republican critics point out Senator Kennedy's "lack of experience". During that period of time he served with distinction and played a leading role in domestic as well as foreign affairs in that body. This may be compared with the Vice President's experience in an administration which has implimented no cogent policy, either foreign or domestic, but has instead accrued a series of setbacks and failures due to the lack of a strong and creative executive. Can we expect more decisive and progressive results from a sound and planned program such as Senator Kennedy's or from a continuation, even at an accelerated rate, of the too little, too late policies of the present administration that Nixon may be counted to carry on?

Dependable?

In the next four years, can we depend to safeguard our national interest, insure prosperity, regain world leadership, and promote the ideals of democracy throughout the world on a man and party who have for the last eight years done none of these and who have neither realistic plans nor even new ideas for the future? The task that America faces requires the leadership of a man and party who know the latent potentialities of this great country and how best to make use of them. Now is the time for realism in government and its inevitable consequences of real progress. This is why America must elect John F. Kennedy and the Democratic party.

Local Theaters Offer Poor Fare

by Al LaMastra

Throughout the summer, the Hollywood moguls have continued to pummel the movie-going public of America with hundreds of overstatements (every one a bigger "fib" than the last), hoping to regain for the box-office those fortunate postwar forty millions, who have since managed to find more rewarding means of entertainment. Now that the fall has arrived it looks as if the Beverly Hills-Madison Avenue ulcerated set are going to have something to rage about.

Exhorbitant Prices Out

Tourists will no longer be entering the New York first run theaters at exhorbitant prices; but will trek back to the suburbs, bowling, golf, and an occasional "good" neighborhood movie. As the people go, even as the college students return to the Main Line, so do filmdom's summer display products. Movies costing $2.00 in August may now be seen for $.75 in anyone of the local theaters, which books every type of motion picture way past its saturation point. The problem is: "Is it worth $.75?" Even on a double feature bill!

Three-fourths Worthless

It is almost certain that 75% of the Hollywood product is not; especially with foreign imports of stature excelling our own products in quality by an unbridgeable gap. Let's take a brief look at what will be seen in the local theaters for the next three months; and in that way you, the audience, can make a sounder judgment in your choice of films.

Musical-comedywise, "Jazz On A Summer's Day" proved to be a completely delightful film fantasy of the finest jazz today. Recommended for longhairs, shorts, cools, and squares looking for a visual aural, and emotional treat.

"Ring-a-ding-ding"

"Can-Can" can be forgotten. The magnificent Cole Porter musical was turned into a distasteful Hollywood popularity contest with Frank "ring-a-ding-ding" Sinatra and Shirley "tone-deaf" MacLaine winning the year's treasured "C.od" award, leaving all competitors in the dust.

"Song Without End" was Hollywood's elaborately produced, superbly set and costumed, romanticized (portrayed sympathetically when it should have been unbiased) biography of Franz Liszt. It is interesting to watch this lushly made film because of its near perfect balance between his musical career and private life. See it for musical values only and forget about Capucine being another Garbo!

"Lost World"

In the science fiction field, "The Lost World" should have stayed dead and buried and revived only in the summertime for kiddie matinees. However, "The Time Machine" proved to be a real thriller with spectacular scenic effects taking place in the year 802,701.

"You're nobody if you haven't seen Psycho!" (overheard in the lobby of the DeMille Theater). Hitchcock has made this pic for those with strong hearts and dreamless nights, so see it not for its entertainment values (you call being scared out of your wits entertainment?), but to witness master Alfred's new successful method in keeping audiences awake.

The best part about the tedious, slushy, uneven melodrama "Strangers When We Meet" is watching Kim Novak make another attempt at acting.

Lana Turner Gorgeous

Lana Turner is gorgeous in Jean Louis gowns and authentic jewelry, and they even have Sandra Dee and John Saxon for the younger set in "Portrait In Black"; but the whole picture is about as convincing as Jayne Mansfield applying for a nursing scholarship at Villanova.

How to massacre a classic? See MGM's "Huckleberry Finn" and this lagging uneven juvenile treatment will make you and Mark Twain roll over in your seat and grave, respectively.

Comedy came forth from the Hollywood studios in fairly good shape (I won't mention Jerry Lewis's "Bellboy") with "Pollyanna", "Ocean's 11", "The Apartment" (that was a comedy?), and "It Started In Naples" all very amusing and hilarious in their own uneven, drawn out, often ugly, and lacking good comic writers way, respectively.

Poor Little Rich Boy

How did Hollywood fare in drama? Well, we'll pass them with an interesting but often muddled tale of poor little rich boy's attempt to get richer while trying to salvage a marriage based on the buying power of the dollar.

More Campus News: Nursing Dean Named Frat Plans Social

Nursing Dean Named

Miss Marion M. Schrum has been named Dean of the Division of Nursing. Miss Schrum is a graduate of Mount St. Clare Junior College and St. Louis University, after which she was engaged for a time on the staff at Mercy Hospital, Burlington. From there she went to Catholic University where she received a master of science degree.

After serving on the faculty of the State University of Iowa, the dean received a doctorate in education from Stanford University, taught at St. Louis University, and resigned to take her new post here at Villanova.

Miss Schrum believes that capping has not had enough time to become a tradition here, and would like to initiate a new ceremony which would be particular to VU. Nurses wil be asked for suggestions on this score.

There will be changes which Miss Schrum believes will be applealing to the nurses. The new dean has an interest mainly in theater and music, also a spectator interest in sports, especially football.

Dean Schrum indicated that she was pleased with the reception she received here at Villanova.

Grammar Workshop Opens

A Grammar Workshop for the benefit of students who are weak in grammar was opened by Mr. Robert E. Wilkinson of the English Department last Monday, October 3. The classes, consisting of fifty and ninety minute periods, wil be conducted for six weeks and will end in early November.

A minimum of three and a maximum of ten students from each freshman English group are attending these classes. Specifically, students whose professors demed them "seriously deficient in layman's knowledge of grammar" were strongly requested to accept the aid offer. Attendance, however, was not compulsory. Official grades or credits for the course will not be given.

LKD Holds Social

Lamdba Kappa Delta, Villanova's pre-medical fraternity is holding its "Post-Game Social" on October 8. This dance, their first social event of the year, wil be held at the Valley Forge Hotel.

The price is nine dollars a couple and a turnout of over a hundred couples are expected. The function is limited to fraternity members and their parents.

According to Ralph Lanciano, Vice-President of the Fraternity, the purpose of the affair is to promote closer relationships among fraternity members' parents and teachers.

The dance was planned by the executive committee and the President of the Fraternity, Edward Morhauser. Other plans for the year include a homecoming dance and a number of lectures for the members.

Conlin Clobbers Columnist Colleagues

For some mystic reason, American youth are bent to conceal their heartfelt opinions and preferences on any of various miscellany, sometimes important, sometimes downright picayune. Whether this is due to rightful shame for their usually loutish views o rsome more perfect hypocrisy can only be a matter for conjecture.

The Nihilist finds revolting evidence of this phenomenum blatantly indicated in a given edition o fany Sunday newspaper. Turn to Dear Abby, Ethical Problems, or similar bolderdash. Ne'er an edition is released without a . . .

Dear Miz Sanger:

Why don't I have dates? Darn it! I admit I'm not especially pretty but I'm a lot of real fun; I juggle, tell dirty stories, play bridge, twist remarkably, watch Bandstand and dig all the latest singers. Everybody tells me I have a real zorchy personality. So why no dates, huh? I will kill myself soon!

Sincerely, etc. etc.

Miz Sanger invariably replies that the despondent damsel should try to be just a wee bit nicer; take up kick-the-can, bocce. Little Miss Epistulary, if she takes Miz Sanger's advice is only postponing her suicide. It wouldn't mater if she become so nice a good fairy turned her into a birthday cake.

Miz Sanger, on the other hand, could have given better advice if she had enclosed an asp by return mail. But she probably reads the reassuring polls of lovable, but-so-bad-in-the-long-run teenagers and college students published by This Week and other all-American supplements before diffusing her sage advice.

Said polls inevitably declare that our kids aren't so gol-danged evil after all. They aren't donderheaded materialists nor base sensualists.

Excerpts proclaim unequivocally that 96% f "our" youth looks for sounder stuff in potential beaux et belles as traits of prime import. Character (not that it need be mentioned) is high on the list, "lotta fun", nifty dances, sportsmanship, fair play, and inclination toward Abolitionism also rank right up there . See how serious youth is! See! The typical poll usually reports that only somebody like a disreputable Burmese anarchist from Queens said, "I like a good looking chick." or somewhat the equivalent in the Sarkhanese idiom.

"How come, huh?" The Nihilist then belligerently asks, "Hows comes the only sporty, nifty, personable, fair, just, funny, clever, personable, "not really pretty", girls at Field House dances are with similarly inadequately endowed students? Where are all the clean cut bumpkins that answered the poll last week.

Let us face boldly the bitter facts, Miz Sanger. Let us, despondent epistulary. Only one thing counts in the oft discussed long-run and that is the quite tangible concept of physical attributes.

If perchance some ingenious subordinate of Clyde Beatty should, through some fifty-odd generations of breeding, produce a tigress roughly similar in physiognomy and proportion to Cyd Charisse and subsequently release it in a given collegiate society, despite incoherent growlings and occassional, unfortunate multilations of some swains' limbs, she would indubitably be high in the running for homecoming queen.

What does Tony ask when Billy says smugly that he was out with some new girl last Saturday? Does he query conscientiously, "Is she personable?", "Can she bake a cherry pie, darling . . . ?"

'Nuff said. Of course, Tony leeringly poses, "Yo, what does she look like?" We have looked at the record. Fine college and lesser youth, consistent in itself, practices not what it preaches.

The Nihilist cannot pretend to know whether Miz Sanger et. al. know this but he supposes that even if they do or ever learn, they'll continue to recommend advanced Arthur Murray, fair play and so on.

For himself, The Nihilist realizing through introspection his love of mankind and through experience, adulation of the masses for popularity, will study plastic surgery upon graduation. And he urges Miz Sanger that be she worth her salt, she'll recommend him to dateless, "not extraordinarily pretty" letter writers and collect fifteen percent of his fees.

Why college men choose careers with Du Pont

Every year, several hundred new college graduates choose Du Pont. Many Masters and Ph.D.'s do, too.

From time to time we learn from recent graduates the factors which led to their decision to join this company. They cite more than half a dozen reasons. Here are four of the most important:

OPPORTUNITY AND RECOGNITION

They were aware that college-trained beginners go right to work with men who have achieved.

For example, research chemists work with individuals who've done successful research. New engineers work with pros, some of whom have designed new plants, or devised new manufacturing methods, or distinguished themselves in some other way. And other graduates, with B.A. or M.B.A. degrees, go to work with leaders who've been successful in Sales or Advertising or Treasurer's, or another of Du Pont's many departments.

They had been told—and rightly—that Du Pont rewards individual achievement. And they were eager to start achieving.

RESEARCH CREATES NEW PRODUCTS; NEW PRODUCTS CREATE NEW JOBS

Men like working for a company that believes in research, enough to invest in it...$90 million a year!

The fact is that important new products come from Du Pont laboratories and go to Du Pont manufacturing plants with frequency.

Here are but a few since World War II: "Orlon"* acrylic fiber followed nylon (soon after the war). Then came "Dacron"* polyester fiber, "Mylar"* polyester film, "Lucite"* acrylic lacquer and "Delrin"* acetal resin.

These, and many others, have created thousands of new jobs...in research, manufacturing, sales . . . in fact, in all Du Pont departments.

DU PONT BACKS EMPLOYEES WITH HUGE INVESTMENT

New graduates feel that every facility is provided for doing the job well.

Last year, Du Pont's operating investment per employee was $32,500. Since much of this was expended to provide the most modern and best of equipment to work with, it further increases the chance for individual achievement.

This applies to men in lab, plant and office.

DU PONT PROVIDES STEADY EMPLOYMENT

Career seekers appreciate the importance of security.

Today, the average annual turnover rate at Du Pont is less than one-third that of industry nationally.

These, and many other reasons, draw new talent to Du Pont each year.

Prospective graduates, M.S.'s and Ph.D.'s interested in learning more about job opportunities at Du Pont are urged to see their Placement Counselor, or to write direct to E. In The Sportlite

By Victor Stano

No football team is complete without its managers and the current squad contains two very capable men.

The first of these is Tony Lang, a junior, who attended Chaminade High School in Mineola, N.Y. Although having no managerial experience in high school, Tony was always interested in sports. While not participating on any varsity teams, he played quite frequently in the sandlot realm of activity. But when he came to Villanova, he took a job as a sportscaster on WVIL. Then later on in his soph year, he began to think more seriously about sports and considered the manager's position. He admits that there is more to it than just helping out at the games. For instance, Tony was back at school as soon as the team started practice. He says you have to do most of the work during the practice sessions. Also for away games, the managers have to pack all the equipment. But he enjoys getting to see all the games both home and away.

Tony Lang

As for this year's squad, he says that it is much improved over last year. He thinks that they have more spirit. As far as the first two games were concerned, Tony says that in the Marquette game they didn't find themselves until the second half, while in the Navy game the team practically gave it away due to fumbles.

Our other fair representative of the gridiron set is Bill Borden, a junior from St. Peter's prep, in Jersey City. Bill's position is quite different from Tony's. He came here on a football scholarship but because of injury, he cou'dn't play. So he decided to become a manager, because he wanted to stay with the team in some capacity!

He agrees with Tony that having two men managing sixty players is a rather large order.

Bill Borden

Bill works more in the fieldhouse in giving out equipment. He too started to work on August 31, when the team started. Bill considers one big advantage as manager is to eat at the training table with the team. Being a resident he says that he eats better than ordinary residents do. I'm sure most oncampus students will agree with this statement.

As far as the team is concerned he says that this year the coaching is much better than previously. Bill says that there is a big difference due to the changeover of the staff. He agrees with Tony that the new players have more spirit.

Bill sums up the first game's loss due to inexperience, while in the second game he says, "I felt that the team was overconfident." Thus Bill thinks that VU went down to Annapolis with the absolute intention of winning. He admits that Navy had too much personnel for us however.

LUCKY STRIKE PRESENTS:

Dear Dr. Frood:

DR. FROOD'S THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: 'Tis better to have loved and lost than to have spent the whole weekend studying.

Dear Dr. Frood: My roommate is a good guy, but there's one thing about him I can't stand. He wears button-down collars but never buttons the little lapel buttons. Why is this?

Clothes Conscious

DEAR CLOTHES: Don't let this worry you. It's just that his thumbs are too big.

Dear Dr. Frood: Once and for all—is it right or wrong for a man to marry a girl for her money?

Righteous

DEAR RIGHTEOUS: Nowadays this isn't simply a matter of right or wrong. There are the tax angles to consider.

Dear Dr. Frood: I don't understand my boy friend. When we are all alone and the moon is full, he tells me he worships me. But during the day, he crosses the street when he sees me coming. What is wrong?

Lovelorn

DEAR LOVELORN: Did it ever occur to you that he may be a werewolf?

Dear Dr. Frood: The other day my roommate and I had an argument about the difference between traditional art and modern art. What, in your opinion, is the basic difference between these two forms?

Art Major

DEAR ART: The examples above should settle your argument. The portrait at left is traditional. The artist has drawn Lincoln as he actually appeared. The portrait at right is modern. As you can see, the modern artist has drawn Lincoln's great-great-grandson.

Dear Dr. Frood: My favorite brand is Lucky Strike. But unfortunately I am left-handed. Why doesn't Lucky Strike come out with cigarettes for left-handed people?

Lefty

DEAR LEFTY: Left-handed Luckies are available. Simply ask for "Left-handed Luckies." They come in a white pack with a red bull's-eye. The only difference between these and ordinary Luckies is that you must always smoke them while facing a mirror.

"LUCKIES ARE BETTER THAN MONEY," says Dr. Frood (who gets paid in Luckies). It's a fact that college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular. This cigarette is all cigarette—the cigarette that still tastes great. Try a pack today—it's the only thing you and Dr. Frood will ever have in common.

Pirates' Success Story

By Ed Lohr

A screeching crack of the bat on Sept. 25, 1960, by Eddie Mathews in the 10th inning sent the Pittsburgh Pirates staggering into their locker room a furious and disgusted team.

They sat stunned looking blankly at their lockers, as they were unaware that they had just accomplished what 33 previous Pittsburgh baseball teams tried to do and failed.

When it was announced that they had won the National League flag, no one moved for about fifteen minutes until Gino Cimoli, hollered, "What's the matter—is everyone dead," and then pandemonium broke loose, including champagne, beer, singing, shower dunking, and just pure bedlam.

This celebration continued until their plane landed to the cries of one half-million screaming Pittsburgh fans, all jammed into the Golden Triangle to pay homage to the greatest team in baseball today.

Five Year Program

It all started in 1955 under baseball's old wizard Branch Rickey, Sr. He built a powerful farm system out of which came Bill Mazeroski at 19 years of age, Roberto Clemente, 20, Skinner was 22, and Bob Friend was an old man of 24.

Rickey grabbed Dick Groat, an All-American basketball and baseball player from the Duke campus at graduation and this season the odds favor Groat for the Most Valuable Player award of the senior circuit.

Trades the Keyword

With half of this year's championship team accounted for we must give the most credit to Pittsburgh's new youthful general manager—Joe L. Brown.

Joe astonished the baseball world with his "robbery" (second only to the Brink's holdup) of Bill Virdon from St. Louis. He followed with controversial Frank Thomas to the Reds for Harvey Haddix, Don "Tiger" Hoak, and Smoky Burgess trade. Now that Thomas is slumping with the Cubs, the controversy has ended.

Brown's first year saw the Pirates surge from a cellar tie the previous year to second place. Everyone thought 1959 was THE year but injuries and an indifferent attitude smashed their chances and they finished fourth.

The Year 1960

Brown was determined to capture the flag this year and consequently gave up Manuel Javier, the minor league's most promising infielder to the St. Louis Cardinals for veteran righthander Wilmer "Vinegar Bend" Mizell. He also snatched up Gino Cimoli and Micky Vernon, two time American League batting champion.

Rated fourth by most prognosticators at the outset of the campaign they knew what they had to do under a fiery, redheaded, Irishman—Danny Murtaugh.

On May 30, the Pirates entered first place for the first time and never relinquished that position, except for one day in July.

"Some Kind of" Team

Anyone could see this was not an ordinary team as they won most of their games in late inning rallies, which were supported by the expert "fork balling" of Elroy Face, Fred Green, and in the second half of the season, a revived Clem Labine.

"Deacon" Vernon Law, official of the Mormon Church, won twenty games and Bob Friend had 17 at this printing. Clemente and Groat made their respective bids for the National League's batting title and Groat is a'most a shoe-in. The Pirates also ran away with the league's batting championship.

With the fastest pair of hands in baseball at second base the Buccos displayed a phenomenal double play combination and covered the "alabaster plaster" infield like a blanket.

First base was held down by Rocky Nelson, the most famous minor league player in history, and Dick Stuart improved in every game as he hit tape measure blasts.

Temporary Setbacks

All great teams take their knocks and the Pirates were no exception. First, "Fireballer" George Witt came up with a sore arm. Then, Nelson hurt his foot and the biggest blow came when Groat fractured his wrist, but it was too late for the Braves and Cards as "Tiger" Hoak took over the fighting Bucs and carried them to the pennant.

All in all it was delightful—as radio announcer Bob Prince would say "Oh, how swe . . . et it is!!"

Prediction

For you Yankee fans a word to the wise is sometimes sufficient. Groat is back and the series starts in the major league's largest ball park—Forbes Field. Good luck to Yankee power.

This writer sees the Pirates in six games. Beat 'em Bucs!!

Sports Chatter

Someday Soon . . .

by Bud Simmonds

The fal lseason is now in full swing. Mixer notices adorn the Dougherty Hall bulletin board. Students go to their classes confident they're in the right room. Freshmen start to lose their fear of the Gestapo-like white hats. Mendel Hall secretaries look better than ever. The football team has lost their third straight to Dayton.

This statement comes as a matter of fact. From week to week all that is needed is a change of the ordinal and the opponent. The pattern for each weekend is similar.

On Friday the daily papers make mention of the new faces in coach Alex Bell's reshuffled, starting lineup as the rookie mentor searches his injury-riddled ranks for the right and winning combination. Come Saturday evening and Villanova is mentioned on the local scoreboard shows as having fallen on the field of battle. The following Sunday the previously mentioned journals re-echo praises in defeat for the same names-Glueck, O'Rourk, Rettino, and captain Luzzi.

Saturday night date conversations usually open up with, "Who did Villanova lose to today?" Buddies from your neighborhood drop caustic asides about rescheduling West Chester. Yes, these are truly the times that try a Villanovan's soul.

But what of the players, the ones who take in on the chin both physically and mentally. How do they feel?

You grind all week with a grim determination to make up for last week's mistakes. Your coaches switch men around to fill in the holes left by last week's casualties. They push and drive you to hustle and stave off any impending letdown. They don't ask for reasons. They want results. The Monday afternoon conferences get a little tougher to take. Each week the headknocking is a little harder and the tackles a little noiser. The taste of dirt isn't as hard to take because next Saturday it will pay off. Instead of dirt it will be victory.

The chatter around the dinner table is optimistic and determined. Sure we're hurting but we'll take them. We're due. This time out we'll make the breaks. Our backs can't keep fumbling. The plays will start clicking and then we'll roll.

The pre-game warmups add juice to your confidence but a little nervousness as well. Let's get this thing started. The action begins and the man across from you isn't that hard to move. He's no All-American. That end isn't that tough to turn and the holes are starting to open. This looks like the day.

Then a handoff is bobbled, the ball is loose, and an enemy jersey smothers it. They start to move on a quick drive and then comes a score. The gate opens and we're down two. O.K. we'll come back.

At half time missed assignments are straightened out, a weakness in their defense is found, and you're ready to go. But now your ends are dropping and the ballhandling is a little more haphazard. Their punter boots one down in the corner and we're deep in the hole now, and for the rest of the game.

The rest is history repeating itself. As you trudge off the field you think ahead to next week's workouts. More headknocking, more tackling, more plays, more dirt. But next week's game will be different. Next week we'll jell.

'Mural Swimming Meet

tramural mark of 0:58.3 held by Ed Brier. His time also happened to be well under the all-time Villanova varsity record of 0.53.7. Geoghegan, swimming next to McDonough, also came in under the previous intramural record with a timing of 0.57 uat.

John Sullivan splashed home to a victory in the 50-yard freestyle in the time of 0:25.5. In the 50-yard breaststroke Tom Leidy led all the way to finish with a new intramural record of 0:34.1. The backstrokers were left in the wash created by Don Hurley who churned home the victor in the time of 0:30.4.

The 100-yard individual medley was won by the aforementioned Geoghegan in yet another record of 1:08. Dick McDonough added to his impressive performance in the 100-yard freestyle by winning the 50-yard butterfly in the record-breaking time of 0:25. Tom York copped the diving title against a good field.

Freshman Footballers Could Be Best In Several Years Here

Racing onto the practice field are a group of gigantic men suited for combat on the gridiron. It is a sizeable number of players displaying prowess and agility with every step. This must be the varsity! But wait! There seems to be a discrepancy: this is the freshman team! Taking their positions on the field their job is to sharpen the varsity's attack, but this freshman team is knocking the varsity into submission. Known as the Kittens, their roar and power is as great as the mature Wildcats.

Scanning this formidable group, there are visions that someday these untried men will be stalwarts on the varsity. Coach Michaels is heard above the roar of colliding bodies, shouting commands to his proteges, preparing them for their games with Bullis Prep, West Chester, and the Army Plebes.

Kittens Introduced

Not unknown to the varsity but obscure to the rest of the student body are the names of those "frosh' who everyday strike "fear" into the varsity. So without anymore said here is an introduction to the Kittens of 1960.

Displaying exceptional speed are John Boyle, Joe Cawley, Joe Corsetti, who is a 200-pounder from Mass., and Bob Dunn—fierce, fine smashing backs all of whom are over six feet tall.

Bill Sherlock and Lou Chiarolnza are waging a tremendous battle for the Q. B. role with Sherlock holding a slight edge.

The end position is ably held down by 6'4" John Clifford, a New Jersey resident who reminds the coaches of another great end, Gene O'Pella.

John Helm, Rich Bertozzi, John Imneduglia, Charles McCurras, Ted Kompa, Den Pana, and Brian Sullivan are the mainstays of the interior line and are presently battling away for starting assignments. Traveling from Michigan to the campus of V. U. is Rich Corona, a guard with a great deal of potential. Two tackles who have won many coveted honors are Norm Preschalski from Cleveland and Tony Scarcelli, a local lad who has one desire and that is to play for V. U.

Comprising the rest of the squad are Lou Russo, John Gastley, John Deering, Cal Thomas, John Fallon, Charles Nuna, Ger Susca, Gus Morano, Joe Shelly, Joe Tysowski, George Zabryck, and Ed Ciammarchelli, all fine prospects.

Coach Optimistic

Coach Ed Michaels speaks highly of this squad and is very optimistic towards the coming schedule, of which he heartily says "We'll win them all." Packed with 17 scholarship players and loaded with potential, the Kittens should go all the way. Good Luck, Coach Michaels, and to your loud roaring Kittens.

Double intramural winner Dick McDonough splashes to record-breaking victory in the 50 yard butterfly event.

Dayton's Perfect Record Broken By Bell's Boys

Villanova's Bellboys kept their defeat string intact Saturday, by bowing to Dayton 14-0. In doing so the 'Cats broke Dayton's perfect record of 0-2 this season.

It was the same old story for the Wildcats, with only the setting and the villain being changed. Their giveaway program, which is beginning to become a rival of the Marshall Plan, provided the Flyers with the ball seven times. Four on fumbles and three on intercepted passes.

Punting Weak

The Mainline philanthrophists' poor punting gave Dayton their two scores which came on drives of 40 and 33 yards. The 'Cats on the other hand didn't penetrate past the Flyers' 39 yard line in their poorest offensive showing to date.

Part of the ineffectiveness can be pinned on injuries. Ronnie Myers, Alex Bell's ace punter, wasn't in uniform. Myers, Jack Mount, and Bill Barbarro, all ends didn't make the trip. Add Sam Greuneisen's early injury to this, and you have two inexperienced third string ends left to do the job.

Bright Spots

If one can garner anything good out of a defeat by Dayton, who had been obliging enough to present Villanova with their last two victories, it would be the alertness of defensiveman Tom O'Rourke who retained his national leadership in pass interceptions by thefting two Dayton aerials and making one fine runback.

The interior lineman lead by senior Joe Luzzi were not pushed around. The line was particularly impressive when it stopped Dayton from scoring after the Flyers had the ball with first and goal to go on the VU five yard line. The toughness of the interior line was negated by the ineptness of the ends, who were turned, and cut inside of, for most of a long evening.

The Dayton onslaught was led by sophs Andy Timura and Earl Spivey both fast backs. Fullback Frank Gniabdawski provided most of the up the middle power for Dayton.

Backfield Baffeled

The most disheartening thing about the defat was the inferior performance of the backfield. Coach Bell started sophs Ted Aceto, Bob "Hercules Unchained" Merenda, Lou Rettino, and junior Tom O'Rourke. These four plus numerous substitutes ran into each other, fumbled and fell down. At times they resembled a group of beginners learning a difficult square-dance.

Richie "give me a chance" Richman wasn't given a chance for the third week in a row.

In all it was a night to forget like so many in the recent past. But who knows maybe we're building character.

Mural Swimming Meet Unveils New Stars; Muff Day Today

Mr. Ed Geisz, director of the Intramural Department, has announced that Muff Day, the traditional batle between Frosh and Sophomores, will be held on Wednesday, October 5, at 3:30 p.m. on Mendel Field. There will be a meeting of all those members of the freshman class who wish to participate in these activities on Tuesday, October 4, at 4:30 p.m. Here, the teams will be organized and a general briefing of the next day's activities will be given by the Intramural Department. All frosh should make an effort to be present on both days in order to insure class unity and spirit.

New Star

The Intramural Swimming and Diving Championships took place on September 27 amidst a record crowd of participants and spectators. High-lighting the meet were the record-breaking performances of Dick McDonough, the phenomenal frosh from Seton Hall Prep, and Jack Geoghegan, also of the Class of 1964.

McDonough won the 100-yard freestyle in the fine time of 0:52.9, eclipsing the former in-

C.O.P. Tigers To Face 'Cats In Initial 1960 Home Game

Saturday the bedraggled, bewildered, and bewearied Bellboys of Villanova return home to the friendly pastures of Goodreau Stadium for their first home game of the thus far disastrous campaign. Their opponents for this Parents' Day battle is the College of Pacific Tigers, coached by Jack "Moose" Myers.

The Cats, dubious possessors of an 0-3 record to date, should be favored if past performances are any indication. COP has played one common foe of VU, that being Marquette. The Milwaukee Warriors took the measure of COP, 20-0, while Villanova looked impressive in a second-half rally that closed the gap to a 23-13 loss to Marquette. COP, like Villanova, stepped out of its class to absorb a 55-6 defeat at the hands of highly-ranked Washington.

Bass Gone

COP is in a rebuilding year after a fairly successful season last year. Coach Myers is casting his eyes about in search of a replacement for All-American halfback Dick Bass. Seven of Bass's mates on the first string are also absent via graduation.

With the Tigers are thirteen junior college transfers and a good crop of sophomores from last year's 5-1 freshman team.

Returning letterman Cal Kammerer is back after a year's layoff and is being tagged as the best linebacker on the West Coast. Cal accounted for 34 per cent of the team's tackles in the 1958 campaign. Kammerer is 6-3 and 242 pounds of fast humanity. His favorite pasttime is spending a Saturday afternoon in the opposing team's backfield.

Other proven quantities on the Pacific squad are halback Herm Vrenda—a very good defensive player—and end Gene Stafford who has been doing a bang-up job so far this year. Junior fullback Dick Scott has been improving with every game and should be in top form Saturday.

Also in the backfield is quarterback Bob Gatiss whose main claim to fame is completing 328 yards of passes against Washington State last year. His replacements are 6-4 Jack Sparrow, a sophomore, and Senior Bob Vanderwall.

COP is facing the same problem Vilanova is: inexperience. Their line is green and the bench greener. Three tough games have matured them both somewhat.

This game will be the first of a two-year home-and-home contract. Both clubs are hungry for a win. The Cats have the crowd but inexperience is their long suit too. Anything could happen. Maybe it will.

IN THE GROOVE — by Dan Grove

This weekend was a black one for major Catholic independent teams. The scoreboard read: Purdue 51 Notre Dame 19; Boston U. 20 Holy Cross 14; Wisconsin 35 Marquette 6; Detroit 26 Xavier 6; Dayton 14 Villanova 0; Boston College was licking its wounds after successive dates with Army and Navy. St. Joseph's and LaSalle were wainting for the basketball season.

Of the seven teams that played last week only two won, but look who they won over, other schools in the same group. I will be the first to admit that this week won't happen on every given Saturday, but likewise I believe that it will be the case more often than not.

Even Notre Dame, the most powerful football factory ever conceived in the 40's and early 50's has been getting its lumps frequently. I am not casting aspersions toward this institute or any of the other institues listed above. They are fielding teams that are equal to their facilities, and they are getting their head handed to them in the Sunday papers.

There is a fault somewhere in the scheme of things: It seems to be that these schools just aren't equipped to compete with the richer more athletic minded groups that they schedule. College football is a money-making proposition for most of these opponents. Some major colleges have more coaches on their football staff than the schools in question have for all sports.

They recruit with scientific cunning and have alumni organizations to finance their "field research". Upon analyzing this situation I remember two old sayings, the first one, "you are known by the company you keep", seems to point out that these independent elevens are keeping company with big business football but reaping none of the rewards.

The second saying is not quite as profound as the first but it does make a point, "go big or go home". Evidently these schools can't go big and don't want to go home. The quandry seems to get deeper and deeper.

However ,to quit playing these teams altogether is not the answer. These teams draw big crowds and bring in money. These teams also are willing to schedule the "teams" without a conference" and this is a boon. The independents have a hard time scheduling games. They're like evenly matched tug-of-war teams pulling against each other.

A remedy is in sight, that is a conference composed of these schools, with the possible exception of Notre Dame, who is still on top of the heap financially. A round robin schedule between the remaining seven schools would still leave room for traditional rivalries and would also give the schools a chance to build up slowly to their own capabilities.

Another argument for this move is the close proximity of academic requirements in these colleges and universities. Most of them have very few players who are still active after a four year tour of learning.

This conference would provide many afternoons of good football and rivalries would grow.

Perhaps a move such as this is not too far in the future. Already these schools are scheduling each other more frequently. Villanova plays five of the six other teams this year.

All I ask for is a little consistency in scheduling, recruiting, and academic requirements. If this doesn't happen things are going to get a lot worse before they get better.

Fine Arts Course Brings New Era Of Culture To VU

Dr. George T. Radan, recently appointed professor of the new Fine Arts course, has stated that this course may serve as a prerequisite for a degree from the Art Department should plans for the latter be inaugurated.

The Fine Arts course is basically an introduction to Western Art. "Its main purpose," said Dr. Radan, "is to familiarize the students with the various artistic traditions which have led to presnt day trends."

The main areas of study are: the Architecture, Painting, Sculpture, and Music History of the period beginning with Prehistoric age up to the Gothic era. Dr. Radan pointed out that the more modern age of Art from the Gothic period to the present day will be studied during the second semester.

PROFESSOR RADAN
. . . Teaches Art

He added that students now enrolled in the first semester program can, but are not required to take the Fine Arts course for a second semester. He remarked that there are now eighty students who are taking the course.

The course as it now exists does not require a text, according to Dr. Radan. But he added that classroom work is complemented by notes, outside readings, slides, and occasional field trips to Museums in the Philadelphia area.

In addition to teaching the Fine Arts course, he is also a German instructor with the Department of Modern Languages. Dr. Radan speaks Hungarian ,German, English, Italian and Hebrew. He also possesses a reading knowledge of both Latin and French.

Before coming to Villanova, Dr .Radan taught at Danbury College in Danbury, Conn. for a fifteen-month period. He also was an instructor at the Berliotz School of Languages in Stamford, Conn.

Prior to this he traveled extensively in the Near East. He was the Assistant Director of the Maritime Museum in Haifa, Israel. While in Haifa, he also lectured at the Naval Academy and was associated with the Museum of Ancient Art.

Dr. Radan has also served as an advisor in Ancient Maritime Affairs to the Mariners' Museum in Newport News, Va.

He has had a textbook concerning Ancient Naval Warfare and numerous articles on Archaeology published.

Law School Red Mass To Be Celebrated Here Friday Night

The Annual Red Mass for the students and alumni of The Villanova University School of Law will be celebrated on Friday evening, October 14, at 7 P.M. in the Church of Saint Thomas of Villanova on the campus. The Mass is traditionally celebrated to ask the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the students, faculty and alumni of the School of Law.

The Mass is known as the Red Mass for two reasons. The vestments of the clergy and the altar cloths are of that color which has always been associated with the Holy Spirit. Likewise, the robes of the English judges were red, and in the popular mind this fact was associated with the Mass which judges attended as a group, attired in their robes.

The celebrant of the Mass will be the Very Reverend John A. Klekotka ,O.S.A. President of the University. The Vice President for Academic Affairs, the Reverend Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A. will serve as deacon, and the Reverend Joseph W.

Brothers Four To Perform At Homecoming Guild Show

The Brothers Four, termed by Columbia Records the most promising new vocal group of the year, will present a folk concert in the Field House, Sunday afternoon, November 5th, for the benefit of the Augustinian Seminary Guild.

The concert, sponsored by the Guild, will be presented in conjunction with the Senior class which is handling the social functions of Homecoming Weekend. This was disclosed by class president Larry Bathgate.

"The concert will be the high point of the weekend," Bathgate promised. "We're very pleased at being able to secure The Brothers Four. We feel that their low pressure, informal show will be well received by everyone."

Above: the Brothers Four, who will perform at the Homecoming Guild show on November 6.

"Greenfields" Their First Hit

The popular singing group achieved national recognition last spring when their recording of "Greenfields" occupied the number one rating on the popular music charts for several weeks.

The quartet got its start and its name from Phi Beta Gamma, the fraternity of which they were brothers at the University of Washington. The "Phi Gam" frat house was the scene of the first collective effort of Mike Kirkland, Dick Foley, John Paine, and Bob Flick.

Their first professional stop was the widely renowned Hungry in San Francisco. There they were spotted and signed by Mort Lewis, manager of Dave Brubeck, who waxed enthusiastic over their casual style, tongue in cheek antics, and topical humor.

Now In Vegas

"That they've come a long way in a short while is attested to by their current engagement, The Tropicana in Las Vegas," Bathgate pointed out.

The senior class prexy plans an intensive and extensive advertising campaign to 'push' the concert.

"If there isn't a good response for tickets here on campus, then we'll carry through plans to appeal to and attract the other 'Big Five' schools," Bathgate vowed.

There are three prices scales for tickets: balcony seats, $1.50; floor seats, $2.00; and reserved seats, $2.50.

Double Date Program To Aid Resident Students

The Student Activities Committee initiated its Double Date Program Monday, "whereby those students who have no access to private transportation for social functions may contact those students who have, for the purpose of obtaining a ride."

The program, say committee-co-chairmen Phil Kenny and Chuck Butler, will enable many residents to "double" with car-owning day-hops who formerly have come to dances single or with other car-owning students. The chairmen added that it will also tend to expand student relations, while providing for greater attendance at social functions.

Name on Lists

Explaining Double Date program, the two stated that any day-hop willing to double with a resident will place his name, class, phone number, and general area of his home on a central list located on the bulletin board in the Student Council Office. Those residents needing a ride may then consult this list for the phone number of a classmate who lives in the vicinity of the resident's date. The resident will then contact the day-hop and the two will arrange the date.

Although the program is currently functioning in conjunction with the Interfraternity Ball, it will remain as a permanent program for as many future social affairs as is feasible. "It is a relatively simple plan," said Kenny, "but its success depends largely on the generosity of the day students." Butler and other day-hop Council members were the first to sign the list.

NFCCS Guided By Student Interest And Modern Needs

Ed. Note: This is the first of three articles which are intended to acquaint the student with the program of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Over two decades ago the Roman Catholic Bishops of the United States of America requested the establishment in this country of a national Catholic student movement. This request was based on the realization that the Catholic college graduate was destined to play an increasingly important role in the Church in America and that he must become more vitally aware of his responsibility as a Catholic in the American society.

It was their belief that a national Catholic student movement could significantly contribute toward the development of Catholic college graduates. This request was fulfilled in the year 1937 with the establishment of the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Fifteen Regions

This Federation is divided into fifteen regions which serve as working units and provide an instrument for co-operation among schools within a given area. Without such subdivisions, there would be little opportunity for personal contact in a national organization. The Philadelphia region is the smallest region as far as geographical size is concerned. Regions provide resources which can better enable individual campus committees to make use of National Federation programming, and may also undertake specific projects of their own design.

By providing further study in specific areas and by application of theoretical knowledge to produce practical action in specific

Faculty Wives Meet, Hear Discussion Of Interior Decorating

The Villanova Faculty Wives Club will hold its first meeting of the academic year on Thursday, October 13, 1960 at 8:30 P.M., according to Mrs. Kenneth F. O'Driscoll. The group will meet in the Lounge of the Naval Science Building at Villanova University.

All wives of Villanova faculty members are encouraged to attend this first meeting. New members will be greeted at the door by Mrs. James Shuster of King of Prussia, membership chairman, and several other members of the club.

"Interior Decorating" will be the theme of the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Jean Macormac of Harwick and Magee Company, Philadelphia.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting under the direction of Mrs. Ralph Bellas of Rosemont.

An official program for the year has been mailed to faculty wives by Mrs. Delores Meyers of Media.

Very Rev. John A. Kletkotka, O.S.A., University President accepts check from Gordon Burlingame representing money contributed to the University Fund by the Parents' Committee. Preston Rhodes, new president of Parents' Committee, looks on.

Substantial Dance Profit Boosts Council Treasury

The Student Council, during its meeting last Wednesday night, announced a profit of $1589.32 from the Student Council Dance. The money realized from this event, which was acclaimed by Chairman Bill Friend as "one of the most successful dances in Villanova's history," has boosted the total of the Council's treasury to $2293.90.

Parking and Privilege

Policing of the parking lot, an action which was begun last year with the co-operation of the University Police, will again go into effect next week, according to Jack Valva. Police will be empowered to ticket automobiles which are incorrectly parked. More information regarding this program will be given at a later date.

A reduction in the registration fee for senior car privilege was also announced. As a result of Council discussions with the administration, the rate was lowered from $5.00 to $.25 per student. Registration was extended to include last Thursday and Friday, to enable more seniors to take advantage of the lower rate.

No Females

Dick Wilder informed the Congress that the movie program will resume with a show on Monday, October 31, in Vasey Hall. Joanne Dynakowski, representing the nursing sorority, asked whether the movies were open to all students. After the initial reaction and some discussion subsided, Tom Natal stated that, by administration ruling, no females were permitted to attend. His announcement was received by some scattered applause.

A representative asked whether students would be permitted to bring their dates to the nearly - completed Sullivan Lounge during special events such as Homecoming. The only answer given was that no answer had been given as yet.

Paul O'Rourke, Chairman of the Fraternities and Societies made a motion that the Philosophy Club, moderated by Dr. O'Shea, be admitted to the Council and seated for the second semester.

O'Rourke explained that even with its limited membership of 32 members, the club, known as the Cassaciacum Circle, is carrying on functions which are in the better interests of the entire University.

O'Rourke cited the organization's program last year, under the presidency of Joe Mastromatto, and mentioned specifically the lecture schedule and the club's commission by the National Philosophy Club. The National Club has assigned Villanova to head a group of nearby secular colleges in a discussion group.

Scully Objects

The motion was passed with Brian Scully as sole objector. Scully felt that an organization with only 32 members should not have equal voting rights with other organizations having 150 members.

A motion made by Jim Strazbella provided that the Student Council establish a special presidential committee to be called the Cultural Affairs Committee. The purpose of the committee would be to promote and stimulate the establishment of activities which would enhance the cultural life of the University. The motion was carried unanimously.

Vets Slate Speakers

The first meeting of the Villanova Veterans' Organization was recently held. Plans for the coming year were discussed.

Several speakers are slated to address the club this year. In addition, the Veterans Club will sponsor monthly Mass to be held shortly.

Arrangements already are being made for the Veterans Third Annual Dinner-Dance to be held this spring.

Blue Key Committee To Act As Student Guides Upon Request

Recently, there has been talk on the campus about a new organization. The name mentioned has been that of the "Blue Key."

What is the "Blue Key"? The best explanation can probably be given in the etymology of the name. The "B'ue" was derived from our Villanova blue, and "Key" stems from the concept of a "key to the city" or in this case, a "key to Villanova."

The "Key" has grown from the original concept of a Student Host Committee which was initiated last year by the Student Council.

This year, "Blue Key" will continue to co-ordinate its activities through the Executive Vice President of Student Affairs of the Council Tom Natal, but will act more as an independent organization than before.

Future Service

What will the "Blue Key" do this year? It will now and in the future act as a service organization. It will bring "student public relations" to Villanova in full measure.

The "Key" will be composed of a carefully select group of Villanovans working side by side with the administration and faculty members tours to campus visitors as well as in greeting dignitaries and visiting groups.

It will also have students available for private university functions such as fund raising dinners, library meetings, etc.

Enthusiastic support from members of the administration has already been received.

Personal Contact

The "Blue Key" will give members in the organization a chance to be of positive aid to the University. Certainly more of th nation's top high schools which have students seeking college admission will be impressed by this personal contact.

It is this personal contact that is never forgotten. It also gives members of the organization a chance to work more closely with members of the administration.

A great amount of activity is already taking place for the "Blue Key." Mr. Moritz is arranging for the job interviewers to be given tours of our campus. Father Smith, Director of Admissions, is anxious for the same function with prospective freshman; and Father Klekotka is fully backing the organization.

The services of the "Blue Key" will be available to all members of the administration, faculty, alumni, and student body.

Effort Appreciated

"The amazing and sincere appreciation expressed by peop'e I have given tours to, whether they be parents and seniors in high school or representatives from our State Department, accentuates the need and makes the few minutes of time involved well worth the effort," said John Drees, last year's chairman.

This year Chuck Kelly and Mike Fallon will head the "Blue Key" as president and vice-president, respectively.

Band's First Show

The Villanova University Marching Band will present its first halftime show of the season at the Villanova-Miami Football Game.

Sophomores Quash Frosh Attempts To Shuck "Regs"

The Intramural Department of Villanova University held its annual MUFF Day competition Wednesday, October 5, on Mendel Field. After the dust had settled, the sophomore class emerged the victors with 90 points against the freshman.

The frosh started fast with victories in the wheelbarrow race, football punt for distance, and the three-legged race; but the sophs, with their greater strength in numbers and experience, won the higher scoring events, thus insuring victory. The frosh were handicapped from the begnning by a general lack of organization, while the sophomores proved too well organized by their chairman, Don Pistelli.

The touch football game, won by the sophomores 6-0 was colored during the second half by several "flare-ups" of tempers between the players of both teams. The intramural staff, however, under J. P. Fr. Kenny made his annual appearance as one of the referees of the push-ball contest and was almost trampled in the ensuing melee.

Highly spirited before the out-set of the games, the freshman class was disappointed while the sophomores showed their exuberant spirit by cheering the freshman at the end of the touch football game.

The games were watched by many of the faculty members, most of the frosh and sophomore classes, and some upper classmen, all of whom showed amusement.

Country Girl First Major Production For Belle Masque

"Country Girl", the Clifford Odets drama, will be the year's initial presentation by Belle Masque, the undergraduate theatrical society.

Performances are scheduled to be held in Vasey Auditorium on the nights of November 10, 11, 12, 13 and including a preview on the ninth.

Mr. Richard A. Duprey, director of the play and head of the Theatre Department, said "'Country Girl' is the first production in a proposed festival of American drama which the Theatre Department and Belle Masque are presenting this year on the Villanova campus. This play and the first two graduate productions have already been chosen from these representative dramas."

McGarry and Crane Star

John McGarry and Kathy Crane have the male and female leads. Others in the cast include Jim McMahon, Gail Walters, Carol Schmenkel, Gerry Paonessa, Dick McIntyre, as Tom Flynn. Miss Crane, a senior, and Miss Walters, a junior, attend nearby Rosemont College.

Working closely with Mr. Duprey are Dick Tichenor, stage manager, and George Hermann, technical director. Tickets for the production will go on sale one and a half weeks before the show in the Pie Shoppe and Theatre Department office.

Mr. Duprey has declared that in this particular period of our history it is advantageous for the students to become acquainted with these "interesting American dramas", both the old and the new.

CCD Teaching Again

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is again conducting a Teacher Training Program. Courses will be held each Monday night in 110 C&F for ten weeks, interrupted only at exams periods.

Those completing the course will be certified by the Arch-Diocese of Philadelphia to teach religion on all Confraternity levels. This certification is recognized in almost every diocese throughout the country.

Over a dozen members attended a "C.C.D. Day" at Holy Family College in Philadelphia on Sunday, Oct. 9. Kathy Cox, Soph. Nurse, and Frank McCormick, senior Physics Major and Vice-President of C.C.D., represented Villanova in the program.

Conductor and Participant

Kathy conducted a demonstration of the methods of teaching Mentally Retarded and McCormick participated in a panel discussion intended to demonstrate the proper and successful methods o fconducting panels.

Among other projects, the Confraternity hopes to continue teaching Mentally Retarded this year. This project will be expanded to place students who wish to work with individual children in their own homes. High School students will also be the subject of Confraternity teaching.

Study Aid Program

Dr. Bernard Bonniwell, Chairman of the Psychology Department will deliver a lecture to all the freshmen on "How to Study Efficiently", on Thursday, Oct. 13 at 7 p.m. in Vasey Auditorium.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Educational Affairs Committee of Student Council. Jim Strazzella, Executive Vice-President of the committee stated that the lecture is being given to the freshman as part of an over-all program to aid the new student in adopting himself to methods necessary for college study.

Strazzella added that attendance at this lecture is not compulsory for the freshmen. "It is, however, intended for their benefit and all are urged to attend," said Strazzella.

The program for the lecture is being directed by the Academic Affairs Committee under the chairmanship of Bob Scalia.

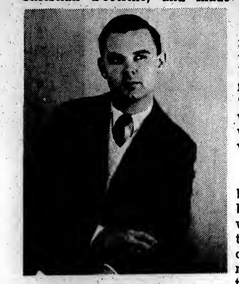
Two New Conferences

The History Department has announced the institution of two weekly conferences; one for Political Science majors, the other for History majors. Both are open to juniors in these fields. They were begun last week and meet one hour weekly.

Each conference is held with the departmental chairman. Guidance is offered.

Grammer Refresher

The English Department has announced that it has initiated a workshop for students in freshman English who want and need extra help in grammar.



Begun last week and lasting six weeks, classes meet Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 3:30 in Vasey Hall Auditorium and Fridays at 8:30 in 104 Classroom Annex. Attendance is voluntary for the non-credit course taught by Professor Robert Wilkinson.

PORTRETTE

Man of Letters

If St. Jude is the patron of hopeless cases then Gene Felch must be his number one disciple.

For the last two years Gene has taken two of the most unpopular, unknown organizations on campus, The National Federation of Catholic College Students and the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and made them reasonably popular.

ORGANIZER FELCH
. . . CCD, NFCCS, etc..

Gene, a senior Arts major from Keene, New Hampshire, plans to spend some additional time with the NFCCS when he graduates. After a full year with the Federation he will take a job in a New York bank.

Senior Delagate

As the NFCCS senior delegate from Villanova University, Gene held the office of curo administrator, and was a member of the regional executive committee which attended the National Congress in Louisville, Kentucky. In addition, Gene labors with the NFCCS National Leadership Program Committee for Villanova personnel, which instructs young men in the psychology of leadership and organization techniques.

Gene's personal flair for ladership is overtly apparent as he is CCD President. This organization trains students as instructors of religion for conducting religion classes for non-Catholic schools and for retarded children.

Gene does not believe that these organizations are unpopular; he contends that they are merely new. "People have failed to establish them on campus, but they have a definite and significant value", claims Gene. "Members can do something which is self-satisfying and which contributes to the development of individuality".

Everyone A Member

"In addition, the school can be very proud of its student body. Many off-campus people who have heard of the activities of the CCD have offered considerable praise to the Villanova members of this organization for their unselfish work in teaching retarded children."

"Now", continued Gene, "the majority of our students know of the NFCCS. Everybody, by virtue of their being students of Villanova, are members, but remain inactive. The response, nevertheless, has been good.

"Manhattan and Notre Dame, however, already have national offices," Gene says, "if they can do it there is no reason why we can't."

Gene asks students who are interested in donating their services to the NFCCS to leave a note in the NFCCS box or respond to notices on the bulletin boards.

Gene leaves the students with a final note: "You don't join the NFCCS, you merely become active."

Philosophy Club Obtains NFCCS Grant For Area Activities

The executive of the Cassaciacum Circle, Villanova's philosophy club, announced that the organization will hold its first meeting this afternoon at 3:30 in 101 Vasey Hall and new members are welcome.

A program for the coming year will be discussed, and various committees will be formed under the Philosophical grant by the NFCCS.

As a result of this grant, the Villanova club is the center of a philosophical commission comprising ten Catholic colleges in the vicinity.

In accomplishing its aim of fostering an interest in philosophy in our life, the club will sponsor a series of seven lectures this year.

Idea of Ages

These lectures will be aimed at the serious Villanova student who is interested in the great idea of the ages, but who does not necessarily have an extensive interest or background in philosophy.

The first lecture will deal with the influence of Greek philosophical thought on modern tradition; the second with Augustinian historical thought; the third with the influence of Jewish and Islamic thought in the modern world.

Continuing the theme of philosophy in the modern world, the fourth lecture will concern the influence of Hobbs and Locke on American politics; the fifth, the influence of Nietzche on Nazism; the sixth, a discussion of the philosophy of Marx; and the seventh will culminate the series with a discussion of historical thought thought through literature.

Lynx Names Officers; Requests Material

The LYNX, campus literary magazine, has chosen its 1960 staff. Co-editors-in chief are Vince Kirk and Mike Wesley. Other members of the editorial board are Bill Speers, layout; Jim Strazella, copy; Gary Evans, poetry; Joe Ruggiero, art; Tim McNamar, exchange; Dan Grove, publicity; and Bill Friend, business manager.

Any member may be contacted for information about the LYNX. Material for publication may be left in Rm. 319 Sheehan Hall, or in the English Office, on the second floor of Vasey Hall. Students in either Mr. Mitchell's or Dr. Phillipson's class may contact their teacher for information or to leave material.

The magazine cover has already been selected and ten per cent of the final content has been chosen.

Theatre Department Plans Williams' 'Glass Menagerie'

Tryouts for the Theatre Department's presentation of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" will take place in Vasey Auditorium next Wednesday, October 19, from 4 to 6 P.M. and from 9 to 9 P.M.

Graduate students, undergraduate students, and faculty members are eligible for parts in the drama, which will be held on December 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, also in Vasey Auditorium.

DIRECTOR DUPREY
. . . Heads Grad Group

Mr. Bernard Coyne, who last year directed the two graduate shows, Thorton Wilder's "Our Town" and William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night", will again direct the graduate production.

Mr. Coyne asserted "'The Glass Menagerie' is the most artistic play that Mr. Williams has written, and certainly one of the most significant plays in the American theatre since World War II."

No Bizarre Types

"The play doesn't suffer," the director continued, "from the usual sociological or psychological case study that he has used since the war in writing his plays.

"It deals with human beings being rather than psychotic, neurotic, exotic, eccentric, or bizarre types. And it indicates the greatness Mr. Williams can achieve when dealing with a novel theme."

Mr. George Hermann, the technical director, is a new member of the graduate school faculty. Mr. Hermann is a graduate of Catholic University Graduate School of the Theatre. He received his M.A. from Clark College and his M.F.A. from Catholic University.

Mr. William Flynn, who graduated from Manhattan College with a B.A., is the stage manager, and Mr. James Wilaert, who received the same degree at Saint Ambrose College, is the assistant technical director.

Tickets for "The Glass Menagerie" will go on sale on or about one week before the performance.

The second graduate production, scheduled for February, will be a new script by Mr. George Hermann, "From Sea To Shining Sea". Mr. Richard A. Duprey, Theatre Department head, says that this is "a unique fable about America's westward march" set to folk music.

CCD Teaching Again

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine is again conducting a Teacher Training Program. Courses will be held each Monday night in 110 C&F for ten weeks, interrupted only at exams periods.

Those completing the course will be certified by the Arch-Diocese of Philadelphia to teach religion on all Confraternity levels. This certification is recognized in almost every diocese throughout the country.

Over a dozen members attended a "C.C.D. Day" at Holy Family College in Philadelphia on Sunday, Oct. 9. Kathy Cox, Soph. Nurse, and Frank McCormick, senior Physics Major and Vice-President of C.C.D., represented Villanova in the program.

Conductor and Participant

Kathy conducted a demonstration of the methods of teaching Mentally Retarded and McCormick participated in a panel discussion intended to demonstrate the proper and successful methods o fconducting panels.

Among other projects, the Confraternity hopes to continue teaching Mentally Retarded this year. This project will be expanded to place students who wish to work with individual children in their own homes. High School students will also be the subject of Confraternity teaching.

Study Aid Program

Dr. Bernard Bonniwell, Chairman of the Psychology Department will deliver a lecture to all the freshmen on "How to Study Efficiently", on Thursday, Oct. 13 at 7 p.m. in Vasey Auditorium.

The lecture is being sponsored by the Educational Affairs Committee of Student Council. Jim Strazzella, Executive Vice-President of the committee stated that the lecture is being given to the freshman as part of an over-all program to aid the new student in adopting himself to methods necessary for college study.

Strazzella added that attendance at this lecture is not compulsory for the freshmen. "It is, however, intended for their benefit and all are urged to attend," said Strazzella.

The program for the lecture is being directed by the Academic Affairs Committee under the chairmanship of Bob Scalia.

Two New Conferences

The History Department has announced the institution of two weekly conferences; one for Political Science majors, the other for History majors. Both are open to juniors in these fields. They were begun last week and meet one hour weekly.

Each conference is held with the departmental chairman. Guidance is offered.

Grammer Refresher

The English Department has announced that it has initiated a workshop for students in freshman English who want and need extra help in grammar.

Begun last week and lasting six weeks, classes meet Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 3:30 in Vasey Hall Auditorium and Fridays at 8:30 in 104 Classroom Annex. Attendance is voluntary for the non-credit course taught by Professor Robert Wilkinson.

Philosophy Club Obtains NFCCS Grant For Area Activities

The executive of the Cassaciacum Circle, Villanova's philosophy club, announced that the organization will hold its first meeting this afternoon at 3:30 in 101 Vasey Hall and new members are welcome.

A program for the coming year will be discussed, and various committees will be formed under the Philosophical grant by the NFCCS.

As a result of this grant, the Villanova club is the center of a philosophical commission comprising ten Catholic colleges in the vicinity.

In accomplishing its aim of fostering an interest in philosophy in our life, the club will sponsor a series of seven lectures this year.

Idea of Ages

These lectures will be aimed at the serious Villanova student who is interested in the great idea of the ages, but who does not necessarily have an extensive interest or background in philosophy.

The first lecture will deal with the influence of Greek philosophical thought on modern tradition; the second with Augustinian historical thought; the third with the influence of Jewish and Islamic thought in the modern world.

Continuing the theme of philosophy in the modern world, the fourth lecture will concern the influence of Hobbs and Locke on American politics; the fifth, the influence of Nietzche on Nazism; the sixth, a discussion of the philosophy of Marx; and the seventh will culminate the series with a discussion of historical thought thought through literature.

PORTRETTE

Man of Letters

If St. Jude is the patron of hopeless cases then Gene Felch must be his number one disciple.

For the last two years Gene has taken two of the most unpopular, unknown organizations on campus, The National Federation of Catholic College Students and the Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, and made them reasonably popular.

ORGANIZER FELCH
. . . CCD, NFCCS, etc..

Gene, a senior Arts major from Keene, New Hampshire, plans to spend some additional time with the NFCCS when he graduates. After a full year with the Federation he will take a job in a New York bank.

Senior Delagate

As the NFCCS senior delegate from Villanova University, Gene held the office of curo administrator, and was a member of the regional executive committee which attended the National Congress in Louisville, Kentucky. In addition, Gene labors with the NFCCS National Leadership Program Committee for Villanova personnel, which instructs young men in the psychology of leadership and organization techniques.

Gene's personal flair for ladership is overtly apparent as he is CCD President. This organization trains students as instructors of religion for conducting religion classes for non-Catholic schools and for retarded children.

Gene does not believe that these organizations are unpopular; he contends that they are merely new. "People have failed to establish them on campus, but they have a definite and significant value", claims Gene. "Members can do something which is self-satisfying and which contributes to the development of individuality".

Everyone A Member

"In addition, the school can be very proud of its student body. Many off-campus people who have heard of the activities of the CCD have offered considerable praise to the Villanova members of this organization for their unselfish work in teaching retarded children."

"Now", continued Gene, "the majority of our students know of the NFCCS. Everybody, by virtue of their being students of Villanova, are members, but remain inactive. The response, nevertheless, has been good.

"Manhattan and Notre Dame, however, already have national offices," Gene says, "if they can do it there is no reason why we can't."

Gene asks students who are interested in donating their services to the NFCCS to leave a note in the NFCCS box or respond to notices on the bulletin boards.

Gene leaves the students with a final note: "You don't join the NFCCS, you merely become active."

Lynx Names Officers; Requests Material

The LYNX, campus literary magazine, has chosen its 1960 staff. Co-editors-in chief are Vince Kirk and Mike Wesley. Other members of the editorial board are Bill Speers, layout; Jim Strazella, copy; Gary Evans, poetry; Joe Ruggiero, art; Tim McNamar, exchange; Dan Grove, publicity; and Bill Friend, business manager.

Any member may be contacted for information about the LYNX. Material for publication may be left in Rm. 319 Sheehan Hall, or in the English Office, on the second floor of Vasey Hall. Students in either Mr. Mitchell's or Dr. Phillipson's class may contact their teacher for information or to leave material.

The magazine cover has already been selected and ten per cent of the final content has been chosen.

Theatre Department Plans Williams' 'Glass Menagerie'

Tryouts for the Theatre Department's presentation of Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie" will take place in Vasey Auditorium next Wednesday, October 19, from 4 to 6 P.M. and from 9 to 9 P.M.

Graduate students, undergraduate students, and faculty members are eligible for parts in the drama, which will be held on December 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, also in Vasey Auditorium.

DIRECTOR DUPREY
. . . Heads Grad Group

Mr. Bernard Coyne, who last year directed the two graduate shows, Thorton Wilder's "Our Town" and William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night", will again direct the graduate production.

Mr. Coyne asserted "'The Glass Menagerie' is the most artistic play that Mr. Williams has written, and certainly one of the most significant plays in the American theatre since World War II."

No Bizarre Types

"The play doesn't suffer," the director continued, "from the usual sociological or psychological case study that he has used since the war in writing his plays.

"It deals with human beings being rather than psychotic, neurotic, exotic, eccentric, or bizarre types. And it indicates the greatness Mr. Williams can achieve when dealing with a novel theme."

Mr. George Hermann, the technical director, is a new member of the graduate school faculty. Mr. Hermann is a graduate of Catholic University Graduate School of the Theatre. He received his M.A. from Clark College and his M.F.A. from Catholic University.

Mr. William Flynn, who graduated from Manhattan College with a B.A., is the stage manager, and Mr. James Wilaert, who received the same degree at Saint Ambrose College, is the assistant technical director.

Tickets for "The Glass Menagerie" will go on sale on or about one week before the performance.

The second graduate production, scheduled for February, will be a new script by Mr. George Hermann, "From Sea To Shining Sea". Mr. Richard A. Duprey, Theatre Department head, says that this is "a unique fable about America's westward march" set to folk music.

Great Debate

Amidst all the refined razzle-dazzle at the command of the nation's largest broadcasting company, presidential contenders Richard Nixon and John Kennedy squared off in the second of their "Great Debates" last Friday evening.

Of prime importance, however and generally overlooked in the discussion, was the matter of the national economy. True, the candidates went into the debate for the purpose of treating only the foreign policy aspects of the campaign.

Nevertheless, the U.S. economy is basic to any and all considerations of the national welfare, be they on the local or international level. The formal economic principles involved are far too complex for any kind of intelligent discussion here, but the situation boils down to the essential fact: "What you do not have, you can not give."

Unquestionably, a very expensive future looms before the world, and more particularly, before the United States. Living standards at home will have to be improved, the national defense will require continual expansion, and competition with Communism for the vast "neutral" areas of the world will be heightened.

Unless the national economy is immediately adjusted to support the myriad individual programs designed to bolster the American position, that position will deteriorate to proneness beneath Communistic imperialism.

Both candidates admit to a costly future. Both recognize the necessity of expanding the economy, and both insist that the platforms can solve the difficulties. Both emphasize that theirs is the less expensive plans.

Again, however, the burden and responsibility of selecting the more capable candidate dissolves upon the voter. Unless the voter examines the issues, he cannot understand the situation; and unless he understands the situation, he cannot properly decide the nation's future.

"Open End"

David Susskind, for the enlightenment of all non-cognoscenti, is a kind of latter day Grand Inquisitor, Defender of the Faith, and Mike Wallace all in one.

As master of ceremonies of the New York television program "Open End," he goes the aforementioned Mr. Wallace one (or more) better. Mr. Susskind has achieved glory by invegling appearances on his program from as many political, scientific, and intellectual giants as were willing to chat with him into the wee hours of any given Monday morning.

Most recently, Mr. Susskind ascended to heights which even the President of the United States dared not tread: he hob-nobbed with Nikita S. Krushchev, whim you may know.

True, anyone who can persuade a figure such as the Russian Premier to sit down and talk before the television cameras deserves whatever accolade he receives, but he should attempt to maintain dignity and some degree of equitability with his subject.

By attempting to debate with, rather than interview, Mr. Krushchev, Mr. Susskind seems to have lost out on both those counts. At best, Mr. Susskind will appear to the hordes of overseas viewers who will undoubtedly see tapes of the program as a rather cocky American who foolishly and unsuccessfully tried to sell the Russian on the essential superiority of Democracy, while at the same time challenging Mr. Krushchev's actions in international affairs.

Fortunately, the situation did not turn out for the worst, as some viewers, including N.Y. TIMES TV critic Jack Gould, feared it might have. It did not upset or perturb the Premier, and thereby bring the world a little closer to that much-feared explosion which, should it come, will affect every one of us, and will be so final.

Orientation Committee Improvements

In recent weeks, there has been a small furor over the Orientation Committee that supposedly introduces the freshmen to the University. Response to an article in the VILLANOVAN has been unfavorable among those associated with the O.C. on the grounds that the criticism was unwarranted and not constructive.

As does any organization, including the VILLANOVAN, the O.C. has defects. Some might say that these defects are so great as to preclude the possibility of constructive criticism. Lest the terms malcontent, cynic, destructive critic, be hurled indiscriminately, however, the following recomendations are respectfully, however, the following recommendations are respectfully submitted, with the hope that, when next year's O.C. is being established, these recommendations might at least be remembered, if not actually considered.

Proportional Membership

The O.C. should be composed of members from the vairous colleges of the University in direct proportion to the colleges' representation in the incoming freshman class.

The O. C. should be composed of volunteers whose prime motivation is a patent interest in improving these future graduates of the University in their spiritual, intellectualand professional attainments. Further, that the members disseminate information to assist the freshmen in avoiding mistakes which the members themselves might have made in their college careers.

Seniors Only

The O.C. should be composed only of senior students. This is to insure, as much as possible, that the members are possessed of maturity and experience in college life. Sophomores, a single year removed from the freshmen, tend to be sophomoric in their conduct, unimpressive to the freshmen, and occasionally intent on revenge for what they took from some previous O. C.

The O. C. should be aware that they will recive no recompense of any kind, neither a free white hat, nor publicity in any campus publication, nor any particular privi'egs. Their only recompense will be the satisfaction of having done their job well.

Seriousness First

So much for O.C. membership. How should the members function? First, they must realize their objectives. College is the last formal education the vast majority of freshmen will receive; they must make the most of it. Their religious and human development must take precedence over insane screaming of cheers for the success of an athletic team, or the performing of ridiculous penalties, or the watching of movies. There is ample opportunity for freshmen to indulge their appetite for these latter activities in their spare time. Under the official aegis of the O. C., effort should be devoted to development on a plane higher than these latter.

Love

Love, including love of Villanova, must be based on knowledge and appreciation. Freshmen must learn about the University before they can love it. Therefore, the O. C. should operate as follows:

All O. C. activities should be conducted on a voluntary basis. If the freshman is sufficiently impressed with the seriousness of the endeavor, he will attend voluntarily.

The O. C. should take particular pains to impress the freshman with the mutual rights and duties of the University and the sudent. The student may demand certain things of the University, but he must render certain things in return.

CAMPUS CAMERA

Judging from the campaign thus far, what factors do you think will ultimately decide who will win the Presidential Election?

Judging from the past administration it would seem that the candidate shooting the best game of golf should be the winner. Aside from this, the biggest factor influencing the outcome of the election will be the sincerity of the victor. The nominee who has been most sincere (Kennedy) will gain the majority of respect and consequently the largest vote.

Frank Matyskiela, EE '62

Although it is against all our principles, this 1960 presidential campaign is turning into a popularity contest. Pat Nixon's culinary genius and Jackie Kennedy's wardrobe seem to carry as much weight as the farm problem and foreign policy.

Rich Loftus, EE '62

If Senator Kennedy can convince the public that his policies are needed to avoid a national crisis and to lead to greater progress both on the international and the domestic scene, then the scale may tip in his favor.

On the other hand, if Vice-president Nixon can persuade the public that the Republican administration has led to progress, and that his policies will continue this progress, then his chances for election will be greatly increased.

Bob Piccone, '61

In my estimation, both nominees have presented themselves very well, and both are young but very capable men. However, in looking at the state of affairs in which we as a country find ourselves today, i.e., being challenged by Russia for world supremacy, and at the same time being threatened by the same for our own safety, I believe that the essential and deciding factor in the 1960 presidential election will be which nominees qualify best to handle the foreign affairs of the U. S. in these precarious times.

"Villanovans" Look Forward; Fine Season Seen Ahead

During the ferment and upheaval of the depression years a Villanova tradition was born. A tradition whose stature was to grow and progress for years to come.

In the late 1920's an enterprizing, jazz-loving Augustinian assembled a small musical aggregation and named it the "Villanovans." Without losing any of its identity or freshness, and without forfeiting any of its authenticity, it is still expanding within its own style structure.

This year's edition, while carrying the old standard ,is adding new blood, music, and personality. In June of 1960, due to graduation, three valuable men were lost. In September of 1960 came the task of rebuilding.

Loss Presents Problems

The loss of Lou Martucci, a three year veteran, posed a great problem to the remaining members.

This problem was short-lived, however, when out of thirteen hundred freshmen emerged a wiry, fair-haired, apprehensive frosh with piano playing in his nature. John Cahalin, a prodigy of South Orange, N.J., has the distinction of being the youngest member of the group. John has been playing for twelve years and is as versatile as he is talented. The youngster is capable of playing anything from Dixieland to stark progressive.

A Westbury, Long Islander named Jim Wilde has replaced "now-prof" Lovecchio on the sax and clarinet. Jim has an undying love and talent for music and is equally adroit on both instruments. Aside from playing first saxophone in the marching band, Jim has had several years experience with various dance bands, including the "Villanovans".

For the first time in the history of this group, a graduate student has been permitted membership. He is, of course, Russ McGrotty, a Villanova graduate of last June. "Mac" has amazing skill on the drums and is aptly replacing Jay McAndrews. Russ is a hard swinging drummer who is in constant pursuit of perfection. This Manhasset, Long Island product adds depth and vigor which provides a drive which is both fluid and brilliant.

Spook Arranges

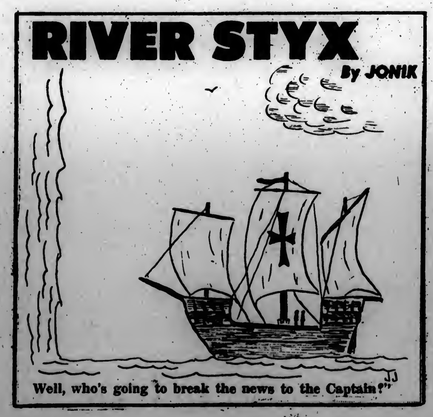
Back for his third year is Knoxville, Tennessee's contribution to Villanova, Frank Kendig. "Spook" as he is commonly known to his friends contributes not only his established talent on the trumpet, but also his skill in arranging. As a freshman Frank replaced Gerry Yantis and has more than fulfilled all expectations.

"Spook," like drummer McGrotty, is in a never-ending struggle to fulfill his own musical aspirations to better himself and the band. This year the "Villanovans" plan to build their unique style around the brilliant bugling of their southern ambassador.

Two men who need no introduction are seniors Al Massey and Dick Morrison. Both are three year veterans who live in Wayne, Pa. Joining their freshmen year under Jack Emerick, these men now form the backbone of this organization.

Plays Tuba

Dick came to Villanova in 1957 after two years of study at Lebanon Valley College Conservatory of Music. His musical experience and technical knowledge have been of great assistance in the co-ordination of the band. This pre-law major plays both tuba and string-bass with equal capability. This is a rare combination among college jazz bands, which adds to the competency and uniqueness of the "Villanovans" in expressing classic jazz and modern music.



Al Massey, also a three year veteran and pre-law major, is a virtuoso of the slide trombone. It is his instrument that adds the comical and satirical touch charateristics of tail-gate Dixieland. Though Al is noted for his barrelhouse ability, he is capable of changing quickly to the mellow tone required for dance music. It is fortunate for the "Villanovans" that someone of his rare quality and ability appeared simultaneously with the loss of his great predecessor, Pat Broidy.

This year under the guidance and leadership of their senior members, the "Villanovans" are preparing to surpass the credits of former years. They plan to continue their itinerant schedule by again carrying the name and good-will of Villanova to campuses near and far.

They are also prepared to donate their services more freely to campus activities. Though their roots are deeply imolanted in Dixieland, they are constantly branching out into the realm of modernism, sometimes combining the two to form a distinct style of their own and to break from an era past.

Well, who's going to break the news to the Captain?"

Dime Philanthropy Aids Big Projects

You don't have a million dollars, but would you like to be a philanthropist?

You can be a real philanthropist with just one dollar, thanks to a do-it-yourself philanthropic project called the San Francisco Foundation.

Your dollar won't be frozen into a rigid pattern to aid only one project, says the November Catholic Digest which tells the foundation's story. It will be used for "any unusual project which can't get financed elsewhere."

The foundation's projects include providing nearly blind children with books of king-size print; founding a clinic for alcoholics; financing public health service in the Kentucky hills; and aiding the San Francisco Guild for Crippled Children.

FROM: THE CATHOLIC DIGEST:

Pope Aims to Reunite All Under Rome; Orthodox First

One of the primary aims of Pope John XXIII is the unity of the Christian world, probably beginning with the return to Rome of the Greek and Russian Orthodox churches.

This is the statement of the Catholic Digest, the world's largest Catholic subscription publication.

In its November issue, the magazine states: "The matter has been close to the Holy Father's heart for a long time," and retraces the present Pope's long-standing interest in unifying the Christian world under Rome.

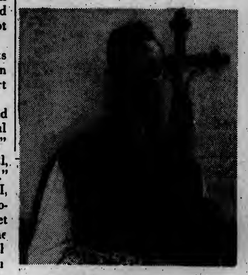
"As apostolic delegate to Bulgaria and later to Turkey and Greece, he was a principal instrument of the Holy See in eastern Europe between 1925 and 1944. During these years, Archbishop Roncalli wanted to be the living expression of the warm heart and helping hand of the Pope to those who did not belong to the Catholic family."

The Catholic publication points out that the problem of Christian unity under Rome is not a new effort for the Vatican.

In 1923, Pope Pius XI expressed his desire for unity in an encyclical letter titled, "The Church of God," and in 1928 in a second encyclical, "Conterning the Eastern Churches."

Also during the reign of Pius XI, discussions were held between Catholic and Orthodox leaders who met to discuss union and who made some progress. "Other congresses with Catholic and Orthodox participation occurred in 1920 and in 1938," the magazine explains.

The Holy See welcomed, too, dialogues between Anglicans and Catholics. "These conferences were private and unofficial," says the Catholic Digest, "but they were held with the approval of the Holy See and of the Archbishop of Canterbury."



Now, Pope John XXIII has issued a clear call for Christian unity by convoking an ecumenical (world-wide) council "for our brethren in Christ, who, like us, bear His name, read His holy gospel, and perform blessed acts of charity."

Red Mass Offered Here Friday Night

Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs, will be the sub-deacon. The Reverend Norbert W. Whitley, O.S.A., the Chaplin of the University, will be Master of Ceremonies.

BISHOP HANNAN, J.C.D. . . . To Speak

The Augustinian Provincial, the Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., will preside in the sanctuary. The preacher at the Red Mass is to be the Most Reverend Philip M. Hannan, J.C.D., Auxiliary Bishop of Washington. Bishop Hannan is widely known as an outstanding canonist and as a most stimulating preacher. The music of the Mass will be sung by the Villanova Singers, under the direction of Mr. Herbert Fis, with Dean Harold Gill Reauchelein of the Law School serving as organist.

Students of the School of Law, its alumni and the Board Consultors to the School of Law will attend the Mass. After the Mass, the Board of Consultors and their wives will be the guest of the President of the University at a buffet supper in Garey Hall, honoring Bishop Hannan, while the law alumni will be guests at a buffet at Villanova's newly opened Alumni House.

Members of the general University faculty and of the undergraduate student body are invited to attend the Mass.

Spooritualism

Book Store Bedlam Bucked; Gridders Can Intellectuals

Now that the dust has cleared and some sort of semblance of order is now present in Dougherty Hall, should the situation in our makeshift bookstore go unlamented until next book-buying time next February?

Well, It's at least take a token view of the problem now, in the hopes that come the beginning of next semester the repeat of the semi-annual mops storming the west lounge for textbooks, won't be necessary.

SPEERS

Consider first of all the loyalty of the Villanova student body! They could just as easily buy their books at Leary's on 9th street below Market or Zavelle's on Broad street at Montgomery avenue.

But no, they would rather brave the thermal confines of the back corridor of Dougherty Hall and the seemingly endless cavalcade of sweaty bodies leading to the almost legendary Villanova bookstore, in order to purchase a simple textbook. We hear some poor souls had to wait as long as two hours before gaining access to the closely guarded lounge.

Don't take such loyalty lightly! How many other places are there where a paying customer, confronted with these conditions would shun the suggestion "Let's try some place else!"

And that is just our point, if the student is paying top price for an item at school, is he not entitled to the same service which he would receive outside? We think, yes.

Certainly, one must sympathize with the bookstore, for they must serve the entire school at a rather hectic period. However, we believe a better system for book distribution could alleviate some of the muddle.

One method may be to divide the texts into three groups according to the three schools: C&F, Arts, and Engineering. (Nursing could be combined with Arts.)

Once this is completed, Dougherty Hall could then be broken up as a central distribution center by having the business books sold in the Commerce and Finance Building; the engineering and science books in Mendel Hall; and the arts books in Dougherty.

The inconvenience placed on Mendel and C&F should be slight since with the dispersal of the book-buyers into these three groups, the book-buying period could be reduced considerably.

The expediency with which this system could be worked, should be obvious. The student receives his books faster and possibly the book store could save money by employing workers for only a fraction of the time required in the past.

Our football players have been bad boys; not only that, but they are presently running the risk of being branded an enemy of the arts.

For our lowly Villanova Music Society (formerly Opera-Classica) has been forced to succumb to the equine appetites of our brawn braves of the ball field.

bill speers

No longer will the Thursday activity period be elevated to empyreal heights by the elegant strains emitting from the east lounge of Dougherty. No, not until the football season is over.

For the shoulder-padded ones have taken over the faculty dining area on the second floor of Dougherty for their own chuck wagon. This move in turn forced the faculty into the east lounge for their noonday repast which, of course, relegated our own Music Society to the realm of non-existence, at least during the pigskin season.

But fear not, Music Society, for your call is a greater one. You have chosen the best part —temporary oblivion to fame in the shadow of an ill-fed eggball team.

Capping Ceremony "Finis"

Mary E. Gamber

It will come as no surprise to the inhabitants of the campus that the capping ceremony as such, for the sophomore student nurse at Villanova, has been eliminated. This announcement was made two weeks ago by the new Dean of Nursing, Dr. Schrum. The nursing administration apparently feels that the ceremony is unnecessary; that at the beginning of one's sophomore year, a student nurse does not particularly merit such distinction, having done little or no actual work in her chosen profession.

Many other collegiate schools of nursing, as well as three-year schools, have decided to adopt the same plan. It would seem that capping is obsolescent, if not altogether obsolete.

I am not about to dispute the wisdom of the nursing administration's decision. I realize that, in addition to the reason given above, many more determining factors may have influenced their choice to break with tradition. What these factors may be, I must confess, I am at a loss to understand. But that is neither here nor there. Mine is not to reason why . . .

Loss of Dignity

I find it very regrettable that capping will no longer have any meaning for the student nurse at Villanova. I remember a time when it did. Now the student will simply be handed her cap after waiting with her sophomore sisters in a line which closely resembles the line winding around the residents' dining room before supper time. There can be no dignity or significance attached to such a ceremony.

The cap is the symbol of the nursing profession. Gone are the traditional days when the President of the University presided over the ceremony, capping each student nurse in our beautiful University Chapel. Gone are those moments of excitement and enthusiasm preceding the occasion.

Gone is the essence of "being capped;" the feelings of dignity and pride of achievement which the student feels as she becomes aware of the meaning of the ceremony. Gone, too is the Benediction which followed capping, wherein God's blessing was invoked upon the future nurses.

My sympathy is with the present sophomore class of nurses, whose eagerly awaited capping has degenerated into the cold and meaningless affair with which they now must content themselves. My sympathy and my grateful thanks that I belonged to the class before them.

NAME: John Hulse AGE: 27 MAJOR: Bus. Adm.

PRESENT JOB: Telephone Manager, Sioux City, Iowa

When John Hulse was a senior at the U. of South Dakota, he had his own set of "do's" and "don'ts." Don't become a mere cipher on somebody's payroll. Don't sit on the shelf waiting for your first taste of responsibility. Do get a job where you have a chance to show your stuff right from the start. Do the job.

John knew his B.S. in Business Administration could lead him into almost any field. He chose the telephone business and joined Northwestern Bell.

One of his first assignments: streamlining operating procedures for the telephone offices of Iowa's five largest cities. In this work John showed good judgment and sound organizing ability.

Today he is Telephone Manager of Sioux City, Iowa.

Besides managing day-to-day operations, helping plan tomorrow's telephone growth is an important part of John's job. A typical example is the work he does with the Sioux City Industrial Development Association. In this role, he's the answer man on projecting, planning and supplying the communications needs of new industry. He's shown above with Bob Sweeney, manager of the Sioux City Chamber of Commerce.

"You must always be thinking of the future in this business," John says. "We have to stay ahead. I think a man who has something to offer this outfit won't have a minute's worry about what it can do for him."

If you're a capable guy—looking for an action job with rapid rewards for the man who can handle it—you'll want to visit your Placement Office for literature and additional information.

"Our number one aim is to have in all management jobs the most vital, intelligent, positive and imaginative men we can possibly find."

Dooley, "Good American"

by Fred Mejer

After the conference at the Sheraton Hotel we went back to our host's house for cocktails. We had ben told that the lecturer would also be present, but we were somewhat skeptical since we knew he had a heavy schedule. But, alas, our host had been right and Dr. Tom Dooley apeared with his entourage.

Dr. Dooley is a thin, young-looking man called by many "the good American." His entourage consisted of three public relations men, his brother whom he persauded to abandon a profitable business in order to help him with his project, and some young doctors anxious to follow Dr. Dooley's steps.

Dr. Dooley had come to America in order to raise funds for MEDICO, a non-profit organization which establishes hospitals in the under-developed regions of the world. We were all anxious to question our distinguished guest; therefore, after the introductions were over, we started our interrogations.

Dr. Dooley told us that MEDICO has two main objectives: one is the establishment of hospitals in the various native villages and consequently the introduction of modern medicine into these areas; the second, the training and encouragement of native doctors to run these hospitals.

Established Hospitals

Once the native doctors were familiarized with the new modern methods, the foreign doctors would concentrate their efforts in establishing other hospitals in some other area of the country or of the world.

We asked Dr. Dooley who would assume the economic responsibilities of maintaining the hospitals, and he told us that the governments of those nations where the hospitals had been established were very interested in the project and had promised to asume such a task.

During the conversation Dr. Dooley kept touching his shoulder as though trying to repress severe pain. Later his brother told us that Dr. Dooley had undergone a cancer operation, and the pain had not yet subsided.

We asked Dr. Dooley about communism and its progress in the world. He believes that communism will eventually be a dead philosophy, but, nevertheless, the world will suffer much before it is extinguished.

Five Russian Uprisings

He described the pattern that will bring about the overthrow of communism and told us that Rusia had already had four or five major uprisings, but most were cleverly concealed from the free world.

Dr. Dooley believes that all of South America will eventually become communist, and after the peoples of the various countries realize the fallacies of such a system, they would revolt and overthrow it. The process he claims would take twenty years.

Before leaving, Dr. Dooley told us a very touching story of a Chinese peasant who went to his office for some medicine. Upon seeing a big bamboo cage that some patients had given him in appreciation for his services, the Chinese peasant began to cry.

He told Dr. Dooley that the communists had caught his elder son trying to sell some vegetables in the black market—a serious crime against the Red Chinese communal system of agriculture. "Why do you cry," he asked.

"Because my son," the Chinese said, "was placed in a cage just like yours under the sun until he died."

Nichols Still Sterling After Thirty Years of Dixieland

While listening to the current sounds of modern Jazz, has this thought ever crossed your mind, "Will he be able to play that well when he's in his fifties," or better still, "will he be around when he's fifty?" Until this past Sunday, it must be confessed that this Jazzphile never thought of it either, but a trip over the bridge to the new Red Hill Inn brought it to mind. The occasion was the first local appearance in 29 years of that famed trumpeter from Ogden, Utah, Loring "Red" Nichols, whose life was recently dramatized in the motion picture, "The Five Pennies". In his last appearance in this town, he numbered among his sidemen such musical luminaries as Benny Goodman, Glenn Miller and Gene Krupa.

Talking with Red Nichols (whose hair is completely gray now) is as much a pleasure as listening to him play. He is at all times a pro in the strictest sense of the word. Red has been on this current road trip since August 23 and will return to his home in Llano, Cal. sometime around Oct. 22 and a recording session at Capitol for his next album, "The Guest Pennies". From the Red Hill engagement, he is due on the Next Bell Telephone Hour on the "idiot box", then on to Toledo's "Roundtable".

Nichols readily admits that the "Five Pennies" (which he thinks was 70% fact) has been the main factor in his successful comeback. He still keeps five sidemen ("Five pennies make a Nichols," he says) and does his own managing.

When asked about the difference between fronting a group now in contrast to 30 years ago, Nichols commented, "It's much easier now although there is a lot more bookwork to attend to. In the old days, we didn't have the law to back up our contracts and more than one "speakeasy" owner would do his best to renege on his promise."

On having had so many great sidemen in his past groups, "I have always been proud of the fact that so many of those who worked under me found the fame that they deserved. I have no doubt that they would have been successful anyway because they all loved their work. We had some great times together and I like to think that we played some great music."

Nichols retains his memorable dixieland style in all of his sets but has wisely incorporated dance tunes and Gershwin medleys into dixie-type arrangements that pace his shows extremely well. Although he had played to packed houses west of the Mississippi and in New York, Nichols did not set any house records last week. To be sure, many of the oldsters came out, but the younger generation was conspicuous by its absence.

It is an accepted fact that Philly is a modern Jazz town, but there is a touch of irony in the fact that it isn't the Red Hill or Nichols who lose out but rather those who missed a chance to see a man so proficient on his horn that he was once considered second only to the immortal Bix Beaiderbecke. Whether standing in front of his group or blowing a surprisingly strong chorus, it is obvious that Nichols still enjoys playing. In fact, almost as much as the audience enjoyed listening.

★ ★ ★ ★

Incidentally, Joe de Luca's new Red Hill shapes up as probably the nicest Jazz joint in the land. The phonetics are most conductive to listening and it is not cramped for space like so many other places. With a minimum (no cover) ranging from $3 at the bar to $5 at a table, it won't break your wallet either. Appearing this week is the Ramsey Lewis trio. At the Showboat, the Charlie Mingus Quintet. And to Pep's goes the award for the scoop of the season. For this week, they have signed Quincy Jones, recent winner of the International Jazz Critics Poll and his 18-piece band in their first American appearance since their successful 9-month European tour.

Fanciest Dorm Caps Prize Before Annual Basca Dance

Frank Pizzi and Dave ("Doc") O'Connor have been appointed chairmen of the Nick Basca Homecoming Dance to be held Friday, November 4, in the Field House.

This announcement was made by Larry Bathgate, senior class President and general coordinator of the Homecoming Weekend program.

As in the past, the Basca Dance will be preceded by the designation of the most impressively decorated dormitory. "The Intramural Council will run this part of the program," Bathgate said.

Following the presentation of this award a bonfire rally will be held.

Three Committees

"The Intramural Council will also run the refreshment concession," Bathgate elaborated.

There will be three committees working under the co-chairmanship of Pizzi and O'Connor: decorations, tickets, and publicity.

Decorations chairmen include John Livezey, Mary Chapman, Paul Gallagher, and Bob Redmond.

Ticket sales will be handled by Jack Donahue and Ron Locandro. "The price of the dance will be $2.50," Bathgate interjected.

Tom Natal and Dave Severance will serve as publicity committee co-chairmen.

Two men were discussing their new boss. "I can't help liking the guy," said one. "If you don't, he fires you.'

Guidice, New Soph VP Wins By A Landslide

Amidst unavoidable confusion on the part of the Elections Committee and lack of proper publicity, Rocco Guidice was elected sophomore class Vice-President last week.

A total of 299 voters treked to the polls in Alumni Gym to cast their ballots. Those voting represented approximately one-third of the soph class enrollment.

Guidice garnered 125 votes to carry the election by a comparative landslide. His closest opponent, Robert Coogan managed to capture 56 votes.

Also-rans were: Stephen Martino, 52; Diane Hneleski, 39; Matthew Alessi, 12; Phil Costanzo, 10; and John Jannik, 5.

Medick-Soph Accordionist Has First Disc Released

Presently studying in our Commerce and Finance School, is a rarity in the recording field—a "pop" accordionist.

Bob Mitek, (Medick is his professional name) recently had his first record released on the Laurie label—"Streets of Venice". The record was introduced nationally two months ago on Dick Clark's Bandstand; the flip side is "Western Sunrise."

An alumnus" of bandstand, Bob had built himself a network of fan clubs throughout the U. S., solely on the strength of his daily "dancing" appearances on the teen-age telecast.

Since his venture into the entertainment field, Bob has played a variety of spots, from Marty Bohn's Nut Club in Wildwood, N. J., to Philadelphia's Academy of Music.

Never Exploited

"I know playing the accordion doesn't seem to be the best way to make it in this business", says the accounting-major, "but the fact is that the versatility of the accordion has never been exploited".

Mitek, who has studied under Andy Arcari, considered to be the finest accordionist in the world, contends that a whole orchestra can be imitated on the accordion if played by an artist. "The accordion right now is a baby instrument just one ac-

ACCORDIONIST MEDICK

Accounting and R 'n' R

cordionist has to make it to the top and others will follow," he states.

Although he favors off tempo numbers himself, Bob plays everything from concertos to rock and roll. But he believes the big thing in music today is a "new-sound".

Bob, on his way to the top, admits that three things are necessary to get there: ability, showmanship and stage presence.

"You can't just make it on records," he states, "You must produce on the stage and night club floors. The kids may put you on top, but it's the adults that keep you there". But he admits that one of the biggest barriers in the recording business is to get to the adults through the kids.

Insecure Business

Bob would like to make music a career, but, unlike many other young popular stars, places his education first. "Show business is an insecure business," admits the C & F sophomore, "so if I don't make it, I would then turn to corporation accounting.

Bob likes the college life at Villanova but does not go along with seemingly popular belief that rock and roll is below college sophistication. "A person's taste in music does not change just because he comes to college, but is merely refined".

The teenage accordionist concludes that all success in music business does not stem from talent. "It's about 70 per cent luck and 30 per cent talent."

Club Plans Field Trip

The Finance Club, under the direction of Mr. P. J. Dougherty, has planned a field trip to New York later this semester.

They will visit the Stock Market, the Federal Reserve, the Commodity Exchange, and a large investment House. Also, a searies of lectures is planned for the careers which most of the graduates will enter.

Even though modern electronic computers work at almost unbelievable speeds, the scientist is way ahead of them.

Put quite simply, scientists have been thinking up complex problems faster than even the fastest computers could handle them. To close this gap, IBM created STRETCH, the world's fastest, most powerful computer.

The first STRETCH system will go to the AEC at Los Alamos to aid in nuclear reactor design. This goliath can do a million additions or subtractions a second. It can "read" the equivalent of four million characters per minute from magnetic tape. It can print the equivalent of three good-sized novels every hour. It can perform all these operations simultaneously, and if necessary pause midway in the problem and tackle a more important one.

Creating such tools and putting them to work for science—or for business, industry, or government—is exciting, important work. It calls for talents and skills of every kind, from liberal arts to Boolean algebra to astrophysics.

So whatever your particular talents and skills, there may be just the kind of job at IBM you've always wanted. The IBM representative will be visiting your campus this year. Why not ask him about it? Your placement office can make an appointment. For further information about opportunities at IBM, write, outlining your background and interests, to:

IRS Plans Field Trips; Discusses Foreign Policy

The International Relations Society of Villanova held its first meeting on Tuesday evening, October 4, in Vasey Hall. The society's moderator, Dr. Fritz Nova, of the History and Political Science Dept., gave the welcoming address to an exceptionally large turnout.

Joseph Clark, president of the society, presented the general program for the year, which will include prominent speakers on world affairs, group discussions, films and field trips. On the field trips, the members will visit the United Nations in New York City and areas of international significance in Washington, D. C.

Each year the society undertakes a study of a specific issue and for the current year it has selected "Perspectives on Peace U. S. Policy Goals for the 60's" as its topic. The purpose of the study is to offer students interested in the formulation of an intelligent U. S. foreign policy an opportunity to participate in a realistic policy making situations.

Student Participation

It also affords members the chance to cope with an actual problem which faces policy makers in the Dept. of State, and on the basis of mature study and research, recommend U.S. policy on that issue. The student objective should be, through study and the writing of position papers, to clarify which otherwise might be left in the realm of the impractical.

C'ark stated that the topic would be dealt with under the following five topics:

1. U.S. Ideology in a Competitive world.
2. U.S. Domestic Politics in World Focus.
3. U.S. Defense and Disarmament Objectives.
4. U.S. Leadership for World Peace Through Law.
5. U.S. Initiatives in Foreign Policy.

The second meeting of the society was called for Tuesday evening, Oct. 18, when committees will be set up to begin studies of the areas mentioned above. Clark announced that the guest speaker for the evening would be Mr. John J. Logue, of the History and Political Science Dept., who will discuss current U.S. Foreign Policy.

Literary Club Alive; Donahue Discusses Tentative Agenda

Dead.

That's what the Literary Club is not, according to Mike Donahue, recently designated club prexy.

"Despite rumors to the contrary, the Literary Club will function as a bonafide member of the Fraternities and Societies Organization despite the fact that the Student Council does not even recognize us," Donahue vowed.

On a more serious note, he explained that he assumed the duties of president after President-designate George Matey transferred to the University of Toronto.

Regarding the tentative agenda for the year, Donahue said that the focal point of the early discussions will be poetry. "I hope to get Dr. Joseph Reino to present several informal discussions on poetry along the lines of his very popular University of the Air series last Spring."

Beatnik Philosophy

Donahue added that he thinks Dr. Reino can "dispel the widely held illusion that poetry is strictly for the aesthetic."

The first offering by a member of the club will be Lenny Galiulo's discussion of modern poetry and the philosophy of the Beat Generation, tentatively scheduled for November 8. Galiulo is a sophomore English major.

Other subjects are being researched and prepared by Dave Severance and controversial Bill Speers. Severance will deliver his talk on John Steinbeck sometime before basketball season gets underway, Donahue said.

Speers, who is vice-president of the Literary Club, has chosen for his topic "Kerouac Revisited," an analysis of last three novels written by the so-called spokesman of the Beat Generation.

Donahue further disclosed that he has appointed Gus Susnjara and Jim McAteer as program co-chairmen. "It will be their function to come up with ideas for interesting and informative programs."

"Oh yes," Donahue appended, "it will also be their duty to see what can be done about getting us back on Student Council."

Story from Life

What more could a budding research engineer want? Steve Polaski, B.S. in electrical engineering, January, 1959, starts out for his day's work enthusiastically, with a cheerful send-off from his charming young wife. The car and infant son are both 1960 models, the pleasant new home is in the heart of the Allegheny Mountains . . . and the job is supervisor of the field portion of an extensive research and development program for the first 460,000-volt electric transmission line in the United States.

Flashback: Eleven months after starting with his company and shortly after completing the cadet training program, Steve was selected to participate in a research project at General Electric Company's High Voltage Laboratory in Pittsfield, Mass. Here he is seen at the G.E. lab where he helped develop instruments to measure lightning current.

A '59 GRAD'S INTERESTING JOB with a Pennsylvania ELECTRIC UTILITY

Steve finds living in this mountainous area ideal for the pursuit of his main hobby, hunting. His equipment includes two rifles and two shotguns in prime condition and he enjoys exciting off-hours sport bagging wild turkeys, pheasants and rabbits in the forests near his home.

Another hobby, photography, fits right into his work schedule. At right, above, he is seen at the window of his trailer lab (which, incidentally, overlooks his home in the valley) taking pictures with a telephoto lens of the conductor and structures on the EHV line. These photos are used as masters on which he superimposes time shots of lightning strokes at night to obtain a record.

At one of the two 460,000-volt line structures near his laboratory-equipped trailer headquarters, Steve checks the operation of a line surge oscilloscope which automatically takes pictures of the wave shape of lightning strokes as they occur near the line. In addition to the lightning protection study, his work includes field research into radio influence of extra-high voltage and corona loss, and a study of vibration characteristics of the conductor.

ABLE GRADUATES in all fields will find interesting and rewarding jobs with Pennsylvania's progressive electric utilities. Get in touch with company representatives or write us for information: P.E.A., State Street Building, Harrisburg, Pa.

Pro Football Going Great Guns; Room For New League

by Ed Lohr

Turnstyles were forced around and around 300,000 times last weekend as football-crazed crowds poured into ball parks scattered all over the nation to see the National League's weekly fall spectacular .

Expansion and Principal

Professional football has expanded fantastically in the last decade and has now climbed to a peak of perfection; yet, it has not permitted prosperity to overrule its principle.

Johnny Unitas, Baltimore Colts quarterback

For instance, the pros in their quest for wealth have restrained from swallowing up boys until they have completed college, or the cases in which they didn't attend would wait until their would-be class has been graduated.

On the contrary, profesional baseball has interrupted many a high school graduation ceremony and with a green word, as it were, selfishly prohibited young athletes from continuing their education.

Rookies or Veterans

Did the average fan turn out to see rookie quarterback "Joe College" and the rest of the National Football League's thin crop of recruits? Most certainly not.

I should like to point out that at the starting quarterback slots last wekend were the Texas playboy Bobby Layne for the Steelers; the completely bald "Y.A. Title" who operated out of San Francisco even before Paladin; Norman Van Brocklin, the Flying Dutchman; Chucking Charlie Conerly who played for Ole Miss prior to the Civil War, and lastly, Eddie Le Baron, a little guy with the massive job of keeping newly-formed Dallas from humiliation.

Those five ancient wonders of the football world are only examples from one position, but this could be illustrated throughout the entire eleven spots.

Exception To the Rule

Naturally there are exceptions to all rules, and thus hats off to Milt Plub of Penn State since he has hung on gamely to become the number one quartrback of the powerful Cleveland Browns. Did you ever try to fill Otto Graham's shoes?

Good luck to Earl Morrall, Len Dawson, Ralph Guglielmi, Don Meridith, and Sonny Jurgenson and to their crys for a cushioned bench! Who says there is no room for another league?

Small College Stars

Where do these talented gridders acquire their B.S. degrees? I'll admit that a huge percentage of today's stars are from major universities where football is big business, but the small colleges have donated their share of tenors to the "play-for-pay" ranks.

For example Andy Robestell, in his tenth season in the N.F.L., starred at Arnold College; Roosevelt Brown studied at Morgan State; Dick Lane, defensive specialist of the Lions led Scottsbluff Junior College; teammate Gil Mains oriented at Murray State, and Gene "Big Daddy" Lipscomb didn't have the desire to acquire a higher education.

The unknown quarterback of the Colts, Johnny Unitas was spotted playing semi-pro ball at Schenley Park in Pittsburgh for six dollars a game when not working for the steel mills. I could go on and on, but the point is obvious.

Credit the Scouts

A tremendous amount of credit must be given to the scouts and recruiters of the N.F.L. They continually swelter under the Southwest desert sun, tramp over the Blue Mts.; breath dust for weeks in the nations biggest cities, and almost freeze in the upper Midwest to capture these untamed demons for the gridiron year after year.

This random collection of superb athletes has perfected professional football to heights it has never known with bone crushing tackling and blocking, devastating and swivel-hipped running, close line passing, Sally Rands, Statue of Liberties, and even triple reverses.

The National Football League has become the greatest sports organization in the world and it will continue to be just that as it supplies millions of fans with athletic perfection via the many ball parks and the "magic mirror" alike.

These teams play to win primarily, money being their second objective. To the pros winning is above all. To quote Knute Rockne: "Be a good loser—but don't lose!" That is the pros' motto!

In the Groove

Writer Friend Not Foe of Wildcats

Dan Grove

I have just been in a rather informal discussion with part of the football team. They were upset with several articles which appeared in last week's Villanovan.

I would like to make my position clear, here and now. As sports editor I am responsible for seeing that we have a sports page every week. This is the football season, and football is therefore the most important subject on these pages.

With that in mind I will try to explain the difficulties in reporting the away games. The team does not take a Villanovan sportswriter with them to the games. Therefore we must write our stories from the radio broadcast of the game. These stories must be written by Sunday and this makes interviews with the coaches and players tough. All we have to go on is another's word.

Situation Not Ideal

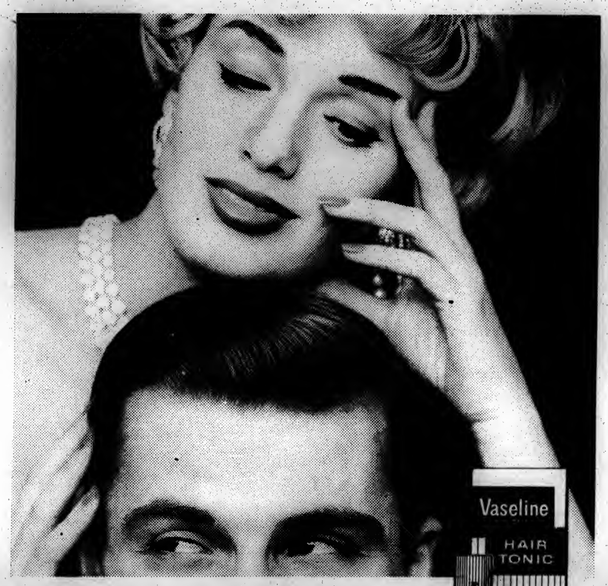
This is my sad situation, admittedly it is far from ideal. Even movies of the game are not available to the sports staff for three weeks.

I have never tried to undermine the football team or maliciously malign them. I have tried to write truth, perhaps this truth is sometimes mixed with misplaced sarcasm. But consider this, the Sunday papers have all the facts and figures, come Wednesday and the Villanovan nobody is terribly interested in a play-by-play rehash of a game played four days ago. We write what we call a color story to interest our readers. This sort of story is most difficult to write.

I have been accused of running the team down, of playing god with a typewriter. This is not my intention. I realize more than the next guy that playing college football is rough, damn rough. Practice from September 1, to the end of November with another gruelling session during the spring picnic season, is trying, to say the least.

Football Not Easy

Academically a pigskin player is definitely at a disadvantage. Many Friday classes are missed because of away games. Players don't feel like studying after a three-hour practice session.



After taking all of this a guy doesn't feel like being ridiculed by his classmates or the the Villanovan. Ridicule was never intended. Believe me, I am not physically fit to go around ridiculing fifty of the biggest guys in school.

But what should be done? Report only victories and ignore defeats. Just because this is the Villanova paper, it must not be used only to toss suger-coated platitudes around and refrain from criticism when it is due. Objectivity is the goal of this paper, perfection is the hope. No one is perfect.

Ardent Fan

I am an ardent Wildcat fan. Every year I say we can upset Army when I know the oddsmakers have other ideas. I said it wasn't so when West Chester beat us last year. I have lost several friendly wagers on the 'Cats, but I'll still keep making them because I know that someday things are going to be right, and the 'Cats will start rolling.

But roll or not Saturday, we still have to report it. Believe me, winners are much easier to write about than losers. So how about it 'Cats, you can make my job easier too. Good luck.

Wildcat On The Field And Gentleman Off—Joe Luzzi

by Bill Cercone

A Wildcat on the field and a gentleman off—that is the story of Joe Luzzi. Born and raised in North Branford, Connecticut, Joe attended Wilbur Cross High School where he played three years of varsity ball as a tackle.

While in high school Joe achieved such honors as All-State and All-American Honorable Mention. He was also the recipient of the MVP award given by the Yale Alumni Association.

A big factor influencing Joe to attend V.U. was that his brother, Don Luzzi, was a stand-out All-East guard on the squad. At present Don is a regular for the Calgary Stampedeers in the Canadian league.

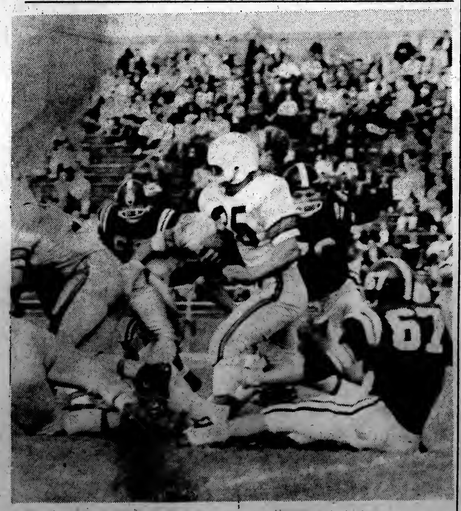
In his freshman year Joe played tackle, but in his sophomore year was switched to guard and in the middle of the season became a regular, a position which he has maintained in his junior and senior years.

Dawkins Best Back

Joe's biggest disappointment was the West Chester game of '59. His best game was with Army. Meeting President Eisenhower after the Navy game was his biggest thrill, and the best back was the flashing Pete Dawkins of Army, "who when hit would just keep his legs moving and walk right out of my arms." Asked his opinion of Navy"s Joe Bellino, Joe shrugged his shoulders and mumbled, "He's all right.".

CAPTAIN LUZZI

Commenting on the "60" team, Joe sadly shook his head and said, "I can't understand it, the coaching's there, the plays are there, the material's there; it's that we're just making too many mistakes.



Against Marquette we were jittery; against Navy we fumbled too much; and against Dayton we should have won. Coach Bell is doing his best and is as determined as the team to win."

Wildcats Still Have Fight

As a parting word, Joe let it be known that the Wildcats still have "fight" and are going to prove it by finishing with a winning season.

Speaking with Coach Alex Bell, the coach's face brightened when Joe's name was mentioned and is "impressed with Joe's desire and qualities of leadership. He is the spearhead and inspiration of the team."

As I talked with Joe Luzzi I was impressed by his humility and sincerity — qualities which only a few football players possess.

Ray Heinrich (35) bursts through an opening in the Wildcat line Saturday behind mammoth Cal Kammerer who cleared the way.

In The Sportlite

by Victor Strano

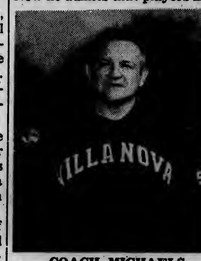
Ed Michaels was one of the 700 students enrolled at Villanova in 1933. During the next four years he was to attain fame as the Wildcats' first grid-iron, All-American.

A guard during the '33, '34, and '35 seasons, he was captain of his freshman squad and of the varsity in his senior year.

Upon his graduation in 1936, Michaels played in the National Football League with the Chicago Bears. He was traded to the Washington Redskins in 1937. The very next season he returned to Chicago where he remained until 1940.

He later played with the Philadelphia Eagles for four years before trying his hand as player coach of the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian League.

He joined the Villanova staff in 1951 as line coach but resigned to enter business in 1954. He returned as line coach the next year and in 1956 became freshman coach.



The Change

Since 1933 he has noticed quite a few changes both on the playing field and at Villanova itself.

The first item, of course, was the actual size of the college at that time. Michaels feels that it was a more closely knit student body. This, of course, helped the school spirit which seemed better than the present attitude. Then too, most of the students were residents.

He reports that at that time the Augustinians were doing most of the instructing in the classes; whereas we now have mostly laymen. The college acreage was not quite so extensive. Only a few of the present dormitories such as Mendel, Austin, and Alumni hall existed.

As far as the football program was concerned, the teams were bigger and better. Players used more muscle and less thinking power, reports Michaels. Now he admits that players must have more intelligence, both to learn the numerous plays and to keep some kind of scholastic standing.

COACH MICHAELS

Traditional Rivals

The scheduling was a little different too. Boston College and Detroit were traditional rivals just as they are now. Villanova's big games included Penn State and Temple. Pop Warner was the coach at Temple and they were playing many inter-sectional rivals. Villanova plays neither of these teams at the present time.

As coach Michaels was playing for VU, he took note of the old style of coaching. It can now be said that coaching was not so highly specialized as it is today. One team played all the seven defenses with variations. The offensive specialties in the 30's were the N.D. box and Pop Warner's single wing; whereas Oklahoma has now developed the split-T while teams such as Penn State and Delaware are developing their own wing-T's.

Copy Pro Styles

Previously there were three defenses at the most. Today a team would have to learn six or seven. Later, the two platoon system came into effect and more extensive coaching was developed.

"True, the two-platoon system went out, but all the new plays were retained and added to," Michaels explained.

Today college teams will copy the pro styles. If a team needs a good passing play they may borrow a play from the Eagles.

Michaels also makes note of the fact that a lot of good Catholic colleges have since given up football. Fordham, Santa Clara, St. Mary on the coast and Georgetown were big powers in their day. Today only Catholic schools such as Notre Dame, Holy Cross, Boston College, and Villanova continue a gridiron schedule.

As far as Michaels' present job is concerned, he gets a great thrill working with the young freshmen, knowing that he can watch their development over the years. Some don't stay around, of course, but the ones that make the varsity stem from his program.

Also, he has a full time job since he scouts for the team when not actually coaching. He said that he enjoys his work very much and will remain with the school indefinitely.

Did the average fan turn out to see rookie quarterback "Joe College" and the rest of the National Football League's thin crop of recruits? Most certainly not.

I should like to point out that at the starting quarterback slots last wekend were the Texas playboy Bobby Layne for the Steelers; the completely bald "Y.A. Title" who operated out of San Francisco even before Paladin; Norman Van Brocklin, the Flying Dutchman; Chucking Charlie Conerly who played for Ole Miss prior to the Civil War, and lastly, Eddie Le Baron, a little guy with the massive job of keeping newly-formed Dallas from humiliation.

Those five ancient wonders of the football world are only examples from one position, but this could be illustrated throughout the entire eleven spots.

Exception To the Rule

Naturally there are exceptions to all rules, and thus hats off to Milt Plub of Penn State since he has hung on gamely to become the number one quartrback of the powerful Cleveland Browns. Did you ever try to fill Otto Graham's shoes?

Good luck to Earl Morrall, Len Dawson, Ralph Guglielmi, Don Meridith, and Sonny Jurgenson and to their crys for a cushioned bench! Who says there is no room for another league?

Small College Stars

Where do these talented gridders acquire their B.S. degrees? I'll admit that a huge percentage of today's stars are from major universities where football is big business, but the small colleges have donated their share of tenors to the "play-for-pay" ranks.

For example Andy Robestell, in his tenth season in the N.F.L., starred at Arnold College; Roosevelt Brown studied at Morgan State; Dick Lane, defensive specialist of the Lions led Scottsbluff Junior College; teammate Gil Mains oriented at Murray State, and Gene "Big Daddy" Lipscomb didn't have the desire to acquire a higher education.

The unknown quarterback of the Colts, Johnny Unitas was spotted playing semi-pro ball at Schenley Park in Pittsburgh for six dollars a game when not working for the steel mills. I could go on and on, but the point is obvious.

Credit the Scouts

A tremendous amount of credit must be given to the scouts and recruiters of the N.F.L. They continually swelter under the Southwest desert sun, tramp over the Blue Mts.; breath dust for weeks in the nations biggest cities, and almost freeze in the upper Midwest to capture these untamed demons for the gridiron year after year.

This random collection of superb athletes has perfected professional football to heights it has never known with bone crushing tackling and blocking, devastating and swivel-hipped running, close line passing, Sally Rands, Statue of Liberties, and even triple reverses.

The National Football League has become the greatest sports organization in the world and it will continue to be just that as it supplies millions of fans with athletic perfection via the many ball parks and the "magic mirror" alike.

These teams play to win primarily, money being their second objective. To the pros winning is above all. To quote Knute Rockne: "Be a good loser—but don't lose!" That is the pros' motto!

Writer Friend Not Foe of Wildcats

Dan Grove

I have just been in a rather informal discussion with part of the football team. They were upset with several articles which appeared in last week's Villanovan.

I would like to make my position clear, here and now. As sports editor I am responsible for seeing that we have a sports page every week. This is the football season, and football is therefore the most important subject on these pages.

With that in mind I will try to explain the difficulties in reporting the away games. The team does not take a Villanovan sportswriter with them to the games. Therefore we must write our stories from the radio broadcast of the game. These stories must be written by Sunday and this makes interviews with the coaches and players tough. All we have to go on is another's word.

Situation Not Ideal

This is my sad situation, admittedly it is far from ideal. Even movies of the game are not available to the sports staff for three weeks.

I have never tried to undermine the football team or maliciously malign them. I have tried to write truth, perhaps this truth is sometimes mixed with misplaced sarcasm. But consider this, the Sunday papers have all the facts and figures, come Wednesday and the Villanovan nobody is terribly interested in a play-by-play rehash of a game played four days ago. We write what we call a color story to interest our readers. This sort of story is most difficult to write.

I have been accused of running the team down, of playing god with a typewriter. This is not my intention. I realize more than the next guy that playing college football is rough, damn rough. Practice from September 1, to the end of November with another gruelling session during the spring picnic season, is trying, to say the least.

Football Not Easy

Academically a pigskin player is definitely at a disadvantage. Many Friday classes are missed because of away games. Players don't feel like studying after a three-hour practice session.

After taking all of this a guy doesn't feel like being ridiculed by his classmates or the the Villanovan. Ridicule was never intended. Believe me, I am not physically fit to go around ridiculing fifty of the biggest guys in school.

But what should be done? Report only victories and ignore defeats. Just because this is the Villanova paper, it must not be used only to toss suger-coated platitudes around and refrain from criticism when it is due. Objectivity is the goal of this paper, perfection is the hope. No one is perfect.

Ardent Fan

I am an ardent Wildcat fan. Every year I say we can upset Army when I know the oddsmakers have other ideas. I said it wasn't so when West Chester beat us last year. I have lost several friendly wagers on the 'Cats, but I'll still keep making them because I know that someday things are going to be right, and the 'Cats will start rolling.

But roll or not Saturday, we still have to report it. Believe me, winners are much easier to write about than losers. So how about it 'Cats, you can make my job easier too. Good luck.

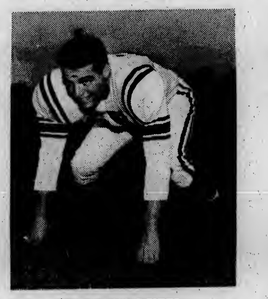
Wildcat On The Field And Gentleman Off—Joe Luzzi

by Bill Cercone

A Wildcat on the field and a gentleman off—that is the story of Joe Luzzi. Born and raised in North Branford, Connecticut, Joe attended Wilbur Cross High School where he played three years of varsity ball as a tackle.



While in high school Joe achieved such honors as All-State and All-American Honorable Mention. He was also the recipient of the MVP award given by the Yale Alumni Association.

A big factor influencing Joe to attend V.U. was that his brother, Don Luzzi, was a stand-out All-East guard on the squad. At present Don is a regular for the Calgary Stampedeers in the Canadian league.

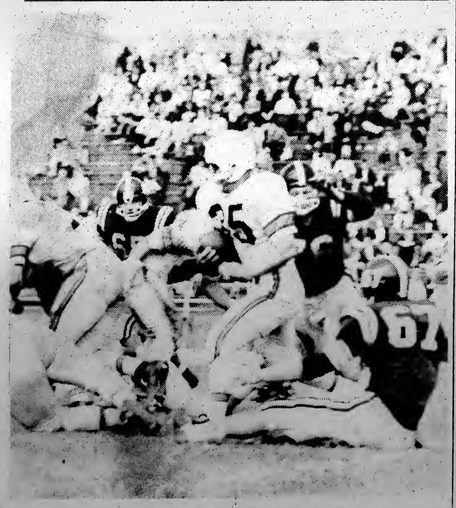
In his freshman year Joe played tackle, but in his sophomore year was switched to guard and in the middle of the season became a regular, a position which he has maintained in his junior and senior years.

Dawkins Best Back

Joe's biggest disappointment was the West Chester game of '59. His best game was with Army. Meeting President Eisenhower after the Navy game was his biggest thrill, and the best back was the flashing Pete Dawkins of Army, "who when hit would just keep his legs moving and walk right out of my arms." Asked his opinion of Navy"s Joe Bellino, Joe shrugged his shoulders and mumbled, "He's all right."

CAPTAIN LUZZI

Commenting on the "60" team, Joe sadly shook his head and said, "I can't understand it, the coaching's there, the plays are there, the material's there; it's that we're just making too many mistakes.



Against Marquette we were jittery; against Navy we fumbled too much; and against Dayton we should have won. Coach Bell is doing his best and is as determined as the team to win."

Wildcats Still Have Fight

As a parting word, Joe let it be known that the Wildcats still have "fight" and are going to prove it by finishing with a winning season.

Speaking with Coach Alex Bell, the coach's face brightened when Joe's name was mentioned and is "impressed with Joe's desire and qualities of leadership. He is the spearhead and inspiration of the team."

As I talked with Joe Luzzi I was impressed by his humility and sincerity—qualities which only a few football players possess.

In The Sportlite

by Victor Strane

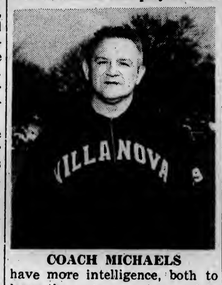
Ed Michaels was one of the 700 students enrolled at Villanova in 1933. During the next four years he was to attain fame as the Wildcats' first grid-iron, All-American.

A guard during the '33, '34, and '35 seasons, he was captain of his freshman squad and of the varsity in his senior year.

Upon his graduation in 1936, Michaels played in the National Football League with the Chicago Bears. He was traded to the Washington Redskins in 1937. The very next season he returned to Chicago where he remained until 1940.

He later played with the Philadelphia Eagles for four years before trying his hand as player coach of the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian League.

He joined the Villanova staff in 1951 as line coach but resigned to enter business in 1954. He returned as line coach the next year and in 1956 became freshman coach.



The Change

Since 1933 he has noticed quite a few changes both on the playing field and at Villanova itself.

The first item, of course, was the actual size of the college at that time. Michaels feels that it was a more closely knit student body. This, of course, helped the school spirit which seemed better than the present attitude. Then too, most of the students were residents.

He reports that at that time the Augustinians were doing most of the instructing in the classes; whereas we now have mostly laymen. The college acreage was not quite so extensive. Only a few of the present dormitories such as Mendel, Austin, and Alumni hall existed.

As far as the football program was concerned, the teams were bigger and better. Players used more muscle and less thinking power, reports Michaels. Now he admits that players must have more intelligence, both to learn the numerous plays and to keep some kind of scholastic standing.

COACH MICHAELS

Traditional Rivals

The scheduling was a little different too. Boston College and Detroit were traditional rivals just as they are now. Villanova's big games included Penn State and Temple. Pop Warner was the coach at Temple and they were playing many inter-sectional rivals. Villanova plays neither of these teams at the present time.

As coach Michaels was playing for VU, he took note of the old style of coaching. It can now be said that coaching was not so highly specialized as it is today. One team played all the seven defenses with variations. The offensive specialties in the 30's were the N.D. box and Pop Warner's single wing; whereas Oklahoma has now developed the split-T while teams such as Penn State and Delaware are developing their own wing-T's.

Copy Pro Styles

Previously there were three defenses at the most. Today a team would have to learn six or seven. Later, the two platoon system came into effect and more extensive coaching was developed.

"True, the two-platoon system went out, but all the new plays were retained and added to," Michaels explained.

Today college teams will copy the pro styles. If a team needs a good passing play they may borrow a play from the Eagles.

Michaels also makes note of the fact that a lot of good Catholic colleges have since given up football. Fordham, Santa Clara, St. Mary on the coast and Georgetown were big powers in their day. Today only Catholic schools such as Notre Dame, Holy Cross, Boston College, and Villanova continue a gridiron schedule.

As far as Michaels' present job is concerned, he gets a great thrill working with the young freshmen, knowing that he can watch their development over the years. Some don't stay around, of course, but the ones that make the varsity stem from his program.

Also, he has a full time job since he scouts for the team when not actually coaching. He said that he enjoys his work very much and will remain with the school indefinitely.

Old Man Injury Back As COP Cops Parent Day Win

by Jack Duffy

The Villanova Wildcats put on an interesting show Saturday before a parents' day crowd of 9,370 at Villanova Stadium. Their performance, however, was not enough to save the cats from their eighth straight defeat and fourth this year, as College of the Pacific pushed across two fourth period touchdowns for a 24-7 victory.

College of Pacific ,known as the passingest team west of the Baltimore Colts went to the air very few times, five to be exact, and took full advantage of the Villanova line.

The Tigers from Stockton, California received many breaks Saturday afternoon and made the most of them. Half way through the first period, a Ted Aceto punt stopped dead on the C.O.P. 3 yard line only to have a Villanova lineman down it and automatically bring it out to the twenty. From the twenty the Tigers started to grind out the first downs and march toward the V.U. goal.

Scott A Workhorse

Dick Scott, the Tigers' 187 lb. Junior Fullback, carried the brunt of the load for the Tigers in their 22 play march. Scott carried 13 times for 38 yards and always picked important yardage. Three times on the march the West Coasters had a fourth down staring them in the face and three times Scott got the necessary yardage to keep the drive moving, including the final yard for the touchdown.

The Wildcats had a few scoring opportunities themselves but failed to convert them. With Nick Langone directing the team the Wildcats drove to the Tiger 3 only to lose the ball on a fumble. The 'Cats held and Bob Gatiss's punt went off the side of his foot and out of bounds on the 16 yard line. On the first play Langone again fumbled and College of Pacific took over.

The most surprising performance of the year for the Wildcats came later in the half when Richie (give me a chance) Richman finally entered his first varsity ballgame. Richman looked like Norm Van Brocklin and Bobby Lane all rolled into one blue uniform. He immediately started to move the 'Cats down field and was stopped only by the clock with the ball on the four yard line.

Richman Scores

In the second half the 'Cats received the kickoff and Richman went right to work. With his quick hand offs and roll out passes, he carried the 'Cats to the Pacific 44 yard line. Then he faked his fullback into the line, rolled out to the left and cut through the left tackle spot. Once inside the secondary, Richie cut to the right and outran the Tiger secondary for the touchdown.

Larry Sopko kicked the point and the 'Cats led 7-6. It was the first time this year that the Wildcats had ben in the lead.

College of Pacific came back strong following a 60 yard kickoff return by Herman Urenda. Nine plays later Bob Gatiss threw his first pass, a 10 yarder, to half back Eddie Kotal, who stepped into the end zone, to make it 12-7.

With Richman, a southpaw, sophomore, playing like he intended to be Villanova's quarterback for quite a while, the 'Cats moved down the field nicely. They got all the way to the Tiger two yard line, but an offside penalty moved them back to the seven.

Tigers Hold

Richman, on a 4th and 7 situation rolled out to pass but couldn't find a receiver and had to run. He fell inches short of the goal and C.O.P. took over.

In the fourth period the Tigers received a fumble on the Villanova four and Scott scored in two plays.

After the kickoff Bob Cabanyog intercepted one of Richman's passes and returned it to the V.U. 40. Ten plays later the Tigers had their fourth touchdown as Bill Kutzer slugged over from the one, and that was the ball game.

More Injuries

Once again injuries played a big part in the 'Cats loss. In the second quarter Tom O'Rourke suffered a compound ankle fracture and may be lost for the season. O'Rourke, a pass snatching defensive specialist, was just coming into his own on offense and this was the first game he started as an offensive back. Guards Joe Luzzi and Gene Cappetelli were also hurt. Luzzi's injury came early in the third quarter and the Wildcat captain did not return to the game.

This was the first game of a series. The next game will be played next year at Stockton, California. College of Pacific's record is now 2 wins and 2 losses. The 'Cats are 0 and 4, but things look like they could get better. With Richman looking like a quarter-back that knows what to do with the ball and how to pass it, and the return of Gruneisen inevitable, the 'Cats, hopes look good.

Miami Redskins To Invade The Wildcat Lair Saturday

by Dan Bell

This Saturday the Redskins of Miami of Ohio will come whooping into Goodreau Stadium to make war with the Wildcats, in the second game of this new series which was started last year. Miami came out on top last year with a decisive 26-6 victory.

Poor Showing So Far

So far this season the Redskins have managed to gain one victory and that was a 15-14 squeaker over Western Michigan. Their two defeats were at the hands of Xavier and Bowling Green. Last year Miami recorded a mediocre 5-4 record but this year Coach Jack Pont welcomed back 23 lettermen almost all of whom have at least one starting assignment in their carers at Miami. This array of talent does not seem to have taken effect on the Redskins in view of their one win, two loss record.

Personnel

Some of the bright lights in Miami's attack this season who are worthwhile watching are Howie Millisor, a glue-fingered and slippery end who, with an assist from the quarterbacks, could make the opposing secondary jump. Another Miami asset is a hard-driving fullback by the name of Bill Triplet who can really turn on the speed once he passes the line of scrimmage.

At the halfback spot the breakaway touch will be provided by Tom Jennell, John Moore, and Soph Bob Williams. To open the way for Miami's backfield there are several proven performers in the art of removing opposition roadblocks. They are tackle Sam Ridder, guards Ron Brooks and Ed Keating, and center Roger Turvy. Miami is very strong at their end positions due to the return of their veterans such as Dave Kaiser, Dave Pendelton and Tom Mallory.

The Redskins are depending heavily on their sophomore talent to come through in relief of the starters. This is especially true in the guard positions where Sam Ridder, Bob Fletcher and Jack Tibbels, the veterans should be backed up by sophomores Tom Nomina, Larry Streets, Paul Watters, and Jack Kirkpatrick. Sophomore Clyde Marks and transplanted tackle Jerry Hill should provide capable relief for Turvy at center. Miami has not shown itself as a power so far this year and if they progress in the way they have been, the future does not look bright for the Redskins.

'Cats Weak at Ends

After the Navy game Villanova encountered a problem at their end positions. Jackie Mount and Ron Meyers did not make the trip to Dayton, and in the first quarter of the game Sam Gruneisen was taken out with a torn cartilage of the knee. This has cut the 'Cats offense in half and against Dayton it showed on the scoreboard. If Myers and Mount can recover completely the 'Cats won't be in too bad a shape but if not, the passing game of Villanova is going to be limited. The Wildcats will be fighting to avenge last year's defeat, and even though the 'Cats have experienced some bad days against their earlier opponents, they could come up with a victory if the ball bounces in the right way.

Well Known Speakers To Appear At Forum Sponsored By Council

Plans for the Forum Program sponsored by the Student Council were among topics discussed at a meeting of the Academic Affairs Committee last week. Since arrangements for early forum speakers are not yet final, speakers have not been announced to date.

Jim Strazzella, Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs ,stated at the meeting that the program, because of increased funds made possible by the new Student Council treasury, will operate on an expanded scope this academic year.

According to Strazzella, the committee is attempting to procure "well-known, qualified speakers who have a vital and stimulating message to the University's students.

Scalia Resigns

He also announced that Bob Scalia has resigned as Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee. He added that Scalia's resignation was necessitated because of personal reasons.

The Student Tutor Program, conducted last year on a "moderately successful" basis, will be re-established this year, the committee members announced. Mike Wesley, who is in charge of the program, stated that it seems wisest to postpone action until after mid-term examinations.

The program will be conducted to provide free scholastic aid for students desiring help in various academic subjects. This assistance will be given by fellow students who have volunteered for this purpose and who have an A or B grade on the subjects which they will tutor.

Those interested in the plan, either as tutors or pupils, can register with Mike Wesley or sign at a place to be designated. Registrants will then be informed of the persons they are to contact.

Teacher Evaluation

The committee also discussed the possibility of introducing a teacher evaluation program. This plan would provide that teachers, at the end of a course, pass out comprehensive evaluation forms to their students. Each student would then give an honest evaluation of the teacher and hand in the form, unsigned.

This method, the committee discovered, already is being used extensivly in the Engineering School with favorable results.

Another matter under consideration is the Master Coding System. This is a method of coding classes in such a manner that a specific number or letter will indicate definite class days and times. For example, "I" could indicate a class held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 9:30.

These code numbers would be listed before the course numbers on the master schedule of classes which usually is seen circulating during registration.

Dear Father Klekotka:

It was a great pleasure to meet you last Saturday at the Navy-Villanova football game and to have the opportunity to talk with you. Please give Coach Bell and Captain Luzzi my compliments on the hard fought game played by Villanova.

Although your team did not win, it showed signs of promise for the future, particularly in view of the fact that most of the players are juniors and sophomores. In any case, I wish you and the players the best of luck in future games.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Debating Club Tentatively Plan Invitation Tournament

"This is the year for Beta Gamma," says Jim Rhodes, Beta Gamma President. Preliminary reports seem to indicate that this year, besides becoming one of the most influential organizations on campus, the campus debating society will become a force in national debating circles as well.

"At one of the last meetings of the spring semester, the club elected the most vigorous executive committee in its history," continued Rhodes. The club officers are Rhodes and Frank McCormick, president and vice-president, respectively, and Terry Stratman, Joe Liggera, and Joe Remy, treasurer-secretary, and student council representative. Richard McDonough of the Villanova speech department will serve as moderator.

Rhodes also disclosed that there will be an invitational debate tournament here at Villanova on December 10.

Tentative Plans

Tentative plans for an invitational tournament restrict the invitations to approximately fifteen colleges for this the first year of its existence, because of the problems yet to be worked out of administrating an affair of this size. The club, however, hopes to institutionalize the tournament and expand it within a few years to the point where it is a drawing-card for top schools.

The tournament this year will run for one day and its completion will be marked by the awarding of trophies to the teams with the best win-loss record. "Incidentally, a bevy of Villanova nurses will act as hostesses to visiting teams during the tournament," said Rhodes.

The basis for all the optimism about Beta Gamma is in the club itself. Beta Gamma now has several members, in fact two of its officers, who were members of national championship debating teams in high school.

Impressive Record

In addition, last year's novice teams gained the impressive seasonal record of one first place win and one second place trophy in tournament competition. Moreover, a new member of the faculty, Rev. John Quinn, O.S.A., has coached several national championship teams, and Rhodes hopes that his assistance may be obtained in coaching Villanova teams this year.

Themes For Basca Award Night Must Be Submitted Tomorrow

The Nick Basca Award Night, highlight of homecoming activities, will be held this year on Friday, November 4, at 7:30 P.M. The Intramural Department has set Thursday, October 20 as the final date for submission of themes by the individual residence halls.

The practice of decorating halls at Villanova began during the Villanova-Temple series of football games and has been continued with growing success each year. William Connolly, a Villanova alumnus, donated the award each year. After World War II, Mr. Connolly suggested that the homecoming award be named "The Nick Basca Memorial Award" in memory of the Villanova athlete who was killed in the War.

Last year's trophy winner was Simpson Hall, garnering 24 points with the excution of their theme, "Genie Comes to Villanova." Close by, with 23 points, was Sullivan Hall with their display as "Virginia Tech's "Gobblers."

Resident students are urged to cooperate with their hall chairmen in perfecting a theme, collecting enough money to cover cost of materials, and finally in setting up the display.

Seniors Note!

Senior History forms must be submitted immediately to the Belle Air office, second floor Dougherty Hall, otherwise they will not appear in the 1961 Belle Air.

Student Council Treasurer Announces Balance Of $2300

Jim Hooker, commuter, treasurer of the Student Council, revealed last week that the Student Council treasury, initiated a year ago tomorrow, is presently $2,348.58 in the black.

The treasury, proposed a year ago by former Council president Tom Hoffman, was termed at that time by the prexy as the "most progressive idea the Council has ever attempted since its inception on campus."

TREASURER HOOKER
. . . making money.

As originally conceived by Hoffman and his Cabinet, the treasury was to have a budget of $5,000; however, Hooker contends that within a few years under careful and imaginative control by the Council, the treasury could possibly approach $10,000.

Hooker reported that the big money maker last year was the movie program, which when begin was thought by many Council members to be a "break-even" proposition. However, the program netted over $600.

New Movie Projector

"The movie program for this year will be commenced in the very near future", assured Hooker, "in fact, a new movie projector is one of the four projects aproved by the administration, into which the Studdent-Council will delve into the treasury for funds."

Other administration approved projects to be undertaken by the Council are a Who's Who banquet, a Student government library, and a mixer program in co-ordination with spirit committee rallies.

At the conclusion of last semester the treasury contained $1113.12 after the Council proceds were matched by the administration. Last year the administration agreed to match, at the end of the semeser, he profits of the Student Council.

"Of course the big item that boosted our treasury to its present height", said Hooker, "was the Student Council Dance held a few weks tgo." That profit was $1,582.00.

$700 To Go

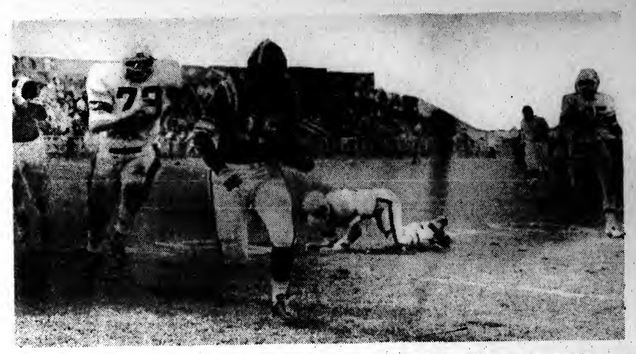
The treasurer also announced that about $700 of the present treasury figure will be allocated within the next few weks to former Council commitments. The big items here are the NFCCS dues of $300 and a spirit appropriation of $150. This will reduce the treasury to less than $1600.

"Other programs which I would like to see undertaken by the treasury", related Hooker, "are a college carnival ,a student activities handbook ,a student union handbook, a used mimeo machine for the Student union handbook, a used mimeo machine for the Student Council office, and a student scholarship fund."

Hooker has a great faith that the Council's treasurer's post will become one of the most powerful in the school. "The treasurer knows more about the Council's workings than anyone else", he noted, "and his advice and knowledge will be looked upon as golden in the years to come as the treasury expands and as Council operations are modified."

Vice-Treasurer Post

It is Hooker's belief that great care should be henceforth taken, when choosing the treasurer's succesor. "Perhaps a vice-treasurer post should be inaugurated in order to give a junior the experience necessary under a senior treasurer to assume the head duties the following semester much as the vice-chairman moves into the chairman's job after serving a year's apprenticship," he proposed.



Pleasant Balance

An overall balance of $1,000 in April would please the treasurer, this is assuming the administration will match a Council balance of $500. Confirmation from the administration that they will again match the treasurer funds, is forthcoming. (This agreement between the Council and administration is only renewed for a year at a time)

Hooker asserts that this year will finally decide the fate of the treasury. The possibilities of this treasury are unlimited," doncluded Hooker, "and this year will decide whether in ten years we will have $10,000 or nothing."

With Richman, a southpaw, sophomore, playing like he intended to be Villanova's quarterback for quite a while, the 'Cats moved down the field nicely. They got all the way to the Tiger two yard line, but an offside penalty moved them back to the seven.

Tigers Hold

Richman, on a 4th and 7 situation rolled out to pass but couldn't find a receiver and had to run. He fell inches short of the goal and C.O.P. took over.

In the fourth period the Tigers received a fumble on the Villanova four and Scott scored in two plays.

After the kickoff Bob Cabanyog intercepted one of Richman's passes and returned it to the V.U. 40. Ten plays later the Tigers had their fourth touchdown as Bill Kutzer slugged over from the one, and that was the ball game.

More Injuries

Once again injuries played a big part in the 'Cats loss. In the second quarter Tom O'Rourke suffered a compound ankle fracture and may be lost for the season. O'Rourke, a pass snatching defensive specialist, was just coming into his own on offense and this was the first game he started as an offensive back. Guards Joe Luzzi and Gene Cappetelli were also hurt. Luzzi's injury came early in the third quarter and the Wildcat captain did not return to the game.

This was the first game of a series. The next game will be played next year at Stockton, California. College of Pacific's record is now 2 wins and 2 losses. The 'Cats are 0 and 4, but things look like they could get better. With Richman looking like a quarter-back that knows what to do with the ball and how to pass it, and the return of Grunelsen inevitable, the 'Cats, hopes look good.

Miami Redskins To Invade The Wildcat Lair Saturday

by Don Bell

This Saturday the Redskins of Miami of Ohio will come whooping into Goodreau Stadium to make war with the Wildcats, in the second game of this new series which was started last year. Miami came out on top last year with a decisive 26-6 victory.

Poor Showing So Far

So far this season the Redskins have managed to gain one victory and that was a 15-14 squeaker over Western Michigan. Their two defeats were at the hands of Xavier and Bowling Green. Last year Miami recorded a mediocre 5-4 record but this year Coach Jack Pont welcomed back 23 lettermen almost all of whom have at least one starting assignment in their carers at Miami. This array of talent does not seem to have taken effect on the Redskins in view of their one win, two loss record.

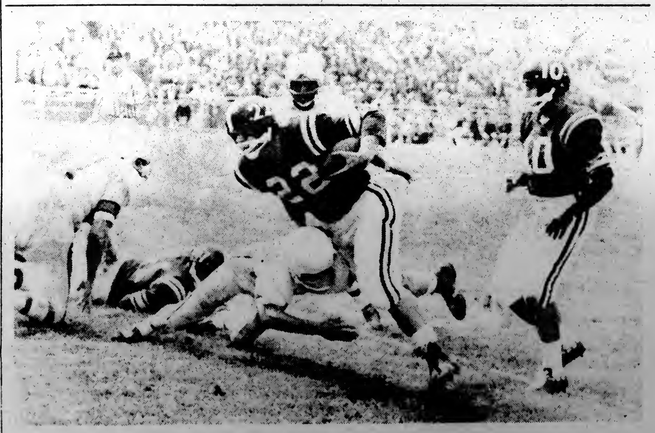
Personnel

Some of the bright lights in Miami's attack this season who are worthwhile watching are Howie Millisor, a glue-fingered and slippery end who, with an assist from the quarterbacks, could make the opposing secondary jump. Another Miami asset is a hard-driving fullback by the name of Bill Triplet who can really turn on the speed once he passes the line of scrimmage.

At the halfback spot the breakaway touch will be provided by Tom Jennell, John Moore, and Soph Bob Williams. To open the way for Miami's backfield there are several proven performers in the art of removing opposition roadblocks. They are tackle Sam Ridder, guards Ron Brooks and Ed Keating, and center Roger Turvy. Miami is very strong at their end positions due to the return of their veterans such as Dave Kaiser, Dave Pendelton and Tom Mallory.

The Redskins are depending heavily on their sophomore talent to come through in relief of the starters. This is especially true in the guard positions where Sam Ridder, Bob Fletcher and Jack Tibbels, the veterans should be backed up by sophomores Tom Nomina, Larry Streets, Paul Watters, and Jack Kirkpatrick. Sophomore Clyde Marks and transplanted tackle Jerry Hill should provide capable relief for Turvy at center. Miami has not shown itself as a power so far this year and if they progress in the way they have been, the future does not look bright for the Redskins.

'Cats Weak at Ends



After the Navy game Villanova encountered a problem at their end positions. Jackie Mount and Ron Meyers did not make the trip to Dayton, and in the first quarter of the game Sam Gruneisen was taken out with a torn cartilage of the knee. This has cut the 'Cats offense in half and against Dayton it showed on the scoreboard. If Myers and Mount can recover completely the 'Cats won't be in too bad a shape but if not, the passing game of Villanova is going to be limited. The Wildcats will be fighting to avenge last year's defeat, and even though the 'Cats have experienced some bad days against their earlier opponents, they could come up with a victory if the ball bounces in the right way.

Well Known Speakers To Appear At Forum Sponsored By Council

Plans for the Forum Program sponsored by the Student Council were among topics discussed at a meeting of the Academic Affairs Committee last week. Since arrangements for early forum speakers are not yet final, speakers have not been announced to date.

Jim Strazzella, Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs ,stated at the meeting that the program, because of increased funds made possible by the new Student Council treasury, will operate on an expanded scope this academic year.

According to Strazzella, the committee is attempting to procure "well-known, qualified speakers who have a vital and stimulating message to the University's students.

Scalia Resigns

He also announced that Bob Scalia has resigned as Chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee. He added that Scalia's resignation was necessitated because of personal reasons.

The Student Tutor Program, conducted last year on a "moderately successful" basis, will be re-established this year, the committee members announced, Mike Wesley, who is in charge of the program, stated that it seems wisest to postpone action until after mid-term examinations.

The program will be conducted to provide free scholastic aid for students desiring help in various academic subjects. This assistance will be given by fellow students who have volunteered for this purpose and who have an A or B grade on the subjects which they will tutor.

Those interested in the plan, either as tutors or pupils, can register with Mike Wesley or sign at a place to be designated. Registrants will then be informed of the persons they are to contact.

Teacher Evaluation

The committee also discussed the possibility of introducing a teacher evaluation program. This plan would provide that teachers, at the end of a course, pass out comprehensive evaluation forms to their students. Each student would then give an honest evaluation of the teacher and hand in the form, unsigned.

This method, the committee discovered, already is being used extensivly in the Engineering School with favorable results.

Another matter under consideration is the Master Coding System. This is a method of coding classes in such a manner that a specific number or letter will indicate definite class days and times. For example, "I" could indicate a class held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday at 9:30.

These code numbers would be listed before the course numbers on the master schedule of classes which usually is seen circulating during registration.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

September 28, 1960

Dear Father Klekotka:

It was a great pleasure to meet you last Saturday at the Navy-Villanova football game and to have the opportunity to talk with you. Please give Coach Bell and Captain Luzzi my compliments on the hard fought game played by Villanova.

Although your team did not win, it showed signs of promise for the future, particularly in view of the fact that most of the players are juniors and sophomores. In any case, I wish you and the players the best of luck in future games.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Dwight D. Eisenhower

Debating Club Tentatively Plan Invitation Tournament

"This is the year for Beta Gamma," says Jim Rhodes, Beta Gamma President. Preliminary reports seem to indicate that this year, besides becoming one of the most influential organizations on campus, the campus debating society will become a force in national debating circles as well.

"At one of the last meetings of the spring semester, the club elected the most vigorous executive committee in its history," continued Rhodes. The club officers are Rhodes and Frank McCormick, president and vice-president, respectively, and Terry Stratman, Joe Liggera, and Joe Remy, treasurer - secretary, and student council representative. Richard McDonough of the Villanova speech department will serve as moderator.

Rhodes also disclosed that there will be an invitational debate tournament here at Villanova on December 10.

Tentative Plans

Tentative plans for an invitational tournament restrict the invitations to approximately fifteen colleges for this the first year of its existence, because of the problems yet to be worked out of administrating an affair of this size. The club, however, hopes to institutionalize the tournament and expand it within a few years to the point where it is a drawing-card for top schools.

The tournament this year will run for one day and its completion will be marked by the awarding of trophies to the teams with the best win-loss record. "Incidentally, a bevy of Villanova nurses will act as hostesses to visiting teams during the tournament," said Rhodes.

The basis for all the optimism about Beta Gamma is in the club itself. Beta Gamma now has several members, in fact two of its officers, who were members of national championship debating teams in high school.

Impressive Record

In addition, last year's novice teams gained the impressive seasonal record of one first place win and one second place trophy in tournament competition. Moreover, a new member of the faculty, Rev. John Quinn, O.S.A., has coached several national championship teams, and Rhodes hopes that his assistance may be obtained in coaching Villanova teams this year.

Themes For Basca Award Night Must Be Submitted Tomorrow

The Nick Basca Award Night, highlight of homecoming activities, will be held this year on Friday, November 4, at 7:30 P.M. The Intramural Department has set Thursday, October 20 as the final date for submission of themes by the individual residence halls.

The practice of decorating halls at Villanova began during the Villanova-Temple series of football games and has been continued with growing success each year. William Connolly, a Villanova alumnus, donated the award each year. After World War II, Mr. Connolly suggested that the homecoming award be named "The Nick Basca Memorial Award" in memory of the Villanova athlete who was killed in the War.

Last year's trophy winner was Simpson Hall, garnering 24 points with the excution of their theme, "Genie Comes to Villanova." Close by, with 23 points, was Sullivan Hall with their display as "Virginia Tech's "Gobblers."

Resident students are urged to cooperate with their hall chairmen in perfecting a theme, collecting enough money to cover cost of materials, and finally in setting up the display.

Seniors Note!

Senior History forms must be submitted immediately to the Belle Air office, second floor Dougherty Hall, otherwise they will not appear in the 1961 Belle Air.

Student Council Treasurer Announces Balance Of $2300

Jim Hooker, commuter, treasurer of the Student Council, revealed last week that the Student Council treasury, initiated a year ago tomorrow, is presently $2,348.58 in the black.

The treasury, proposed a year ago by former Council president Tom Hoffman, was termed at that time by the prexy as the "most progressive idea the Council has ever attempted since its inception on campus."

TREASURER HOOKER
. . . making money.

As originally conceived by Hoffman and his Cabinet, the treasury was to have a budget of $5,000; however, Hooker contends that within a few years under careful and imaginative control by the Council, the treasury could possibly approach $10,000.

Hooker reported that the big money maker last year was the movie program, which when begin was thought by many Council members to be a "break-even" proposition. However, the program netted over $600.

New Movie Projector

"The movie program for this year will be commenced in the very near future", assured Hooker, "in fact, a new movie projector is one of the four projects aproved by the administration, into which the Studdent-Council will delve into the treasury for funds."

Other administration approved projects to be undertaken by the Council are a Who's Who banquet, a Student government library, and a mixer program in co-ordination with spirit committee rallies.

At the conclusion of last semester the treasury contained $1113.12 after the Council proceds were matched by the administration. Last year the administration agreed to match, at the end of the semeser, he profits of the Student Council.

"Of course the big item that boosted our treasury to its present height", said Hooker, "was the Student Council Dance held a few weks tgo." That profit was $1,582.00.

$700 To Go

The treasurer also announced that about $700 of the present treasury figure will be allocated within the next few weks to former Council commitments. The big items here are the NFCCS dues of $300 and a spirit appropriation of $150. This will reduce the treasury to less than $1600.

"Other programs which I would like to see undertaken by the treasury", related Hooker, "are a college carnival ,a student activities handbook ,a student union handbook, a used mimeo machine for the Student union handbook, a used mimeo machine for the Student Council office, and a student scholarship fund."

Hooker has a great faith that the Council's treasurer's post will become one of the most powerful in the school. "The treasurer knows more about the Council's workings than anyone else", he noted, "and his advice and knowledge will be looked upon as golden in the years to come as the treasury expands and as Council operations are modified."

Vice-Treasurer Post

It is Hooker's belief that great care should be henceforth taken, when choosing the treasurer's succesor. "Perhaps a vice-treasurer post should be inaugurated in order to give a junior the experience necessary under a senior treasurer to assume the head duties the following semester much as the vice-chairman moves into the chairman's job after serving a year's apprenticship," he proposed.

Pleasant Balance

An overall balance of $1,000 in April would please the treasurer, this is assuming the administration will match a Council balance of $500. Confirmation from the administration that they will again match the treasurer funds, is forthcoming. (This agreement between the Council and administration is only renewed for a year at a time)

Hooker asserts that this year will finally decide the fate of the treasury. The possibilities of this treasury are unlimited," doncluded Hooker, "and this year will decide whether in ten years we will have $10,000 or nothing."

Dillon Is Named Navy Battalion Commander For The Ensuing Year

Thomas J. Dillon, a senior at Villanova, has been appointed Navy Student Battalion Commander. Dillon is majoring in Electrical Engineering and has the outstanding cumulative average of 3.72.

Here at Villanova, he has been the number-one man in aptitude and scholastic standing among the midshipmen. Upon graduation he will be commissioned as a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

During his first midshipman cruise, Dillon was stationed aboard the USS Acon. Among the countries he visited, he considers his stay in Belgium a particularly valuable experience because he was able to visit the World's Fair.

MIDSHIPMAN DILLON
. . . tops in everything.

Always Tops

According to Major John Rooney, Assistant Professor of Naval Science, Tom Dillon is "an outstanding boy. He's always been tops in everything he has done," said Major Rooney.

In regard to improving the NROTC unit at Villanova, Dillon stated that he didn't think it could be improved. "I think it is an excellent unit and needs no improvement," he declared.

Dillon expressed the feeling that the NROTC has helped him during his stay at Villanova because of the terrific competition involved and because of the additional training he has received. He added, "It helps to develop a sense of responsibility in the student."

The new batallion commander stated that his education has been"greatly complemented by NROTC"—its summer cruises as well as the direct association with naval officers, both on campus and throughout the country.

Cultural Group To Promote And Stimulate Art Interests

The Student Council at their last meeting established a Cultural Affairs Committee. Jim Strazzella, Executive Vice-President for Educational Affairs announced that Student council Chairman Bob DeLisa appointed Bob Bohn, a senior English Major, chairman of the newly inaugurated committee.

Strazzella stated that the committee is a "Presidential Special Committee." This means that the members of the committee do not necessarily have to be Student Council members.

The purpose of this committee as outlined by Strazzella is "to promote and stimulate" cultural affairs. One of the several reasons this committee has been organized is due to the interest students have shown in the Fine Arts course now being offered.

Trips To Museum

He added that programs which come out of this committee may include: the sponsoring of contests of a cultural nature and taking trips to such places as the Academy of Music and the Art Museum in Philadelphia.

The committee will also try to have more clubs of a cultural nature formed on campus. He said that members of current cultural organizations such as the Lynx, the Literary Club, and the Music Society may be called on to be members of this new Cultural Committee.

Strazzella concluded by saying that all plans at the present time are tentative; however, this committee once it becomes a working reality will add greatly to the cultiral level of the Villanova campus.

Two New Professors Named To Law School By Pres., Reuschlein

The Very Reverend John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President, and Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein of the School of Law, have announced the appointment of two new full-time members to the faculty of the School of Law. The new appointees, both in the grade of Assistant Professor, are Wayne R. LaFave and Donald A. Giannella.

Mr. Giannella was, at the time of his appointment a teaching fellow at the Law School of Harvard University. Prior to that time he practiced law with the New York firm of Cahill, Gordon, Reindel & Ohl. Professor Giannella received both his AB degree and his LLB degree magna cum laude from Harvard University. At Villanova he will offer instruction in Constitutional Law, Labor Law, International Law and New York Practice.

Knapp Fellow

At the time of his appointment to Villanova Mr. LaFave was the Knapp fellow at the University of Wisconsin, engaged in research for The American Bar Foundation's Survey of the Administration of Criminal Justice. He received his BS, LLB, LLM degrees from the University of Wisconsin. At Villanova he will offer instruction in Criminal Law, Constitutional Law, Administrative Law and Property.

At the same time Father Klekotka and Dean Reuschlein announced the appointment of J. Edward Collins, Professor of Law, at the School of Law, Boston Col'ege, as Visiting Professor of Law at Villanova during the second semester of the academic year 1960-1961. As a Visiting Professor, Mr. Collins will offer instruction in Commercial Transactions, Contracts, and Creditors' Rights.

Theatre Department To Present A One-Act Trio Tomorrow 2:30

A scene from "Inherit the Wind" will open a series of one-act plays, experimental in nature on Thursday, October 20. These productions of the Theatre Department, starting at 2:30 p.m. in the east lounge of Dougherty Hall, will be open to the general public.

The recognition scene from "Anastasia", to be directed by Miss Jane Anderson, a graduate of Marycrest College, Davenport, Iowa, will follow "Inherit the Wind" on the twentieth. Mr. William Flynn will direct "Wind".

Three plays will take place on Thursday, November 3, with two more scheduled for Thursday, November 17. After each afternoon's program, says Mr. Richard Duprey, department head, there will be an open critique, during which the directors and players will invite any comments and questions from the audience.

The plays will be directed by graduate students of the Theatre Department. Casts will be comprised of graduate students of all departments and undergraduates.

Music Society Meets

The Villanova Music Society, short-haired descendent of the Opera Classica Society, has announced its fall schedule. The society has broadened its program to include show tunes, operettas, and occasional jazz programs.

Dr. Robert O'Shea, moderator, believes this, the society's fifth year, will be its most successful. The Society now members forty-two, and new members are welcome.

Mike Fallon, president, emphasizes "meetings are not exclusive gatherings of unsociabble intellectuals, but friendly gatherings where no one is unwelcome." Meetings are held weekly in the East Lounge, Dougherty Hall.

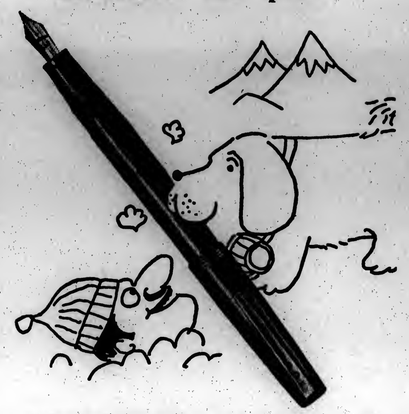
Tea Time For the Grad School

At the recent Graduate School Tea, (l. to r.) Miss Diana Carullo, of the Chemistry Dept., the Rev. Louis A. Rongione, O.S.A., Graduate School Dean and Moderator of The VILLANOVAN, Paul M. Curda and Alan B. Willig of the English Dept. hold a "square table" conference.

Art Work Donated to Villanova

The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., Prsident (center) expresses Villanova's gratitude to Dr. Francis Manno (left), for the donation of Samuel Waugh's "Portrait of Bertel Thorvaldsen" to the University in honor of Elizabeth Manno. At right is the Rev. Daniel P. Falvey, O.S.A., Librarian, who received the painting to hang in the Library.

Band Honors Hammerstein



The Villanova Marching Band will leave for the Army game Friday afternoon. After a night in New York, the Band will have a police escort to Michie Stadium at West Point.

The half-time show will be a tribute to the late Oscar Hammerstein II. The Army has elected not to march, giving our group the entire half-time.

The Band will return to the campus Saturday evening, except for members wishing to stay the night in New York City.

Brian Gordon, the publicity director reported that the Band will be conducted by Mr. Herbert Fiss, Music Director, and Ross Anzaldi, '61, Drum Major.

Total Enrollment Of Evening Students Reaches Record 957

The office of the Undergraduate Part-Time Division announced last week that a faculty of eighty-eight members is required to accomodate its record enrollment of 957 evening students. The Evening Session is offering a roster of sixty-five courss. The following courses are presented for the first time this semester:

Managerial Accounting, Federal Income Tax, Industrial Psychology, Recent American Philosophy, Basic Concepts of Mathematics, Descriptive Astronomy, Contracts and Specifications, Dynamics of Design, and Electrical Machinery.

Of the 957 students, 370 are attending Villanova for the first time; there are 815 men, 141 women; 14 students are members of religious communities, 943 are lay students. Approximately two-thirds of the entire enrollment are matriculated students in pursuit of a degree or certificate.

This is the B-52. Advanced as it may be, this airplane has one thing in common with the first war-galleys of ancient Egypt...and with the air and space vehicles of the future. Someone must chart its course. Someone must navigate it.

For certain young men this presents a career of real executive opportunity. Here, perhaps you will have the chance to master a profession full of meaning, excitement and rewards...as a Navigator in the U. S. Air Force.

To qualify for Navigator training as an Aviation Cadet you must be an American citizen between 19 and 26½—single, healthy and intelligent. A high school diploma is required, but some college is highly desirable. Successful completion of the training program leads to a commission as a Second Lieutenant...and your Navigator wings.

If you think you have what it takes to measure up to the Aviation Cadet Program for Navigator training, see your local Air Force Recruiter. Or clip and mail this coupon.

There's a place for tomorrow's leaders on the Aerospace Team.

Senior Fellowships

All applications for Fulbright Fellowships and also for the Woodrow Wilson graduate scholarships in the humanities and social studies are asked to be submitted as soon as possible to Dr. Bedard, the Post-Graduate Study Advisory, whose office is situated in the basement of the Commerce and Finance Building.

Seniors, who might be interested in taking the Law School Admissions Test, should be reminded that registration for the examination on November 19, closes on November 4. In addition, applicants, who wish to participate in the Admissions Test for Graduate Study in Business on November 5 or the Graduate Record Examination on November 19 should pick up applications at the office on or before October 22 and November 4 respectively.

Orphans' Day Plans

This year's events for the benefit of the boys at St. John's Home in Philadelphia will be held on the weekend of December 2 under the general chairmembership of Ron Klammer and Dan Martin.

On December 2, the Charity Ball will be held. The primary purpose of the Ball is to provide funds for the purchase of presents, food, and entertainment for the tots at St. John's. The co-chairmen of the Charity Ball are Mike Kane and Ray Trapp.

At the Orphans' Outing planned for December 3, Junior class, members and preferably a date, make a day of it with a Johnny in the 69th Street area. The co-chairmen of this event are Tom O'Connor and Bud Beloin.

The party at the orphanage will be held on Tuesday, December 6 under the co-chairmenship of Dan Peschio and Jim Braithwaite.

The various chairmen are taking names of those class members who are interested in assisting on these committees.

Juniors' Rings Here

Jim McMonacle, Junior class president, has announced that class rings can be obtained at the University Book Store tomorrow.

He also named the chairmen of future class activities: Joe Little, chairman of the Junior Ring Mass and Breakfast; Mike Stapf and Art Kriesen, Mother's Day; Tony Bateman, Junior Prom; Jack Nolan, Junior Dinner Dance.

Quam Delivrs Paper

Dr. George N. Quam, professor of chemistry at Villanova, spoke last Tuesday, October 18, to the National Safety Congress in Chicago. He read a paper entitled, "Safety in the University Chemical Laboratory: Building Design, Safety Equipment and Inspection." The paper was co-authored by Dr. Quam and Mr. Marshall Fishman, his graduate assistant.

Dr. Quam also took part in a panel discussion at the Congress on the same topic. He has been working in this field for some time. The current project is being sponsored by the DuPont Corporation.

Philosophy Club Plans

The Cassiciacum Circle Philosophy Club will sponsor a lecture(open to all students and faculty members, on Wednesday, October 19 at 3:30 P.M. in the East lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Dr. John I. McEnerney, Professor of Classics and Assistant Dean for Academic Affairs will lecture on "The Influence of Greek Philosophical Thought on Ancient History." A discussion will follow the lecture and refreshments will be served.

As a result of Villanova having been chosen as a regional seat of the Philosophical Division of the NFCCS, it will be able to conduct philosophical activities among the Catholic Colleges and Newman Clubs of the area. The Philosophy Club's new topic for this year will coincide with that of the NFCCS—The Influence of Philosophy on History, Literature, and Science.

At the next business meeting the constitution will be revised to meet the expanding scope and increasing activities of the club.

Alumni Sponsor Trip

The Villanova Alumni Club of New York will sponsor a round-trip boat excursion to the Army game at West Point.

The boat will depart from the West 42nd Street Pier at ten a.m., 125th Street at 10:20 a.m., and from Yonkers at eleven a.m. Round-trip cost is $3.50 per person, and $1.65 for children under twelve years.

Tickets may be purchased by writing to J. James Bamburg, 153 W. 16th St., N. Y., N. Y.

The club will travel on a Hudson Day Liner which will serve breakfast on the way to West Point and full course meals on the way home. The boat has a bar and dance music will be provided.

O'Mara WWVU Mentor

The big man behind the Voice of Villanova is Dan O'Mara, station manager of WWVU. A junior majoring in accounting, O'Mara has been at the helm of the station since the end of his freshman year.

In 1957, he started his budding communications career at WVIL. After a brief absence from the University, he returned in September, 1958 as chief studio engineer. His cohorts, the staff heads, however, realizing his executive talent, seized the opportunity and elected him station manager, a post which he still holds. This arrangement has allowed for better programming.

Ambitious O'Mara has three years to serve with the Marines upon graduation, but he would like to attend law school, and possibly "enter into the business end of the communication arts."

The Staten Island native has also proven his executive ability by serving as Chancellor of the Knights of Columbus here on campus, and being active in the Accounting Society. He attended the Augustinian Academy in Staten Island, a minor seminary where he received his high school education.

Format Altered

O'Mara has changed the format of WWVU programming this year in order to satisfy the listening audience. He has succeeded. He is also attempting to develop an FM type broadcast to prove whether the station is worthy of a possible FM set-up if the opportunity presents itself. Judging by his past performance, he will also succeed here.

MANAGER O'MARA
. . . arty Marine

O'Mara says, "The station is truly the new voice of Villanova and the Main Line. This year it has come closest to the professional-type broadcast, because of longer working hours and fewer personnel. The announcer-engineers are now trained much better in radio.

Dan O'Mara is a good example of the student who gives his all for the betterment of his fellow student and the good name of Villanova.

NFCCS Campus Group Operation Is Explained

Last week we discussed the general background and purpose of NFCCS. We will now discuss a few aspects of this campus program as it affects the individual student.

CONTEMPORARY ISSUES: EXAMINATION AND EVALUATION is the general title of the first part of the campus program. Each year, under this program, students assemble on member campuses all over the country to discuss some matter of grave student concern. The minutes of all these campus discussions are sent to the executive Vice Presidnt of the Federation who synthesizes them into a report which is published and returned to the campuses. These reports provide the basis for regional discussion and the minutes of the regional discussions are synthesized to produce a final report.

This year the relationship of Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and secular segments of the American Society and problems arising from this relationship, will be studied. This study is known as the Pluralism Program.

The next part of the program centers around National Secretariats which have been established in the fields of International Relations, Student Affairs ,Social Affairs, Social Action, and Religious Affairs. These Secretariats make available to campus organizations resources which will enable them to more efficiently and effectively provide activities of greater value for their members. They also publish "Focuses" on contemporary crises issues in matters of general student concern. These "Focuses" on issues as they arise when effectively publicized on campus keep students aware and informed on things about which any educated individual should have an understanding.

Realizing also that the Catholic student community has a responsibility to other student communities in underdeveloped countries, the Federation operates the College and University Relief Administration. CURA, as it is called will undertake this year to continue the support of an African medical student, and will raise twenty-five thousand dollars to help build a library at the Catholic University of Formosa.

There are several other incidental services and opportunities which NFCCS as a national student organization is in a position to offer to its members. Foremost among these is the use of NFCCS as the instrument through which the Catholic students of the United States can speak as a body. This function is realized when the resolutions of the National NFCCS Congress are published through national news media.

Every student in a member college is a member of NFCCS.

Lit. Club Speaker

M.D. Donahue I, neo-classic president of the Literary Club, newly revived campus organization, announced that Dr. Joseph Reino of the English Department will deliver the first address of the year

An Accolade

In any evolutionary process, stages are occasionally reached at which visible development ceases and the organism appears to have attained its ultimate growth; yet internally, expansion is continually occuring.

Villanova's Stident Council appears to have achieved a stage such as this after three years of status-seeking. In 1957, under the chairmanship of the now almost legendary Pat Nicholson, the Council inaugurated the present Constitution, which conferred then-unthought of powers to student government.

The following year, Chairman Bob Murphy's "Think Big" campaign was designed to elevate popular opinion of the concept of student government from the status of a more or less juvenile outlet to that of another dynamic force for the advancement of the University as a whole.

Tom Hoffman, last year's Council chairman, preferred a less boisterous, more deliberative approach to the problem of presenting a united student body as a mature, interested, and significant power. Despite sporadic outbursts of childish temper and selfish thoughtlessness, last year's Council largely succeeded in its task of attracting the respect of the Administration and of that portion of the faculty which condescends to consider the student outside of the classroom.

Thus, the present Council, having inherited the larger portion of its power and prestige, began this year with problems unprecedented in the recent history of Villanova student government. For the present, it seems that the Council has achieved its maximum attainments in the way of status. Even the adoption of the much-discussed "new Constitution" this year would be a relatively simple change in operational procedures, and not in personnel. Therefore, the Council's problem is not one of fighting and climbing, but of expanding and improving.

Its total success in meeting this novel challenge remains to be determined. Nevertheless, certain definite, tangible moves have been made in the right direction. The vast potential of the Student Treasury gives promise of a time in the foreseeable future when the Council may serve as an independant financial benefactor of a considerable array of student organizations, as well as of the University itself.

The numerous programs of the Academic Affairs Committee, such as the Student Council Forum series, which will bring noted lecturers to campus; the Student Tutor Program, designed to assist students in academic difficulties; the Teacher Evaluation Program, aimed at determining students' appreciation of instructors' efforts; the Master Coding System, which could eliminate class and examination conflict, should affect the student body, not as superficial "pork barrel" legislation, but as sound, enlightened projects.

At this point in its progress toward more comprehensive and valuable programs, the present Council's ultimate virtue, its quiet efficiency, may prove also to be its stumbling block.

The student body must be interested, and attracted to participation, in the Council's projects, if success is to be claimed. This interest and attraction cannot be achieved by posting an eight-and-a-half by eleven notice on a bulletin board, by making garbled announcements over the P.A. during lunch, or by turning Council meetings into minor brawls so that they will be reported in the pages of The VILLANOVAN.

Only the Council's innate vitality and ingenuity can produce the desired reaction from the student body. Only this reaction from the student body will result in success for the present Student Council. And only the success of the present Student Council will ensure that the principles of the student government will endure at Villanova.

Is This The Year?

Counterpoint

The Religious "Issue"

by Len Gallulo

Several weeks prior to my returning to Villanova I heard a Protestant minister give a lecture which had as its topic "A Catholic President'" Within the presentation he attacked the Roman Catholic candidate and Roman Catholicism on the three following points:

(a) The separation of Church and State.

(b) The birth control issue.

(c) The poverty in Latin America and the lack of progress in Ireland.

His first argument was based on that "great" American principle of separation of Church and State and the usual non-Catholic interpretation of the Syllabus of Errors. Apart from his false interpretation of the Encyclinical, he seems to have forgotten that the Constitution also has a provision for amendments.

The point I am trying to evoke here is that if a large majority of the population were Catholic and that majority should desire a combination of Church and State the minority would possibly be bound to a new amendment.

Bishop Upholds Separation

It should be mentioned, however, that at least one bishop speaking on behalf of American Catholics clearly stated that even if Catholics did constitute a majority they would uphold the principles of separation of Church and State. Moreover, it is more than likely that American Catholics would never want a combination of Church and State.

His second argument, the birth control issue, was based on the social conditions of countries with low economic standards. Speaking with him later, he related to me that he was aware of what had happened to Onan (Genesis 38:8-10) in the Old Testament: but he still maintained his position from a "Common good" basis, although he did seem to lean toward the idea of restraint rather than the "die-hard Sanger approach."

Juvenile Delinquency

In his argument that the Church had been the cause of poverty in Latin America, he compared the conditions of those countries with the progress and wealth of the great American nation and apparently forgot the spiritual mission of the Church. His second point in this argument, the lack of progress in Ireland, in addition to the exclusion of the above-mentioned fact; also excluded the fact that Ireland has the lowest rate of juvenile delinquency in the world—a condition attributed to the Church by historians!

It was not difficult for me to leave the lecture with the impression that his personal religion and morality had been an outgrowth of Western bourgeous capitalism.

Another factor of which many Americans are not aware is that in the realm of economics, the New Deal of FDR which returned the country to domestic prosperity was to a large degre a reflection of the Rerum Novarum.

It's only when America's "Johnny Appleseed" takes the Bible in his hand and sows the seeds of absurdity that we have to worry.

Question: Do you believe that the Villanova library should continue following the policy of many metropolitan libraries, viz. that of closing the stacks?

In my opinion, it would be a very beneficial policy to have the stacks in a library open. The stacks being open allow a student to browse among the books and in this way gives a wider selection from which to choose. Very little information can be gained about a book from a card catalogue. The freedom of choice would help both the students and the library personnel.

Richard Marvin
Arts, '62

I think this policy is especially inconvenient to the student who is doing research work. It often forces him to take out books which he thinks might be useful, but which he finds out are not upon checking them. If he were permitted to go through the stacks himself, he would definitely know which books to take out, and in this manner save himself and the library staff a lot of time and useless effort.

Joseph R. Clark
Arts, '61

Considering the low level of intelligence and honesty apparent in large numbers of undergraduates here, opening the stacks would be insanity.

In the last year the stacks were open, some twenty-five hundred volumes were stolen if rendered incomplete by the users of the library. This can't be attributed to a few, if it was the work of a few, they would all be in possession of large libraries. Clods who mutilate or steal books aren't apt to be building private libraries.

William P. McCarthy
Political Science, '61

I have in the past two years felt that the "closed-stack" policy of our library was an intolerable burden on the student body and a reflection of their honor. These were in my more radical and less informed days. The library closing its stacks provides, among other advantages, a sure system of book control, orderly stacks, a quiet library, an easy method of circulating books, and last but not least, provides funds for needy library aides who work in their off hours. I am therefore a firm supporter of the closed stacks system.

Nixon-Kennedy Comparison On Issues Gives Jack Edge

by Mark Quinn

Two weeks ago in Philadelphia, Vice-President Richard Nixon delivered a vitriolic attack on the campaign of his opponent. He lashed out at Kennedy's internal policies as "growthmanship" and stated that Democratic policies with regard to schools, housing, health, and highways were highly exorbitant. He reminded the voters that when "he (Kennedy) makes promises concerning spending, he isn't spending Jack's money; he is spending your money."

He maintained that national growth does not depend on how much the state and local governments spend and on the dynamism of the individual. He added that in event of need the Federal government should not take all responsibilities and costs and work down to the individual, but that it should work up from the individual. His philosophy of freer free enterprise is remarkably similar to that of Herbert Hoover. He is proud that his administration will be a business-man's administration, but that is only a small segment of the country.

He failed to get down to specifics on such major economic problems as the falling, unstable stock market, high unemployment, and increased hostility between labor and management.

The second major issue discussed was foreign policy. Nixon stated that "the most important test is which of the two men can lead America in the free world and keep the peace." He went on that no one could have more experience than his running mate in keeping the peace (not even himself?).

With regard to Senator Kennedy's frequent diatribes against Republican foreign policy he stated "that it isn't necessary to run America down to build it up." Is America being run down by Kennedy or by insidious forces within it? Will Kennedy make America arise out of the ashes like the Phoenix?

What policies has Nixon enunciated for such situations as Hungary, brinksmanship, the U-2, Khrushchev, Latin America, and the new neutral nations? It must also be remembered that Nixon is hampered immensely by the fact that he has a very lean choice for Secretary of State. It is this writer's opinion that Lodge would have been far more beneficial in this than as a publicity means for Republican strength.

In the nation's dealing with other countries, Nixon asserts that "we will continue to stand for what is right."

Kennedy has followed Nixon into the "tabasco stage of the campaign." On internal, economic policies, he has struck out on Republican "prosperity" on the issues of unemployment, decreasing purchasing power, and low growth rate. He believes that this massive program can be financed by the advance of the nation's financial growth. This is quite difficult to do if the economy is as bad off as he would have us believe.

His spending programs are said by many to border on socialism and a welfare state. If this be the truth, we will have one thing that we don't have in the state today, namely welfare. We can only hope that the government is so welfare minded to assist needy and worthy college students regardless of the fact that they will be scientists or teachers.

Kennedy's choice of a running mate is regarded by many as a choice of convenience. This may be true in light of Southern threats about votes in the Electoral College. Most of the South is still infiltrated with the civil rights plank of the Democratic platform, but they realize that the Republican plank on the same issue will be much more stringent.

Johnson's criticism of his running mate did no good whatsoever for the ticket. It is fortunate that the conventions cannot be held in a conclave closed to all prying ears of mass means of publicity.

The issue of religion is said to be out in the open and a major issue now. It seems that Kennedy and his associates have been continually stoking the fire with statements on it. Had a statement been issued comparable to Al Smith's in 1928 and refused to answer the question as Lodge did on a recent press interview program there would have been less harm.

Both candidates have discussed the foreign policy of the Truman and Eisenhower administration. Why not discuss the proposed programs of each other for the future instead of arguing the "dead past."

Activity Period's Crammed; Extra Hour Is Badly Needed

by bill speers

One of the ingredients of a modern university is a comprehensive extra-curricular program. Here at Villanova we have one of the finest student activity programs to be found on any U .S. campus.

SPEERS

For the most participation is enthusiastic, faculty moderating is encorraging tration attitude, co-operative.

However, we have here at V.U. an annoying aspect of these activities which seems to be a rather simple one to solve. It is that of activity meetings.

Each Thursday morning at 10:30, an activity period is set aside to allow the various campus organizations to meet in toto. This is possible since all students are free of classes at this time.

However, it is evident within the last few years, that the growth in extra-curricular activities at Villanova has been noteworthy.

Since 1950, at least 20 new organizations have been established on campus; and still we have but one hour a week in which all these organizational meetings must be held.

We have spoken to many students who desire to belong to two, perhaps, three campus or-two, perhaps three campus organizations, but because the meetings of these clubs are all held during the one activity period, it is, many times, impossible to attend more than one meeting during this time.

Many of these activities such as IRS, ICG, Rocket Society, Philosophy Club, etc., are invaluable as course aids; yet many students must waive, what to them could prove to be a valuable asset, because the vast majority of club meetings are held the same one hour every Thursday morning.

Our solution isn't a new one, but a logical one. The inception of another activity period at 10:30 on Tuesdays along with the present activity time would greatly alliviate the crammed Thursday timetable.

Or even more implementable would be an extension of the present activities time to a two-hour period instead of the current one-hour period.

We feel by this simple manuver, students won't feel it as impossible to belong to a second or third organization, as the situation is presently.

"HOME SWEET HOMECOMING"

A great number of people have been asking me lately, "What is Homecoming?" but I have been so busy trying to find out why my new sports car leaks that I haven't had time to answer. I am now pleased to report that I finally discovered why my sports car leaks—I have been driving it upside down—and so I am ready today to turn my attention to Homecoming.

Let's begin with definitions. Homecoming is a weekend when old grads return to their alma maters to watch a football game, visit old classrooms and dormitories and inspect each other's bald spots.

The weekend is marked by the singing of old songs, the slapping of old backs and the frequent exchange of such greetings as "Harry, you old polecat!" or "Harry, you old porcupine!" or "Harry, you old rooster!" or "Harry, you old wombat!" As you can see, all old grads are named Harry.

It is not just old grads who behave with such liveliness during Homecoming; the faculty also comports itself with unaccustomed animation. Teachers laugh and smile and pound backs and keep shouting "Harry, you old Airedale!" This unscholarly behavior is carried on in the hope that old grads, in a transport of bonhomie will endow a new geology building.

The old grads, however, are seldom seduced. By game time on Saturday their backs are so sore, their eyeballs so eroded, their extremities so frayed, that it is impossible to get a kind word out of them, much less a new geology building.

Even the football game does not improve their tempers. "Hmmph!" they snort as the home team completes a 101-yard march to a touchdown. "Do you call that football? Why, back in my day, they'd have been over on the first down! By George, football was football in those days—not this namby-pamby girls' game that passes for football today! Take a look at that bench—50 substitutes sitting there. Why, in my day, there were 11 men on a team and that was it. When you broke a leg, they slapped a piece of tape on it and you went right back in. Why, I remember the big game against State. Harry Sigafoos, our star quarterback, was killed in the third quarter. I mean, he was pronounced dead. But did that stop old Harry? Not on your tintype! Back in he went and kicked the winning drop kick in the last four seconds of play, dead as he was. Back in my day, they played football, by George!"

Everything, say the old grads, was better back in their day—everything except one. Even the most unreconstructed of the old grads has to admit that back in his day they never had a smoke like Marlboro—never a cigarette with such a lot to like—never a filter so easy drawing, a flavor so mild yet hearty, so abundant, so bountiful—never a choice of flip-top box or soft pack.

So old grads, young grads, and undergrads, why don't you settle back and have a full-flavored smoke? Try Marlboro, the filtered cigarette with the unfiltered taste, and Homecoming will be a happy occasion and the sun will shine and the air will be filled with the murmur of wings and no man's hand will be raised against you.

Menasha Skulnik Opens New Comedy 'The 49th Cousin'

by Joe Zawacki

For many years, Menasha Skulnik was a near legend on the Yiddish stage. A gifted comic with a marvelous sense of timing, it wasn't long before he was paged for Broadway. However, he waited for a good ve hicle before taking the plunge and came up with a 20 month winner in "The Fifth Season."

Now Squlnik has returned for his fourth play and it promises to be his biggest test to date. In "The 49th Cousin", he is faced with the burden of carrying a weak script and a near disastrous first act to Broadway on his little shoulders. On any other actor this would be tantamount to disaster, but with a little tightening of the script (and a rewriting of the first act) Skulnik may just pull it og.

Constant Delight

This was my first exposure to Skulnik's acting and he proved to be a constant delight. As Isaac Lowe, father of three unmarried daughters, he turns an unredeemable character into one which invokes svmpathy. The scene (beautifully staged by Stewart Chaney) is set in Syracuse at the turn of the century. Papa Isaac is an eyeglass salesman with pretentions of being called "doctor". He is the founder of his Synagogue and its first president and is now seeking reelection. His faith is immense but his humility nil.

"He imagines himself in partnership with God, and if he quits God will go out of business," says daughter Tracy. (Marian Winters). As might be expected, Papa is responsible for the daughters not being married since he has frightened away all prospective suitors by running through the house in a Navajo bathrobe shouting at the top of his lungs.

Harrasses Rabbi

The stage is set for rebellion as Papa is expelled from his church for harrassing the Rabbi's sermons. To top it off, the two younger daughters leave home, the youngest running off with a Russian Jew named Morris Golub (Gerald Hilken). Since Papa is biased toward German Jews, this obviously does not sit well with him.

Left only with eldest daughter Fanny, played well by Martha Scott, he turns Atheist, and after talking with God for five minutes, he brings the house down by shouting, "I deny you exist."

The ending is predictable but well handled. There are the expected reconciliations and Papa talks to God again, but this time with humility. If the play is to last on Broadway, it will do so on the merits of the acting which is uniformly fine. Miss Scott has probably the best scene when she dresses her unwilling father formally while he is engrossed in telling one of this stories. Gerald Hiken has a few fine moments as Carrie's reluctant suitor as does Paul Tripp as Tracy's beau. But it is on Skulnik's talents that the play will rise or fall, and they couldn't be in more capable hands.

"Molly Brown" Potentially Unsinkable

by Stan Gogol

"The Unsinkable Molly Brown" will probably be a hit. Any show that can keep a matinee audience of clubwomen and guildmembers quiet except when they should laugh or applaud will undoubtedly be a hit. In this department, however, there are some reservations.

From the opening scene we are introduced to the undefeatable young lady and her optimistic philosophy which causes her to succeed as she wades through a $300,000 hot seat, a friendly bear, Denver society, learning ten languages, the fundamentals of art, the sinking of the Titanic, learning how to play the piano, and managing some pretty tricky gowns.

Tammy Grimes plays Molly with just the right amount of stick-to-itiveness. Her singing voice is pleasant although at times we expected her to shout "is everybody happy?" But it would be difficult to imagine anyone else in the role.

Presnel Big

Miss Grimes' opposite is Leadville Johnny Brown as portrayed by Harve Presnel. Mr. Presnel brings bigness to the role in both voice and physical appearance. The show marks a promising debut for a new stage talent.

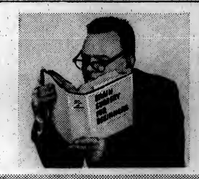
One of the big features of Molly is the music of Meredith Wilson, his first score since "Music Man." Although there are one or two of his patter type songs Mr. Wilson outdoes himself in songs with a melody. (Patter songs are merely recitations to a rhythmic beat.) "Dolce Far Niente" will probably make the best selling charts on the strength of its beautiful ballad quality. "Belly Up To The Bar Boys" comes off as a rousing version of the old time western tunes. "I Ain't Down Yet" shows Molly's determination and is used throughout the show as a keynote. "Are You Sure" emerges as a Catholic spiritual and shows her moral philosophy. If anything, "Molly" will have an interesting cast album.

Fast Direction

The direction achieved by Dore Schary is fast and furious. I should say that that seems to be his aim, although faulty scene changing and light dissolves marred the matinee we caught. The show does need a fast pace and Schary has attempted this at least.

In the plus department must be counted the magnificent settings of Oliver Smith. They are so complicated that we suspect they may be the cause of the technical slowdown, but for the most part they do the show justice and vice versa.

One advantage to attending a matinee is that the audience takes care of the judgment of the costumes for you. In this case they were designed by Miles White and, from the reaction which they got, were perfect. We were almost "oohed" and "aahed" to death.



Of the choreography by Peter Gennaro we merely say "eh".

Molly Brown has all the earmarks of a hit if everything can be ironed out. As it is now, it's fun, but it needs a little work to make it perfect.

Late flashes: "Laurette" cancelled out due to illness of star, Judy Holliday . . . Additional openings this fall include "Period of Adjustment" by Tennessee Williams; "Taffy" with Kim Stanley; "Little Moon of Alban" with Julie Harris and possibly "Critics' Choice" with Henry Fonda . . . "49th Cousin" received a friendly but not overwhelming nod from local critics.

Hist. Conferences

The History Department has announced the institution of two weekly conferences; one for Political Science majors, the other for History majors. Both are open to juniors in these fields. They were begun last week and meet one hour wekly.

Dear Dr. Frood: Here is a controversial bridge hand played at a recent college tournament. The contract was six no-trump. Some say declarer should have played the Fiskill Convention, squeezing West while end-playing East. Others, however, say a straight dummy reversal and a trump coup would bring home the contract. What would you do with a hand like this?

No Trump

DEAR NO TRUMP: In our club, successful play would require slapping the Jack, whistling at the Queen and quickly saying "Sir Hinkum Dinkum Fuzzy Duster" when the one-eyed King is played.

Dear Dr. Frood: How can a nice girl tell whether a boy is sincere—or just a wolf—when he asks for a kiss?

Nice Girl

DEAR NICE: Ask to see his teeth.

Dear Dr. Frood: Like every normal college man, I smoke Luckies. The other day I met this character who smoked something else. I want to know how a guy can be stupid as that and still get into college.

Lucky Fan

DEAR LUCKY: Obviously your college is very easy to get into.

Dear Dr. Frood: Everybody laughed when I brought my mother to the Homecoming Dance. What's so funny about that?

Freshman

DEAR FRESHMAN: She's probably a very funny woman.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am 20 years old and I am about to marry a very nice, well-to-do man. He is 92 years old. Do you think the gap in our ages will affect our happiness?

In The Sportlite

by Victor Strano

Sam Grunelsen, a red-headed lad from Kentucky appeared to be Villanova's best end in years. Then injury struck him down. Now he sits around recuperating and waiting to get back into action. Now he has time to look over his football career, although still having the best years before him.

He first started playing at Eavier high school in Louisville, Kentucky. Sam became well trained under the guidance of John Meihaus, a coach who had played under the well-known "Bear" Byrant. The team he was playing with wasn't doing very badly either. They had a 35 game winning streak going for them at this time. Xavier would challenge any team who wanted to play them, as they were not in any league. Sam, a guard, made all-state in his senior year for a team that had won the state championship his junior and senior year.

Haner An Influence

It was during his senior year that Sam first became interested in Villanova. Bob Haner who played with Filipski at V.U. in '52 was a good friend of Sam and told him about the "big V." Haner even wrote to Coach Reagen as a reference, discussing Sam's possibilities. Later in March Sam's senior year, 1958, he was called at his school. Reagan was on the phone offering him a scholarship.

So Sam started freshman year at V.U. Soon he was to become captain of the team. He came here full of confidence but was to learn a few new things under the freshman coach Ed Michaels. It was his first time away from home and he was trying to establish some sort of maturity.

As usual the frosh were playing the Army plebes again that year. Although not having too much luck with them in the past, the Wildkittens played Army to a hard fought 16-16 tie which was definitely considered a moral victory. Even though the boys played together for the first time, they played surprisingly well against this deep Army team. Sam played most of the game. He retlized that he was playing against men from all over the country, and he was really happy to have participated.

Excelled As Soph

Later as a soph, Sam made the varsity. This was last season, 1959. He had practically nailed down the end position. He was to show excellence in pass receiving among other items. Sam personally felt that he had played fairly well. Of course he had to play under two coaches that year and some adjustment was made in his style under each one.

He realized that during the last season the team just couldn't get off to a good start after the first loss. The one team that they beat, Dayton, was weaker and they knew it. But they had to have all the breaks going for them to win. Sam felt that they had not been getting any breaks at all during the other games. He would now have to wait until junior year to see if the team would improve any.

So all during last summer, Sam looked forward to having a good season. Then came the Dayton game of 1960 and Sam was injured. He didn't get much of a chance to help the team or show how good he could be.

Champing At the Bit

Now Sam rests and anticipates returning to the gridiron. As he watches his team lose one by one he knows he wants to help but can't. He can merely watch from the sidelines.

Saturday the Army game will be played. On this team will be the remnants of the plebes which Sam's frosh team played to a well earned draw. And Sam hopes he will be retdy. It would be a great satisfaction to conquer a team that was no more superior than V.U. in '58.

Pat Traynor Leads Wildcat Cross Countrymen To Win

A long-legged sophomore named Pat Traynor led coach Jim Tuppeney's cross country team to its first victory in two years last Saturday against a highly-rated N.Y.U. team.

Traynor covered the tough VanCourtland Park course in 25:25, the fastest time run this season on the difficult New York layout. He upset Tom Dugan, highly-ranked N.Y.U. distance man, in a race run in very hot weather.

As a team, the 'Cats won by the score of 25-35 (low scorer wins). It was considered as a mild upset by most track buffs in the East. Although Traynor's performance was the outstanding event of the day, the whole team performed well in the initial meet of what may be Villanova's first successful cross country season in several years.

Sivieri Fourth

Tom Dugan and Jim Brown, both of N.Y.U., placed second and third respectively. Junior Angelo Sivieri gave the Wildcat harriers valuable points with a fourth place finish. Owen McGuire, another sophomore, was right on Angie's heels to tie up fifth place.

Villanova junior John Dante, runner-up in the IC4A's half mile, was sixth, beating out Mike Heriot of N.Y.U. at the finish. Villanovans filled up the next four places, eighth to 11th. With juniors Bob Collins and Lance Hugelmeyer, soph Allen Jackman and junior Jerry Hackette respectively, taking these places.

Coach Pleased

Coach Jim Tuppeney was pleased with the seniorless team's performance. This week the Wildcat hill and dalers will labor over the Cobb's Creek course against the running Hawks of St. Josephs.

Fans and Cats Ready For Upset Over Good Black Knight Eleven

by Jack Duffy

For the last two years the big game for Villanova football fans has been the Army game. Although he must trudge across two states and pay a fortune in tolls, the Villanovan football fan goes to West Point like a Mohammedan to Mecca. Always the fan sees a good game, but never a victory. Will this be the year that David's stone hits Goliath? Will this be the week Army will say something other than their amused, "Good game, fellows, better luck next time." Will this be the day we score more points than they do?

The historians in the crowd will remember back in 1958 when a winning Villanova football team went up to the land of the Knickerbocker to play undefeated, top-ranked Army. The upperclassmen will remember Gene O'Pella's crushing tackle on Bob Anderson in the opening minutes of the game. O'Pella's handy work sidelined the Army All-American for the rest of the game and things seemed pretty much in hand until a rugby player by the name of Dawkins upset the applecart. Army 26—Villanova 0, was the final score.

Last year a less frequently triumphant Villanova football team crossed the Jersey Turnpike and went to battle with Army on a cold November day. This time there were no Rugby players and the only All-American never came into the huddle, Army never had it so tough. John Daniels, a fleet Villanova halfback, dropped two passes thrown to him, while he was in the open with a clear path to the Army goal. Daniels also dropped a pass, thrown by Army quarterback Joe Caldwell, which he had intercepted. Add to this a mistaken call by one of the officials on Army's second touchdown and you have another in the plus column for the Black Knights. The final score was Army 14—Villanova 0.

Blanda Quarterback

Dale Hall is sitting in the coaches chair for the second time this year and he is what you might call, "on the spot". Last year's 4-4-1 record was not what the president ordered, especially that 43-12 licking by Navy. Hall runs things from a split T with variations. He is completely confident his T will produce many victories.

Hall's T is directed by a chap named Tom Blanda, brother of George of Pro-football fame. Blanda for the last two years has been place kicking and seeing that the other boys get to practice on time. This year, however, he has proved just the thing to make Army's attack function properly. In the California game Blanda threw two touchdown passes and set up two more scores as Army stormed from behind with three last period scores to win 28-10.

Keeping Blanda company in the backfield are three likable fellows referred to as cadets, Glen Adams, Al Rushatz, and Roger alskas. Adams, a frustrated quarterback, is the halfback and leading ground gainer on the club. Add to this the fact that he is a defensive demon and you have a good ballplayer.. Rushatz is the fullback and leads in scoring: He is also the 177 pound Eastern wrestling champion.

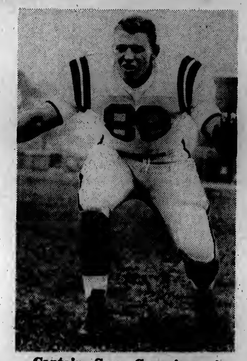
Line Tough

The Army line is in pretty good shape. The center is George Joulian, a 190 pound senior. The tackles are manned by two well put together individuals in Dale Kuhus (6-2—225) and Bob McCarthy (6-2—210). The guards are co-captain, Al Vanderbush, and Allen Miller, a senior from Garden City, New York. If Army is to have an All-American this year, Vanderbush is the logical choice. He is 6-2 and moves his 215 pounds with quite a bit of authority.

The other co-captain is Frank Gilison, a 6-3, 205 pound senior. Gilison received his big chance last year when Don Usry was injured. Gilison looked so impressive that Usry could not win back his job. The other end is Bob Tuellhart, a junior. Tuellhart is listed as the lonely end, replacing the now graduated Bill Carpenter from Springfield. This year the lonely end is not so lonely as they bring him into the huddle.

For the first time since 1946 and for only the second time in history the cadets have co-captains. The only other co-captains were a pair of backs named Davis and Blanchard.

Record Good



So far this year the Cadets have 4 wins and two losses. They opened their season by crushing Buffalo 37-0. In their next two games they had to come from behind to whip Boston College 20-7 and California 28-10. Two weeks ago they were beaten by Penn State when the Nittany Lions scored twice in the last four minutes to win 27-16. Last week the Army lost to Nebraska at Lincoln, 14-9.

The cadets face a formidable schedule this season. They play such powers as Syracuse, defending National Champions, Pitt and Navy, as well as the schools previously mentioned.

The series between the West Pointers and the Wildcats which began in 1908 sees Army leading 16 to 2. The Wildcats won 16 to 13 in 1915 and 21 to 7 in 1951 when Army was short of football players. In the eighten games the 'Cats have been shut out fourteen times. Some of the more noticeable defeats (over fifty points) were 55-0 in 1913, 69-7 in 1916, 62-0 in 1919, 83-0 in 1944, and 54-0 in 1945.

Miami Backfield and Ball Without Handles, 5th Loss

by Dan Bell

The Villanova Wildcats had their scalps lifted at Villanova Stadium on Saturday afternoon by the rampaging Redskins of Miami of Ohio by a 17-7 count. The Wildcat receivers just couldn't hold the ball at the right times and naturally lost the game. The Redskins used a very strong running game against Villanova, and they passed at the times when they needed the extra yardage.

Mistakes Costly

The game was very closely played between these teams, but when the 'Cats made a mistake, Miami was right there to turn it into a score. The first mistake came in the first quarter when Villanova kicked on third down in order to get themselves out of a hole. The 'Cats kicked from their 17 yard line but the ball went out of bounds on their own 37. The kick covered twenty yards. In four plays the Redskins punched their way to the Villanova 23. A pass from Gayheart to Williams brought Miami to the V.U. 5 yard line, giving them a first and goal situation. On second down Jack Gayheart hit halfback John Moore for the touchdown. Bob Jencks, the Miami place kicker parted the uprights to make the score Miami 7, V.U. 0. Early in the second quarter the 'Cats moved down to the Miami 8 yard line, where Nick Russo dropped a fourth and two pass on the goal line giving Miami possession.

Early in the third quarter Miami intercepted a Villanova aerial on their own 45. Mel Triplett, Miami's hard driving fullback carried the ball to the V.U. 38. After Triplett gained five more yards John Moore exploded to the 7, and three plays later Gayheart sneaked over from the one. Bob Jencks converted again and the Redskins led 14-0.

V.U. Strikes Back

On the kickoff Miami sent the ball sailing to the goal line where Bob Merenda gathered in the pigskin and galloped 55 yards down the field before being tripped up by a desperate Miami tackler. From the 45 the Wildcats used a steady ground game under the direction of Ted Aceto and moved to the Miami 15 yard line. Aceto faded back and hit Bob Merenda on the five and he dashed into the end zone for the score. Larry Sopko added the extra point to cut the Miami lead to 14-7.

Miami Ices Game

Late in the fourth period the Redskins took possession on their own 38 after a V.U. punt. The Redskins ground out the yardage slowly as they moved down field to the Villanova 17. Bob Jencks the Miami booter appeared on the field and sent a 27 yard goal sailing through the uprights. It was his fourth out of five attempts, one being a forty yarder. This score came with three minutes remaining in the game making it: Miami 17, V.U. 7. The 'Cats tried to retaliate late in the fourth quarter but two fumbles thwarted the effort.

The performance of some of the Wildcats deserves mentioning. Bob Merenda played very well at right half; his running was his best so far this season. Joe Luzzi did a real good job at his guard position and managed to get himself into Miami's backfield on several occassions to drop Redskin ball carriers in their tracks. Center Regus Magnus played heads up ball and added a recovered fumble to his credit. Richie Richman did not have a hot passing average Saturday but his receivers didn't help any by dropping the football on several occassions. Sam Gruneisen, who has been out of the lineup with knee trouble, stated that the 'Cats dropped the ball too many times at the wrong times and that was the ball game.

Miami Coach Speaks

John Pont, coach of the Miami Redskins commented on the Villanova team after the game. Mr. Pont said that Miami was in a slump earlier in the season much like the one the Wildcats are facing. He feels his team is now overcoming this with confidence. He explained it in this manner. "It's like climbing to the top of a mountain, and when you get two feet from the top you realize your almost there but you still needed that extra push." "If the other guy makes up his mind not to let you gain that two feet and you doubt it too, you won't make it." Mr. Pont said that this was not the same team he saw play Dayton out in Ohio; in fact he was surprised when he saw the 'Cats handle themselves in such a smooth manner.

Triplett and Moore Speak

Bill Triplett, the Miami fullback said that the Wildcats were the hardest hitting club he has seen this year. He said, "When they hit you, you know you've been hit." John Moore the left half back from Miami who ran all over the field Saturday expressed his opinions in the same way Triplett did, but he added that youth was Villanova's main problem. He said those boys went so far every time and then something snapped. He was referring to the three Villanova fumbles. He said that you can't drop passes like Villanova does and expect to win ball games.

It will be good news to Villanova fans when Sam Grueisen rejoins the team at West Point this week. Maybe his return will bolster the 'Cats receiving situation. In any case, the 'Cats with fumbles, dropped passes, and plenty of youth in hand make their way to West Point with one thought in mind, "Beat the Army."

Dali-esque Dejection

A reflective Villanovan is caught in a moment of surrealistic dejection on the sidewalks of New York following Saturday's carnage at West Point. A discerning squint will reveal the corner as 42nd street at 5th avenue.

Kennedy Takes Majority Of Villanovan Poll Votes

by H. James McAteer

An overwhelming majority of Villanova students favor Senator John F. Kennedy for President, according to the results of the recent political poll sponsored by The VILLANOVAN.

Of those polled, 67.3% would vote for the Massachusetts senator, as against 27.1% who prefer Vice President Richard M. Nixon. 5.6% were undecided.

Exactly one-sixth of the total undergraduate student enrollment was scientifically selection to be polled. Precise proportional representation of all classes and divisions was thus assured.

Ed Graham, jqunior Education major from Philadelphia, administered the poll over a week-long period. He also prepared an accurate tabulation of the results. The manner of selecting those to be polled, as well as the questions asked, were formulated by Graham with the co-operation of Dr. Frank McGurk of the Psychology Dept. The Rev. Joseph W. Kemme, O.S.A., Vice President for Student Affairs, implemented the administration of the poll.

Of the students designated to be polled, 303, or slightly more than one-half, actually submitted ballots. "We never believed that every student designated would respond," Graham emphasized. "However, the percentage that did respond was more than enough to guarantee the accuracy of the results.

197 Like Jack

Of the 303 polled, 197 were for Kennedy, 85 preferred Nixon, and 21 were undecided. Graham noted, however, that "although a vast majority of students favor Kennedy ,they are not as optimistic of his chances for victory on a nation-wide scale as are Nixon's supporters. The Nixon group of students is strongly convinced that the Vice President will win."

This is borne out by the fact that, of the 197 who would vote for Kennedy, only 101, or 51.2%, felt certain that he would win. On the other hand, 73 of the 85 pro-Nixon pollees, or 84.7% were certain o fa Republican victory.

Broken down by classes, the poll showed seniors: 68.4% Kennedy-Johnson, 28.2% Nixon-Lodge, 1.7% Socialist, and 1.7% undecided; juniors: 66.4% Kennedy-John, 23% Nixon-Lodge, 10.6% undecided; sophomores: 65.8% Kennedy-Johnson, 31.5% Nixon-Lodge, 2.7% undecided; freshmen: 61.5% Kennedy-Johnson, 28.7% Nixon-Lodge, 9.8% undecided.

Most Seniors pro-Kennedy

The senior class delivered the largest bloc to Kennedy, and had the smallest number of undecided voters. The juniors, while polling the second largest bloc for the Democrats, had by far the largest number of undecided voters.

Graham noted that 22.4% of those polled are actually eligible to vote this year. Of these, 61.8% will vote for Kennedy, 32.3% will vote for Nixon, and 5.9% are undecided. This division closely parallels the political sentiments of the student body as a whole. The feeling of

Tickets For Brothers Four Show On Sale In Pie Shoppe

Tickets for the annual Agustinian Seminary Guild Jazz Concert to be held on Sunday, November 5, from 2:30-4:30 p.m., are now being hold in the Pie Shoppe. The three price scales are: Reserved seats, $2.50; floor seats $2.00; and $1.50 for balcony seats.

John P. Donohue, concert publicity director, also reported that he has been informed of the selections to be sung by the featured act — the Brothers Four.

SENIORS NOTE

Larry Bathgate, senior class president, has announced that, "for the first time in history, seniors are the specially invited guests of the Alumni at the Homecoming Cocktail Party to follow the Boston College game."

The party, given by the Philadelphia Area Alumni Club, will be held at the Treadway Inn, Lancaster Pike, St. Davids, Pa., from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. on November 5.

"There is no admission fee," Bathgate emphasized, "and all seniors are invited, either stag or with dates. Cocktails and sours will cost $1.00, mixed drinks will be $.75, and beer is $.50."

Among the numbers to be sung by the group at the concert are their recent hit, "Greenfields", "Bama", "Proposal", "Hey Liley Liley Lo", "Gallant Argosy", "Sally Don't You Grieve", "Ellie Lou", "Nine-Pound Hammer", and "My Toni".

The jazz concert is being held under the auspices of the senior class which is handling the social functions for the Homecoming Weekend to be held November 3-5.

The Brothers Four, who obtained their name from the Phi Beta Gamma fraternity, of which they were brothers at the University of Washington, are currently making an eastern swing after completing a successful run at the Tropicana in Las Vegas.

"Their tour has so far been acclaimed as a tremendous success," asserts Donohue, "and senior class president Larry Bathgate says that he has been assured o fa fine performance."

The quartet, made up of Mike Kirkland, Dick Foley, John Paine, and Bob Flick, were discovered in the San Francisco renowned hungry where they were signed by Columbia Records.

"Their current entry in the recording ield", says Donohue, "is the 'Greenfields of Summer', which is being predicted by many critics to hit the best-seller lists soon."

Big Advance Sale

Francis McNally, senior secretary, and vice-president Thomas Samulewicz, have reported that neighboring colleges have applied for tickets, and that advance sales, so far, have ben excellent.

McNally also said that tickets for the concert will be sold right un to performance time Sunday atfernoon.

Dave Grenon, senior treasurer, stated that the programs made available at this year's concert will be of the souvenir nature.

Nurses In Swim

Pi Theta Chi, the nurses' sorority, got into the swim of things literally this year by initiating a "Splash Party," held, appropriately enough, at the field house pool on Thursday, October 20. The evening's entertainment consisted of a "bathing beauty" contest in which the participants regaled themselves in "roaring '20's" and "gay '90's" fashions. The first prize winners were Judy DiStefano, Judy Jones and Mary Fran Kleha, who emulated a typical 1890 family at the seashore.

ICG Election Talks Square Off Logue Against Stevenson

Professors John G. Stephenso nof the Villanova Law School and John J. Logue of the History and Political Science Department will debate the current political issues on Thursday evening, Oct. 27, at 8 P.M. in 110 C. & F.

The debate is being sponsored by the Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government.

John McAteer, chairman of the Villanova I.C.G. has stated that this debate will be open to all students of Villanova. He added that it will help bring the current campaign closer to the students.

Both Prof. Stephenson and Prof. Logue will present their reasons why the educated student should vote Republican in the case of Stephenson and Demrocratic in the case of Logue.

Each man is well verhsed in the qualities of his respective party, according to McAteer. "The debate should prove to be highly informative and interesting."

Question Period

The debate will begin promptly at 8 P.M. with introductory remarks by William McClure, senior Political Science major, who will act as chairman.

Following this the two debators will give a ten to fifteen minute opening speech. When both men have concluded, a

Closed Retreats

Jim Furey and Jack Craig, co-chairmen of the Religious Affairs Committe, have announced that a closed retreat for Villanova students will be held at the Pius X Retreat House in Blackwood, N.J., from January 6 to 8, 1961.

The Religious Affairs Committee, in conjunction with the Chaplain's Office, has arranged with the retreat house to require a donation of $20 from each participating student to cover the expense of food and lodging from Friday evening to Sunday afternoon.

Furey and Craig emphasized that this weekend retreat will afford students an excellent opportunity to prepare spiritually for final exams. They stated that an announcement will be made shortly as to when and where students may register for the retreat.

Presidential Invitation

President Eisenhower has extended an invitation to the Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of Villanova University, to be his guest at a special luncheon at the White House on Wednesday, October 26th at 1:00 p.m.

The luncheon is being given by President Eisenhower in honor of the Prime Minister of the Federation of Malaya who is visiting this country.

V.U. Student Sought To Win NFCCS Award For Catholic Youth

Eugene Felch, the NFCCS delegate of Villanova University, has disclosed that the National Council of Catholic Youths will present its first outstanding Catholic Youth Award.

Felch said, "Villanova University's Chapter of the NFCCS is seeking a candidate to be entered into the nation-wide election." He also stated that, "If a student of Villanova University would be presented with the National Catholic Youth Award, he would give great honor ,not only to himself but also to Villanova."

For the purpose of electing a candidate to represent Villanova University, a ballot box has been placed in the Student Council Office. Felch asks that the student-body submit the names of students whom they would consider deserving men for the award.

Student Council Selects

A Student-Faculty Committee will select from the names submitted ,a list o fsemi-finalists to be given to the Student Council.

The candidate to represent the University will be selected by the Student Council.

Other nominees for this national award wil be chosen by each NFCCS affiliate ,each Newl man Club Chaplain and Diocean Youth Director in each U.S. Catholic College.

The national judging will be conducted by the National Officers of the Nationa Committee, the National Newman Club Federation and by the Diocean Director of the NFCCS.

Fans and Cats Ready For Upset Over Good Black Knight Eleven

Bob Jencks, the Miami place kicker parted the uprights to make the score Miami 7, V.U. 0. Early in the second quarter the 'Cats moved down to the Miami 8 yard line, where Nick Russo dropped a fourth and two pass on the goal line giving Miami possession.

Of the students designated to be polled, 303, or slightly more than one-half, actually submitted ballots. "We never believed that every student designated would respond," Graham emphasized. "However, the percentage that did respond was more than enough to guarantee the accuracy of the results.

197 Like Jack

Of the 303 polled, 197 were for Kennedy, 85 preferred Nixon, and 21 were undecided. Graham noted, however, that "although a vast majority of students favor Kennedy ,they are not as optimistic of his chances for victory on a nation-wide scale as are Nixon's supporters. The Nixon group of students is strongly convinced that the Vice President will win."

This is borne out by the fact that, of the 197 who would vote for Kennedy, only 101, or 51.2%, felt certain that he would win. On the other hand, 73 of the 85 pro-Nixon pollees, or 84.7% were certain o fa Republican victory.

Broken down by classes, the poll showed seniors: 68.4% Kennedy-Johnson, 28.2% Nixon-Lodge, 1.7% Socialist, and 1.7% undecided; juniors: 66.4% Kennedy-John, 23% Nixon-Lodge, 10.6% undecided; sophomores: 65.8% Kennedy-Johnson, 31.5% Nixon-Lodge, 2.7% undecided; freshmen: 61.5% Kennedy-Johnson, 28.7% Nixon-Lodge, 9.8% undecided.

Most Seniors pro-Kennedy

The senior class delivered the largest bloc to Kennedy, and had the smallest number of undecided voters. The juniors, while polling the second largest bloc for the Democrats, had by far the largest number of undecided voters.

Graham noted that 22.4% of those polled are actually eligible to vote this year. Of these, 61.8% will vote for Kennedy, 32.3% will vote for Nixon, and 5.9% are undecided. This division closely parallels the political sentiments of the student body as a whole. The feeling of

Tickets For Brothers Four Show On Sale In Pie Shoppe

Tickets for the annual Agustinian Seminary Guild Jazz Concert to be held on Sunday, November 5, from 2:30-4:30 p.m., are now being hold in the Pie Shoppe. The three price scales are: Reserved seats, $2.50; floor seats $2.00; and $1.50 for balcony seats.

John P. Donohue, concert publicity director, also reported that he has been informed of the selections to be sung by the featured act — the Brothers Four.

Among the numbers to be sung by the group at the concert are their recent hit, "Greenfields", "Bama", "Proposal", "Hey Liley Liley Lo", "Gallant Argosy", "Sally Don't You Grieve", "Ellie Lou", "Nine-Pound Hammer", and "My Toni".

The jazz concert is being held under the auspices of the senior class which is handling the social functions for the Homecoming Weekend to be held November 3-5.

The Brothers Four, who obtained their name from the Phi Beta Gamma fraternity, of which they were brothers at the University of Washington, are currently making an eastern swing after completing a successful run at the Tropicana in Las Vegas.

"Their tour has so far been acclaimed as a tremendous success," asserts Donohue, "and senior class president Larry Bathgate says that he has been assured o fa fine performance."

The quartet, made up of Mike Kirkland, Dick Foley, John Paine, and Bob Flick, were discovered in the San Francisco renowned hungry where they were signed by Columbia Records.

"Their current entry in the recording ield", says Donohue, "is the 'Greenfields of Summer', which is being predicted by many critics to hit the best-seller lists soon."

Big Advance Sale

Francis McNally, senior secretary, and vice-president Thomas Samulewicz, have reported that neighboring colleges have applied for tickets, and that advance sales, so far, have ben excellent.

McNally also said that tickets for the concert will be sold right un to performance time Sunday afternoon.

Dave Grenon, senior treasurer, stated that the programs made available at this year's concert will be of the souvenir nature.

SENIORS NOTE

Larry Bathgate, senior class president, has announced that, "for the first time in history, seniors are the specially invited guests of the Alumni at the Homecoming Cocktail Party to follow the Boston College game."

The party, given by the Philadelphia Area Alumni Club, will be held at the Treadway Inn, Lancaster Pike, St. Davids, Pa., from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. on November 5.

"There is no admission fee," Bathgate emphasized, "and all seniors are invited, either stag or with dates. Cocktails and sours will cost $1.00, mixed drinks will be $.75, and beer is $.50."

Nurses In Swim

Pi Theta Chi, the nurses' sorority, got into the swim of things literally this year by initiating a "Splash Party," held, appropriately enough, at the field house pool on Thursday, October 20. The evening's entertainment consisted of a "bathing beauty" contest in which the participants regaled themselves in "roaring '20's" and "gay '90's" fashions. The first prize winners were Judy DiStefano, Judy Jones and Mary Fran Kleha, who emulated a typical 1890 family at the seashore.

ICG Election Talks Square Off Logue Against Stevenson

Professors John G. Stephenso nof the Villanova Law School and John J. Logue of the History and Political Science Department will debate the current political issues on Thursday evening, Oct. 27, at 8 P.M. in 110 C. & F.

The debate is being sponsored by the Villanova Chapter of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government.

John McAteer, chairman of the Villanova I.C.G. has stated that this debate will be open to all students of Villanova. He added that it will help bring the current campaign closer to the students.

Both Prof. Stephenson and Prof. Logue will present their reasons why the educated student should vote Republican in the case of Stephenson and Demrocratic in the case of Logue.

Each man is well verhsed in the qualities of his respective party, according to McAteer. "The debate should prove to be highly informative and interesting."

Question Period

The debate will begin promptly at 8 P.M. with introductory remarks by William McClure, senior Political Science major, who will act as chairman.

Following this the two debators will give a ten to fifteen minute opening speech. When both men have concluded, a

Closed Retreats

Jim Furey and Jack Craig, co-chairmen of the Religious Affairs Committe, have announced that a closed retreat for Villanova students will be held at the Pius X Retreat House in Blackwood, N.J., from January 6 to 8, 1961.

The Religious Affairs Committee, in conjunction with the Chaplain's Office, has arranged with the retreat house to require a donation of $20 from each participating student to cover the expense of food and lodging from Friday evening to Sunday afternoon.

Furey and Craig emphasized that this weekend retreat will afford students an excellent opportunity to prepare spiritually for final exams. They stated that an announcement will be made shortly as to when and where students may register for the retreat.

Presidential Invitation

President Eisenhower has extended an invitation to the Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., President of Villanova University, to be his guest at a special luncheon at the White House on Wednesday, October 26th at 1:00 p.m.

The luncheon is being given by President Eisenhower in honor of the Prime Minister of the Federation of Malaya who is visiting this country.

V.U. Student Sought To Win NFCCS Award For Catholic Youth

Eugene Felch, the NFCCS delegate of Villanova University, has disclosed that the National Council of Catholic Youths will present its first outstanding Catholic Youth Award.

Felch said, "Villanova University's Chapter of the NFCCS is seeking a candidate to be entered into the nation-wide election." He also stated that, "If a student of Villanova University would be presented with the National Catholic Youth Award, he would give great honor ,not only to himself but also to Villanova."

For the purpose of electing a candidate to represent Villanova University, a ballot box has been placed in the Student Council Office. Felch asks that the student-body submit the names of students whom they would consider deserving men for the award.

Student Council Selects

A Student-Faculty Committee will select from the names submitted a list o fsemi-finalists to be given to the Student Council.

The candidate to represent the University will be selected by the Student Council.

Other nominees for this national award wil be chosen by each NFCCS affiliate ,each New1 man Club Chaplain and Diocean Youth Director in each U.S. Catholic College.

The national judging will be conducted by the National Officers of the Nationa Committee, the National Newman Club Federation and by the Diocean Director of the NFCCS.

The four Villanova men pictured above with Fr. William Farrell, O.S.A., assistant chaplain, received the white habit of the Augustinian novice in a ceremony held on the Villanova campus on September 9. They are (l. to r.) Bernard Visocky, a special student last year, John McKenzie '60, Richard Breslin '60, and Allan Fitzgerald, a member of last year's freshman class. They and Frank Licopoli '57 will spend one year at Good Counsel Novitiate, New Hamburg, N. Y., and then return to Villanova to continue studies for the Augustinian priesthood.

Student Council Approves DeLisa Plebescite Motion

The Student Council approved last Wednesday evening a project designed to permit plebescites of the student body on certain specific Council programs.

The motion, introduced by Council Chairman Bob DeLisa, provides that a committee be established which would be able to poll the entire student body within a 24-hour period, should the Council desire an accurate picture of students' opinion on important matters such as the annual free day.

Jack Valva, Co-ordinator of Student Government, was assigned by the Council to investigate the proposal, and to suggest specific means whereby it could be effected.

Every Student Polled

DeLisa tentatively proposed that a student from each floor of every dormitory be assigned to poll the residents on his floor. Dayhops would be polled during lunch hours by committees stationed in the Pie Shoppe, the Day-Hop Cafeteria, and the C & F Cafeteria.

"The individual students have every right to make known their feelings on major questions," DeLisa declared. "This seems to be the logical way for the Council to determine that feeling."

The Rev. Dante L. Girolami, OSA, Dean of Student Activities and Council Moderator, announced that the Spirit Committee had been forbidden to hold rallies prior to the Army and Rutgers football games. The action was taken for disciplinary reasons, he indicated.

Halls a disgrace

"After the C.O.P. rally, fraternity pledges cleaned up debris and left the campus in good order," Father Girolami stated. "But following the other rallies, Austin and Alumni Halls were left a disgrace, with paper, posters, and other debris scattered all over because there were no pledges to clean up. The Spirit Committee was warned three times, but nothing was done. Therefore, there will be no rallies."

Objections from many quarters were raised, and DeLisa declared that he would consult privately with the Administration on what action willbe taken in the future regarding student demonstrations.

Scalia Reports

Bob Scalia, Alumni Representative, reported that the Alumni Association, in conjunction with the Admissions Office, was instituting an interview program whereby out-of-town high school seniors who apply for admission to Villanova will be visited and interviewed by alumni living in their areas. The alumni will then present opinions as to the merit of these apollcants to the Admissions Office.

"This will present apolicants as more than a name and a number," Scalia said. "It will add a personal touch that should be of value to both the prospective student and to the Admissions Office. Also, it will go far in elevating the quality level of the student body."

Slight Conflict

The Alumni Association's action conflicted somewhat with a proposal by sophomore representative Jim Howley, who suggested that the Council organize a reoresentative committee of present Vilanova students to act as a "Blue Key" (student information and guidance) committee in their own home town.

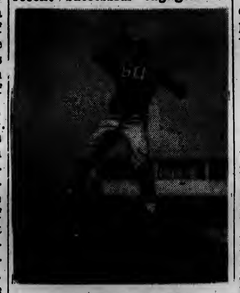
It was argued that the home town "Blue Key" groups and the area Alumni clubs would be duplicating each others' efforts in visiting high schools disseminating general information about Villanova. The matter was resolved by assigning Scalia to investigate it.

Felch Suggests

Gene Felch, NFCCS Senior Delegate, announced the National Outstanding Catholic College Student competition, sponsored jointly by NFCCS and the National Neumann Club Committee. The Council agreed to act to nominate a Vilanova student as an Outstanding Catholic College Student.

In other action by the Council, Paul O'Rourke was named chairman of the Academic Affairs Committee, replacing Bob Scalia who resigned last week; Gerry Gelinas assumed O'Rourke's former post as chairman of the Fraternities and Societies Committee; and Bob Bohn was named chairman of the newly-inaugurated Cultural Affairs Committee.

Also, the Council considered the possibility of stationing a policeman at the Ithan Avenue-Lancaster Pike intersection to direct traffic from 8:10 to 8:35 a.m.; of holding graduation exercises outdoors thisyear; of requesting the Athletic Dept. and Administration to use "Goodreau Stadium," the official name of Villanova Stadium, on all programs, tickets and posters; and of conducting a training program for senior men in teaching Christian doctrine to adults.



16 V.U. Alumni Join Seminaries In Area

This fall sixteen Villanova students or former Villanova students began studies for the priesthood and brotherhood. The Archdiocese of Philadelphia, the Diocese o fCamden and five religious communities welcomed Villanovans into their seminaries.

The Augustinian Order, which received a record number of 43 novices this year, numbered five from those campus among them. A sixth Villanovan, David Luthy, has begun training for the Augustinian Lay Brotherhood.

Pizzi and O'Connor Reveal Basca Dance Band—Paul Judge

Co-chairmen Frank Pizzi and Dave O'Connor have announced the signing of Paul Judge and his orchestra for the annual Nick Basca dance to be held Friday night November 4th in the Field House. Mr. Judge has appeared at Villanova numerous times in the past and is well liked by those who have heard his music. Among some of his recent successful engagements are an appearance at the Steel Pier, Atlantic City, various hotel billings, dances at some of the area colleges and the University of Delaware.

NICHOLAS BASCA
. . . Becoming Legend

Pizzi and O'Connor are also handling the Homecoming queen contest this year, the finals of which will be the night of the dance. The student body will select the five finalists by popular voting to be held in the Pie Shoppe. Those attending the dance will then pick the girl of their choice from the five finalists to reign over the weekend.

Decoration Theme

The decorations will be focused around a theme of "An Old Time College Weekend" and will be handled by Mary Chapman, John Livezey and Bob Redmond. These three have been working hard with their committee in order to create the appearance of the college weekend of days gone by.

Ticket co-chairmen Ron Locandro and Jack Donohue have their committee selling tickets in the Pie Shoppe and the C&F cafeteria for $2.50 per couple. They say ticket sales are going quite well and they expect a large turnout.

The intra-mural council is handling the refreshment counter at the dance along with the cloakrooms. All proceeds from this dance go to the Augustinian Seminary Fund.

NFCCS Appeals To Students To Utilize Its Facilities

As is evident from the material presented in the first two installments of this series, the scope of interest within NFCCS is very broad. In order to bring maximum benefit to a school from such a program, the organization implementing that program divide responsibility and make use of existing facilities as well. The NFCCS committee itself must function in much the same manner as does the student council.

Is the foreign student in American Colleges being overlooked? What is the outlook on American Foreign policy? Is there a moral issue regarding racial discrimination? What is the student's role in this national issue and can he take positive action? What are the political issues facing the nation? What is the status of Catholic Higher Education, and what can be done to improve it? What is the proper relationship of labor and management? Is communism in the midst of education? What are the signs of communism? Does the Catholic individual have a special responsibility to the society?

These are but a few of the questions which NFCCS is in a position to help in answering, and which NFCCS can take some form of action in resolving. The campus committee will take direct action on some of these matters. In other matters, NFCCS can make available to existing organizations and interested individuals information, facilities, and resources which would be well beyond the scope of the average campus group.

WE CAN, HOWEVER, ASSIST ONLY THOSE PROJECTS OF WHICH WE ARE AWARE. IF YOU ARE A MEMBER OF A CAMPUS ORGANIZATION WHICH IS CONCERNED WITH ANY SERIOUS MATTER OR CONTEMPORARY PROBLEM, NFCCS PROBABLY HAS AVAILABLY MATERIAL OF CONSIDERABLE VALUE TO YOU.

NFCCS is fortunate enough to have a box in the student council office. STUDENT LEADERS: LET US KNOW WHAT YOU ARE DOING AND SEE WHAT WE CAN DO TO HELP YOU.

NFCCS is an organization OF STUDENTS, working FOR STUDENTS, and operated BY STUDENTS. You can even bring the water to the horse, but you still can't MAKE him drink.

NFCCS IS YOUR ORGANIZATION; USE IT.

Sophomore Cotillion Queen To Be Named By Band Leader

"Cotillion Carnival" will be the theme for the year's Sophomore Cotillion to be held on Friday, November 18. The featured band this year will be Al Raymond and his Orchestra.

Jack Shields, Cotillion chairman, also announced that ticket sales for the dance will begin on Monday, November 7, in the Pie Shoppe. Tickets will sell for $3.00 per couple and can also be obtained from any member of the Cotillion committee.

Shields also reported that a Cotillion Queen Contest will be conducted and the winner chosen by Al Raymond at the dance.

"Any student desiring to enter a contestant; directed Shields, must submit a photo, preferably a head and shoulders shot only, to the Student Council Office, second floor, Dougherty Hall, no later than Monday, November 7."

Queen Wins Prize

Five finalists will be chosen by a special Student Council committee aided by three faculty members. At the Cotillion, the queen will be presented with a bouquet of roses, a crown and cape, and an appropriate gift. The other finalists will also receive gifts.

Shields stated that all entries must be dates of those students who submit them and that the

Dean of Law School Appointed Chairman Of Elections Board

Harold Gill Reuschlein, Dean of the Law School, has been appointed chairman of a three-man board which will supervise the election of officers for the Philadelphia local of the Teamsters Union. This appointment was made by Judge Gerald A. Gleeson of Philadelphia Comcon Pleas Court No. 7, before whom a dispute concerning the local was being heard.

The board's task is to insure a fair and honest election, not merely a correct count of the ballots. The union local has been torn by charges and counter-charges made concerning its internal management and it has been the object of a long investigation both by a Senate subcommittee and by the District Attorney's office.

In carrying out its difficult assignment the board hopes to achieve a genuine assertion of union democracy. Dean Reuschlein has expressed his pleasure at being able to undertake this public service for the Court and has already met with the other members of the election board to formulate plans.

C&F Associate Dean Speaks At Seminar

Dr. Myron S. Heidingsfield, Associate Dean of the School of Commerce and Finance recently spoke before a Management Engineering Seminar held in the Cherry Hill Inn in New Jersey on the subject of Long Range Forecasting. The audience was composed of management personnel from the entire Radio Corporation of America, including such staff functions as Management Research, Marketing Research and Planning, Management Engineering, Finance Control, and several visiting consultants from Europe.

Several days later, Dr. Heidingfield, who also is in charge of Marketing Research, gave the opening lecture to the Marketing Club of the School of Commerce and Finance. His topic was Marketing Strategy and there were approximately 75 students in attendance.

Portrette

The 'Unknown' Prexy

Larry Bathgate ,senior class president, for the last two years has been one of the most unheralded class officers at Villanova.

Quietly, yet efficiently, laboring for the betterment of the Class of '61, Larry is currently chairman of the Homecoming Weekend which will be held November 3-5.

His particular charge in this venture is the jazz concert which this year is featuring the Brothers Four. "The jazz concert has been a dismal failure the last two years," stated the chairman, "and we have been advised by the University officials that if the concert is not a success this year, it will be discontinued. So we've gone all out to insure a success this year."

Bathgate declared that the Weekend will commence on Friday night with a bon fire on campus, followed by the annual Nick Basca Dance, at which the Basca queen will be crowned, a Villanova - Boston College rugby game on Saturday morning ,and a VU-BC football game on the same afternoon.

Alumni Party

"At halftime there will be a parade escort for the Basca queen," related Bathgate, "and from 2:30-4:30 the regional Alumni Club will hold a cocktail party at the Treadway Inn in Wayne, for the entire senior cass in order to acquaint them with the workings of the Villanova Alumni."

Bathgate, a Methodist, said he chose to come to Villanova, originally, because it was close to his home and because many of his friends came here.

PRESIDENT BATHGATE
. . . Inside Outsider

"I feel as if Ihave gotten a little more out of Villanova then the average student, by the very fact that I am a protestant", he said. "In my stay at VU I have been very much impressed by the conscientiousess and moral standards of our students."

An accounting major, Larry hopes to enter law school and major in taxation upon graduation.

Half-Completed LYNX In Need of Serious Topic; Cover Done

Messrs. Vince Kirk and Michael Wesley, co-editors of the LYNX, the campus literary magazine, have served notice that enough material has been submitted for half the volume.

"Many humorous articles have been accepted," professed Kirk, "but at the present time there are not too many stories dealing with serious topics. We are presently looking for this sort of material."

The literary bellwether also reported that a large number of poems have been submitted. He also interjected that the LYNX editors are aiming for 64 pages this year; however, if there is not enough par excellance material submitted by the initial deadline, October 31, they will settle for fewer pages.

Annotator Wesley annotated that the cover of the magazine has been completed and will soon be sent to the printer's (Radnor Graphic Arts in Radnor). He proclaimed that copies of the cover will be printed for publicity, previous to the appearance of the tome on campus and will be hung on the bulletin boards one week before the sale of the periodical.

Wesley described the cover as simple, featuring a glass containing pencils, pens, and brushes pointed upward to the epithet, LYNX with a soft, conservative, colored background.

V. U. Movie Program In Swing; Cat On Hot Tin Roof Is First Show

For the movie going students of Villanova University, the Entertainment Committee has announced that the campus Motion Picture Service will be inaugurated with "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" on Monday evening, October 31 at 6:30 p.m. As an added feature "The Halls of Montezuma" will be presented. A nominal admission charge of 45 cents is required in order to cover expenses.

Ralph Residerio, chairman of the Movie Committee, and Butch McNally, the co-chairman, said, "We hope to bring to Villanova University the most popular movies which have been released by Hollywood within the past year, including three cinemascope productions." He also said that, "A new sound system has been incorporated into the production of the movies in order to increase the viewing enjoyment of the student.

The committee expects to present during the school year, "Giant" starring James Dean, "High Society" with Grace Kelly and Bing Crosby, "Rebel Without a Cause" starring Natalie Wood and James Dean, "Don't Go Near the Water" featuring Glenn Ford and Eva Gabor and "All the Young Men" with Sidney Potier. Also they hope to acquire "From Here to Eternity", "Sunrise at Campobello", "Hell to Eternity" and "The Robe".

The members of the Movie Committee, in addition to Desiderio and McNally, are Art Christiano, Mark Galgano, and Frank Bentz.

Fraternity Presidents To Run Last Leg Of Annual J. Kiely Mile

By Gus Susnjara

The annual Joyce Kiely mile, which has fast become a Villanova tradition, takes its name from a rosy-cheeked lass whose name hapnens to be Joyce Kiely. Miss Kiely, or Dear Joycie as pursuants of her fair hand affectionately have chosen to term her, became the motivating force behind the whole flasco in 1956. The incident occurred when Dave Belcher and Jed Diogardi of the Class of '58 suddenly discovered that they both had dates with Joyce for the Homecoming Weekend. Since both were quite opposed to physical violence of any sort, they decided to resolve the difficulty in a foot race.

Belcher organized the Irish-American club and chose Ollie Finan as miler. Meanwhi'e Diogardi had Chubby McCarthy hotly training for his Italian-American association. In a still undetermined time Finan bested his opponent and Belcher won the date.

The following year, in order to perpetuate the event the race was run during Homecoming Week. This time McCarthy, fresh from PLC traning at Quantico, literally ran the now beer-bellied Finan into the cinders.

Since most participants in the mile were members of Delta Pi Mu Fraternity, this organization took over the handling of the event in 1958. Dwarflike John Quinn broke all standing records as he blazed by the poorly-conditioned Gus Susnjara in the fantastic time of 9:53. Susnjara, taking a short cut in a last-ditch attempt at victory, cut across the track in the third lap. This enabled him to break eleven minutes in the only mile since the first Olympiad with pitstops.

Last year the mile became an inter-fraternity affair with each of the four frats entering a candidate. Phi Kappa Pi, committing what is felt to be an unsportaman-like and glory-hungry deed, entered ex-varsity miler Vic DiMaio, who ran away with the race. Delta Pi Epsilon's Jim Fitten arrived last at the finish carted by a host of pledges.

This year, on November 3, the fifth annual Joyce Kiely mile will begin at 3:30 with a parade across campus to Villanova Stadium. Then the olympic, or perhaps what should be called the Kielian torch will be ignited and events will commence. Bob DeLisa will MC the affair for the third consecutive year. The race itself will be a relay, with each fraternity entering a team consisting of their fattest, shortest, and tallest men for the first laps. The final circuit will see a whirlwind finish by the fraternity presidents.

Always a gala exhibition of color, music, and buffoonery, the 1960 mile promises to be one of the strangest and most hilarious athletic events in the history of track.

Religious Bigotry Fought By Profs; Sign 'Separation' Bill

By Mark F. Quinn, Jr.

The religious issue is fast approaching its apogee in the present election campaign. A reminder on the Constitutional separation of church and State was made recently by 150 prominent "citizens who are Catholics" in a declaration entitled A Statement on Religious Liberty by American Catholic Laymen.

Mr. Thomas O'Toole, Vice Dean of the School of Law and Director of the Institute of Church and State, was one of the three signers from the faculty of Villanova. Mr. O'Toole made known that the article is not a campaign document and is "not intended to favor any candidate." A look at the signatures reveals that tiey are also of "quite mixed political outlook."

The most vehement anti-Catholic political material has centered on the dire consequences of electing a Catholic President, among which are Papal domination of the U. S. government, the end of religious freedom, and general discrimination against non-Catholics. It is the belief of the signatories that "constitutional separation of church and state offers the best guarantee both of religious freedom and of civic peace."

Mr. O'Toole stated that this bigotry may be partly due to the failure of some Catholics "to reflect the true image of Catholicism." It is the opinion of the signatories that "to the extent that many Catholics have failed to make known their devotion to religious liberty for all, to the extent that they at times have appeared to seek sectarian advantages, we must admit that we have contributed to doubts about our intentions."

We are told that a great number of Catholic voters may cast their ballot for a candidate merely because he is a Catholic. The Catholic voter who does this not only gives an extremely bad example for the faith but also gives a reason for the bigotry of many non-Catholics. The declaration reminds us that "in public acts as they affect the community the Catholic is bound in conscience to promote the common good and to avoid any seeking of a merely sectarian advantage."

To all Catholics who have the right to vote: If you cast your vote merely on the conviction of a religious issue, you are doing more harm than good in the opinion of this writer. Analyze the tenets of the parties of the candidates, the platforms of the parties, and the proposed programs of the candidates. Reach a decision as to which one is better qualified to meet the common need for the common good. Cast your ballot for that candidate.

Math Symposium Held Friday, Saturday

Nearly three hundred high school principals and teachers will attend a two-day symposium on Modern Mathematics at Villanova University tomorrow and Saturday, October 28th and 29th.

School Administrators from more than one hundred high schools in an eight-state area will be present for the two-day conference sponsored by Villanova's Department of Mathematics. Mr. Emil Amelotti, Chairman of the University's Mathematics Department, is chairman.

The expresion "Modern Mathematics" refers to a new approach to the teaching of a subject which many students have found difficult to learn. School administrators believe further application of the new approach will simplify and completely revolutionize the teaching of mathematics on all levels within the next few years.

Registration for the two-day symposium will be held on Friday morning at 9:30. The Very Rev. John A. Klekotka, O.S.A., University President, will give an address of welcome to the administrators during a general meeting at 11:30 a.m. in the auditorium of Vasey Hall.

NFCCS Region Meet

The Regional Council of NFCCS met on Sunday, October 16, at Villanova University. Remarks of welcome were made by Fr. Quinn, N.F. moderator at Villanova, to delegates from nine Catholic colleges.

A special election of Regional Officers was held at which time Sharon LaRose of Imaculatta was elected regional president, Gene Felch of Villanova, Regional Vice-President, and Jean Jourdan of Chestnut Hill was elected CURA Administrator.

A Re-emphasis

An American "era" is rapidly drawing to a close. The microcosm of democracy that is an American presidential campaign, is racing towards its November 8 fulfillment.

The four-month long "era" of the campaign with its serio-comic atmosphere, its blasts of oratories, and its ever heightening suspense, will reoccur in 1964, 1968, 1972 and so on, we may hope, ad infinitum.

It is the man behind all the razzle-dazzle, however, who will be of paramount concern to the American people and to the world at large. Whoever is elected to the presidency will face difficulties of a magnitude unparalled in the history of mankind. Exactly what these difficulties are, and will be, has been outlined time and again in platforms and political treaties, and discussed in detail in countless speeches, interviews, and newspaper articles.

The VILLANOVAN itself has attempted to bring about a degree of clarity to the current campaign so that approximately 2,000 voters on campus may be as fully informed as possible about the issues and personalities involved in the present presidential race.

The student poll conducted by this newspaper indicated that slightly less than seventenths of the undergraduate enrollment prefers Senator John F. Kennedy for president.

Although the results of this poll are of no direct significance in the national political scene, one very important indirect result is obvious:

If every voter in the United States considered his ballot with the thought and judgement with which most students submitted their poll sheets to this newspaper, the populous could rest assured that the nation was, indeed, in good hands.

An important, but easily overlooked, aspect of the VILLANOVAN poll, however, is the fact that only a few more than fifty per cent of the students selected to be polled, actually submitted ballots.

If this is reflective of a nation wide tendency toward apathy, then our difficulties are just beginning. Of course, a poll conducted by a student newspaper at a presidential election, are hardly comparable in importance. Nevertheless, lethergy is lethergy is dangerous.

On the other hand, if the students' hesitancy at being polled stems from their ignorance of issues involved in the current campaign, perhaps they are deserving of a slight compliment.

For it is senseless to entrust the election of the major officials of government to ignorant voters. And it is commendable, to a degree, for these ignorant voters to sacrifice their right to vote in order that the election may be left to competent citizens.

The VILLANOVAN has previousiy urged that voters who are unfamilar with the issues at stake in this campaign leave the selection of major government officials to knowledgable voters.

We repeat that request, and add a plea that all citizens who are sincerely interested in their own and their country's welfare learn the facts involved in this campaign and vote intelligently on election day.

Spirit: The Genuine Article

by Bill Speers

In this age of athletic emphasis and passivity in our colleges, school spirit has been reduced to cupping one's mouth with one hand and yelling "Go Team!" while swinging a bottle in the other, at a football game; waving a school pennant at rallies; or purchasing a ticket for the latest campus function.

However ,we of the VILLANOVAN staff deem ourselves singularly honored at having witnessed, and having been somewhat involved in, a rare display of pure school spirit. For the last four weeks, a somewhat corpulent, sleepy-eyed renegade from Opera-Classica has been planning and executing The VILLANOVAN political poll, virtually unassisted.

Ed Graham, a junior education major, and actually not even a member of our staff, has fought boredom, studies and sleep in the many, many solo hours he devoted to our poll. Almost unnoticeably to students and our staff alike, Ed handled over 600 student voters, and waded through mountains of statistics, in presenting us with our noteworthy front page lead story.

He listened to our idea, became interested, and volunteered to administer the poll. In cooperation with Dr. Frank McGurk of the Psychology Dept., Ed came up with a series of questions, had them mimeoed, but was then refused use of the I.B.M. facilities to scientifically select proportional representatives from the student list to be polled.

Therefore, he selected the pollees by hand, choosing every sixth student from a list of the total undergraduate enrollment, which he obtained from the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs. Ed then had the names typed and mimeoed, and tacked the six-page list on bulletin boards throughout the campus.

Slim "Rewards"

He was "rewarded" for his efforts by having slightly more than half of the selected students respond (among those who didn't: a few BMOC's), a wek of mathematical exercise, as he alone, during his free time, compiled the statistics for our lead story.

For this work, Ed received nothing, except possibly a sense of satisfaction on seeing the fruits of his labors displayed in print. If anything, he was constantly frustrated. Harrassed by inconsiderate stac members, dissociated from Dr. McGurk, maligned for his mid-world series announcements of the poll over the Pic Shoppe p.a., Ed emerged relatively unscarred.

We asked him WHY? He wouldn't answer; he didn't feel his reasons were necessary, or even important. We accepted this, for his kind of school spirit doesn't have to be uniformed, heralded or solicited.

We like to think that our efforts to produce aconsistently good newspaper aid in advancing the name of Villanova. By assisting us as he did, Ed helped us to write a good news story—the basis o fwhat we hope is a good issue.

It will be forgotten by you, the readers, and may easily be overlooked by us, the editors, as the next VILLANOVAN goes to press and appears on campus—for the wheel turns and another cog is revealed. But what a story we have this week! Thanks, Ed.

Only Bigots Injure Church-State Status

"The Catholic Church will not be helped or hurt by the outcome of the Presidential election," declares Rev. Ralph Gorman, editor of The Sign, national Catholic magazine, in a signed editorial in the November issue, published last week.

"The U. S. may be harmed," Father Gorman warns, "by the bigots who would rewrite in practice the clauses of the Constitution which outlaw a religious test for office and guarantee equal rights for all religions before the law. They are the real enemies of the Constitution."

"The impression which the present outbreak of bigotry makes on intelligent foreigners is deplorable. The U. S. is one of the most advanced countries in the world in culture and education and at the same time one of the most benighted and reactionary in the sphere of religious tolerance," he points out.

"It is difficult to probe the mentality of the bigots," Father Gorman asserts. "Perhaps one reason for their attitude is a reluctance to admit that the U. S. is no longer a Protestant nation with a Protestant culture. Today we have a pluralistic society made up of Protestants, Jews, Catholics and others, all contributing their share to the common good and each group as American as any other."

Not All Bigots

"We Catholics should beware of jumping to the conclusion that all or most Protestants are bigots," Father Gorman cautions. "We feel that it is safe to say that the vast majority is not and that they are ashamed of their lunatic fringe."

"We should act with calmness when provoked by bigotry," he counsels. "Angry denunciations do no good. It is completely useless even to argue with bigots. They are not seeking answers to their questions; in fact, their questions are only accusations framed in question form."

"Fair-minded Protestants can and will find answers to their questions, especially if they get a little help from Catholic friends, neighbors and business associates. The difficulty here is, of course, that too many Catholics don't know the answers themselves, and those who do often hide their light under a bushel.

There has been too little communication, or dialogue as it is called today, between Protestants and Catholics, and the fault is usually on the Catholic side. We suffer from a complacency in the possession of the truth and have no thought of defending or sharing it."

Letters To The Editor

Why all the huusballoo about Villanova's waning football fortunes? Instead of listening to "sugar coated" promises and "wait till next year" optimism, why can't something be done to boost athletic prestige now?

I don't remember the great Wildcat teams of the 30's, and 40's but I do remember sitting in the "Grocery Bowl" and watching the modern day version of the Roman Games—with V.U. in the role of Christians. I remember Gene Filipski giving the Blue and White a lift while making All-American.

And I also remember last Saturday watching the Wildcats being pounded into Mitchie Stadium by Army caissons. Our football prestige has never been lower. We don't want pity. We want results.

I'm not advocating a rush to "syndicate football" with platoons of coaches, recruiters, public relations men, etc.

Villanova needs pugnacity not platitudes. To save our prestige, we have to go somewhere. It's a time for decision.

Campaign Issues Hinge On Economic Policies

Kennedy Seeks "Get Moving" Policy; Advance of Little Man

By Thomas Mentzer
Department of History & Political Science

As the 1960 campaign enters its closing weeks, the observer finds that the deluge of political oratory has failed to alter the original allegiance of many voters. To the extent that much jowling consists of promises as empty as air, the voter shows himself to be a wise protector of his important privilege. To the degree that his position stems from long years of being spoon-fed on family or class notions of American political parties, the voter's action is both unfortunate and disconcerning. One attitude which many older GOPers and their grandchildren still share is the image of the Democratic Party as the "give-away party," the party of "state welfarism."

The fact that the Republican program now includes the beneficial federal welfare measures adopted by previous Democratic administrations is of no consequence. To those followers of the McKinley, Coolidge and Hoover tradition, the 1960 economic program of Senator Kennedy in line with Democratic programs of the past contains nothing but promised chaos for the American taxpayer and the business community. So once more, the American voter must decide just as he did in 1912 in the case of Wilson and in 1932 in the case of F.D.R., whether this Republican attack is accurate, or whether it is another smokescreen to hide several years of standing still. A g'ance at the main points of the Kennedy program would then appear to be in order.

SENATOR KENNEDY

In reflecting upon the Kennedy program, one notes that its chief proposals emanate from two basic considerations, the necessity to keep business—all business—moving, and the necessity to repair certain gaping holes in the fabric of American prosperity. With reference to the first of these motives, Senator Kennedy, far from abandoning the American free enterprise system, has advocated a prompt widening of the businessman's horizon. To offset declining markets in such areas as the steel and automobile industries, home building, the textile industry he urges an expansion of production and demand. One of the keys to such a new growth is an easing of the GOP tight money policy.

In a recent interview Senator Kennedy, talking about this problem, remarked, "Unnecessarily tight money has discouraged new housing and consumer purchases. Businesses which cannot finance expansion from their own accumulated profits have been discouraged from making growth-making investments because they could not obtain capital at reasonable interest rates. Thus, the policy has restricted growth." Moreover, he intends to see that the small businessman, long the forgotten sufferer in the business community, shares in such a growth. By easing credit, increasing competition and especially by channeling more of the government's lucrative defense contracts to small, efficient firms, Senator Kennedy hopes to assure the small business community a chance to participate in an increased prosperity.

Long-time critics of the Democratic Party rush to stigmatize such proposals with damning cries of inflation, higher taxes, excessive government spending. Though void of originality, these hoary political cliches continue to impress scores of voters, as if one party did nothing but save and the other did nothing but spend. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Eisenhower Administration had the biggest unbalanced budget in American political history in 1958-59. And whose income tax has gone down? The point being made, of course, is this. Regardless of what party is in power, the comolex nature of the country's present foreign and domestic problems demand great spending and continued taxation. The great nations of modern history have dominated their ages by making and spending, not by sitting back and saving. If the United States is to continue to dominate this age, then its citizens must display a growing sense of political maturity in such matters.

Opposes Higher Taxes

Now such a maturity works both ways, and the American citizen can ill-afford to pay unnecessary or unfair taxes. A tax raise in view of the present poor state of overall business would work a serious hardship on many. Consequently, the Massachusetts Senator opposes any increase in tax rates at the present time. Rather he believes that greater tax revenues will be forthcoming with a general improvement in business conditions and a reform of the tax system. He feels, likewise, that increased productivity and greater demand would be an effective antidote against the current inflation. If more specific measures are required to deal with the latter problem, he favors a cautious, wise use of Federal monetary and credit policies. As in his other policies, the catchword of the Kennedy economic program seems to be, "get moving."

A similar inclination has caused him to urge a number of reforms aimed at removing certain inadequecies in the American prosperity scheme. For while some have been enjoying a very great material abundance, other large groups, notably the underpaid, the unemployed and our older citizens, have practically been forgotten. Programs far out of-step with present living conditions still guide the government's relationship toward these groups. For example, many older people must attend to all their needs out of an average $72.00 per month which they receive from social security. At a time in

Nixon For Advances Within "Fiscal Responsibility"

By John G. Stephenson, III
School of Law

In discussing the economic issues of this campaign we must distinguish between the issues which are raised for the purpose of influencing votes, such as the traditional appeals to "minority groups" and special interests, and the actual national problems which must be resolved by government during the next four years. The basic attitudes of the candidates on these questions should determine the vote of the educated man. Both parties are for increasing the gross national product, for building up our defense potential, for increasing the prosperity of citizens, and for taking care of the less fortunate members of our society. What is at issue is the way in which this is to be done. Mr. Nixon has been very explicit in stating his political philosophy. Whatever steps government takes must be taken within the limits of "fiscal responsibility" (i.e., without adopting inflationary measures) and with proper regard for the "private segment of our economy." While Mr. Kennedy has not said that he is for inflation or for government control of business and industry, and has steadily refused to state a coherent philosophy as to how he expects to bring about this better America, his separate proposals add up in my opinion to just that. He advocates welfare programs without regard to cost (after all, it is only a few cents per loaf of bread), he advocates stimulating the economy by lower interest rates and a po'icy of easy money, and he does not confine his recommendations for government action to public works

The Correct Diagnosis

That this is a corect diagnosis of the views of the two parties is not only shown by the public speeches of the two candidates, but by the programs which were offered in the session of Congress which met after the conventions. Both offered programs of aid to the aged, to build public schools, and to advance unskilled labor (minimum wages). The Republican proposals limited aid to cases of need and inability to provide through other sources, and in the case of the mimimum wage to an increase which might not be inflationary because it would merely adjust a current disparity between the wages of skilled and unskilled labor. The Democratic program insisted on aid to all without regard to need, and an increase in minimum wages which would create pressure on the higher wage brackets.

There seems to be little doubt therefore that the Democratic platform is inflationary and is intended to be just that. It would mean additional taxes, which would create pressure for higher compensation without regard to productivity, and lessen the amount of pay available for savings. Inflation has two aspects: the diminution in value of the purchasing power of the dollar, and also, an adverse effect upon the process of capital accumulation. Government works and the building up of government reserves, even for actuarially sound insurance schemes, siphons savings away from the private sector of the economy, and retards capital accumulation.

Controlled Inflation

The doctrine that inflation was good for the economy was originally invented in a period of acute, world-wide depression. America and England were both apparently over-capitalized; that is, furnished with an excess of productive capacity. The theory of the hour was that "controlled inflation" would force investors to liquidate their capital investment, prevent the further build up of capital, and place more money in the hands of consumers. It must be admitted that this policy was adopted by government too late to deal effectively with depression, and in the long years until the outbreak of the war in Europe, showed very little effectiveness as a means of restoring production. To justify his invocation of a policy of controlled inflation, Mr. Kennedy has had to take the position that America is in a very serious state of depression; but the great prosperity of the last seven years is by most economic observers accredited to the withdrawal of government intervention and easy money policies which did not begin until after the end of the Truman administration.

VICE-PRESIDENT NIXON

The second basis upon which planned inflation seems to be justified, is that it will redistribute control over the productive activities of the country, either to a different group of people or to the government. This theory stems separately from the native brand of socialism which began with Thorstein Veblen and continues down through the modern schools of "Welfare Economics." The target of its publicists seems to be the "leisure class," the "status seekers" and like pejorative terms with which they characterize American leaders of finance and industry. While this view is very generally held by the fuzzy thinkers in the ivory towers, it finds very little support among practicing economists: but it has been reflected throughout the campaign, at the lower level, by appeals to "the common man" and diatribes against "the party of privilege."

Parties' Associations

If one looks at the type of person who constitutes the continuing support of both parties, one can make some judgment as to the way in which they will handle our interests in the years to come. If one eliminates the professional politicians and statesmen and those who identify their interests with the continuing support, then one finds that the Republican party has long been associated with the leaders in finance and industry, while the Democratic party, since the days of F.D.R. and industrial organization (there was a similar but not identical alingment behind William Jennings Bryan) has been associated with the leaders of the industrial unions which control the labor market in a large segment of American industry. The former are primarily concerned with increasing profitable production, the latter with distribution, with their "fair share".

The attitude of finance and industry, at least in the more sophisticated form it has taken since T.R. drew a proper line between uses and abuses of industrial power, has emphasized the fact that production can flourish only when there is a healthy demand for both producers' and consumers' goods; for in a free economy, it is consumer demand which channels production. It has therefore been the interest and concern of industry to see that adequate income is provided for all productive workers, including executives, merchants and professional people. These not only create a market for goods, but when their income yields something more than subsistence, contribute through savings bank deposits, insurance purchases, and the acquisition of corporate securities to the formation of additional capital. Nor has industry been slow to realize, through voluntary giving as well as through reasonable taxation, the need to house and to clothe those who are unable to contribute to the productive life of the community.

The opposing philosophy, being concerned with distribution, and particularly with its "fair share," has found little time to worry about production. Certainly it is not unfair to say that organized labor has contributed in the past to inflation by insisting on less work, opposing automation, featherbedding, and seeking to block the flow of American capital abroad to seek more congenial labor relations and more productive

An American "era" is rapidly drawing to a close. The microcosm of democracy that is an American presidential campaign, is racing towards its November 8 fulfillment.

The four-month long "era" of the campaign with its serio-comic atmosphere, its blasts of oratories, and its ever heightening suspense, will reoccur in 1964, 1968, 1972 and so on, we may hope, ad infinitum.

It is the man behind all the razzle-dazzle, however, who will be of paramount concern to the American people and to the world at large. Whoever is elected to the presidency will face difficulties of a magnitude unparalled in the history of mankind. Exactly what these difficulties are, and will be, has been outlined time and again in platforms and political treaties, and discussed in detail in countless speeches, interviews, and newspaper articles.

The VILLANOVAN itself has attempted to bring about a degree of clarity to the current campaign so that approximately 2,000 voters on campus may be as fully informed as possible about the issues and personalities involved in the present presidential race.

The student poll conducted by this newspaper indicated that slightly less than seventenths of the undergraduate enrollment prefers Senator John F. Kennedy for president.

Although the results of this poll are of no direct significance in the national political scene, one very important indirect result is obvious:

If every voter in the United States considered his ballot with the thought and judgement with which most students submitted their poll sheets to this newspaper, the populous could rest assured that the nation was, indeed, in good hands.

An important, but easily overlooked, aspect of the VILLANOVAN poll, however, is the fact that only a few more than fifty per cent of the students selected to be polled, actually submitted ballots.

If this is reflective of a nation wide tendency toward apathy, then our difficulties are just beginning. Of course, a poll conducted by a student newspaper at a presidential election, are hardly comparable in importance. Nevertheless, lethergy is lethergy is dangerous.

On the other hand, if the students' hesitancy at being polled stems from their ignorance of issues involved in the current campaign, perhaps they are deserving of a slight compliment.

For it is senseless to entrust the election of the major officials of government to ignorant voters. And it is commendable, to a degree, for these ignorant voters to sacrifice their right to vote in order that the election may be left to competent citizens.

The VILLANOVAN has previousiy urged that voters who are unfamilar with the issues at stake in this campaign leave the selection of major government officials to knowledgable voters.

We repeat that request, and add a plea that all citizens who are sincerely interested in their own and their country's welfare learn the facts involved in this campaign and vote intelligently on election day.

In this age of athletic emphasis and passivity in our colleges, school spirit has been reduced to cupping one's mouth with one hand and yelling "Go Team!" while swinging a bottle in the other, at a football game; waving a school pennant at rallies; or purchasing a ticket for the latest campus function.

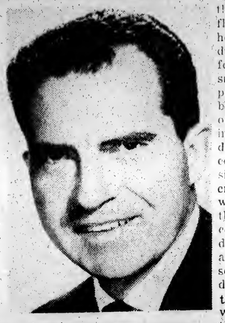
Nixon For Advances Within "Fiscal Responsibility"

By John G. Stephenson, III
School of Law

In discussing the economic issues of this campaign we must distinguish between the issues which are raised for the purpose of influencing votes, such as the traditional appeals to "minority groups" and special interests, and the actual national problems which must be resolved by government during the next four years. The basic attitudes of the candidates on these questions should determine the vote of the educated man. Both parties are for increasing the gross national product, for building up our defense potential, for increasing the prosperity of citizens, and for taking care of the less fortunate members of our society. What is at issue is the way in which this is to be done. Mr. Nixon has been very explicit in stating his political philosophy. Whatever steps government takes must be taken within the limits of "fiscal responsibility" (i.e., without adopting inflationary measures) and with proper regard for the "private segment of our economy." While Mr. Kennedy has not said that he is for inflation or for government control of business and industry, and has steadily refused to state a coherent philosophy as to how he expects to bring about this better America, his separate proposals add up in my opinion to just that. He advocates welfore programs without regard to cost (after all, it is only a few cents per loaf of bread), he advocates stimulating the economy by lower interest rates and a policy of easy money, and he does not confine his recommendations for government action to public works



The Correct Diagnosis

That this is a corect diagnosis of the views of the two parties is not only shown by the public speeches of the two candidates, but by the programs which were offered in the session of Congress which met after the conventions. Both offered programs of aid to the aged, to build public schools, and to advance unskilled labor (minimum wages). The Republican proposals limited aid to cases of need and inability to provide through other sources, and in the case of the mimimum wage to an increase which might not be inflationary because it would merely adjust a current disparity between the wages of skilled and unskilled labor. The Democratic program insisted on aid to all without regard to need, and an increase in minimum wages which would create pressure on the higher wage brackets.

There seems to be little doubt therefore that the Democratic platform is inflationary and is intended to be just that. It would mean additional taxes, which would create pressure for higher compensation without regard to productivity, and lessen the amount of pay available for savings. Inflation has two aspects: the diminution in value of the purchasing power of the dollar, and also, an adverse effect upon the process of capital accumulation. Government works and the building up of government reserves, even for actuarially sound insurance schemes, siphons savings away from the private sector of the economy, and retards capital accumulation.

Controlled Inflation

The doctrine that inflation was good for the economy was originally invented in a period of acute, world-wide depression. America and England were both apparently over-capitalized; that is, furnished with an excess of productive capacity. The theory of the hour was that "controlled inflation" would force investors to liquidate their capital investment, prevent the further build up of capital, and place more money in the hands of consumers. It must be admitted that this policy was adopted by government too late to deal effectively with depression, and in the long years until the outbreak of the war in Europe, showed very little effectiveness as a means of restoring production. To justify his invocation of a policy of controlled inflation, Mr. Kennedy has had to take the position that America is in a very serious state of depression; but the great prosperity of the last seven years is by most economic observers accredited to the withdrawal of government intervention and easy money policies which did not begin until after the end of the Truman administration.

VICE-PRESIDENT NIXON

The second basis upon which planned inflation seems to be justified, is that it will redistribute control over the productive activities of the country, either to a different group of people or to the government. This theory stems separately from the native brand of socialism which began with Thorstein Veblen and continues down through the modern schools of "Welfare Economics." The target of its publicists seems to be the "leisure class," the "status seekers" and like pejorative terms with which they characterize American leaders of finance and industry. While this view is very generally held by the fuzzy thinkers in the ivory towers, it finds very little support among practicing economists; but it has been reflected throughout the campaign, at the lower level, by appeals to "the common man" and diatribes against "the party of privilege."

Parties' Associations

If one looks at the type of person who constitutes the continuing support of both parties, one can make some judgment as to the way in which they will handle our interests in the years to come. If one eliminates the professional politicians and statesmen and those who identify their interests with the continuing support, then one finds that the Republican party has long been associated with the leaders in finance and industry, while the Democratic party, since the days of F.D.R. and industrial organization (there was a similar but not identical alingment behind William Jennings Bryan) has been associated with the leaders of the industrial unions which control the labor market in a large segment of American industry. The former are primarily concerned with increasing profitable production, the latter with distribution, with their "fair share".

The attitude of finance and industry, at least in the more sophisticated form it has taken since T.R. drew a proper line between uses and abuses of industrial power, has emphasized the fact that production can flourish only when there is a healthy demand for both producers' and consumers' goods: for in a free economy, it is consumer demand which channels production. It has therefore been the interest and concern of industry to see that adequate income is provided for all productive workers, including executives, merchants and professional people. These not only create a market for goods, but when their income yields something more than subsistence, contribute through savings bank deposits, insurance purchases, and the acquisition of corporate securities to the formation of additional capital. Nor has industry been slow to realize, through voluntary giving as well as through reasonable taxation, the need to house and to clothe those who are unable to contribute to the productive life of the community.

The opposing philosophy, being concerned with distribution, and particularly with its "fair share," has found little time to worry about production. Certainly it is not unfair to say that organized labor has contributed in the past to inflation by insisting on less work, opposing automation, featherbedding, and seeking to block the flow of American capital abroad to seek more congenial labor relations and more productive

'Round Midnight

Cabaret, Chaplin, Cop Columnist's Kudos

by Joe Zawacki

Two items caught our eye this past weekend that we believe are worth mentioning. Number one is an ambitious little project known as "the playground", located at Broad and Spruce Sts. in downtown Philly. It is the latest attempt at intimate, cabaret-type theatre with one notable exception; you can drink booze while enjoying the entertainment.

The Underground is the joint brainstorm of Lee Castle and Phil Anthony, proprietors of the next-door Rathskeller, who contacted Hedgerow Theater and brought in the Theater Main Line group in the form of three one-act plays by such notable contemporaries as Lonnie Chapman, Edward Albee and H. B. Lutz. The plays are well-acted (especially so by a man named Logan Ramsey) and are thought-provoking.

To enter the Underground, you enter off Broad St. and walk down a flight of stairs where you are escorted to your table in a room striving for intimacy, the object being to achieve rapport between audience and the actors.

Because of the quality of the plays, the Underground's opening attraction drew critical acclaim and near-capacity crowds over the weekends. Approximately 70% of Saturday night's crowd was in the collegiate-age bracket, and they all seemed to enjoy the novelty of it as well as the plays.

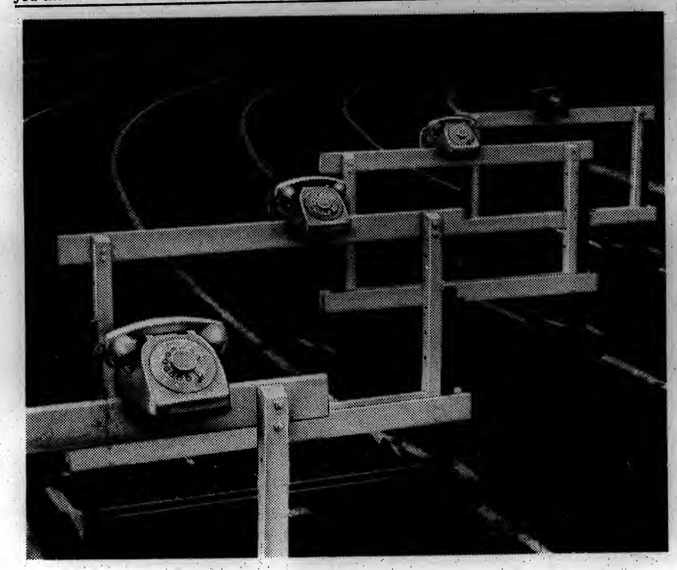
Next Door Noise

The minimum is a reasonable $2.50 per head and there is much scurrying between plays, because that's the only time that drinks are served. The only complaint registered was the noise floating in from next door which proved to be disconcerning at times. It should be remedied.

Messrs. Castle and Anthony are to be congratulated for this venture. They seem determined to see it through its embryonic stages which could prove to be difficult due to lack of bookings. They are hoping to vary the productions enough to please all tastes and in this line, their next attraction is the noted interpretive dancer and folk singer, Geoffrey Holder (Nov. 3-4).

They are also negotiating for the rights to "Threepenny Opera" and are interested in presenting any worthy productions that the local colleges can come up with. This enterprise will bear watching in the next few months, if it can survive the growing pains.

Item number two is the revival of the classic Charlie Chaplin 1936 satire, "Modern Times", currently playing at The Wayne Avenue Playhouse (4900 Wayne Ave.). Its manager, Barney Sackett, who runs the highly successful Nickelodeon nights at the theater, is also to be commended for taking a chance on this picture where powers like Warner Bros. did not.



Mister Magoo Returns

That he has been rewarded was evident from the crowds lining up outside the boxoffice over the weekend. The film speaks for itself. Like most Chaplin works, it is magnificent in its comedy, pathos, and stinging satire of the coming of age of the machine age. Added incentive on the bill is a set of Mister Magoo cartoons.

It didn't survive cutdown last week, but we made mention of the fact that it seemed like all the local colleges moved their campuses to the Academy of Music last Sunday night to see political satirist Mort Sahl. The SRO crowd was not disappointed either as Sahl was in top form with his biting comments, most of which were too, too truthful.

Rounding out the bill was a trio of folk singers who call themselves the Limelighters. This group is obviously patterned after the Kingston Trio and others of that ilk, but with one notable exception: the Limelighters have talent.

Add opening for the week: Joey Bishop (Sciolla's, Friday) . . . Nina Simone (Showboat), "Cannonball" Adderley (Pep's), Barney Kessel (Red Hill), Fisher and Marks, the comedy team (Palumbo's) . . . Al Alberts, the former lead of the 4 Aces (Smart Spot) . . . The Alamo opens today at the Midtown . . . Play openings include Lucille Ball's "Wildcat" at the Erlanger this Saturday, Julie Harris' "Little Moon Of Alban" at the Forrest, on Friday, and "Advise and Consent" on November 1 at the Walnut.

Clearing the hurdles with research

At Gen Tel, we've made a running start toward solving many of tomorrow's communications problems.

For instance, scientists at General Telephone & Electronics Laboratories are working in the uncharted area of the spectrum where radio waves take on the characteristics of light. They have already developed an experimental ultramicrowave system that may one day make possible the transmission of two million messages on a single radio beam in free space.

As a major communications company with world-wide connections, General Telephone is helping to advance the science of total communications around the globe.

Our stepped-up research in the basic sciences is but one example of the way General Telephone & Electronics combines the talents of many people and the facili . . of many companies to meet the future communications needs not only of America, but the whole world.

Campaign Blunders Could Lose Election

By Mike Donahue

Alexander Pope once wrote, in a moment of epigrammatical brilliance, "to err is human, to forgive divine." This profound observation, sagacious as it may be, is not a universal truth. It doesn't apply in politics. In a national election campaign to err might be human, but it is also fatal. Ask Tom Dewey.

The mustachiod former Governor of New York made a gross tactical error in the campaign of 1948. He opined that his restrained ,dignified, apathetic posture would win more votes than Harry Truman's hustling, bellicose, give-em hell tactics.

Dewey, Dr. Gallup, and the Chicago Tribune (early edition, "Dewey Wins") blundered.

Many Boo-Boos

History is fraught with campaign booboos of similar portent. In 1882 Republican James G. Blaine of Maine stood a good chance of capturing New York with its preponderantly Catholic, Irish, immigrant population. He alienated himself with this faction, though, in two ways. He was seen in Delmonico's restaurant in N.Y. City in the company of some infamous "robber barons." This lost him the votes of many immigrant laborers.

Blain's ultimate tragic flaw, though was an ill timed snooze while at a campaign dinner. In the face of some uninspiring oratory Blaine dozed off. One of the speakers during the presidential condidate's nap was a certain Reverend Burchard. In a fit of vitriolic glee, Burchard declared that he would not vote for any ticket that featured "Rum, Romanism, and Rebellion," an obvious slash at Irish Catholics. Blaine did not repudiate the remark and a reporter blew Burchard's statement out of proportion. As a result Blaine lost the support of the Irish immigrants, New York state, and the election.

One Step Too Many

In 1916, Charles Evans Hughes, Republican standard bearer, crossed a picket line and lost the votes of organized labor. This pressure group had less power than today but Hughes, by ambling across that line, lost enough votes to elect Woodrow Wilson by a slim margin.

With such historical precedent it is not, therefore, surprising to note that the 1960 candidates are running true to blundering form. The significance about 1960 errors is their quantity.

Dozer Blaine

There have been at least four major blunders by the candidates thus far, two on each side, not including the Quemsoy-Matsu hassle which is a bipartisan breach of political etiquette.

Apology or Regret?

The first was the famous "apology or regret" statement made by Senator Kennedy on the U-2 situation. The Vice-President has claimed ,and newspaper texts bear him out that Kennedy said the U.S. should apologize to Khrushchev for the ill-timed U-2 flight. Kennedy has steadfastly maintained that he was misquoted. To counter Nixon's assertion that he (Nixon) would never express regrets to the leader of a Communist nation ,Kennedy cited six instances in which the administration expressed regrets to Russia during the Eisenhower reign over similar incidents.

Another Democratic error, although it doesn't seem as glaring now as it did six weeks ago, is the selection of Lyndon Johnson as vice-presidential candidate. Johnson was selected ostensibly to pacify the more conservative elements in the Democratic party, namely the South. Another less publicized reason was the cherished hope by party brass that LBJ could effect pro-Kennedy Legislation in the dovetail Congressional session. LBJ dropped the ball. The sesswas, from a Democratic viewpoint, an abortive failure.

South For LBJ?

After this faux pas on Johnson's part the Democratic powers-that-are figured that, at least, LBJ could deliver the South. However the poll taken by AP last week showed that Nixon has broken the Solid South. Several states, including South Carolina which hasn't gone Republican since 1876 are in Nixon's column.

Some Southern newspapers, who are usually violently pro-Johnson, have waxed unenthusiastic toward him. An editorial cartoon which appeared in the Atlanta Constitution some weeks ago (below) shows a sheepish looking Johnson saying to an efficient looking Kennedy, "With you, Jack, we may even carry the South."

The Democrats do not have a corner on the blunder market, however. The Republicans have made their share, too.

Lodge, The Culprit

Strangely enough most of them have centered about the most sacrosanct of the four candidates, Henry Cabot Lodge. Early in the campaign Nixon promised to utilize Lodge's proven diplomatic abilities by sending the former U.S. delegate to the U.N. to the Middle East to try to settle the smoldering Israeli-Arab dispute.

Baldy in The Atlanta Constitution

"With you Jack, we may even carry the South."

This brought a wail of protest from several prominent members of New York's Jewish community. They claimed that Lodge showed definite pro-Arab leanings in the Suez dispute of 1956. Sending Lodge to Tel Aviv, they implied would be, tantamount to sending Faubus to Leopoldville.

Backfire

This could backfire miserably for the Republicans if the Jewish vote lines up against Nixon and Lodge. Especially in heavily Jewish New York where the shift could could swing the state and 45 previous electoral votes into Kennedy's column.

LUCKY STRIKE PRESENTS:

DEAR DR. FROOD:

DR. FROOD'S THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: Early to bed and early to rise is an excellent way to avoid people.

Dear Dr. Frood: What should I look for first when I look for a wife?

Searching

DEAR SEARCHING: Her husband.

Dear Dr. Frood: Our son has been in college three months, and we haven't heard a word from him. Not even a post card. I don't want him to think I am too demanding or overprotective, but frankly I am worried. What should i do?

Worried Mother

DEAR WORRIED: Why worry after only three months in college? He's still learning how to write.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am six foot five, 225 pounds, handsome, tanned, muscled, a good athlete. But I can't get along with girls because I can never think of anything to say. What do you suggest?

Brawny

DEAR BRAWNY: "Me Tarzan, you Jane."

Dear Dr. Frood: Don't you agree that every college man has the right, in fact, the duty, to stand up and speak out for the things he believes in? Tomorrow I am going straight to the college president and tell him, politely but firmly, what is wrong here—the inferior teaching, the second-rate accommodations, the bad food. My friends think I am wrong to do this. What do you think?

Determined

DEAR DETERMINED: I applaud your spirit, young man! Had I been able, I would have commended you in a more personal letter. However, you forgot to leave a forwarding address.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am puzzled by the Lucky Strike slogan: "Remember how great cigarettes used to taste? Luckies still do." I've been sitting here for hours, thinking, thinking, thinking, but for the life of me I can't remember. What should I do about this?

Forgetful

DEAR FORGETFUL: I suggest you lean back, relax, and light up a Lucky Strike. I'm sure it will all come back to you—who you are, what you were, where you lived, everything.

FROOD FAD SWEEPS COLLEGES! They laughed when Dr. Frood started the new college craze of enjoying a Lucky while hanging from a coat rack. But now everybody is doing it! Smoking Luckies, that is. Today college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular. Reason: With or without coat rack, Luckies deliver the greatest taste in smoking today.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

question and answer period will be allowed for a half-hour duration.

The debate will close with a five-minute summation by each man. The entire affair will be completed by 9:30.

Professor Stephenson received his AB from Princeton and his LLB from Harvard. He was also a Sterling Fellow at Yale Law School in 1952 and 1953. He has previously taught at the Judge Advocate General School, the Army Law School, and the the University of Miami Law School.

While at Miami he supported the late Robert Taft in his drive for the Republican nomination for president in 1952.

Prof. Logue brings a likewise impressive background into the debate. He received his AB from Yale and his MA from the University of Pennsylvania. He has taught at both Fordham and Notre Dame and has had a number of works published. Among his works is one which deals with the United Nations.

Annual NROTC Dance To Be Held Friday

This Friday night the NROTC Unit will hold its annual Navy Dance. The first social affair of the year for the Midshipmen will be held at the beautiful Valley Forge Country Club, located about eight miles northwest of Villanova.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by Paul Judge and his Orchestra, a well known group in these parts.

Highlighting the evening will be the crowning of the "Queen of the Drill Team". The presentation of a bouquet of roses will be made by Capt. J. E. Boyle, Unit Commander, to the date of one of the drill team members. The winner will be selected by a panel of judges consisting of LTC King, Lt. Zemaitis and Lt. Gillan.

Lieutenant Gillan, NROTC recreation committee head, expects a turnout of ninety-five per-cent of the Midshipmen. He forecasts a highly successful event and an enjoyable night for all.

Physics Club Trip

On Oct. 17 the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Physics visited the Westinghouse Plant in Lester, Pa. They were shown the huge turbines in operation and were given a tour of the lab.

The new greenhouse, part of the science building project, will be in operation sometime this week, announces Dr. John A. McClain, head of the Biology department. Dr. Roman Maksymowych will supervise its operation.

Kennedy Holds Majority Of Newspaper Poll Votes

the 73.3% of the student body which is not eligible to vote is almost exactly the same as in the case of eligible voters.

The breakdown by division indicates that 59% of the Nursing division prefers the Democratic ticket, the smallest pro-Kennedy group in any division. The Republican party garnered 31.3% of the nurses' votes, and 9.7% are undecided. "Apparently the girls prefer Jack's haircut to Dick's cheeks," Graham quipped.

Girls Make Up Minds

"Again, we see avid Kennedy support, but uncertainty as to his chances for success. Again, too, the Nixon people are very positive that their man will win. Surprisingly, only two girls could not make up their minds as to who to vote for. Because of the small enrollment in the Nursing School, these undecided two equal 9.7% of the total voters.

Engineers voted 68.2% for Kennedy-Johnson, 25.7% for Nixon-Lodge, and 6.1% undecided. "Undecided engineers are none the less opinionated," Graham pointed out. "75% of them thought Kennedy would carry the nation, while 25% thought Nixon would take it. Republicans might claim that engineers voted for Kennedy because of his mechanical nature."

"The Arts and Sciences division, following its tradition of mature deliberation in everything, has come up with the lowest percentage of undecided voters, only 4.2%," stated Graham. "Still, they follow the heavy trend toward the Kennedy-Johnson ticket, with 64.4%. 31.4% would vote for Nixon-Lodge.

Besides the nurses," Graham continued, "whose total vote was relatively small, the C & F school provided the largest bloc of undecided voters — 9.2%. Also, statistics on the C & F vote are the least reliable, because 35% of those chosen to be polled didn't bother to submit a ballot. Of those who did vote, however, 63% preferred Kennedy and 27.8% chose Nixon."

In answering the question dealing with the religious issue, 278, or 91.9%, of those polled said that religion should not be an issue in the campaign. However, 51.8% felt that it was entering into the current campaign. However,

60.1% thought that, despite its encroachment, it would not be a decisive factor in the campaign, and 24.7% felt the religious issue would give Kennedy an edge in the race. 15.2% thought the issue would favor Nixon.

Lodge Strongly Favored

A great majority (81.9%) felt that the addition of Henry Cabot Lodge to the Republican ticket had helped that party more than Lyndon John's nomination as vice presidential candidate had helped his party.

A slight majority (59.2%) favored Kennedy to carry more Farm states than Nixon, while a considerable plurality (49%) felt that the Republicans would carry fewer Southern states than they did in 1956. 28.3% thought Nixon could carry a larger part of the South, 20.4% considered that the number of Republican Southern states this year would equal the 1956 number, and 2.3% couldn't speculate.

Youth Must Be Served

On the question concerning youth, 25.8% thought it was no longer an issue, while 73.1% considered youth of significance in the campaign. 1.1% had no answer. 63.7% of those polled felt Nixon's experience was overrated, 35.6% thought it was not over-rated, and .6% had no answer.

Comparing the past four years of Republican foreign policy with the last four years of Democratic foreign policy under former president Truman, 52.3% felt that the Democrats have more of a "leg" to stand on, 39.6% thought that the Republicans were superior in this regard, 6.8% did not answer, and 1.3% thought neither party had "anything to brag about."

Socialist Sympathizer

Replies to the final question: "Reasons for party preference," were varied. The single Socialist sympathizer declared, "The Socialist Party is party of people, our glorious leader is going to give people everything!" One student replied tersely, "No party," while another appended a two-page, ten point dissertation explaining his Republican leanings.

Villanova Theatre Season Opens

Members of Richard Duprey's experimental theatre troupe emote in rehersal for a one-act play being readied by the graduate group for presentation.

Mr. Richard A. Duprey, Director and Head of the Theatre Department, announced its three major productions in a proposed festival of American Drama which the Theatre Department and Belle Masque are presenting on the Villanova campus.

"Country Girl", the Clifford Odets drama will be the year's initial presentation by the Belle Masque, the undergraduate theatrical society.

Performances are scheduled to be held in Vasey Hall Auditorium on the nights of November 10, 11, 12 and 13 including a preview on the ninth.

Tickets for the Belle Masque production, "Country Girl", will go on sale a week and half before the first performance at a cost of $1.25. Tickets may be bought either at the Pie Shoppe or at the Theatre Department office, 52 Mendel Hall. Telephone reservations will also be accepted by calling the Theatre Department Office.

Tennessee William's "The Glass Menagerie" will be the first graduate production of the Theatre Department. It will be held on December 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 in Vasey Hall Auditorium. Tickets for this play will also be on sale at the Pie Shoppe and the Theatre Department Office ten days before the initial performance, at a cost of $1.80 general admission and $1.25 for students.

V.U. Engineer Is Out On November 31; Crawford Is Editor

The first issue of the Villanova Engineer, a magazine devoted to the undergraduate engineers, will be published on November 21, 1960. The magazine, which is written and put together by students, is distributed to the engineering school and mailed out of firms and schools all over the country.

The quarterly periodical has a circulation of 2000 and is edited by Paul Crawford. The associate editor is George Pettinico, the publicity director is Marshall McClusky, and the moderator is Father John J. Vrana, O.S.A. The cover and feature article will concern the admission of the Villanova chapter Chi Epsilon Mu to the honorary engineering fraternity Tau Beta Pi.

EDITOR CRAWFORD ... Girly Interviews

The variety of articles will include interviews with the three girl freshman engineers, biographical sketches of professors in the Engineering School, information on semi-conductors, the Astronomy Club, and Refinery Corrosion. More interest must be shown if the magazine is to uphold the high quality expected. Anyone can write for the Villanova Engineer, and all students are encouraged to submit articles.

CAMPUS NEWS BRIEFS

Amelotti To Lecture

Mr. Emil Amelotti, the Chairman of the Mathematics Department, announced that Villanova University will cooperate with WRCV -TV in a television credit program on Modern Algebra, Probability, and Statistics.

It is to be given in the Continental Classroom series of educational programs. The lecture periods will be given on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays at 6:30 a.m. The recitation periods will be on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Upon successful completion of the course, the student will receive accredition.

Work With Defenders

Villanova Law School students this week joined with the Delaware County Bar Association to provide legal services for indigent defendants charged with crime.

Dean Harold Gill Reuschlein announced that a team of eight students will devote half a day each week to the interrogation of accused persons, the examination of witnesses, and the preparation of legal defenses.

When the accused persons are put on trial, the student who assisted in preparing his defense will attend the trial with the attorney whose services have been provided by the organized bar.

This new program at the School was arranged in cooperation with Gilliat G. Schroeder, Esq., of Media. Mr. Schroeder has had long experience in voluntary defender work in Philadelphia before moving to Delaware County.

The entire purpose of the voluntary defender movement is to make realistic the constitutional guarantee of a right of counsel in criminal cases.

The School of Law gives no academic credit for the student work, but encourages it both as valuable legal experience and as a significant public service.

Sutula on Committee

Mr. Edward G. Sutu'a, Lecturer in Accounting, Commerce & Finance Division, was appointed Vice-Chairman of the Committee on Cooperation with Educational Institutions in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The announcement was made by William Craemer Jr., President of the Philadelphia Chapter of Certified Public Accountants.

The objectives of the Committe are to cooperate with the nineteen colleges and universities engaged in the education of students for the accounting profession in the eastern Pennsylvania area and to sponsor the annual student accounting forum.

Mr. Sutula was also recently appointed to the Pennsylvania Institute of Certified Public Accountants statewide Committee on Education for the 1960-61 fiscal year.

This committee has as its primary objective the promotion and encouragement of continuing education programs for the Commonwealth members of the Institute.

Mr. Sutula, a Certified Public Accountant in Penna., received his B. S. degree from Villanova University and his MBA from the graduate division of the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania.

Catholic Youth Week

National Catholic youth week will be observed from October 31 through November 6 this year. Students of Villanova are asked to make special effort during this week to attend daily communion, and generally improve their own spiritual welfare as well as the spiritual atmosphere of the entire campus.

Dedicated to the development of Catholic youth, the theme of this year's program will be AMERICA'S STRENGTH: RESPONSIBLE YOUTH.

Botanist Is Studying Leaf; He Begins Five-Year Project

By Eugene Rodgers

So well does modern science understand the awesome powers of nature that its generators can hurl bolts of lighning and its bombs can recreate the burning of the sun. Yet the greatest mystery of all is hardly known, much less understood. This is the secret of life.

How does an intricate but perfect leaf grow from a seemingly lifeless tree? Adam and Eve must have wondered. Who has not?

Yet the development of a young bud into a mature leaf has never been fully described in detail. To produce this description, Dr. Roman Maksymowych has dedicated the last five years to leaf study.

Morphology

Dr. Maksymoych is a Professor of botany and a specialist in experimental plant morphology in Villanova's Biology Department. Botany is the science of plant life; morphology is the division dealing with plant structure.

"More is known about the complicated mechanism of photosynthesis taking place inside the leaf than about the leaf itself," says Dr. Maksymowych. Photosynthesis is the process whereby a green plant makes food for itself from water, carbon dioxide, and sunlight.

Dr. Maksymowych spent the first year of his current project studying the basic growth of Xanthium, a type of ragweed. He described mathematically the growth rates of every point along the midrib of the leaf as the leaf matured.

Each point has a slightly different rate of growth than adjacent ones, and these rates change as the leaf ages and develops.

The results show that the growth rate follows a pattern that changes with age, and that this change may be predicted when sufficient data is available. Dr. Maksymowych announced these results this summer at the Conference of the American Institute of Biological Sciences in Stillwater, Oklahoma.

Cell Division

Dr. Maksymowych will devote the second year of the project to studying cell division and differentiation during leaf development. Division is the process whereby cells reproduce themselves; differentiation is the process whereby cells become different from each other and form special tissues.

So important is his research that the United States government, through the National Science Foundation, has sponsored Dr. Maksymowych for the past year and will do so for another. Villanova has recognized his efforts by constructing a small greenhouse for experiments next to the new science building.

Concerning the new science building, Dr. Maksymowych says, "My great hope is that it will be completed soon. The expanded facilities will help my work enormously." Much of his work has been done at the University of Pennsylvania, which already has the necessary facilities.

Morphologist Maksymonwych ... awaits Greenhouse

More Emphasis on Research

Speaking of Graduate study, Dr. Maksymowych says, "If Villanova wants to advance graduate study, more emphasis should be given to research, because it develops close relationships between students and faculty. Graduate teachers must be capable of independent study, because the work of their students is expected to be a contribution to science.

Ph.D. Program Needed

"If Villanova wants the best possible Science Department it must have a Ph.D. program." At present Villanova has no such program, but Dr. Maksymowych expects the new science building to usher in a new era.

Although chiefly a morphologist, Dr. Maksymowych is also a competent physiologist, and must be proficient in other sciences. His present project would be almost impossible without the methods of differential calculus.

Dr. Maksymowych is critical of the public attitude which expects every scientific endeavor to produce miracles. He says, "science progresses by minute movements, with only occasional bumps to startle the world. The most that the majority of scientists can expect of their labor is personal satisfaction and professional recognition."

This Friday night the NROTC Unit will hold its annual Navy Dance. The first social affair of the year for the Midshipmen will be held at the beautiful Valley Forge Country Club, located about eight miles northwest of Villanova.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by Paul Judge and his Orchestra, a well known group in these parts.

Highlighting the evening will be the crowning of the "Queen of the Drill Team". The presentation of a bouquet of roses will be made by Capt. J. E. Boyle, Unit Commander, to the date of one of the drill team members. The winner will be selected by a panel of judges consisting of LTC King, Lt. Zemaitis and Lt. Gillan.

Lieutenant Gillan, NROTC recreation committee head, expects a turnout of ninety-five per-cent of the Midshipmen. He forecasts a highly successful event and an enjoyable night for all.

Physics Club Trip

On Oct. 17 the Villanova Chapter of the American Institute of Physics visited the Westinghouse Plant in Lester, Pa. They were shown the huge turbines in operation and were given a tour of the lab.

The new greenhouse, part of the science building project, will be in operation sometime this week, announces Dr. John A. McClain, head of the Biology department. Dr. Roman Maksymowych will supervise its operation.

Kennedy Holds Majority Of Newspaper Poll Votes

the 73.3% of the student body which is not eligible to vote is almost exactly the same as in the case of eligible voters.

The breakdown by division indicates that 59% of the Nursing division prefers the Democratic ticket, the smallest pro-Kennedy group in any division. The Republican party garnered 31.3% of the nurses' votes, and 9.7% are undecided. "Apparently the girls prefer Jack's haircut to Dick's cheeks," Graham quipped.

Girls Make Up Minds

"Again, we see avid Kennedy support, but uncertainty as to his chances for success. Again, too, the Nixon people are very positive that their man will win. Surprisingly, only two girls could not make up their minds as to who to vote for. Because of the small enrollment in the Nursing School, these undecided two equal 9.7% of the total voters.

Engineers voted 68.2% for Kennedy-Johnson, 25.7% for Nixon-Lodge, and 6.1% undecided. "Undecided engineers are none the less opinionated," Graham pointed out. "75% of them thought Kennedy would carry the nation, while 25% thought Nixon would take it. Republicans might claim that engineers voted for Kennedy because of his mechanical nature."

"The Arts and Sciences division, following its tradition of mature deliberation in everything, has come up with the lowest percentage of undecided voters, only 4.2%," stated Graham. "Still, they follow the heavy trend toward the Kennedy-Johnson ticket, with 64.4%. 31.4% would vote for Nixon-Lodge.

Besides the nurses," Graham continued, "whose total vote was relatively small, the C & F school provided the largest bloc of undecided voters — 9.2%. Also, statistics on the C & F vote are the least reliable, because 35% of those chosen to be polled didn't bother to submit a ballot. Of those who did vote, however, 63% preferred Kennedy and 27.8% chose Nixon."

In answering the question dealing with the religious issue, 278, or 91.9%, of those polled said that religion should not be an issue in the campaign. However, 51.8% felt that it was entering into the current campaign. However,

60.1% thought that, despite its encroachment, it would not be a decisive factor in the campaign, and 24.7% felt the religious issue would give Kennedy an edge in the race. 15.2% thought the issue would favor Nixon.

Lodge Strongly Favored

A great majority (81.9%) felt that the addition of Henry Cabot Lodge to the Republican ticket had helped that party more than Lyndon John's nomination as vice presidential candidate had helped his party.

A slight majority (59.2%) favored Kennedy to carry more Farm states than Nixon, while a considerable plurality (49%) felt that the Republicans would carry fewer Southern states than they did in 1956. 28.3% thought Nixon could carry a larger part of the South, 20.4% considered that the number of Republican Southern states this year would equal the 1956 number, and 2.3% couldn't speculate.

Youth Must Be Served

On the question concerning youth, 25.8% thought it was no longer an issue, while 73.1% considered youth of significance in the campaign. 1.1% had no answer. 63.7% of those polled felt Nixon's experience was overrated, 35.6% thought it was not over-rated, and .6% had no answer.

Comparing the past four years of Republican foreign policy with the last four years of Democratic foreign policy under former president Truman, 52.3% felt that the Democrats have more of a "leg" to stand on, 39.6% thought that the Republicans were superior in this regard, 6.8% did not answer, and 1.3% thought neither party had "anything to brag about."

Socialist Sympathizer

Replies to the final question: "Reasons for party preference," were varied. The single Socialist sympathizer declared, "The Socialist Party is party of people, our glorious leader is going to give people everything!" One student replied tersely, "No party," while another appended a two-page, ten point dissertation explaining his Republican leanings.

Villanova Theatre Season Opens

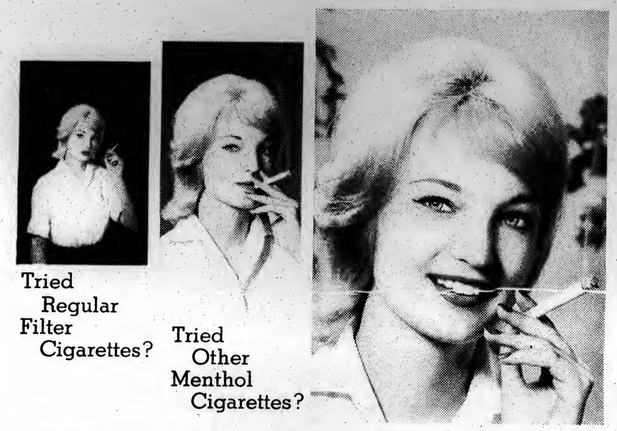
Members of Richard Duprey's experimental theatre troupe emote in rehersal for a one-act play being readied by the graduate group for presentation.



Mr. Richard A. Duprey, Director and Head of the Theatre Department, announced its three major productions in a proposed festival of American Drama which the Theatre Department and Belle Masque are presenting on the Villanova campus.

"Country Girl", the Clifford Odets drama will be the year's initial presentation by the Belle Masque, the undergraduate theatrical society.

Performances are scheduled to be held in Vasey Hall Auditorium on the nights of November 10, 11, 12 and 13 including a preview on the ninth.
